According to Mr. Metcalf the doctor goes about his professional duties with a case of medicines and surgical instruments in one hand and a buckskin bag for gold dust in the other. As there is very little money in the camp, gold dust forms the principal medium of exchange, and each time the doctor calls upon a patient he is given enough nuggets to pay the bill. When Mr. Metcalf left Dawson the doctor had not had time to arrange a schedule of prices, but he thinks a tariff sheet made up as follows would not be far out of the way:

One bottle of soothing syrup....	$8.00
Prescribing for frost-bitten ear.	7.50
Setting a broken leg.....	225.00
Amputating an arm	400.00

"It is very difficult to get medicine and surgical instruments over the pass," said Mr. Metcalf, "and doctors' bills are therefore extremely high. Doctors are also very scarce.—Detroit Journal.

THE TURKEY BUZZARD.

A Repulsive Bird in Appearance but of Great Use as a Scavenger.

The turkey buzzard is most repulsive in appearance, its featherless neck having a plucked effect which no doubt gave rise to the legend here told. As its name denotes, the buzzard is not unlike a turkey, but its dusty, unkempt appearance is a great contrast to our well-groomed, dignified kings of the barnyard whose namesakes they are. The turkey buzzard has, however, one point of beauty that deserves mention—his flight. He is the embodiment of winged gracefulness. He spreads his wings and floats, seemingly motionless, a black object against the azue of the Southern sky, too far away for the watcher to note his ugliness. Without motion of the wings he rises or ascends at will, a pair of dusky pinions resting on the sultry air. You watch him breathlessly until he descends, when the spell is broken, for repulsive and ungainly he stands revealed—the scavenger of the tropics. Yet this poor, ugly, ungainly bird has his uses. Without him the South would be a sorry victim of fevers and diseases bred from offal festering under the fierce tropical sun. As a scavenger he is invaluable, and the law protects him as he plies the calling for which he was created.—Providence Journal.

George's Sermon.

In a country village near the town of B—— the son of a well-known farmer went up to one of his father's men, who was rather older than the rest and said:

"George, why don't you hold your head up the same as I do, and not always go looking on the ground?"

Being near a wheat field, the old man answered:

"You see that field of corn yonder. If you look you will see all the full and valuable ears are bowed down, while those that have nothing in them stand upright.—Spare Moments.

Echoes Far & Near

Down One Street and up Another. From Every Ward in Plainfield.

Hard to hold down the enthusiasm of Plainfield people under such circumstances as those surrounding the work of the little conqueror. There is no place in the world where a good thing is better appreciated than right here at home. We are quick to see it and quick to "push it along" in the manner it merits. From all parts of the city come the same reports; success follows in every footstep, and an investigation of each new case but adds to the endorsement that has gone before and places their claims beyond shadow of doubt. This report comes from West Front street, the residence of Mrs. Henry Bender who says:—"My kidneys have given me more or less trouble for the past five years. I suff red almost constantly from a dull aching pain across the back and hips. Any hard work always increased the pain. I was also subject to severe headaches and dizziness when stooping, and though I tried different plasters and home remedies I could get no relief. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for such troubles as mine and got a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store, used them according to directions and have gotten a great deal of relief from them. I am feeling better now than I have for five years. In my estimation, and from my experience, Doan's Kidney Pills are a good reliable kidney medicine and I have great faith in them, and advise others who suffer from kidney trouble to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

Furniture Advertising That Costs--Yet Pays

It costs us many dollars to buy newspaper space. It costs us many more to whittle down all prices where no profit, often loss is sustained. Yet while costly advertising in one way, it's paying in another.

By it we gained over 3 acres of floor space, an immense list of cash and credit patrons, a reputation for liberality in every deal. And now it's clearing out many present lines at a rapid gait, leaving elbow room for Spring patterns fast seeking entrance.

$5.85—This new Chiffonier, with mirror, or $3.85 without mirror.

$7.00—For these $10 Wardrobes, well built and finished.

Carpets, good heavy Ingrains, 29c yard. Extra heavy Ingrains, 39c. Fine Tapestey Brussels, 50c—all other weaves reduced too.

Too few of you know our bedding stock—fine hair mattresses, now $6.75. Husk mattresses $3.95. Excelsior mattresses, $1.75. Feather pillows, 65c.

Stoves and Ranges Going Quick

We're closing up the store store—we've priced each piece so that profit's all squeezed out. Cylinder Stoves for $1,87, were $3.50—finely nickeled self feeding Parlor Stoves at $5.95—elegant self-feeder that was $20, now $11.95. Ranges equally low. The much praised "Portland Range" holds its own as ever—over 9,000 in steady use.

Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. MAKING RATS WORK.

St. Louis Firm Gets Its Drain Pipe Cleaned Gratis.

There are 150 men in North St. Louis who defy any one to dispute the fact that Tom Maguire is a genius. Mr Maguire is yard foreman at the Laclede Gas Company's plant. His enthusiastic proclaimers of his genius are his fellow-workers in the big yard.

A sewer pipe leading from one of the buildings to the river bank, 160 feet away, became clogged. The pipe is 16 feet below the surface. It was not known just where the obstruction was, so arrangements were made to open the trench. Then Maguire brought into play what proved to be the trump card, viz., rats.

He had been thinking about the plan for several days. One night, by the aid of generous hunks of fresh cheese, he managed to entrap two big gray rodents, and these he determined to put into the sewer. They were taken to the mouth at the river bank and released. The opening was then closed securely behind them, leaving the animals with only one chance of life. That was to go straight ahead. And they did.

Several more rats were caught each succeeding day and turned into the sewer, until a dozen fine specimens were gnawing away in the pipe. The morning after the last detachment joined the main rodent army water commenced to trickle from the pipe. Iron rods and steam were applied. In ten minutes the sewer was clear.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CHEATING BUTTERFLIES.

When They Have Mistaken Artificial Flowers for the Natural.

Some most remarkable instances of the erring of instinct among insects have frequently been noted among naturalists, and they add an interesting chapter to the physiology of sense. One of these was the case of a butterfly, which persisted in visiting the artificial flowers on a lady's bonnet, mistaking them for the natural product. Another, and perhaps more striking instance of fault is noted by the distinguished French entomologist, M. R. Blanchard, and concerns a species of sphinx moth, which entered a hotel room in the half obscurity of early morning, and was found to flit with direct intent to definite parts of the walls and ceiling. These were decorated with paintings of leaves and flowers, and to the latter the insect approached in repeated attacks, thrusting forward its proboscis as though intent upon intruding it into the open cups of the beguiling flowers. After repeated failures and the resulting discouragement, the effort was given up, and the sphinx escaped by the window. This case of self-deception is interesting in another way, inasmuch as it proves that it is not always the sense of smell, but at times that of sight, which directs insects to their flowers.

The Long Journey.

In a certain township not many miles from Cleveland the good man of a local household was laid away in the little churchyard on the hill. After the funeral the relatives, both near and distant, returned to the family home and the officiating pastor came with them. There they enjoyed a good dinner and afterward gathered in the best room for social converse.

Naturally their talk turned upon the serious event of the day, and presently the good pastor, drawing a deep sigh, solemnly remarked:

"Well, our departed brother has gone a long journey."

There was a brief silence, and then a cousin of the deceased, a fussy little woman with an intense desire to bear a share in the conversation, suddenly remarked in a tone of profound wisdom:

"Well, you know, brother, thet they all say, that travel is such an eddicator!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Why the Burglar Cried.

Not long since three young fellows who had been making a night of it rolled into the house and found a negro busily engaged in gathering up all the silverware and depositing it in a big sack in the middle of the dining-room floor, preparatory to carrying it away. The thief was greatly frightened. The three young men were also much alarmed. One of them had a pistol. He had very little faith in the firearm, but he called the colored porter and, handing him the weapon, told him to hold it on the burglar until the three young men went out for a policeman. When the officer finally arrived the porter dropped his arm with the pistol. The cylinder dropped out. Not a single load was in the pistol.

When the burglar was searched, two seven-shooting revolvers, loaded and self-acting, were found on his person. The burglar was so disgusted with himself that he cried.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Photographing by Firefly Light.

Experiments have been made in photographing by the light of fireflies. A large number of them were placed in a small box and confined by a netting. The box was provided with sensitive plates, and in some instances covered closely in order to discover the power of the light emitted by these insects. It was found that they have a quality not unlike the X rays, as the plates that were closely covered showed unmistakable evidences of a photographic process.—New York Journal.

LON CALHOUN'S WAKE

MOURNERS FLED AND ONE OF THEM TOLD THE POLICE.

When They Came Back with a Policeman the Supposed Dead Man Gave the Joke Away, and All Hands Joined in the Wake, for Which $43 Had Been Raised Taken all in all, Lon Calhoun's wake was about the finest wake that ever happened in Jersey City.

News of Lon Calhoun's death reached the headquarters on Wednesday night. Whence it came nobody knows, but it was duly posted on the bulletin board that "our esteemed, etc., associate" had passed away after a long and painful gastric attack, leaving a sorrowing widow, who would communicate with the society regarding the funeral. On Thursday morning President McCarthy of the society telephoned to the sorrowing widow his condolences on her husband's death.

"Dead?" said Mrs. Calhoun. "Lon ain't dead. He's downstairs embalming a man that is."

"You don't say so," exclaimed McCarthy. "That's too bad. We were going to give him a wake. The boys are taking up a collection now to bury him."

"They'd better keep it for somebody that needs burying worse than he does. Lon's good for a long life yet."

"Well, look here," said McCarthy, "it's too bad to disappoint the boys. You tell Lon that he's dead, and that if he'll get into the coffin we'll give him the time of his life."

There was some further conversation about details. Then Mrs. Calhoun went to the head of the stairs and called her husband.

About the time that the late Lon Calhoun was peacefully folding his white hands above his quiet breast, the delegation from the society, headed by President McCarthy, arrived. There were six men in the delegation. All of them had had some experience in similar sad affairs. They knew their duty, and they did it. One by one they passed before the coffin and spoke their pieces.

"In the midst of life we are in death," said the first.

"We mourn our loss," said the second.

"One shall be taken and another get left," was the contribution of the third.

"He-he—he was all right, Lon was," stammered the next man, who was in hard luck, the first speaker having stolen his thunder.

"The good die young," asserted the fifth man, confidently.

"We shall not look upon his like again," groaned President McCarthy, who came last, in such broken tones that he made a great hit with the rest of the mourning party.

Meanwhile the widow and Secretary Brown sat with their faces buried in their hands. McCarthy's five companions took seats, and looked at each other in gloomy silence, while the president himself went over to the window and wept loudly, convulsively jubilantly. In the course of time, the sobs died down and the silence became oppressive. Agent Witmore, who was seated nearest the coffin, felt that he must rise to the occasion.

"In the midst of life we are in death," he repeated.

"We mourn our loss," said Agent McDonald, the second man, with great promptitude, and No. 3 was just beginning. "One shall be taken" when Witmore broke in hastily and interrupted the deal.

"We sympathize with you," Mrs. Calhoun," he said. "He makes a lovely corpse, Lon does. We congratulate you on having such a fine corpse."

"Thank you kindly," sobbed the widow, turning her face toward the wall. How long this would have gone on there is no telling had not a wandering fly gone to prospecting on Calhoun's face with the enthusiasm of a Klondike gold hunter. For about a moment the corpse suffered the tortures of the dead and damned, which was one better than he bargained for. Then he stuck out his under lip and blew in the direction of his left cheek, upon which the insect was operating. All the mourners turned ghastly faces upon one another in agonized inquiry. The fly rose, hesitated, and settled upon the nose of the deceased.

Then the deceased came slowly and majestically into view. The five agents who were not in the secret left the room, not singly, but five at a time, occasioning a considerable tangle at the door. It burst and they achieved the descent of the stairs as the careless Alpine traveler hastens down a crevasse. At the bottom they collected themselves and separated. Some went after bracers. Some went after doctors. One, and this was Witmore, went to the Fifth Precinct police station, made a charge of disorderly conduct, and fainted gracefully upon the floor.

At the home of grief the deceased the widow and the two remaining mourners discussed the situation.

"There's the $43 for the wake," said McCarthy.

"That's a good deal for a dead man," said the corpse, "but not so much for a live man."

"Not for eight live men," said Brown. "We don't want to forget the mourners.

"And the widow," said that lady.

"I appoint Brown a committee to collect the mourners," said McCarthy "while I collect the materials."

But before they started Witmore appeared with a policeman. The police man was invited to stay, and Witmore helped hunt up his companions. When all were collected McCarthy announced that the wake would proceed.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Last Saturday Manager Cuming, of the Eldridge Cycle Co., sold eight new wheels. The business at this house is steadily increasing.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—All Endeavorers and their friends will be welcome at the sociable of the Christian church, Grove street, tonight.

—A pleasant feature of the Sunday evening service at Trinity Reformed church was the vocal duet, "Hark, Hark, My Soul," sung by Miss Krymer and E. C. Martin.

—Alex. Thorn, owner of the Thorn building on Somerset street, is in a position to rent the store at the corner of Somerset street and Craig place, after April 1st. The store is light and attractive, splendidly located and will make a good place for an enterprising, aggressive business man in any line. It has been profitably occupied for several years. Complete fixtures are in the store, all of which are modern and handsome.

SUES KING OF BUNCO MEN.

George Spencer's Counsel Cannot Collect $4,805 in Fees.

George Spencer, alias John Reed, the king of bunco men who made his home in this city until captured by the police some months ago, has been made the defendant in a suit for damages brought by his former counsel, Col. W. H Gile, of Worcester, Mass. When Spencer was arrested Col. Gile defended him ably, and although Spencer was sent to State prison for four years it is likely that an appeal will be granted. The amount of the fee claimed is $4,805.

Does Not Flicker.

The animotoscope is said to be the best of moving picture machines. The pictures are new and interesting and are rendered more life like by having the sound incident to each picture produced. There is, it is claimed, an entire absence of that shaking and flickering common to other machines, and which are so trying to the eyes. The entertainment will be given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Thursday evening.

Justice Thomas' Court.

Justice Thomas has issued executions in the cases of D. C. Ivins & Co. against Wm. W. Anderson, of Bound Brook, and H. B. Smith Machine Co. against Wm. W Anderson, of Bound Brook. Reed & Coddington represent the plaintiff in each case. Summons have been issued in the cases of Champion Chemical Co. against DeMott, and Spicer & Hubbard against Stiglitz, both on contract, returnable March 31st.

Paid $10 for His Drunk.

James Fee, of Third street, was arrested in the borough last evening by Marshal George Wise. The charge was drunk and disorderly and resisting an officer. Fee was arraigned before Recorder Thomas and a fine of $10 was imposed.

THEATRICAL.

The success of "The Geisha" is marked with every move of the stage Mr. Daly's extravagance in scenery and costumes found full vent in the delightful scenery and exquisite costumes, which were all brought from the land of chrysanthemums, and were as beautiful as that flower. The scene painter laid on his colors as an artist would.

Miss McIntosh has a delightful mezzo-soprano voice, which she manages with skill and discretion. Her rendition of the "Amorous Gold Fish," written in the vein of Gilbert's "Tit Willow" and Harry Greenbank's "Tom Tit," is as follows:

A goldfish swam in a big glass bowl,
As dear little goldfish do;
But she loved, with the whole of her heart [and soul.
An officer brave from the ocean wave,
And she thought that he loved her too.
Her small insides he daily fed
With crumbs of the best digestive bread;
"This kind of attention proves," she said,
"How exceedingly fond he is of me."

CHORUS.

And she thought: "It's fit—fit—fitter
He should love my glit—glit—glitter
Than his heart give away
To the butterflies gay
Or the birds that twit—twit—twitter."

Of course, the little goldfish's fate was a sad and cruel one, for the other two verses describe how a pretty girl came along, detached her officer's love and the fish pined away:

Until, at last, some careless soul
With a smash knocked over the big glass bowl.
And there on the carpet dead and cold
Lay the poor little fish in her frock of gold.

Miss Virginia Earle, who has been conceded to be a better singer and a more graceful dancer than Marie Studholme, and who compares very favorably with Letty Lind, scored an instantaneous success, and advanced steadily in favor with the audience throughout the entire performance, and, in the last act, her rendition of the "Interesting Parrot" creates tumultuous applause, such as has rarely, if ever, been heard in Daly's New York theatre, and every word of her song can be heard.

The Guy Brothers' Minstrels, who make their first appearance at Stillman Music Hall Thursday night, are said to be first class in every respect. The company is a large and exceptionally good one. The various solos are well rendered, while the specialties deserve the hearty applause they receive. The Wilkesbarre Times, speaking of their performances a short time ago, says: "At Music Hall last night the Guy Bros.' Minstrels made their first appearance to a Wilkesbarre audience, and if laughter and applause is satisfaction, the company made a great hit. The jokes were new and the specialties all that could be desired. Arthur Guy's cornet playing was a big feature. The statue act of the three Guy brothers was a very fine piece of work. Everyone went home saying it was one of the finest ever in this city." Reserved seat tickets are now ready at box office.

"The Good Mr. Best," fresh from triumphant engagements in all of the larger cities, is the next attraction at Stillman Music Hall, Saturday matinee and night, March 19th. An extraordinary strong cast has been engaged with this organization and special scenery, electrical and mechanical effects are carried by the company.

QUITE LIKELY TO BECOME A LAW.

Its Passage Urged by Prominent Union County Men—Senator Reed's School Monies Bill Becomes a Law—Bicycles Will Hereafter be Accepted as Bail From Violators of Bicycle Ordinances—$250,000 From Jersey in the Event of War.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, N. J., March 16.—The Bergen county trolley bill, known as No. 125 on the calendar, has passed its first shoal in its course through the Legislature—that of being reported by the committee on railroads and canals, to which it was referred. That committee yesterday reported the bill favorably. With the exception of the Essex county members it is believed that the measure will not meet with great opposition.

A number of Union county men who have been especially active in advocacy of the measure were in Trenton yesterday, and made personal endeavors among the members of the legislative committee to have the bill reported. Among them were Frank Bergen, father of the bill; Jas. E. Martine, of Plainfield; Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, and Editor Lewis Hyer, of the Railway Democrat.

So far as known no trolley capitalists who are opposed to the enactment of the bill were present to urge its being pigeon-holed, though such efforts have been made since its introduction and consideration.

Senator Reed wears a broad smile of satisfaction today as a result of a pen stroke of Governor Voorhees yesterday, by which the Senator's bill relative to the apportionment of school monies, which has been liberally discussed throughout the State, was made a law.

Another important law made by the Governor yesterday, and of particular significance to Plainfield and adjoining towns where the bicycle riding regulations are strictly enforced, is that which permits a person arrested for violating bicycle ordinances to leave their wheels in custody of the police in lieu of bail.

The strained relations between the United States and Spain were responsible for the introduction of a bill late yesterday afternoon entitled an "Act to create an emergency fund and provide for its use" The bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator Daly, of Hudson.

It provides that the sum of $.50,000 be appropriated from any money now in the treasury, to be designated as an emergency fund held subject to the disposal of the Governor or person administering the government, as he may deem just and proper in the event of a declaration of war by Congress.

The bill was, at the request of Senator Daly, referred to the judiciary committee, and that body will consider it in conjunction with Governor Voorhees

SCHOLAR'S RECREATION TIME.

A Borough Citizen Wants to Have Recess in Public Schools.

At the annual school meeting held in the borough last evening Mr. Swain of Craig place, made a few remarks concerning the abandoned plan of giving the scholars a recess during the morning session He said that he thought the younger scholars should not be kept in for three hours without a recess, and it was his desire to make a motion to the effect that a recess be granted. President McCutchen informed Mr. Swain that there were many opinions concerning a recess and the Board would be pleased to entertain any suggestions on the plan. The recess was abandoned during the time that Mr Boss was principal of the school as it was deemed unnecessary It would require about twenty minutes to give the scholars a recess and as it is now the scholars are allowed to leave the school at an earlier hour. The matter will, however, be considered by the Board.

MINERVA'S OLD TEMPLE CAUSED VOTERS TO FIGHT

THE TOWNSHIP SCHOOL MEETING.

Some North Plainfield Men Wanted it for a Town Hall, But Their Purpose Was Prevented.

One of the liveliest school meetings ever held in North Plainfield Township was that of last evening in the new schoolhouse at Washingtonville. Some of the voters came with the idea of making fun; while they succeeded in jocularity they failed to carry their point.

The difference of opinion was regarding the disposition to be made with the old schoolhouse. Some wanted it for a town hall, and others wanted to sell it to the highest bidder. It was while discussing this question that hard names were used.

Lawyer Robert Clark, who was chairman of the meeting, was obliged more than once to call the disturbers to order. Another difficulty arose when it was learned that there were people present voting who lived outside of the district and who were not entitled to vote. A motion was made that they be excluded, and the motion was lost by one vote.

The report of the district clerk showed a balance on hand in the general fund of $374, and $1,100 in the sinking fund, which amount is to be used to pay off the bonds issued for the building of the new schoolhouse.

It was stated that the new schoolhouse is now ready for occupancy, and it was voted to sell the old schoolhouse to the highest bidder, also to store the old seats in the new school building for further use

The sum of $100 was voted for repairs and supplies, and the sum of $50 for text books and incidentals. The election of trustees resulted in the selection of Henry A. Speer, W. H. Morris and Michael Duffy. The last two were re-elected, and Mr. Speer was chosen in place of R. M. Clark, Jr., whose term expired. The tellers were Francis Bartels and G M. Steward. It was also voted to place the receipts from the sale of the old schoolhouse in the sinking fund.

DIME'S WORTH OF PLEASURE.

Sociability and Music Enjoyed by Members of Sons of Temperance.

The members of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, held a dime social last evening at the home of Mrs. Corwin, of Park avenue. In addition to the social features, vocal selections were given by Mrs. Andrew Cox, Mr. Radin, while Miss Thompson rendered a pleasing piano solo. The programme closed with a recitation by W B. Ayers. A collation followed and four propositions for membership were received The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Mr. Armstrong, Mrs. Radin and Mrs. Cox. The proceeds will be placed in a fund for the purchase of a new carpet.

Christian Assurance.

In the Trinity Reformed church this evening Rev. W. W. Clark, of New York, will give a Bible reading on the subject of "Christian Assurance." Mr. Clark is well-known in this country and abroad as one of the ablest students of the Bible. In Chicago last year he gave a course of Bible lectures in the Bible Institute which ran for two months. All are invited to be present.

Internal Injuries Feared

James, the three year-old son of Councilman J. F. Buckle, of this city, was injured in some way while at play about the house on Westervelt avenue Monday afternoon. The child came into the house and complained of having been hurt. It soon afterward began to vomit violently. Dr. Probasco was summoned. Internal injuries are feared

FOUR OR SIX ROOMS--- THAT'S THE QUESTION.

What Shall the Borough New School Building Be?

PRESIDENT M'CUTCHEN'S REPORT.

The sum of $10 500 is Asked for Current Expenses and Later on a Special Appropriation Will be Necessary to Provide Sufficient Room for Children to be Educated—Trustees McCutchen, Wells and Waring Were Re-elected for the Term.

The annual school meeting was held in the Borough Public School building last evening. The attendance was very small, much unlike previous meetings. President S. St. John McCutchen called the meeting to order, and Henry McGee was made chairman, while J. K. Arnold acted as secretary. The polls were opened at 8:05 and remained opened until 9:05.

The terms of S. St. John McCutchen, Henry Wells and E. J. Waring, as members of the Board of Education, expired, and they were renominated without a dissenting vote. J. H. Howell and Paul Loizeaux were appointed tellers. The former received the ballots for school trustees, while the latter received the vote for the appropriations.

While the voting was being carried on, the annual financial report of District Clerk R. M. Fountain was read by Secretary Arnold. It showed the disbursements to be $22,001 37, and the receipts $28.367.68. There is an actual balance of $6,254 24. There is $102.07 in the hands of the district clerk.

To the Public of North Plainfield:

It is unnecessary that the Board should review at length the progress and work of the school, and yet there remains to be made an interesting and instructive comparison of the figures as to attendance reported to you a year ago, with these given in Mr. Wightman's report, for the growth can best be shown by such a comparison.

TEACHING FORCE.

Number of teachers reported,	1897	21
	1898	25

ENROLLMENT.

Kindergarten,	1897	53
	1898	126
Primary Department	1897	321
	1898	300
Intermediate Department,	1897	191
	1898	164
Grammar Department,	1897	175
	1898	179
High School Department,	1897	90
	1898	83
	1898	942

The enrollment for this year is 86½ per cent. of all the children in the borough, of school age, as shown by the last school census, that is all the children between the ages of 5 and 18. The average attendance for the months of the present school year (710) is 75 per cent. of the total school enrollment. Both of these percentages are high compared with like statistics in other and similarly constituted communities and the encouragement in these figures by universal experience, lies in the fact that such high percentages of enrollment and attendance are possible only where a high school standard is maintained.

TRUANCY.

While considering this question of attendance, I wish to speak of cases of truancy from school; unnecessarily irregular attendance, and cases of children of school age who do not attend any school. Of the last class we learn that there are probably 25 to 30 in the borough. They are generally of a class which most needs attention and education. It is desirable that these children shall attend some school; which school the Board of Education do not undertake to say, but to some one of our schools, public, private or parochial, they should be compelled to go.

SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION.

The necessity for additional school room is now well known. Mr. Wightman's report describes our overcrowded condition. One class of more than 50 we have located in the basement of the German Reformed church on Craig place. That room is not well-fitted for our use. The heating and ventilation are unsatisfactory. The light is unfavorable and apt to injuriously affect the eyes of the children, and the rent, for the accommodation of this single class of about 50 is $30 per month or $300 for the school year of ten months. This amount is equal to interest at 5 per cent. on $6,000 of bonds. This is an expensive housing of a single class. Children ready for promotion are held back, because the classes ahead of them are so full that no room can be found for them.

Accommodation should be furnished for at least four classes, including in these, of course, the class now located in the German church, and one of the divisions of the Kindergarten Department.

It is a fact that the Board and its building committee have been disappointed to learn what the probable cost of a new building will be, and their effort now is to reach a lower estimate of cost. This problem faces us also. Shall we erect a four-room or a six-room building?

A four-room schoolhouse would give us the relief we immediately need, but we would practically fill it at once, and leave no provision for further growth.

If we put up a six-room building the additional accommodation will carry us over a longer period, and will probably suffice to house our school for several years to come. Which is the wise plan for you and for us?

The suggestion has been made to us from outside of the Board, that we build a four-room schoolhouse at one end of the borough or our present needs, and within a few years ask you to build another at the other end.

We get the impression that a proper four-room building will cost, equipped, from $8,000 to $10,000, and a six-room building from $18,000 to $20,000.

The Board will soon present this matter to you for your action, at a special meeting which we shall call at which meeting we shall make recommendations and ask you to take

PLEA FOR JUSTNESS BY JUDGE ULRICH.

Says He Was Committed to an Insane Asylum By Trick.

NEVER A SENATORIAL CANDIDATE.

He Believes That the Laws Committing Alleged Insane Persons Should be Changed—Never Expressed a Desire to be a State Senator, He Says—Legislature's Duty is to Right Wrongs, but if it Fails He Will Resort to Other Methods.

Former Judge John Ulrich writes the following letter to The Press, which explains itself:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—I noticed an article in the Plainfield Press of last evening, which is not only in the main misleading, but untrue, and I apprehend that if the same is not corrected the article in question may hold the writer and some others in a false light and position before your readers and the citizens of Plainfield generally. I refer to the article headed "A Voice From the Asylum," which states that a petition was presented in the Senate by my friend, Senator Reed, of Somerset county, prepared by the writer. It is a matter of sincere regret that you were unable to publish the petition prepared, together with the accompanying documents, in order that the matter might have been thoroughly and intelligently understood. The writer did not petition the New Jersey Legislature that a joint committee be appointed with a view towards investigating the different hospitals for the insane of this State. For that is a duty I am well aware belongs to the State Board of Managers for the hospitals for the insane, and I had no intention of requesting that certain functions and duties vested in a duly-appointed set of State officers be placed in the charge of a joint committee of the Senate and House, but rather that a joint committee be appointed to investigate into the rumors and allegations made in reference to persons alleged to be insane, being unwarrantably and unjustly committed into the asylums for the insane, and unwarrantably restrained, detained and circumvented therein, which the writer might, by way of parenthesis, add he knows and can demonstrate to be true; and further, that the committee report its findings and conclusions, and to recommend such legislation as the committee might deem wise, proper and essential to the subject of inquiry, and be granted some other honors as prayed for in the petition.

The sub-heading might more properly, to be consistent with the subject matter printed, have read: "Laws Committing Alleged Insane Persons Unjust, Says Judge Ulrich; and the Former Plainfield Lawyer writes Senator Reed Urging a Revision of the Unjust, Inequitable and Unconstitutional New Jersey Laws," instead of reading as it did.

I sincerely regret that I am obliged to resort to any personal explanation through The Press, and presume for the next few days may be kept busy refuting some articles which have and may yet be published, which under other circumstances and conditions I should overlook, but which duty may prompt me to answer. I observed in the New York Tribune of yesterday an article, a portion of which read thusly: "Mr. Ulrich was prominent in State politics and was Judge of the district court of Plainfield, and it is said that his mental condition was caused by his defeat for Senator of Union county."

This is but in line with many insinuations which have come to my personal knowledge as pretexts why I should have been incarcerated into an asylum for the insane, and unwarrantably circumvented at Brookside Retreat, an alleged private sanitarium, all of which are canards, possibly invented by evil-disposed or prejudiced persons. It would be unwise, impolitic and ungracious to enter upon a discussion appertaining to my mental condition at the time mentioned. Suffice to say, the Senatorial election of Union county occurred more than one year prior to my unwarrantable and disgraceful commitment into the State Insane Asylum, into which place I was, through deception, ushered. I was not a candidate for Senator of Union county either before the convention or electors of the county; had not the least idea of being a candidate, and question whether any of my Republican friends in Plainfield, Union county, or New Jersey, would truthfully state that they ever heard me express a desire to occupy the office of State Senator. Hence, it is simply preposterous to assert or assume that I was defeated for that office.

I am at a loss to construe the reference in The Press article, which states that the presentation of the petition brought up recollections that were not the pleasantest to some of the members who listened to its reading. I am quite certain that the recollections of the writer's political career could not regretfully have affected some of the kind and distinguished friends in the Senate, whose confidence I thought the writer had merited. It may be that the recollections of some of the distinguished Senators reverted to the days when the writer was inducted into the State asylum, and that some may have had reason to be touched with the kindly thought of sympathy, the chord which touches every genuine soul, that feels akin with another's hope or joy, another's grief or sorrow. That commiserates when cruel afflictions are laid upon another; that resents insults and wrongs; condemns knavery and unholy designs; that does not consider treachery as diplomacy, error as truth, diabolical wickedness as justice, or "wrong impressions," opinions, notions or judgments, necessarily as "symptoms of insanity." Such kindly sympathizers can properly be classed with such as Goldsmith defines: "Wiser he whose sympathetic mind exults in all the good of mankind."

If your reference can be construed to the effect that the members of the Senate referred to had some such recollections as that, I wish to sincerely thank my friends, the Senators, through The Press, for their kindly feeling; and may I kindly suggest that if the honorable gentlemen whose feelings may have been touched at the considerations laid before them shall take some action along some of the lines suggested and petitioned of them, they will give additional evidence to their respective constituencies and to the residents and taxpayers of the New Jersey commonwealth, that they favor laws consistent with the Constitution; deprecate unjust laws, which countenance such easy incarcerations into insane asylums, and uphold the great eternal principles and founda ion o' American citizenship, viz: "the right of personal libe -

MIKE WATSON BEATS THE POLICE AGAIN.

He Was Found Not Guilty of Selling Liquor Illegally.

THE CITY'S WITNESS ATTACKED.

David Sisk, the Principal Witness, Told How He Made the Alleged Purchase, and Then Superintendent Adelmann, of the Street Railway, Impugned His Reliability—Other Men Vouched for Sisk's Character—Jury Out About Five Minutes.

Twelve citizens of Plainfield heard the testimony against Michael Watson and decided that it was not sufficient to convict him of selling liquor without a license. So the man, who has figured in more cases of the kind than any other man in Plainfield, was set free. The trial was held in the Council chambers before City Judge DeMeza and a jury of twelve men, yesterday afternoon.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was present to represent the city. Codington & Swackhamer were the attorneys for the defence. The trial was heard by a large number of spectators, who filled the benches in the rear of the room.

The specific charge against Watson was for selling four glasses of ale to David J. Sisk, engineer at the Scott Press Works, Sunday, November 8th. Watson has a so-called restaurant and boarding house on Grant avenue, near South Second street. He has no license. The case has been adjourned on several occasions until yesterday.

Counsel Marsh opened the case for the city by swearing Sisk. Sisk told of the circumstances of the alleged sale and claimed that he had bought the ale directly from Watson. He also claimed that he was accompanied on that day by William J. Hosey, George Fielding and others. When asked where they were, he said that they were ill, and hinted that the illness might have been arranged specially for the day of the trial. Other of the witnesses, he said, had been called out of town.

On cross examination Sisk admitted that he could not swear that Watson sold him ale. He supposed that it was ale and said that it tasted like it.

For the defense Watson declared that Sisk had never been in his restaurant on the day mentioned, and that furthermore he, Watson, had never been downstairs on that day. Then Mr. Marsh asked how he knew that Sisk had not been there. Watson also claimed that his brother owned the place and ran it.

John Adelmann, superintendent of the Plainfield Street Railway, testified regarding the reputation of Sisk. He did not give him a high reputation. He told how Sisk had been unsatisfactory while in the employ of the company and had been discharged. Then Mr. Marsh showed a recommendation for Sisk, signed by Mr Adelmann, in which he was spoken of very highly. Mr. Adelmann admitted that he wrote it, but explained that he did it so that Sisk might get another position and keep his family from starving. Mr. Marsh criticised Mr. Adelmann's action and remarks very freely.

Fred J. Stack, Constable Rockafellow and Phineas French were all sworn in rebuttal, and testified as to the excellent reputation of Engineer Sisk. The lawyers then summed up and the case was given to the jury.

The jury was composed of John Johnson, foreman; former Councilman Leonard Spangenberg, J. B. Mills, John C. Abbott, John Corey, Charles M. Ulrich, Lemuel E. Hart, Henry Rand, A. C. Rogers, U. B. Crane, J. Fred MacDonald and J. H. Tier, Jr.

After being out five minutes the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty, and the Judge dismissed the complaint and released the prisoner.

A Fanwood Charge.

The case of Harriet Dell, the pauper, was decided by Judge McCormick Saturday in favor of the Township of North Plainfield. The decision was to the effect that the Township of Fanwood was chargeable with her support, and North Plainfield was allowed $27.85 for maintaining her up to December last. The attorneys for North Plainfield were Pope & Runyon, of this city.

DOUBLE LOCKS KEPT OUT TWO CONSTABLES.

HOSTILITIES AT THE GEM PHARMACY.

Red Flag Put Up by Officer Rockafellow Once Again Told a Falsehood to the People.

Hostilities were renewed at the Gem Pharmacy, corner of Liberty and West Fourth streets, yesterday afternoon between Constables George R Rockafellow and William R. Mattox.

The proprietor, E. J. Richards, was forced by his creditors to give up the business, as told in last Saturday's Daily Press. Constable Rockafellow represents the holders of certain judgments against Richards, while Mattox represents the interests of Dr. M. S. Simpson, who holds a chattel mortgage upon the goods.

After a lively encounter between the two constables last Saturday Mattox placed two huge padlocks upon the doors of the store. Rockafellow has the keys to the regular locks, and the result was that neither has been able to gain an entrance since.

The sale of the goods was advertised by Rockafellow to take place yesterday. He arrived early and hung a red flag in front of the store. When he attempted to enter, however, he found his way stopped by the padlocks of the Mattox faction.

The enemy, in the portly form of Mattox, arrived shortly afterward and the two representatives of the law exchanged compliments for several minutes.

Rockafellow, seeing that he could not gain entrance, finally announced that his sale was adjourned one week. He then took down the red flag and went home.

DISPLAYED GREAT TALENT.

Clever Performance Given by Queen City Band Last Night.

The talent displayed by the Queen City Band at the concert given in the Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening was of such high order that the hall should have been crowded with an audience who love good band music. The lack of the large attendance may be accounted for in the fact that the new organization of musicians under the direction of Benjamin LaVere is too young to be well known. But if the standard of merit displayed last night in the rendition of their programme is maintained, it will not take long for the band to become popular with Plainfielders. The playing of the band was harmonious in tone and volume with critical ideas. Those of the local musical world who attended the concert were warm in praise for the band's work last night.

The soprano solos rendered by Miss Emma Mix were a delightful feature of the programme She has a rich, well-modulated voice and was received with favor.

JUDGMENT FOR SIX CENTS.

Jacob Finger's Evidence Against John Weber was Circumstantial.

Somebody cut down some trees on one of Jacob Finger's farms near Washingtonville. John Weber was the tenant. Weber declared that he did not, so Finger brought suit to recover the value of the wood The case was tried before Justice Speer, of Washingtonville, Monday afternoon. Robert M. Clark represented Finger. The evidence was entirely circumstantial and so the Justice gave judgment for the plaintiff for the amount of six cents.

Kliner Not Appointed

George Kliner, of the borough, who was suspended from the police force for negligence, was not reappointed last Monday evening, as some people supposed he would be. It is not likely that Kliner will be appointed for another year. A special marshal is now filling the vacancy.

Along Legal Lines.

Justice Newcorn has issued summons in the cases of Tobin against Babbitt, landlord and tenant, returnable the 21st; Runyon against Van-Winkle, on contract, returnable the 16th, and Runyon against Phillips, on contract, returnable the 16th.

County Agriculturists.

The Union County Board of Agriculture will meet at the Court House Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The subjects for discussion will be "Orchards and Small Fruits" and "Observation at State Farm."

—The North Plainfield Board of Education has engaged the Y. M. C. A. Hall for the school commencement exercises, which will be held Thursday, June 23d.

SEEKING POPE'S AID?

Alleged Communications Between Spain and the Vatican.

COLONIAL RULE FOR CUBA

According to a Dispatch from Rome Leo XIII. Has Exerted His Influence to Dissuade the United States from a War With Spain.

London, March 16.—The Pall Mall Gazette yesterday afternoon published a dispatch from Rome which says there has been a recent exchange of communications between the Vatican and Spain in regard to Cuba and its relations with the United States.

The Pope, it is said, is ready to do everything in his power to prevent hostilities, "which would be fatal to the Spanish dynasty."

Continuing, the dispatch says: "The Vatican has also exerted influence at Washington and has tried directly and indirectly to dissuade the United States from plunging into war with Spain.

"According to information here, if the offices of the Pontiff are accepted, he will propose that Cuba remain under the dominion of Spain, but that it shall be ruled on the lines of an English colony."

Austria and Germany for Spain.

London, March 16.—The Vienna correspondent of the Standard declares that Austria and Germany sympathize with Spain, the former being actuated by family ties between the two reigning houses and the latter by a grudge against the United States. The correspondent adds:

"The Chinese question is much more practical for the United States than the Cuban; but America has no naval base in Chinese waters. Why should not Spain make peace by offering the United States a naval station in the Philippines? Spain would lose nothing thereby. On the contrary, the Philippines would be more assured to her than before; and the Americans would be enabled to act from that base in conjunction with England and Japan."

The Daily News, commenting on the "great interest in the defensive experiment now on its trial in America," says:

"It is quite on the cards that under the stimulus of danger the Americans will turn out some wonderful guns, besideside which the Hotchkiss and the Maxim will be mere children's toys."

Not Concerned Over Austria's Efforts.

Washington, March 16.—Little concern is expressed by the administration over the reported intention of European governments, at the instigation of Austria, to intervene between the United States and Spain. No indication of such a design has reached the State Department. What the attitude of this Government would be if representations in that line were addressed to it by the European powers is a question that the officials do not care to answer in anticipation.

The suggestion that Spain has protested against the sale by Brazil of the two cruisers to the United States likewise fails to cause any concern, the naval officers holding that there can be no question of the right of the United States to increase its navy at any time.

Hundred Insurgents Killed.

Madrid, March 16.—According to an official dispatch received here from Iloilo, capital of the Philippine island, five hundred insurgents were killed during the siege of Balinao. The dispatch adds that the insurgent forces have not offered any resistance to the Spanish troops sent to the relief garrison.

Projectiles for the Spanish.

Birmingham, Eng., March 16.—The Kynoch Company has already dispatched part of a large Spanish order for special projectiles, standing 4 1-2 feet high, the largest ever made by the Kynochs.

Germany Has Received No Inquiry.

Berlin, Germany, March 16.—The North German Gazette denies that Germany has received any inquiry from the United States in regard to the former's attitude in the event of war.

IS THE O'HIGGINS SOLD?

Again Reported in London That Spain Has Bought Her.

London, March 16.—It is reasserted here that the Spanish Government has secured the Chilian battleship O'Higgins, which has been built by the Armstrongs.

The United States Government is negotiating for the purchase of the Brazilian battleship 24 de Maio, formerly the Aquidaban, the flagship of Admiral Mello, which has lately been reconstructed in England.

The Brazilian warship 24 de Maio is a steel sheathed turreted vessel of 4,950 tons displacement and 6,206 indicated horse-power. She is 280 feet long, has 52 feet beam, draws 18 feet of water, and is driven by two propellers.

The O'Higgins is a steel turreted armored vessel of 8,500 tons displacement and of 16,500 indicated horsepower. Her hull is sheathed, she is 411 feet 9 inches long, has 62 feet 6 inches beam and is driven by two propellers. The armored belt of the O'Higgins is seven inches in thickness, and her deck plating is two inches thick. Her armament consists of four 8-inch quick-firing guns, ten 6-inch guns, four 4.7-inch guns, ten 12-pounders, ten 6-pounders and four small rapid-fire guns. She has three torpedo tubes and is estimated to steam 21.25 knots per hour.

Lillian Kennedy Dead.

Utica, N. Y., March 16.—Lillian Kennedy, the actress, who was stricken with apoplexy during a performance of "The Charity Girl," at the Utica Opera House Saturday evening, died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital yesterday morning. The company has been disbanded owing to the death of the star.

Gold in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal., March 16.—A ledge of gold-bearing quartz has been found by men engaged in grading Seventh street in this city. The street is being cut through a hill.

HOPES FOR PEACEFUL ISSUE.

Cleveland Refuses to Make Any Comment on the Cuban Crisis.

Princeton, N. J., March 16.—A reporter called at Westland, the home of ex-President Grover Cleveland, yesterday, for the purpose of obtaining an interview with the former Chief Executive of the United States upon the subject of the Maine affair and the existing relations between this country and Spain. Mr. Cleveland at first declined to express any opinion upon the subject.

"I should only be misunderstood," he said. "I have been resting here quietly since leaving Washington, and I do not wish to say or do anything which may be construed in any way as a comment upon public affairs."

Finally, as the reporter turned to leave him, Mr. Cleveland in firm and emphatic fashion volunteered this statement:

"Though I have no wish to be interviewed, you may state for me that in common with others, I think every patriotic citizen ought to loyally support the Government during a period of trial like the present, no matter what exigencies may arise.

"I will also say that I hope that the present difficulties will be settled without bloodshed. It is my belief that an honorable way out will be found eventually and that there will be no war."

Mr. Cleveland said he preferred to reserve all comments upon the possible and probable outcome of the Main affair until the official publication of the report of the Court of Inquiry.

Court of Inquiry Leaves Havana.

Havana, March 16.—The Mangrove, with the Court of Inquiry on board, sailed last evening for Key West. Captain Sampson, president of the Board, assured the correspondent that the decision to leave Havana was not reached until yesterday afternoon, after a consultation of the members. It was decided that while further testimony might be obtained here, this was not sufficiently likely to justify a longer stay. The Court can return if the divers or wreckers make discoveries that add to the stock of knowledge now gathered.

The plans of the submerged wreck, in the preparation of which Ensign Powelson has had a large share, are elaborate, and Captain Sampson says the testimony and records of the divers are full. Captain Sampson hopes the court will be allowed to resume its sittings on the battleship Iowa. All the officers of the court, except Judge Advocate Marix, are stationed on the Iowa or on the New York and on the former the court could be absolutely free from interruption. The general part of the investigation that remains will consist, unless the Court returns here, of a careful study of the plans.

New York, March 16.—Enthusiasm reached its greatest height in Madison Square Garden last night when the detachment of the Fourth United States Cavalry from West Point entered the arena, the men sitting upright, with sabres in the air, and horses prancing as they swung into the arena. Old Glory waved, bugle notes echoed, and cheer upon cheer rent the air. While the men cheered, handkerchiefs fluttered in the hands of the women, and the spectators never seemed to tire of the mimic war scenes. The regulars were warmly received, but the reception of the National Guardsmen was fully as cordial and they showed their ability to execute difficult manoeuvres as well as the regulars.

To Make Room for Fleet.

Washington, March 16.—The Government will to-day open bids for the dredging in the immediate vicinity of the Dry Tortugas for fortifications. The contract for the work will be for more than $300,000, and its stipulations will, it is understood, be rigid; that is, the Government will demand that the work be finished in a few weeks, and that for every day's delay in the completion of the work there will be imposed a penalty of $1,000 upon those accepting the contract. The object of the proposed dredging is to afford a place for the anchorage of the American war fleet, the channel at present not being deep enough.

Pack Train Ordered Back.

Portland, Ore., March 16.—The Government pack train, consisting of twenty packers and about 100 animals, which went to Alaska six weeks ago in conection with the relief expedition, has been ordered to return to Vancouver Barracks, with the exception of three packers and twenty-five mules. These will be left at Dyea under command of Lieut. J. A. Ryan, Ninth Cavalry. Major H. L. Ruckert, Fourth Cavalry, who has been in Alaska for nearly three months, has been ordered to return to his regiment at Fort Walla Walla.

Train Goes Trough a Trestle.

Ashland, Pa., March 16.—New Boston, a small village two miles west of Mahanoy City, was the scene of a serious accident last evening, by which six men were badly injured. While a freight train of twelve cars on the Pennsylvania Railroad was ascending the grade with two engines, about 5 o'clock in the evening, and was passing over a fifty-foot trestle, the supports gave way, and the train was precipitated into the cut below, a distance of thirty feet. Engineer Sigsbee had his back broken, and will die. The others of the train's crew will recover.

Hanna Says There Will Not Be War.

Washington, March 16.—Senator Hanna said yesterday: "I am quite certain there will be no war." Congressman Grosvenor said: "There will be no resort to force of arms to settle our difficulties with Spain." These utterances by the recognized spokesmen for President McKinley in both houses of Congress are regarded as official utterances that the President has determined upon a peace policy.

No War, Says Mr. Stevenson.

Washington, March 16.—Former Vice-President Adlai Stevenson called on President McKinley yesterday. As he left the White House, Mr. Stevenson said that he called simply to pay his respects to the President. In reply to inquiries he said he had no information not accessible to every one, but it was his belief that our differences with Spain would be honorably settled without resorting to war.

OUTLOOK IS PEACEFUL

TALK OF AN ADJOURNMENT

Said That Congress May Go Home Soon, but All Depends on the Tenor of the Report of the Court of Inquiry—Emergency Measures Discussed.

Washington, March 16.—The quiet feeling which has prevailed in Washington this week has not been disturbed by any developments, and it seems to be the determination of the president to encourage this peaceful sentiment which is so widespread. The Cabinet was in session yesterday less than an hour, and after the meeting was over, the members said that the reason the session was so short was because there was nothing to keep them.

The meeting was devoted to going over the accounts in regard to the $50,000,000 defense fund and the hearing of reports from the departments as to the emergency work.

The peace feeling which is so apparent is not due to any change of policy on the part of the President, but to the fact that confidence is growing in the President's ability to handle the situation, and to his steadfast desire that the matter shall be ended by peace, without the loss of honor. It is also due to the effect of the great preparations which have been made during the last week or so, showing that the United States can, if emergency demands, prepare itself to cope with any nation.

A Lesson for Spain.

The lesson of the purchase of the two Brazilian ships has been a good one to Spain, for although that government has been endeavoring to buy these vessels for some time, the negotiations proved a failure from the lack of funds. As soon as the United States expressed a desire to possess them, it was able to do so by paying cash and taking possession at once. This has been a bitter experience to Spain, and has shown the Madrid Government that it would be easy for the United States to increase its navy, if it became necessary, despite the efforts of Spain to prevent it.

The President, in conversation with members of Congress, has in the last few days given every expression of confidence as to a peaceful yet honorable termination of the present crisis. He has stated that he has never lost faith in the hope that the entire question would be settled by diplomacy.

It is the belief among naval officials to-day that the report of the Court of Inquiry may be delayed a few days, because the board seems to have postponed its return to Havana, and as the administration is in no great hurry for the verdict, it is likely that the official papers will not reach Washington until next week. The officials, however, only conjecture, because no positive information has been received lately from the court as to exact time this report will be ready for the President.

For Adjournment.

It is evident that the feeling for an early adjournment of Congress is again strong, and plans are being made by Congress to get away from Washington before the first of May. Of course, this is conditional, as everything else seems to be, upon the exact nature of the report of the Court of Inquiry. A prominent Senator said yesterday that the intimation that Congress wants to adjourn is but another evidence of the confidence the members have in the President's ability to peacefully and honorably settle, not only the Maine disaster, but also the Cuban problem.

The ability shown by the President in handling the crisis so far has impressed the conservative members of Congress most forcibly, and they are of one opinion that nothing would have so quieting an effect upon the country as an early adjournment of Congress, and the leaving of the settlement of the entire question to the President. It would show that Congress, having appropriated all moneys necessary to meet an emergency, was just as confident that the President would bring a peaceful settlement of the affair, without its aid, as that he would expend the millions judiciously and wisely.

There is undoubtedly opposition to an early adjournment among the Cuban sympathizers in Congress, and they threaten to prevent such a move by precipitating a Cuban debate. But, nevertheless, the preparations for an early adjournment will continue, and if the situation is not threatening or hostilities have not actually begun, it looks to-day as if Congress would adjourn early.

The Purchase Scheme.

The talk of the purchase of Cuba, this time by a syndicate of American and European financiers, is but the revival of one of the numerous schemes daily proposed to the President and other officials in Washington. It is stated that this Government would, of course, have no objection to the settlement of the question in this way, but it will have nothing officially to do with it, nor would the purchase of the island by a private syndicate have any bearing whatever upon the settlement of the Maine question, if the verdict should implicate the Spanish authorities, for then the question would be one between this Government and Spain alone.

The subject of an early adjournment of Congress is being generally discussed by Senators and Representatives. It has been reported that Speaker Reed is planning to bring the session to an end and that the administration is heartily in favor of that policy.

Senator Jones, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, thinks it would be unwise and impolitic for Congress to abandon the field of action under existing conditions. The sentiment of the Senate is more hostile to the idea of adjournment than that of the House. There are members of both houses who insist that it would be the part of wisdom to leave the settlement of the entire Spanish controversy with the President.

The Merchants' Association of New York city presented a protest at Albany yesterday, against the proposed transfer of the Erie Canal system to the United States Government.

A VOLUNTEER FLEET.

Being Selected by the Special Board of Naval Officers.

New York, March 16.—The auxiliary service arm of the navy will be considerably larger than many people have believed to be the case. Whenever a ship of American register was being built, either on the sea coast or on the great lakes, the officers of the Navy Department in Washington have looked to see that the ship was so constructed that it could be used as a man-of-war. All of the coastwise ships built by John Roach were designed so that they could be used by this Government as cruisers. These are the boats for which the special naval board now is looking.

The naval board was in session yesterday at the Army Building. While the utmost secrecy and caution is observed by all members of the board some of their plans are known and these show the greatest care of the Government in securing assistance should the emergency arise from all sources.

Plans for a volunteer force of vessels, made up of yachts and smaller craft, were considered by the board and propositions were made by several prominent yacht owners who have hastened to display patriotic impulses during the present crisis. These yachts and lesser crafts will be used in inland navigation and it was with this idea in view that they were considered by the naval board.

This, in addition to the consideration of terms of settlement between the United States and the International Navigation Company, occupied the time of the board. This company has offered the St. Louis, the St. Paul, the New York and the Paris for use by the Government. It is not probable that they will be bought outright should they be called into use. The question of compensation for their use was discussed at length by the naval board.

"You can say for me," said Captain Field of the board, "that everything thus far made known concerning the doings of this board is false. There is no one who knows what we have done or what we are doing. We are doing our work as rapidly as we can. You can say this, though, that no one knows anything about our affairs, and what is mofe, right now, we do not care for anyone to know."

The St. Louis Will Sail.

Washington, March 16.—The steamship St. Louis will be allowed to sail to-day. President McKinley believes that the time has not yet arrived for her impressment and purchase by the Government. This decision is subject, however, to a change of mind on the part of the President, who may receive information making it necessary to form the auxiliary fleet at once.

THE SENATE TO WAIT.

The Committee Decides to Postpone Its Maine Investigation.

Washington, March 16.—The Senate Committee on Naval Affairs yesterday considered the resolution instructing it to investigate the Maine disaster, and decided by a vote of six to five to postpone action for the present.

This action was preceded by a sharp exchange of words between the advocates of immediate action and those who think the active investigation should be deferred to permit the administration full opportunity to press its own investigation through the Naval Board of Inquiry.

After the decision was reached not to go on with the inquiry to the extent of summoning witnesses, it was suggested that steps should be taken by the committee to secure from the Navy Department all the information in its possession, and this suggestion was adopted.

It is understood that the postponement was secured by Senator McEnery joining with the majority of the Republicans, and that Senator Chandler voted with the opposition for immediate and independent inquiry.

The Relief Mismanaged?

Havana, March 16.—Mr. Louis Klopsch of the Cuban Relief Committee has sent a telegram to each United States Consul in Cuba, asking the number of persons in need of relief in the district in which the Consul is located. Mr. Klopsch says the relief work has been shamefully carried on, and that many have starved while time was wasted and money squandered.

The death of Mrs. Thurston, wife of Senator Thurston, is reported to have been caused by fright and seasickness from the rough weather.

Gold by the Million.

New York, March 16.—An influx of gold coin, due to us from foreign nations, is pouring into New York. Fully $22,000,000 has been engaged for import. This is an evidence of what Wall street is doing in the way of preparing for war. Not only has all this gold been engaged since the Maine was blown up, but $6,000,000 of it has been received already, and bankers estimate that several millions of gold must be used in London to pay for warships which we buy

IT WOULD MEAN WAR

If Spain Sends More Torpedo Boats to American Waters.

CONSIDERED AS A MENACE

Navy Department Thinks of Forming a Flying Squadron. The Spanish Flotilla Not Needed to Suppress the Cuban Insurrection.

Washington, March 16.—The formation of a flying squadron to menace the Spanish torpedo boat flotilla, now on its way from Cadiz to Havana, is being considered at the Navy Department. It will consist of the Brooklyn, Columbia and Minneapolis and be ordered immediately dispatched to make them turn back.

A torpedo craft flotilla is not needed to suppress the Cuban insurrection, and the naval authorities consider that the sending of the fleet which sailed from Cadiz is a threat which the United States should not overlook.

The vessels in the Spanish torpedo flotilla, which left Cadiz on Sunday evening, are the Ariete, Rayor, Pelton, Azor, Terror and Furor. The flotilla is escorted by the Transatlantic company's steamship Ciudad de Cadiz.

Commander Villamil expects to reach the Canaries to-day, and proceed thence to Porto Rico, there to await Gen. Blanco's orders.

Second Torpedo Flotilla to Start Soon.

Madrid, March 16.—The Spanish torpedo flotilla which sailed from Cadiz on Sunday last ostensibly for Porto Rico, will only call there for provisions, etc., and will afterward leave for Havana.

A second Spanish flotilla will soon start for Cuban waters and will probably be stationed at Porto Rico.

Maher-O'Donnell Fight To-night.

New York, March 16.—Peter Maher and Steve O'Donnell will meet for the fourth time in a six-round contest at the Arena Athletic Club, of Philadelphia, to-night. Although O'Donnell was defeated in the three previous battles he still has the opinion that he can beat Maher, and will try hard to do the trick. Maher since he so easily defeated O'Donnell in one round imagines that it is only a little preliminary boxing when he goes in the ring to meet the Australian, and he will no doubt start right in to finish Steve as soon as the bell rings for the contest to begin. Both men are in good shape for the bout and will enter the ring fit to put up a stiff battle. They are to box at catch-weights for 50 per cent. of the gross receipts. No decision will be given.

LATTIMER VERDICT DENOUNCED.

Mr. Mahany on Floor of the House Says It Is a Case of Not Proven Rather than Not Guilty.

Washington, March 16.—Representative Mahany, of New York, yesterday made a speech in the House, in which he said, speaking of the recent trial of Sheriff James Martin on a charge of murder at Wilkesbarre, Pa.:

"No evidence adduced at the trial of Martin and his deputies gives adequate indication that the procession of laborers meditated any mob violence, nor does the acquittal carry with it any such inference. This official, proven by his own statement to be cowardly, reckless or incompetent, is free to go simply and solely because the jury found it impossible to fix particular murders upon particular men. The finding of the jury, therefore, was in the nature of 'not proven' rather than in the sense of 'not guilty.'

"That such an event as the Lattimer tragedy could happen in this age and this land, and the perpetrators go unpunished, is a fearful commentary on the equitable working of our laws.

"The manipulators of trusts combine to crush competition and to enrich themselves by arbitrary rules and prices. This is lauded in a certain portion of the American press as 'business enterprise.' The legislators, and promote such 'deals' are enlightened in the same quarter as sound and sagacious statesmen,' but let workingmen associate together to protect their interests and they are at once assailed as agitators and anarchists. Let a public man, however conservative his record may be, presume to speak in defense of labor or the American workman, and he is promptly denounced as a demagogue, a disturber and a demagogue."

Big Powder Shipment to Key West.

A special train bearing over 300,000 pounds of powder left the Jersey City station of the Pennsylvania railroad yesterday bound for Key West. This shipment is intended for the squadron under command of Admiral Sicard. The powder was placed on board the cars under the supervision of officers from the Brooklyn Navy Yard who will accompany the ammunition to its destination. This is one of the largest shipments of powder ever made from this naval station.

The Death of Mrs. Thurston.

Washington, March 16.—The death of Mrs. Thurston, wife of the junior Senator from Nebraska, John M. Thurston, which occurred Monday on the yacht Anita off the Cuban coast, was made the subject of a touching reference by the blind chaplain in his invocation at the opening of the Senate's session yesterday.

Upon the motion of Mr. Allen, Mr. Thurston's colleague from Nebraska, the prayer was ordered printed in the record.

Watson for Governor of Georgia.

Atlanta, March 16.—The Populist State Convention, which will meet here to-day, will probably nominate Tom Watson for Governor, although he has stated on several occasions that he did not want to run and will not attend the convention.

Sir Henry Bessemer Dead.

London, March 16.—Sir Henry Bessemer, the celebrated inventor of Bessemer steel, died Tuesday evening.

New York city coal dealers deny that any unusual quantities of coal are being shipped to Havana from this point for the use of Spain. Cardiff is her main source of supply.

THE ENLARGED PRESS.

As promised yesterday, The Daily Press today makes its bow to patrons in enlarged form—an improvement made necessary through the generous recognition of its service, both as a purveyor of live and bright reading and an efficacious advertising medium, by the newspaper supporting public. With an additional eight columns of space and the special features to be added, besides the maintaining and improving of its news service, The Press is bound to push its way further front in journalism.

Several new departments are to be added to The Press columns, though just now all of them are not in evidence. It takes time and thought to make a tersely edited and popular newspaper, and until we can adjust our work in thorough accord with the new conditions of things evolving from the improvement, the new marks of enterprise will not be seen complete.

One special feature, however, that we start today, and which, for a newspaper of The Press' class is a decided innovation, is the German news department. Plainfield is a city where many Germans reside and wield a healthy influence in the community. Progressive and industrious, they are liberal newspaper patrons in the spirit that good citizenship and a reasonable acquaintance with the public doings, reflected concisely in the press, go hand and hand. But withal that their whole interests may lay in the land of the free and the home of the brave, there still retains in the character that homely element—the desire to know of the Fatherland's news. Realizing this condition, The Press has arranged to print one column of German news each day. It is gathered and compiled correctly and concisely, and will be a reflex of the important happenings in all the various German States. The Christian Endeavor and Epworth League columns are also commenced today, and after this week will be published every Friday in conjunction with the Sunday-school lesson taught by Dr. Stearns. A wealth of Catholic news will also be a feature once a week.

VOORHEES' HAPPY LOT.

When Senator Voorhees became Acting Governor, it was said that he would have no trouble, as Griggs had filled all the berths. But to Voorhees was left the appointment of a Chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and five members of the State Board of Arbitration. For these four places there are hundreds upon hundreds of applicants. The Labor Bureau Chief gets a salary of $2 500, and it is pretty well settled that either Senator Hoffman, of Atlanta, or Colonel Benjamin F. Lee, of Elizabeth, will be named for the place. The members of the State Board of Arbitration get $1,200 a year, and the candidates for membership to the board are many. The gentlemen whose terms are about to expire are: Samuel S. Sherwood, William M. Doughty, James Martin, Charles A. Houston and Joseph L. Moore. The Governor will also have the naming of six assistant factory inspectors who will get a salary of $1,000 each. As these deputies do not have to be confirmed by the Senate, Governor Voorhees has decided not to appoint them until after the Legislature adjourns.

WILL METE OUT JUSTICE FAIRLY.

Gen. Eli Long, who was appointed borough recorder Monday evening by the Mayor and Council, is well fitted for the position. He is thoroughly conversant with his new duties. He served in the late war and during his time in the army he had to do with many cases of court-martial. All respectable and law-abiding citizens may feel assured that Recorder Long will do his duty impartially.

—Clarence Vail has taken a position with A. M. Runyon & Son.

PASSING COMMENT.

An amusing incident occurred Monday afternoon on Park avenue. Mayor Fisk was walking along Park avenue toward the city offices, when His Honor looked up and noticed Patrolman McCue as he just appeared on the avenue from the city offices. The Mayor began to laugh heartily. The officer was wearing his hat backwards showing the shield from behind. The effect was amusing in the extreme. Mayor Fisk called the officer and told him that he reminded him of the Irishman who had put his overcoat on in a similar manner, and his friends never knew which way he was going. The genial officer took the hint at once and after changing his hat, continued on his beat.

"On the wings of melody, the fame of Plainfield reaches even unto Eighth avenue" writes George Taggart, now on the edito ial staff of The Dramatic Mirror, and formerly a resident of this city. Mr. Taggart is also a well known humorous writer for the metropolitan press. The reason for the calling forth of the comment by Mr. Taggart was a little note that recently appeared on the programme of Harry C. Miner's Eighth Avenue Theatre, in New York. Harry Williams Own Company is rendering a vaudeville performance there. Preceding the list of attractions was the overture, "A Day in Plainfield," written by Al Western. The exact character of a musical selection that could represent a day in this city is left to the imagination of the reader. It is something beyond the ken of ordinary man.

Now there is nothing particularly disgraceful in having the tire of your bicycle punctured. It's only an unpleasant happening, that's all. But have you ever noticed how the average man or woman looks on such an experience? The owner of the wheel seems to consider that he has done something dreadful and forthwith hangs his head as he trundles along the bicycle with its flat tire. He takes the back ways to approach his home and if noticed by any of his friends or acquaintances, a crimson blush mantles his cheek and his down cast eyes give evidence of his shame. The friends laugh and smile and, perchance, nudge each other at the sight. There is really nothing funny in the sight of a man walking a wheel, one of the tires to which appears to be flat. It is a fact, however, that most people do laugh at such a sight and consider it a good joke.

THEATRICAL.

"The Geisha" which is at Music Hall tonight is the latest and most successful musical opera now in this country. Written by Owen Hall, with lyrics by Harry Greenbank, and set to music by Sidney Jones, the quality of the work is undoubted. These gentlemen created a good impression when they produced "A Gaiety Girl," and did better still in "An Artist's Model;" but their best achievement has certainly been "The Geisha." The play forms a bright and agreeable entertainment from beginning to end. Its well written dialogue is humorous and clever; the lyrics are of the best and the music is as sparkling and melodious as one could desire. Japanese in construction, the story shows that the singing and dancing girls at the "Tea House of Ten Thousand Joys" entertained visitors over there just as their sisters entertain visitors in other countries where stronger beverages are supplied. Unlike many of the extravaganzas or musical comedies, there is a pretty and coherent story running through the play, which is shown in two acts.

The celebrated Guy Brothers will appear at Music Hall tomorrow night. The performances throughout are first-class in every particular and are thoroughly enjoyed. The Guy Brothers are cultured singers and musicians, and in their various roles elicit rounds of applause. The Flood Brothers, in their wonderful acrobatic feats, catch the attention of everybody. They are certainly wonders in their particular line. Taken as a whole, it is unquestionably one of the best shows that will strike the town in a long time.

New York, Philadelphia and Boston have all fallen into line and declare the comedy, "The Good Mr Best," a hit of the first magnitude. An opportunity of seeing this most admirable attraction will be given local theatregoers Saturday night at Music Hall. The sale of seats will open tomorrow and the regular house prices will prevail for this engagement at night, but reduced prices will be made for the matinee.

Look out for "The Good Mr. Best." He is on his way here and will surely enrapture the hearts of some of the fair sex.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Westfield, March 16th.—The voters of Westfield Township and Mountainside held their annual school meeting in the Westfield Club Hall last evening. The attendance was good, but no women were present, which was an unusual state of affairs for Westfield, where in years past the women have exerted as much influence as the men in the management of the schools. The resolution to reduce the number of school trustees in the district from nine to five, was carried by an almost unanimous vote. The trustees whose terms expire this year are H. L. Fink, S. W. Reese and William Schoonover. No successors are elected in their places, and this reduces the number of trustees to six. At the next annual meeting three trustees will retire and two will be elected. This will secure the desired number for the board. The appropriation of $14,000 asked for by the trustees was voted for unanimously. Of this sum $7 000 will be expended in teachers' salaries, $1,250 for books and supplies, and $1,200 for the care of buildings and grounds.

The annual roll call meeting of the Westfield Baptist church will be held tomorrow evening. Rev. J. A. Francis, a brother of the pastor, will speak.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church holds its annual election of officers this afternoon

The Social Club will hold a meeting tonight to consider the matter of the club's entertainment which has been set for April 10th.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Westfield Baptist church will hold a meeting in the church parlors tomorrow night.

The Westfield Club will give a progressive euchre party and dance in the clubhouse Friday evening.

HIS STAY EXTENDED..

The Boy Phenomenon Compelled to Prolong His Visit Anotner Week.

PERSONAL ENTREATIES AND MANY LETTERS FROM TH SICK AND SUFFERING WHICH HE COULD NOT REFUSE.

Daily Performing Remarkable Cures Which for Years Had Defied all Other Methods.

The Boy Phenomenon has finally consented to remain two weeks longer. So many urgent requests, personal entreaties and letters from the sick and suffering have been received, begging him to stay another week that he could not refuse them, and he will now be at the Revere House all this month, dispensing that all healing wonderful magnetic power that has been so liberally bestowed upon him by an all wiser creator.

The name of the Boy Phenomenon is a synonym for all that is great, good and godlike in the healing art, and each succeeding day of his sojourn in Plainfield, but adds new and convincing evidence of his unapproachable and undisputable power over disease in all its types and stages His work in this city has proved a revelation to the ethical caste of medical science, and its adherers stand amazed and dumbfounded in the presence of his splendid and Christlike accomplishments. He needs no commendation from press or rostrum. Upon the merits of his ability to conquer disease in a degree that no other agency ever approached since the apostolic age, he came amongst the people of Plainfield, and the verdict as to whether or not he has fulfilled his promises to the suffering public in this city and community is in their hands.

From every section of this city and surrounding country comes unquestionable testimony from those he has cured that he has fulfilled every promise to the letter.

When sick is the time we need the best advice and treatment; therefore we say, inform yourselves, you who are sick, visit his reception parlors any day and witness with your own eyes the healing of your friends go to their homes, talk with them, and then act as your best judgment dictates.

This is your opportunity to be cured. No matter what your condition, how long you have been sick, nor how many others you have tried, no matter what your doubts may be, there is hope and a positive cure to all who will take the trouble to investigate.

And if, after satisfying yourself that he is all that he claims to be, and that magnetism is the treatment you want, you must take advantage of your earliest opportunity to obtain an appointment, as his time is being rapidly taken.

Another cure will be published this week which will astound the medical profession. It is so phenomenal that even the Boy himself was surprised at its rapidity. It is none other than a case of total blindness from birth whose sight was miraculously restored in five minutes. Full particulars later this week.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning March 13. Comment, by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, The Breadth of God's Love.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Acts x, 11-20.

It is one of the curious things in human nature that holding to truth and duty tends to narrow men in their views and sympathies. Holding tenaciously some item not fully recognized by others often leads to a pride of knowledge and sense of superior moral worth which at times becomes almost arrogance itself. Others are looked upon as ignorant or willfully vicious. More and more we withdraw ourselves from them lest we be contaminated by intercourse with them. We grow in our pride of mental and moral superiority and become settled in our sectarian bigotry.

So Peter found himself when Cornelius' servants came to ask him to go to the godly centurion's house and show him the true way to serve God. Jesus might not eat with or keep company with one of another religion. His exclusiveness was a constant badge of His piety and purity. Three times the vision on the housetop of Simon the tanner was given to the apostle before he was moved far enough from his Jewish narrowness to understand the breadth of the Christian fellowship and the real nature of his mission as an apostle of Jesus Christ.

One of the hardest things for us to master is the fact that others who do not believe as we do may still be sincere and earnest and as truly godly in life and purpose as ourselves.

When the practice of others is different from our own, we wonder how they can do such things and yet hope for the favor of God.

Our exclusiveness is not a sign of superiority, but of an intolerant spirit, far different from the spirit of the Master.

Peter finds that God has many true worshipers who are not Jews. Though they had not the enlightenment which the Jews possessed regarding spiritual things they had the earnest spirit of inquiry and of obedience and of beneficence toward the needy. They were and ever are loved of God. His command is to His more favored children to not regard such as wicked and worthless, but to go to them in the spirit of helpfulness and meekness, gladly giving them instruction in the right way, showing sympathy and friendliness.

Ruskin in his "St. Mark's Rest" shows how this mind rules in so much of our interpretation of things national as well as individual. All are eager in the missionary service of their own schism. But zeal for our sect is not love of God or our fellow man.

God's love is over all His works. He accepts all everywhere who reverence Him and work the things they believe right according to their best light.

Religious Gambling.

In a prayer meeting recently a young man said that two of them had debated whether they would come to that service or go to a concert in another church. They decided to "flip up a cent." They tried it twice, and both times it was for the concert, but after all they thought it was duty to come to the church prayer services, and so they had come and taken part in it. This shows a decided advance in sentiment over what has prevailed in times past in many places. More and more the people are coming to use reason instead of chance to decide the course of duty. Still there are too many who leave the decision of their course of action to some juggling of cents or feelings. Religious gambling has had too large a place in times past. Payment of financial obligations has been left to the chances of lotteries of various kinds instead of provided for by honest contributions. Some churches never seem to be able to get through a deficiency without a fair or supper or entertainment of some kind. This is often worse than tossing coins to see if you should go to prayer meeting. Eat your way through is not so good as pay your part.

Fullest Life.

Sir William Hamilton well said that there are but two ends to be reached in life—perfection and happiness. It almost seems as if these two are really only one. Happiness is the aim of every one and is the real good and goal toward which all should strive. But there are so many paths which are alluring which never reach this mark. A selfish or self centered, self seeking life can never be happy. Our lives must be Christ centered if we would know true joy. Activity is also necessary. No idle life can ever be a satisfied one. Exertion, noble activity, godlike strife for mastery, is one of the essentials of life in its full exercise. Work for others must fill the heart and mind and hands if we will find contentment. One must love, love deeply, passionately, must give his life and all powers unstintedly for his loved ones, if he would know the ecstasy of being. In the glow of self sacrifice one first finds real satisfaction of soul. This is the Christ soul and the Christ life. Do you know it?

Christmas Carols and Easter Anthems.

These two terms well express the fundamental difference between the two festivals—carols and anthems, simplicity and grandeur. Sweet must be the simple music which tells the story of shepherds and angel songs, of manger cradle and virgin born babe. Grander must be the burst of holy melody which celebrates the triumph of life over death.

Probably no theme has so thrilled the hearts of men as this Easter gladness. The grandest musical compositions ever devised by men have been written for its celebration. The "Gloria" of Mozart's "Twelfth Mass" stands unrivaled. The oratorio of "The Messiah" is perhaps the noblest musical composition as a whole which the world has ever heard. The hallelujah chorus is its climax. Song expresses what the other arts cannot hope to do. The human voice combined with musical instruments reaches a point which sculpture and painting and architecture can never hope to attain

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 13. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—How to keep the Christian Endeavor pledge.—Math. xxv, 14-30.

The parable of the talents, which forms our topical reference, was spoken by Christ to a mixed multitude on the Mount of Olives a short time before His crucifixion. It illustrates the faithful and unfaithful use of different gifts and talents and the results. It may well introduce us to the study of the subject of how we should keep the Christian Endeavor pledge.

1. We should keep the pledge as a duty and an opportunity from Christ. In the parable of the talents the master who goes away and intrusts talents to his servants represents Jesus Christ, who has gone to heaven and left duties and opportunities to His disciples. The duties and opportunities of the Endeavor society as represented by the pledges are obligations owed to Christ. We pledge ourselves to Him. Our vows are given not to the society, but to Christ. We promise Him that we will do whatever He would like to have us do. That moment the Christian Endeavor society with all its opportunities for service becomes Christ's vineyard. The opportunities become talents intrusted by Him to us, to be used for Him and to be accounted for to Him. If we would keep these facts constantly in mind, we would keep the pledge more faithfully.

2. We should keep the pledge in accordance with our diversified gifts. All the servants did not have the same number of talents. To one the master gave five talents, to another two and to another but one, according to the ability of each one. Christ has not given us all the same ability. To some He has given five talents, to others but one. This should not make those who possess great ability proud and arrogant, but humble and charitable, since it is a gift of Christ and since also great abilities bring correspondingly great responsibilities. Nor should those who have but one talent say, "Since I can do so little I will do nothing." If Christ has only given us one talent, He will only require us to account for one, but He will call us to account for that one. The unfaithful servant did not escape punishment because he only had one talent. He was held to as strict an account as the servant who had five talents. With all the ability, be it much or little, that the Master has given us let us perform the duties and obligations of our pledge.

3. We should keep the pledge faithfully in view of the fact that Christ will call us to account for our stewardship. If faithful, we will be rewarded in proportion to our faithfulness; if unfaithful, if neglectful, we will receive Christ's condemnation. Let us not forget also that the unfaithful servant simply neglected his talent. He did not abuse it, simply let it alone, and yet Christ held him accountable. How many Endeavorers are neglecting their splendid opportunities? How can we account to Christ?

Bible Readings.—Gen. xxviii, 20-22; Num. xxi, 1-3; xxx, 1, 2; Deut. xxiii, 21; Eccl. v, 4, 5; Ps. l, 14; lxxvi, 11; cxxxii, 1-5; Math. xxv, 31-46; I Cor. x, 31; Gal. vi, 9, 10; Col. iii, 17; Jas. i, 22-27; Rev. ii, 10.

A Peculiar People.

It is a frequent accusation against Christians that little difference is apparent between them and people who make no profession of allegiance to Christ. This implies that some visible difference is expected. It certainly is true also that such a difference always has been insisted upon by Christians themselves, who thus have conceded the fairness of the claim that it ought to be evident. In what sense, then, is a Christian believer bound to be unlike others?

It is not enough to reply that he is bound to be pure, peaceable, unselfish and diligent in all good endeavor. This is true of him, but it is equally true of every one else. Nobody is a real Christian of whom this is not true—at least so far as concerns the ruling spirit and purpose of his life—but nobody of whom this is true is, therefore, a Christian. Wherein, then, lies the peculiarity of the Christian? Is it not in this fact that he is animated, as no one else is, by the distinct purpose of imitating and honoring Jesus Christ?—Congregationalist.

Churchgoing.

And, best of all, by churchgoing we have our share in the greatest act of Christian worship—the showing forth of the Lord's death in the holy sacrament. We may eat the flesh and drink the blood of Christ to the strengthening of our soul. No private prayer, no Bible reading at home, will make up for the loss of this, for this is the Christian's highest duty and the Christian's dearest privilege. By churchgoing you honor your God, you win His blessing on all your pleasures and all your cares. By forsaking your church you lose the blessing of His presence, and your soul will faint and perish, until you come near to forget God. And then how shall He remember you when He calls together His people at the great day? If you have any love and gratitude to God for creating, redeeming and sanctifying you—if you want anything from Him, if you have a soul to be saved—don't give up going to church. If you don't love God, if you don't care about salvation, it is useless to argue with you.—Church Evangelist.

A Prayer.

Oh, Lord, who art our Guide even unto death, grant us, I pray Thee, grace to follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest. In little daily duties to which Thou callest us bow down our wills to simple obedience, patience under pain or provocation, strict truthfulness of word and manner, humility, kindness; in great acts of duty or perfection, if Thou shouldst call us to them, uplift us to self sacrifice, heroic courage, laying down of life for Thy truth's sake or for a brother. Amen.—C. G. Rossetti.

Two Ounces of Blood Daily

Two ounces of blood will fill a small wine glass, and that is the quantity of rich, red blood which is daily added to your blood vessels when you take one of Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids with each meal three times daily.

No other iron medicine will do this, because all others are unnatural or acid preparations of iron, while Capsuloids contain natural iron identical with the iron already in your blood.

You cannot take any ordinary iron medicine, because it's acid, and injures teeth, stomach and bowels; but

You can take Capsuloids, or natural iron medicine, because it contains no acid, is perfectly natural, and perfectly mild.

Infants and invalids, as well as adults, take Capsuloids without feeling them in the slightest, even though they have never been able to take any other kind of iron medicine.

What are Capsuloids? They are the natural iron called Hæmoglobin, extracted from the blood of healthy young bullocks. This natural iron is just the same as the iron in the human blood. We then enclose this dissolved natural iron in little soft pointed globes of pure gelatine. They are easily swallowed, are free from taste and smell, and their contents enter the blood within from one to three minutes after they are taken into the stomach.

Capsuloids is the greatest of all tonics for the nerves, heart, lungs, bronchial tubes, mucus membranes, liver, bowels, kidneys, and especially for all monthly irregularities, when these organs are affected with blood diseases.

Capsuloids act entirely through the blood, enriching it and increasing its quantity two ounces daily. The effect upon the health, color, nerves and spirits is seen almost immediately. Think of the power and effect of adding two ounces of rich, red, new blood each day!

Many doctors have ceased using all other kinds of iron, and prescribe Capsuloids exclusively. Send for pamphlet, containing their testimonies, and local testimonials.

DR. CAMPBELL'S RED BLOOD FORMING CAPSULOIDS

are sold at 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50 by [illegible] Druggists, 143 W. FRONT ST. or sent by mail on receipt of price by

This is not a patent or secret medicine. It is prescribed largely by doctors.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up to date and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And still what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

THEY RIDICULE IT.

Ridicule, However, Is Not Argument and Facts are Stubborn Things.

Stomach troubles are so common and in many cases so obstinate to cure that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and indigestion. Many such pride themselves on never being humbugged especially on medicine.

This fear of being humbugged may be carried too far; so far, in fact, that many persons suffer for years with weak digestion, rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims of a preparation so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Now Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary proprietary medicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret is made of their ingredients, but analysis shows them to contain the natural digestive ferments pure aseptic pepsin, the digestive acids, Golden Seal, bismuth hydrastis and nux. They are not cathartic, neither do they act powerfully on any organ, but they cure indigestion on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten promptly, thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles because they act entirely up on the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, taken after meals, digest the food. That is all there is to it. Food not digested or half digested is poison, as it creates gas, acidity, headaches, palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite, and many other troubles which are often called by some other name.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. Address Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., for book on stomach diseases or ask your druggist for it. 3 14 16 18

ENGLAND'S ATTITUDE.

Michael Davitt Says Great Britain's Sympathies Are With Spain.

London, March 16.—The English attitude on the American-Spanish crisis is influenced by two most selfish motives.

First, she jealously dreads any conflict which might exhibit the republic as a strong rival naval power, and which would call forth at this juncture the great potential military strength of the United States.

Secondly, she wishes by means of a cheap and insincere expression of sympathy with the United States in the quarrel with Spain to obtain in return the invaluable prestige of America's sympathy in a possible struggle with Russia in China.

To this end men and newspapers, ordinarily most anti-American, as over the Venezuelan difficulty, are now trying to impress France and Russia, America's tried friends in the past, with the idea that an alliance between England and America is possible of attainment.

Such an alliance, if formed, while England is distrusted in her motives and policy by every other civilized nation would destroy the great moral influence which the United States as a non-aggressive and non-grabbing power, wields throughout the world today.

The sympathies of the ruling classes of England are really with Spain. They are as hostile to America to-day as they were in the days of Washington, Jackson and Lincoln.

MICHAEL DAVITT.

SPAIN ASKS WHAT WE MEAN.

Formally Inquires Why We Are Buying Warships.

Washington, March 16.—According to a report current last night the Spanish Government is not observing with indifference the purchases by the United States of warships. It is ascertained in different quarters that the Spanish Legation yesterday presented a note to Assistant Secretary Day, at the Department of State, requesting that he enable the Minister to explain to his Government what construction Spain is to put upon the accumulation by the representatives of the United States in Europe, of ships, guns and ammunition.

Mr. Day, when asked what truth there was in the report and what answer he made to it, if it were true, refused either to affirm or deny the story. At the Spanish Legation complete ignorance of the report was expressed. One report from Mr. Day represented him as having declined to answer the inquiry at once, and as having informed the Minister of Spain that a reply will be made to-day.

PHILADELPHIA BRIBERY CASE.

Councilman Stevenson Tells Who Offered Him $5.000 for a Vote.

Philadelphia, March 16.—Walter N. Stevenson, a member of Common Council who made a public statement at a meeting of that body on last Thursday night that a bribe of $5,000 had been offered to him, to vote for the Schuylkill Valley Water Supply ordinance, was put on oath yesterday before an investigating committee of the chamber. He swore the man who offered the money for his vote was Peter E. Smith, a member of the Republican City Campaign Committee and a politician of the Twenty-ninth Ward.

Stevenson swore that Smith told him that the offer came from Charles F. Kindred, general agent of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, who, he said, had turned in for the bill, and for whom, he said, he was authorized to make the proposition.

Mr. Kindred, who was seen last night, denied any connection with the alleged Schuylkill Valley bribery charges.

Healer Ordered to Leave.

Philadelphia, March 16.—Archbishop Ryan has ordered the Rev. Philippe Giraud, an Armenian priest who has been posing as a divine healer, to leave this city at once. Should he refuse the Archbishop will ask the police to arrest him as a fraud. Father Giraud arrived here ten days ago, and hundreds have flocked to him believing implicitly in his power to heal them. He claimed to have authority from the Church for his work, but his presence here was unknown to the Archbishop until the publication of a story about an eighteen-year-old blind girl whose sight, it was alleged, was restored last Sunday. The girl, Mary Pogues, is an inmate of the Pennsylvania Institute for the Blind, and the healing was alleged to have taken place at the house of her aunt.

American Flag on the New Cruiser.

London, March 16.—The Stars and Stripes of the United States were run up yesterday on the masthead of the cruisers Amazonas, now at Elswick, and the sister ship, the Admiral Breu, which is on the stocks at the same place. This action, which formally denotes that the United States has purchased the two Brazilian cruisers, was taken to prevent any complications should war break out before the ships can leave the country. The Amazonas can be made ready to sail at any time, but the Admiral Breu will not be ready for launching until Fall.

Strength of Cuban Forces.

Washington, March 16.—Representatives of the Cuban Junta have received from the Adjutant-General of the Cuban Army by a special messenger a report of the strength of the Cubans around Havana. This report says that the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Army Corps, under Col. Cardenas and Col. Mayria Rodriguez, consist of 18,000 infantry fully armed, 12,250 cavalry, 3,700 artillery and 5,700 light armed infantry.

All Mexicans Side Against Spain.

Guadalajara, Mex., March 16.—All classes of Mexican citizens sympathize with the United States in its controversy with Spain. All news is read and discussed in the smallest towns, and the remarkable fact is that the Mexicans, who have been hitherto cool in their manifestations of regard for the United States, publicly declare the United States should punish Spain.

Deserters from Our Navy.

Madrid, March 16.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Lisbon says that a score of sailors deserted from the United States warships while they were there, and the dispatch adds they were nearly all Spaniards.

WHY AND WHEREFORE.

I know not whence I came.
I know not whither I go,
But the fact stands clear
That I am here
In this world of pleasure and woe,
And out of the mist and murk
Another truth shines plain—
It is in my power
Each day and hour
To add to its joy or pain.

I know that the earth exists,
It is none of my business why,
I cannot find out
What it is all about—
I would but waste time to try.
My life is a brief, brief thing,
I am here for a little space,
And while I stay
I would like, if I may,
To brighten and better the place.

The trouble, I think, with us all
Is the lack of a high conceit;
If each man thought
He was sent to the spot
To make it a bit more sweet,
How soon we could gladden the world,
How easily right all wrong,
If nobody shirked
And each one worked
To help his fellows along.

Cease wondering why you came;
Stop looking for faults and flaws;
Rise up to-day
In your pride and say:
"I am part of the first great cause,
However full the world,
There is room for an earnest man;
It had need of me
Or it would not be—
I am here to strengthen the plan."
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in Form.

YVONETTE.

Yvonnette was a fair little girl of five summers, and with her wee, tight-fitting white hood and tiny sabots was as pretty a child as could have been found anywhere in Vendee.

Jean Malo, her father, a farmer on the estate of Count de Mordine, had quitted his home some weeks previously with several companions, with his gun slung over his shoulder and a stout club in his hand, to hunt the boar—at least, so he said. But it was in 1793; General Santerre's grenadiers had invaded Brittany, and Yvonnette's mother had grave reason to fear that he had gone on an infinitely more dangerous hunt.

Rumors of fighting had circulated freely throughout the province, the toscin clanged from church towers and in response thereto the youth of the villages were flocking to the standard of Cathelineau, whom the Bretons had chosen for their commander-in-chief.

On the day on which this story opens Yvonnette's mother was more thoughtful and agitated than usual, so much so that her trouble was noticed by the child, who demanded several times,—

"Where is papa?"

Receiving no answer to this and other questions, she at last drew her little stool up to the window and sought consolation with her doll Rose. The latter was a beautiful Breton doll that her father had bought at the fair at Auray a year before, and was Yvonnette's inseparable companion and the recipient of all her confidences.

Suddenly shots were heard outside, followed by several shots fired in quick succession. The child was in no way frightened. The clanging of the bells, the sound of firearms and the shouting of an excited crowd were familiar sounds to her, and were merely associated in her baby mind with the holidays, when the grand lords and ladies from the neighboring castle deigned to take part in the fetes and dancing upon the village green. But Anne Malo, her mother, white and rigid as a taper, and her hands pressed tightly upon her heart, was gazing out of the window with wide, frightened eyes.

"What is the matter, mamma?" questioned the child.

"Hush, darling!" was the only reply of the farmer's wife, who suddenly recovered herself, closed the shutters, lit the lamp and dropped on her knees beside the bed.

Yvonnette watched her wonderingly, and her big blue eyes wandered from the kneeling figure to the high gothic fireplace, beside which the cat was purring and blinking contentedly. She was about to follow her inclination and go to play with him, when the door was flung open and a countryman, pale and bedraggled, with a gun in one hand and a flag in the other, burst into the house and slammed the door behind him.

"Papa! papa!" screamed Yvonnette delightedly.

Anne Malo had sprung to her feet and thrown herself in her husband's arms.

"Whatever has happened," she sobbed. "I have been nearly wild with anxiety every hour since you have been away."

"All is lost!" responded the farmer moodily. Take this flag and hide it carefully. If ever the Blues should find it here it would be all up with us."

He kissed the standard reverently and handed it to her. As he did so a few drops of blood oozed from under his cap and down his matted hair.

"Jean, you are wounded!" exclaimed Anne.

"No, it is nothing," replied the Chouan, picking up his gun.

"Where are you going?" she demanded, resolutely barring the door with her body.

"To fight with the others."

"You will do nothing of the kind."

"Wife, let me pass," ordered Malo "My comrades are waiting for me. It is my duty."

"You shall not go," she repeated Then stooping swiftly, she picked up the child and held her out to him.

"You haven't even kissed baby," she exclaimed, reproachfully.

Malo wavered.

"They will think I am a coward," he groaned, staggering against the bed in spite of himself, and leaning upon it for support.

"Jean, you are wounded, I knew it Come into the cellar and let me take care of you," she entreated. "The enemy might search for you, and you must live for me—for Yvonnette."

"No, I must go," he insisted, bracing himself with an effort; but his strength gave out as he said it, and he reeled into her arms.

She supported him into the obscure cellar and laid him among the bundles of straw. Then she returned to the dwelling-room. Now that he was no longer there she could act. She took the flag, broke the staff over her knee and threw the pieces into the fire. Next she hid the gun under a pile of faggots in the corner. Then pouring some vinegar and water in a bowl, she told the child to be good and not make a noise, and went to attend to her wounded husband.

Yvonnette continued to play with her doll, but her attention was attracted to a strip of the flag which the flames had respected. It was a piece of white silk with fleur de lys embossed in gold upon it. She drew it out of the embers with a cry of delight, and setting her doll upon her knee was engaged in pinning the silk upon it in the shape of a dress when the door again opened and a big, fierce, white mustached soldier in a blue tunic, white breeches and high gaiters entered. He was a sergeant of grenadiers of the Republic.

He glanced around the room and at once noticed that the gun rack was empty.

"One of those wolves who have been peppering us from ambush evidently lives here," he muttered. "There's a gun missing. A thousand thunders! If we catch any of the rascals they will get a short shrift and no ceremony."

He tore aside the curtains of the bed, peered around and suddenly caught sight of Yvonnette, who, not in the least concerned, went on dressing her doll.

The savage expression of his face softened into a tender smile and he went towards her.

"What a shame to leave her all alone in the house at such a time as this," he muttered. He bent, took her in his arms and kissed her.

"What's your name, little dear?" he asked.

"Yvonnette," replied the child.

"Why, I've got a little Yvonnette, too, just like you, and three little boys as well," he said, and the recollection of his little brood in Paris brought the tears into the soldier's eyes.

At that instant he noticed the silk on the doll, and the hard, fierce expression returned to his face again.

"Where did you get that?" he exclaimed harshly, dropping the child and seizing the stuff.

"There," said Yvonnette, half frightened at his change of manner, pointing to the fire.

He rushed to the hearth, drew some of the half burnt pieces of the flagstaff from the flames, with a piece of scorched silk, and recognized them.

"Who do these belong to?" he went on.

"To papa."

"Where is your papa?"

"There," said Yvonnette, pointing to the door.

"I've got one of them at last," growled the sergeant, savagely, seizing his gun. "And if I don't fill him with lead enough to sink him to the bottom of the sea inside of two minutes my name is not Laderoute."

He strode to the cellar door and shook it. It was bolted on the inside, and still further enraged he raised his rifle and was about to splinter the frail partition with the butt end of the weapon when he heard a sound that made him turn his head.

Without realizing the danger her father was in, but instinctively frightened by the gestures of the grenadier Yvonnette had burst out crying.

The sergeant looked at her and lowered his gun, and a guilty flush suffused his face.

"I kissed her a moment ago and now I was going to kill her father," he muttered. "Laderoute, you're a blanked, blanked, blankety-blanked cuss. That's what you are."

He hastily gathered up the incriminating debris of the flag and piled the embers upon them. As he did so a company of soldiers marched up to the house. Sergeant Laderoute took Yvonnette on his arm and stood in the doorway to prevent them from entering.

"No one here but this little lady," he said. "Right about face—march!"

Then he kissed the child.

"For my own little Yvonnette's sake," he murmured. "Good-by sweetheart," and putting her down, closed the door and hurried after his comrades.

Quite a Simple Matter.

Jilkins is the factaotum of an artist who has made some noise in the world and is quite as important a personage in his own estimation, as his master. One day a lady called on the artist in the absence of the latter and was received by Jilkins.

"Dear me," she cried, glancing first at an incomplete picture and then at Jilkins, "I declare it is very much like you!"

"It is me," said Jilkins, with a superior air. "I sits for all his old men. That's what he's specially good at."

"You must be a very useful person to your employer," observed the visitor. "So you think that Mr. Blank, R. A., is especially good at old men?"

"Yes. Cos why? He's got nothing to do! I order his frames, wash his brushes, set his palettes, mix his colors and sit there for him to look at. How can he help being good? He's got nothing to do but shove the paint on!"

Woman is a subject never mentioned in Morocco. It would be considered a terrible breach of etiquette to ask a man about his wife.

Higher and Still Higher

Go the grain markets, and the opinion continues that the top is going to be found much higher.

Under such circumstances the Prudent Farmer and Dairyman should see that he ge s the most value for his money.

With us he has a large variety of feed from which to choose. Among those that seem at this time most desirable are MIDDLINGS, OAT FEED and PEA MEAL, all of which are cheap in proportion to their feeding value.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Harold Chandor, of East Fifth street, is riding a new Eldridge bicycle

Patrolman McCarthy has purchased an Eldridge bicycle, and spends a portion of his time riding it.

All of the Plainfield letter carriers have purchased Eldridge bicycles through the agency of Thos. Cuming, manager of the local branch of the Eldridge Cycle Co.

The Eldridge Bicycle C mpany put out eleven wheels in Plainfield Saturday. For the wonderful showing that the Eldridge Company is making in Plainfield this spring, the business ability and hustling qualities of its manager, Thomas A. Cuming, are largely responsible. The Eldridge Company made an excellent selection when they choose that young Plainfielder to look after their local branch.

The second basket ball team of Twenty third street Y. M. C. A of New York city, will come to Plainfield next Monday evening to play the Y. M. C. A. team in the latter's gymnasium.

The girls of the Junior and Third classes of the High School are not yet satisfied as to the relative strength of their teams. Another game is being arranged between the two teams and will probably be played Friday afternoon.

A change has been made in the schedule of practice days for the girls of the High School at the Whittier building. Heretofore Friday afternoon has been the time for the Junior class team to practice. Now their day has been changed and Friday afternoon will be devoted to match games between the classes.

In the account in The Press of the basket ball game played by the girls of the Plainfield High School last Friday afternoon, the line up of the Third class team should have been as follows:—Right forward, Beatrice Miner; left forward, P. Denton; centre, Edna Moore; right guard, Alice Morgan; left guard, Ruth Maxson.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Newark High School is very anxious to change the date of their game with the Plainfield High School. The Newark boys scheduled another game for the same date and are now trying to get the Plainfield management to accommodate them with a change of date.

The Plainfield Crescent Baseball Club will again appear in the field during the coming season. Manager Mumford has not yet settled where he will locate his grounds, but he already has signed a number of new players together with last year's team and will have a much stronger team to put on the field.

The candidates for the baseball nine of the Plainfield High School enjoyed their first afternoon of regular practice yesterday. There are twenty candidates who are anxious to make the team. The prospects are that the team which will represent the High School in the league of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association will be a strong one.

Claude Edwards, manager of the High School team, is the principal candidate for position of pitcher on the High School team this spring This is Edwards' first year at the Plainfield High School. He came here from Carthage, N. H, where he captained the High School team of that place. He played first base, but now his abilities as a twirler will be developed and he will be placed in the box

DIDN'T GO TO GET HIS RENT.

Consequently Michael Ettinger was Unable to Eject Alexander Kane.

A house in Paradise alley was the point of a dispute in Justice Newcorn's court last evening. The case was that of Michael Ettinger against Alexander Kane, landlord and tenant, and was tried before Justice Newcorn and a jury of twelve men. It appears that Ettinger was very anxious to have Kane give up his house, and attempted to compel him to leave it by legal means. Kane claimed that he had left his rent with a third party from whom Ettinger might have secured it had he cared to do so. The jury listened to the testimony for nearly three hours and then decided that the plaintiff had no cause for action.

PRETTY SCHOOL MARM WILL BE RETAINED

Hot School Election Held Up in Warrenville.

POLITICIANS FAVORED YOUNG MAN.

Pastor Opdyke and Her Churchmen Rallied Around the Standard of Miss O'Connor, Who Comes from Bound Brook, and Trustees Favoring Her Employment There Elected Over Those Pledged to Fred Sage, a Home Boy.

The issue of home trade in regard to the selection of school teachers made the school election in Warren township, Tuesday afternoon, a very exciting one. In such large numbers did the voters turn out that they had to adjourn to the school yard, out in the cold, where the meeting was held.

For nearly five years, Miss Mary O'Connor, a comely young woman from Bound Brook, directed the youthful mind of the small boys and girls in School District No. 1, which includes Warrenville, in the way they should go. She was a favorite with the children and their parents as well. Now Fred Sage was a boy from old Warren. He has considerable ability and was quite popular with the people of the township. He wanted to teach school and preferred to do so at home. He had friends among the school trustees and they wanted Sage to have the position he coveted. That was where the trouble began.

Now the trustees had nothing against Miss O'Connor, except that she interfered with their project of putting young Sage in as a teacher. So they decided to make a change. The pupils and their parents protested but it did no good and last fall Miss O'Connor was dropped and Sage installed as teacher.

There are nine school trustees in all, the terms of three of whom expire this winter. Two others resigned. Phillip Voorhees moved out of the township and Edward Cooper resigned on account of the general dissatisfaction over the change in teachers. That left five trustees, a majority of the board, to be elected at the meeting Tuesday.

The faction that favored the reinstatement of Miss O'Connor, was led by Rev. Dr. George Opdyke, pastor of the Mt. Horeb M. E. church. John C. Cooper, the great Republican leader of the township, was the chief of the supporters of young Sage. Pastor Opdyke rallied his good people about him while the G. O. P. workers gathered about their leader. The contest waxed hotter and hotter as the day approached and both sides worked hard among the farmers of the district. Everybody took one side or the other and the community was fairly evenly divided.

The meeting was to have been held at the Warrenville schoolhouse, but the crowd was so large that they adjourned to the yard under the trees. The attendance of voters at the meeting was the largest on record, 193 being present.

The first skirmish came in the selection of the chairman. The superior tactics of Cooper's faction won for them the election of George Terrill as chairman. The secretaryship was given to Rev. Dr. Opdyke.

Ten candidates were nominated. Each faction had its complete ticket and made a bitter fight for it. After two hours of excitement, the polls were finally closed and the votes counted. The adherents of Miss O'Connor finally elected their ticket by a small but comfortable majority. The men elected were John Gunton, Frank Alletee, Rev. Dr. George Opdyke, Adam Betzel and Andrew Fleming. There was considerable excitement over an item in the account of the old board of trustees. It was for $30 paid to Miss O'Connor, for a month over which there was some dispute. The friends of the young woman had already raised $45 by subscription to be paid her and they were anxious to know whether she received the subscription and her salary also. The old board refused to explain.

AWAY FROM CHURCH FLOCK.

WHERE IS PASTOR P. S. GIBSON?

Some Say He Went to Attend a Conference, Which is Ended, and Others Say to Hold Revival Meetings.

Where is Rev. Philip S. Gibson?

This is the question which is puzzling the officers and members of the new Calvary Colored Baptist church, of which Mr. Gibson is the pastor.

When the Calvary Colored Baptist church was organized some time ago it was thought that Pastor Gibson had steered his bark into smooth waters, but troubles have continued to pursue him. For two weeks past his young daughter has been dangerously ill with scarlet fever, and the health authorities have quarantined the house. The pastor has been obliged to remain away from the house or give up his pastoral work.

Last Friday a few of the officers of the Calvary church were informed by Mr. Gibson that he intended going to Newark to attend the Baptist Ministers' Conference, and might not be home until Monday. He provided a preacher to fill his pulpit Sunday, and nothing was thought of his absence for a few days.

When the time passed on, however, and the pastor was not heard from, there were whispers among the church members concerning his whereabouts. The Ministers' Conference did not continue after Sunday.

Some of the officers say that he has gone to take charge of a protracted meeting, but were unable to tell where the meeting is being held.

One of the anxious ones at present is Spencer Conway, president of the Ash Carters' Union, who is Gibson's bondsman. He clings steadfastly to the theory that the absent pastor is conducting a protracted meeting. He does not know the pastor's whereabouts.

AN UP-TO-DATE DRUG STORE.

Improvements to Be Made by Druggist Rowley on Front Street.

Frank Rowley, the popular druggist, is making arrangements to have one of the best drug stores in the city and thoroughly up-to date. His store adjoining Music Hall will be fitted with entire new fixtures and a handsome soda water fountain. He will make a specialty of soda water and also his own preparations, which have a well-earned reputation.

One of the best features of the change will be a large and convenient entrance from the Music Hall lobby into Mr. Rowley's drug store. This will be handy for Music Hall patrons, who will often desire to patronize the soda fountain between the acts. Mr. Stillman, the owner of the store, has consented to make this improvement for Mr. Rowley.

Exempts Nominated Officers.

The Exempt Firemen's Association held a regular meeting last evening and nominated officers for the election to be held at the first meeting in April. The members discussed the idea of giving an entertainment at an early date. The date and character will be determined a little later. Other business transacted was of a routine nature. The entertainment will be held in Washington Hall, and the proceeds will be for the benefit of the disabled members of the association. The committee in charge consists of the board of trustees and Chief Engineer T. O. Doane.

Crushed Foot Paid His Fare.

While stealing a ride on a coal train yesterday afternoon George Beinton, aged 15 years, of Wilmington, Del., had his left foot crushed between the bumpers. The injury is not a serious one, and Beinton will not lose his foot.

Valuable Equine to be Executed.

A valuable road mare, belonging to City Judge George W. DeMeza, of West Second street, broke her ankle a week ago. Her foot became fast in the manger. Every effort has been made to save the horse, which has been the property of the Judge for the last seven years, but with no avail and it will be necessary to end the life of the equine.

Recorder Long's First Case.

Recorder Long, of the borough, had his first case this morning. Marshal Wilson arrested John Daley for leaving his horse untied, and the offender of the law was arraigned before the Recorder. For the offense Daley was fined $2, which sum was paid.

TO MEET AT DEATH TRAP.

LEHIGH OFFICIALS AND FREEHOLDERS WILL CONFER TOMORROW.

Danger to Life and Limb Lurks at the Park Avenue Crossing and it is the Intention to Provide for Safety.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, March 17th.—The county officials and representatives of the Lehigh Valley Railroad have at last taken steps toward doing away with one of the most dangerous grade crossings in Middlesex county. The crossing in question is located near Oak Tree station on the main line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad where Park avenue, running from Plainfield to Metuchen, crosses the tracks.

The crossing is one of the most dangerous in this section of the State, partially on account of the arrangement of the crossing itself and partially for reason of the great amount of traffic on that thoroughfare daily. The crossing is on a curve and the woods and underbrush grow close to the track on three sides so that it is impossible to see if a train is approaching until the vehicle or cyclist is on the track. There is a sharp hill on Park avenue, just north of the crossing, down which wheelmen are greatly tempted to coast without knowing of the dangerous proximity of the railroad.

All these dangerous features of the crossing have been brought to the attention of the Board of Freeholders of Middlesex county, and a committee has been appointed from that body to confer with the officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company looking toward some remedy. Tomorrow afternoon the committee from the Board of Freeholders will hold a conference with the Lehigh Valley officials at Oak Tree, and personally investigate the matter. The commitee will make suggestions which, it is hoped, the railroad men will decide to adopt.

LEGISLATIVE TILT OVER BERGEN PLAN.

Victory Won by Opponents of the Measure.

A LIMITED FRANCHISE CLAUSE.

Under the Amendment the Authorities Cannot Sell a Franchise for Longer Than Twenty-five Years—Assemblyman Murray Heard in the Discussion—Bill Will be Taken Up Today Again—The General Game Law Considered in Senate

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 17.—There was a pretty parliamentary battle in the House yesterday afternoon, lasting nearly two hours and carrying the session over to nearly 7 o'clock. The battle was over the Squire trolley bill, for which one portion of the population of Union county is clamoring, and which is opposed by another portion. The victory was won by the opponents of the measure.

When the bill came up on second reading Mr. Marnell submitted an amendment prohibiting the authorities from granting a franchise for longer than twenty-five years.

Mr. Squire opposed this, and said that no company would accept such a restricted franchise.

Mr. Murray said that while he was not in favor of granting unlimited franchises, yet he thought the municipal boards could be trusted to protect the rights of the people.

Messrs. Porter and Gledhill opposed the amendment, saying it was submitted for the purpose of killing the bill.

The amendment was adopted by a vote of 63 to 22, and a motion to reconsider was tabled on Mr. Gledhill's motion.

It was thought that this carried the entire bill over under the rules, but it did not. The bill was again taken up and a new amendment offered, to oblige the company receiving the franchise to pay a percentage of the gross receipts of the company to the municipality through which the tracks ran.

Mr. Porter promptly moved to lay the new amendment on the table. Mr. Allen seconded the motion, and it was carried. This carried with it the entire bill, which, with the amendment, will be taken up today.

When the committee's substitute for Senate bill No. 61, the general game bill, came up on its second reading in the Senate, Senator Stokes offered an amendment to the section permitting farmers to trap out of season rabbits found to be damaging trees or crops, requiring such farmers to secure a license from the Game Warden. The amendment was opposed by Senators Reed, Francis and Engle, and was finally lost.

Mr. Stokes offered amendments fixing the seasons for gray snipe from March 15th to May 1st, and from August 15th to January 1st, and for dove or upland plover the months of August and September. They were agreed to.

Senator W. M. Johnson offered a further amendment fixing the season for woodcock, squirrel and partridge from October 15th to December 15th, and for rabbits and quail from November 10th to January 1st. Senator Stokes spoke against the amendment, on the ground that it would practically kill the measure. The amendment was not agreed to, and the bill was ordered to be re-engrossed and placed on third reading.

BURGLARS IN BOARDING HOUSE.

After Ransacking the House They Raided The Wine Cellar.

During the winter months Alexis Vanette runs a business college in New York. During the summer he conducts a private boarding house near Mt. Bethel for the benefit of his pupils and others. During the winter the place is closed. Sunday night some unknown miscreants broke into the house and ransacked it from garret to cellar. They helped themselves to what they wanted, but the exact amount stolen will not be known until Mr. Vanette returns.

In the basement was a well-equipped wine cellar. This the burglars raided and selected the most valuable of the stock. They gained an entrance through a window, which they broke open.

EARNEST WORKERS TRUE

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOYS' MISSION BAND.

A Tidy Sum of Money Sent to the Mission Field—Reports of Past Year's Work and the Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the "Earnest Workers," the Boys' Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue church, was held in the church parlors yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. President Edward Jones was in the chair. The annual report was read by the secretary, Geo. Richards, showing that monthly meetings had been regularly held and that interest in the band is increasing. The report of the treasurer, Brockholst Miller, showed that $50 was sent to the mission field during the year just brought to a close. An interesting address was delivered by Miss Florence Smith, a missionary home on a furlough from Baranquilla, Colombia. At the close of her remarks the report of the nominating committee was called for and responded to by Richard Lovell, who presented the following ticket: President, Geo. Richards; vice-president, Edward Jones; secretary, Ames Brooks; treasurer, Whitney Baker. These were unanimously elected. At the close of the meeting all were invited to remain and partake of tea, which was poured at a prettily dressed table in an adjoining room by Mrs. Richards and Mrs. Chas. Corwin, and was served by the members of the band.

DOCTRINE OF HEREDITY.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson's Fifth Lecture to Discuss That Question.

The fifth free lecture in the course on evolution at All Soul's church, by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, will be given tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The subject of the lecture is "Natural Selection and Crime." It deals with the doctrine of heredity, that awful fact, so helpful on the lower ranges of life, so apt to fill us with shuddering awe as we view it on the human plane. The question whether crime is increasing is then considered. About this matter the authorities seem much at variance. Prisons and reformatories are spoken of at some length, as the question of how it is best to treat the criminal for his own and the State's good is increasingly interesting to all philanthropists. The sort of sympathy due to prisoners from Christian people is then indicated and the lecture concludes with a consideration of the aid to discharged convicts which is most feasible and desirable.

GOT THE WRONG PAMPHLET.

Trinity Church Attendants Given Old Dedicatory Programmes by Mistake.

Last evening, in the Trinity Reformed church, after the very able address by Rev. W. W. Clark, of New York, on "Christian Assurance," it was intended that each person present should receive as they passed out a pamphlet touching on the subject of home missions. By a mistake, each person was supplied with one of the programmes of the church dedication which occurred February 27th. The pastor and officers of the church felt very humiliated over the affair and take this opportunity to inform those who received the programmes instead of the pamphlets intended.

CAPTAIN OF THE VETS.

George Bedford Chosen to Fill H. S. Thatcher's Office.

At the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, held Tuesday evening last, George Bedford was elected to fill the position of captain, owing to the resignation of H. S. Thatcher, who resigned when he moved to Chicago. Mr. Bedford's position as first lieutenant was filled by the election of Ray McVoy. Sergeant Clarkson was elected second lieutenant. H. C. McVoy, Ray McVoy and Fred Sutton were appointed as a committee for Memorial Day. The members of the camp now drill after every meeting under the direction of Captain Bedford.

EXCITING TILTS AT LAW.

COUNTER CLAIMS OF LITIGANTS.

And After the Taking of Testimony the Lawyers Mutually Agreed Not to Sum up.

A number of exciting tilts between counsel and witnesses occurre l at the hearing of the case of Johnson against Hansen, on contract, which took place in Justice Mosher's court yesterday.

Both parties to the action are farmers living at Dog Corners. Charles Johnson brought an action in January against James Hansen, for the hire of a wagon, vegetables and personal services, covering in all a period of four years. The plaintiff's attorney was Irving L. Brady. The amount of the claim was $26.50.

Hansen, through his attorney, W. K. McClure, filed a counter-suit for $90.50, for services rendered during a period of five years. The items included personal services, wife's services, board of the Johnson family, and the use of farm implements.

After several adjournments the case came up yesterday, and occupied the greater part of the day. Johnson produced as witnesses himself and his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Hansen and a farm hand named Smith testified for the defense.

The evidence showed that the two families had been neighbors for several years, staying at one another's houses, giving vegetables, loaning farm implements, and horses, and doing other favors. Last fall the families fell out and they at once proceeded to hunt up old accounts and demand settlements.

Mrs Hansen proved a tart witness, and had to be admonished by the Justice to soften the tone of her answers to Lawyer Brady's questions.

The examination of witnesses ended at 3:30 o'clock, and the lawyers entered into a novel agreement by which each omitted to sum up his case. The Justice was asked to pass upon the evidence as presented.

The judgment of the court was reserved until next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

OF COLONIAL DESCENT.

Death of W. L. Patton's Sister Across the Atlantic Ocean.

In the death of Mrs. William Miller, of Lancaster Gate, London, Eng., Mrs. William L. Patton, of West Fifth street, loses her eldest sister, with whom she has spent sixteen years abroad.

Their father, William Saltonstall, was identified with Chicago from 1835, where both daughters were born. They are of Colonial descent through Sir Richard Saltonstall, patentee of the State of Connecticut, Gurdon Saltonstall, for twenty-one years Governor of Connecticut, and Brigadier-General Saltonstall, of Revolutionary fame, who married into the family of Governor Winthrop, of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Miller visited Mrs. Patton in 1890 and will be remembered by several in Plainfield. She was only 57 years old and leaves a husband and six children, two daughters and four sons, two of whom, John Doull Miller, of East Ninth street, and Constantine Saltonstall Miller, of Halifax, N. S., live here.

The burial takes place Saturday, and Mrs. Miller will be placed in the family vault in Highgate cemetery, London.

Mrs. Saltonstall, the mother, is still living in Chicago.

Benefit for Maine Survivors

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 17.—A benefit will be tendered to the survivors of the battleship Maine by the Kronold Concert Company, at the Star Theatre Monday evening. During the intermission Lieutenant George H. Mather, U. S. N. A., in command of the Second Division of the New Jersey Naval Reserves, will give a complimentary exhibition and drill with his division. The actual work of sailors and marines will be shown in regulation manner.

Lack of Interest.

The members of the Board of Trade should have held a regular monthly meeting last evening, but a quorum was not present and the meeting was adjourned until next Tuesday evening. Those present included Harry Runyon, F. C. Lounsbury, J. C. Pope, R. A. Meeker, Fred Thorn, J. D. Spicer and W. R. Codington. Nothing whatever was done by those present.

Animotoscope Tonight.

So great was the number who were unable to gain admission to the Howe's animotoscope exhibition in the Second Presbyterian church of Amsterdam, N. Y., that he was obliged to remain a day longer. He will only appear tonght in Plainfield, so don't miss the opportunity.

—A stage load of colored adventurers are going to attend a dance at Rahway, this evening.

EVERY STREET WILL RECEIVE ATTENTION.

Plans to Utilize the Increased Appropriations Promised.

STEAM ROLLER SOON TO GO TO WORK

A System Mapped Out by Which the Work Will be Prosecuted in a Thorough Manner—As Soon as Spring Rains are Over the Dirt Roads Will be Repaired—Cleaning of Streets Now Being Pushed Forward With a Large Gang of Men.

With the prospect of a large appropriation for use in the city streets, the work of the street department is the subject of much comment. Everybody is anxious to know what is to be done and how the department intends to do it. A system has already been mapped out by the street committee of the Council, and Street Commissioner Gavett is arranging the details of the work.

Every city street in Plainfield, whether macadamized or dirt, is to be looked after this year. The steam-roller will soon be in condition to resume its work for the summer. It will start on the macadamized streets that are in the greatest need of repairs and are subject to the heaviest travel. The other macadamized streets will be patched with the assistance of the horse-roller, when the patches are of sufficient size to require it. In the other cases, the fine stone and gravel will be used.

The dirt roads will receive attention as soon as the heavy spring rains are over. They will be scraped and the gutters cleaned. Then they will be "turnpiked," that is, built up in the centre so as to have a rounding surface.

It is the intention of the department that every street in the city shall be cleaned this spring. That work is now in progress. Yesterday a large gang of men were at work on LaGrande avenue. They will continue the work along to West Seventh street and out that thoroughfare to the city line. Other streets will then be looked after. As already stated, only the macadam roads will be cleaned before the spring rains, but then all the dirt roads will receive attention.

At present there is a gang of men from the street department working in the western part of the city patching up the worst of the holes on the macadam streets. Another gang is busy in the eastern section of the city. The work is somewhat hindered by the lack of rain to cement the patches to the present roadbed. If dry weather should continue, however, the city street sprinkler will be put in use.

Orders Mrs. Clark's Will Probated.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 17.—The contest over the estate of the late Rachel A. Clark, of Rahway, was settled in the Union County Court at Elizabeth yesterday by Judge McCormick, who set aside the caveat filed against the will by her sister, Mrs Harriet B. Cory, of Westfield, and ordered the will probated.

Warren Township Committee Organized.

The Town Committee of Warren township held a meeting at the Jr. O. U. A. M. hall in Mt. Bethel, Tuesday morning, and organized for the new year. W. H. Rogers was elected chairman; Thomas C. In Justice Newcorn's Court.

The contract case of Gavett against Scriven was tried before Justice Newcorn yesterday, and judgement rendered for the plaintiff. The contract case of Runyon against Phillips was also tried with the same result. Execution was issued in the latter case.

Township Attorneys.

Pope & Runyon have been appointed borough counsel for North Plainfield township for one year. The appointment was secured partly because of the excellent manner in which the firm conducted the difficult Harriet-Dell case for the borough.

AMONG CANNIBALS.

The Experience of a Missionary — The Butchery of Children.

Mgr. Augouard, the vicar of Oubangbi, in a pamphlet published by the Catholic Missions, gives some terrible details of cannibalism in African villages in close proximity with European establishments.

"Two children," he says, "who had previously traveled with me to Brazzaville, were quite proud of being able to talk to us in French before their astonished compatriots. They gave us provisions in exchange for breech clouts, which they immediately put on, and, without further ceremony, they jumped into our boat to continue the journey with us. On the way I questioned them in regard to the habits of their country. I asked them if they said their prayers regularly and if the people in their village still ate human flesh. They told me artlessly that every evening after sunset the throats of two or three children were always cut. The ages of the children marked for butchery ranged from 8 to 15 years. They told us that in every village the same practice was carried on, but that the heads were no longer carried in triumph, because that displeased the fathers of the children. They added, however, that some of the inhabitants of the villages refused to taste the 'meat.'"

Speaking of one of the friendly chiefs, Mgr. Augouard says:

"Chief Besson deserves special mention. He has rendered valuable service to the missionaries, and his fidelity has never been questioned. For this he received a gift valued at about 10 francs, which is considerable in his country. The honest fellow asked me if he could make one request. I told him to speak out like a man. He said that he was amply satisfied with the gift he had received, but he hoped that on my return from my next trip I would bring him a shirt, a pair of trousers and a high hat. It is curious to notice the passion for that awkward piece of headgear, even in the heart of Africa. I solemnly declared to the chief that his request should be granted. He bowed and retired, majestically draped in my old 20 cent blanket."

HAS SEEN SEVEN POPES.

Cavaliere Pacelli, an Italian Centenarian, Knows Leo XIII Personally.

An interesting example of a centenarian is to be found in Cavaliere Pacelli, an ex-pontificial customs house officer, who lives in Rome. He was born at Viterbo, on the 24th of January, 1798. He is very well, eats with appetite, smokes his cigar and generally goes three times a week to enjoy a chat at the old Caffe della Pace, where as a youth he used to go 80 years ago. Cavaliere Pacelli has an excellent memory and well remembers the events which took place during the stormy period of the pontificate of Pius VII. He was an employee at the customs house of Acquapendente, when Pius VII was obliged to leave Rome and go into exile. Cavaliere Pacelli remembers that when the exiled pope drew near to Acquapendente he ordered the carriage to stop and drank some water from a little spring.

In appearance the old man greatly resembles Alessandro Manzoni. Leo XIII, who knows him personally, takes great interest in him and never fails to inquire after him when he sees his son the journalist, Commandatore Pietro Pacelli, who is himself a grandfather. On Jan. 24, when Pacelli celebrated his one hundredth birthday, he was received in audience by his holiness, who gave him his special blessing. This wonderful centenarian has lived during the reign of seven popes and speaks enthusiastically of Gregory XVI and Pius IX. His friends all hope that he will welcome in the new century.—New York Catholic News.

LEO XIII A LANDLORD.

The Pope Has a House In Paris and a Country Estate.

The pope is a Parisian landlord. Officially he has become the landlord of the famous dwelling known as the Hotel de Plessis-Belliere, on the Place de la Concorde, by a decision of the civil tribunal of Limoges, sanctioning the arrangement arrived at between Leo XIII and the heirs of the Marquis du Plessis-Belliere.

By this arrangement, which ends a dispute that has gone on since 1887, the pope retains the house on the Place de la Concorde, and the cattle and estate of Moreuill in the department of the Somme.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Famous Russian Priest.

Father John, author of the now famous book "My Life In Christ," has been a priest in the Russian church for more than 40 years. He lives in the city of Cronstadt, on the Finland gulf, and is a man of the loftiest character. It is reported that when in St. Petersburg throngs of poor people try to get within the range of his healing, and great crowds follow him, believing him to possess some miraculous gift, but he does not himself claim that he has any special power. He is a great believer in the power of prayer. It is said that his influence for good among the Russian masses is greater than that of any other Russian under the czar, and his position is probably greater than that occupied by any single minister among English speaking nations in his own country.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Pew Door.

Evangelist Moody is an enemy of the pew door. He says truly that it is an invention of Protestantism. But he is slightly in error when he announces that it is unknown in Catholic churches. If it were possible to provide for religion without them, it would be a distinct benefit to the cause of faith to get rid of pews altogether and return to the antereformation custom of omitting such furnishings from Catholic places of worship.—Catholic Universe.

REV. JOHN CHIDWICK

THE CHAPLAIN OF THE BATTLESHIP MAINE.

The Third Catholic Priest to Be Appointed a Naval Chaplain—The Work of a Priest on a Man-of-war—Character of the Mass at Sea—Sailors' Funerals.

An uppermost thought in the minds of many American Catholics, when the first tidings of the terrible disaster that recently befell the United States warship Maine in the harbor of Havana reached these shores, was whether the Catholic chaplain of the vessel, Rev. John P. Chidwick, was among the officers who escaped death. Happily their anxiety was speedily allayed, for early in the days following immediately after the loss of the ship came the news that all the officers, with two exceptions other than the chaplain, had escaped injury, and upon Father Chidwick devolved the mournful and solemn duty of conducting the religious services over the remains of the victims of the disaster, to whom the citizens of Havana gave an imposing public funeral.

Rev. John P. Chidwick, the chaplain of the ill fated Maine, is a priest of the New York archdiocese, who, previous to his appointment to his present position by President Cleveland, was attached as curate to St. Stephen's church, East Twenty-ninth street, New York. He was the third Catholic priest to be appointed a naval chaplain, his predecessors in that position being Rev. Charles H. Parks, also of the New York diocese, who received his appointment in 1888, and Rev. William H. J. Reaney of the Baltimore archdiocese, who was made a chaplain in 1892. Since Father Chidwick was appointed, a fourth Catholic chaplain, Rev. E. H. Fitzgerald of the St. Joseph diocese, who for several years was connected with the Catholic Indian bureau, has been named; so that at present the Catholics have four of the 24 naval chaplaincies, an all inadequate share, since fully one-half of United States bluejackets are said to be Catholics.

The chaplain of the ill fated Maine contributed last September a very interesting article, "A Parish Afloat," to Donahoe's Magazine, the following extract from which will give the reader an idea of what a naval chaplain's work aboard ship consists: "The chaplain's chief duty," wrote Father Chidwick, "is his Sunday services.

"The naval regulations about the proper observance of Sunday are very strict and command that captains of ships to which chaplains are attached shall have divine services offered on all Sundays when the weather and circumstances permit. It is seldom that divine service is omitted. The attendance is entirely voluntary for officers and men, although the regulations exhort both to be present. The time and place for divine service are fixed by the commanding officer, who must consult the conveniences of the ship and the requirements of the Sunday functions. About 15 minutes before the time the boatswain sounds his whistle and gives the rather grotesque order to the division in charge of the work to 'rig church.' The compartment wherein I celebrate mass will hold about 150 men.

"It is the least obstructed apartment aboard ship and the most suitable for our purpose. The benches for the men face the altar, on one side of which is an organ and on the other side are chairs for the attending officers. A small room in the compartment serves as a sacristy. When the preparations are finished, word is sent to the officers in charge of the deck, and at the appointed time the church bell tolls, and the church pennant is raised above the stars and stripes."

After alluding to the fact that this church pennant, which is a small, triangular flag showing the cross, is the only one ever placed above the national flag, Father Chidwick describes the character of the mass at sea, with a choir of sailors singing hymns and the deep voices of the tars answering the prayers after mass. The attendance at these masses varies, of course, according to circumstances, but the Maine's chaplain says it often mounts to 600 or 700. On grand feasts military high mass is celebrated, and the naval chaplains, when at sea, say mass daily in their own rooms. Then, too, the chaplain has regular confession and communion days, generally once a week, and when other vessels than his own are near he is expected to minister to the spiritual needs of the Catholic sailors on board them. Some ships, Father Chidwick informed us, have morning and evening prayers, which are called "quarters," and the chaplain is often asked for beads, scapulars and agnus deis by the men.

In this article of the Maine's chaplain is also given an account of the way in which sailors' funerals are conducted, and a mournful interest attaches to the subjoined extract at this time: "The regulations require that Christian burial be provided for all men who die in the service. If possible, the body is interred with the rites of the church to which the deceased had belonged. When this sad duty is required at sea, the ship is hove to, the flag displayed at half mast, and the officers and men are mustered on deck to pay their last tribute to the departed. The funeral services follow, and the body is consigned to the deep. A guard of honor fires three volleys over the watery grave, and the bugler sounds the last 'taps'—sad, mournful notes of the bugle which tell of the hour of sleep. If the death occur at a hospital, an escort and guard of honor from the ship to which the deceased had been attached accompany the funeral cortege to the grave. As the procession enters the cemetery the bugler precedes, followed by the chaplain. This spectacle is always impressive."—Columbian.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And still what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

Echoes Far & Near

Down One Street and up Another. From Every Ward in Plainfield.

Hard to hold down the enthusiasm of Plainfield people under such circumstances as those surrounding the work of the little conqueror. There is no place in the world where a good thing is better appreciated than right here at home. We are quick to see it and quick to "push it along" in the manner it merits. From all parts of the city come the same reports; success follows in every footstep, and an investigation of each new case but adds to the endorsement that has gone before and places their claims beyond shadow of doubt. This report comes from West Front street, the residence of Mrs. Henry Bender who says:—"My kidneys have given me more or less trouble for the past five years. I suffered almost constantly from a dull aching pain across the back and hips. Any hard work always increased the pain. I was also subject to severe headaches and dizziness when stooping, and though I tried different plasters and home remedies I could get no relief. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for such troubles as mine and got a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store, used them according to directions and have gotten a great deal of relief from them. I am feeling better now than I have for five years. In my estimation, and from my experience, Doan's Kidney Pills are a good reliable kidney medicine and I have great faith in them, and advise others who suffer from kidney trouble to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

No Time.

A lank countryman presented himself at the clerk's desk in a city hotel, and, after having a room assigned to him, inquired at what hours meals were served.

"Breakfast from 7 to 11, luncheon from 11 to 3, dinner from 3 to 8, supper from 8 to 12," recited the clerk glibly.

"Jerushy!" ejaculated the countryman, with bulging eyes. "When am I a-going to git time to see the town?"—Youth's Companion.

The Usual Way.

Josh Medders—I thought you was learnin' to ride a bicycle?

Jay Green—Aw, I started to, but I ran into everything except the middle of the road, an' sat down on everything in the neighborhood but the saddle, an' so I gave it up in disgust an' traded the blamed machine off.—New York World.

Always Ahead.

Smith—Your friend Wheeler is a crank on punctuality, isn't he?

Brown—I should say he is. Why, he even carries his watch in the rear pocket of his trousers, just to prevent his ever being behind time.—Chicago News.

This May Explain It.

"Why is it, Pat, that so many Irishmen are Democrats?"

"Faith I don't know, unless it's because so many Democrats are Irish.—Cleveland Leader.

AUNT MARTHA'S JOKE

BY BARRETT.

"I am coming for a fortnight's visit to you, Eliza, if it will be convenient for you to have me. I realize that age is coming upon me very fast, and I wish to see you and Eugene's children, and the dear old home where Eugene and I grew up together. I want to see it all once more before I go to join him. You know I always had a fancy that our loved ones who have gone before single out the new arrivals of their acquaintance, and glean all the news about those they left on earth. I want, therefore, to have the latest news to carry to dear old Eugene.

"Yours as ever,

"Martha King."

P. S. I have grown very deaf since I saw you last."

"A fortnight of Aunt Martha, and she deaf, too! Suffering moses!" cried Ella King.

"But she is not long for this world, and has lots of money to leave to somebody," said Lucy. "And we have the honor to be her only living relatives. I guess we had better bear with her yet a little longer, my dear Ella."

"Yes, but wealthy relatives have a way of promising to die off shortly and then hanging on until the heirs are gray-haired, and worn out with hope deferred. Don't you believe her! She is not near dead yet, and there is no knowing how many more 'positively last appearances' Aunt Martha will make."

"Girls," said Mrs. Hollister-King mildly, "she is your father's only sister."

"Yes'm," said Ella, with a grimace.

"I am sorry she is deaf," said Alice, the youngest daughter, who sat quietly sewing in her usual corner.

Ella and Lucy burst into unmusical laughter. Alice always amused them with her strange ideas, while they were a perpetual irritation to their sweet, womanly younger sister.

"Miss Goody is so glad, too, that dearest Aunt Martha is coming! Miss Goody loves her auntie truly, and she doesn't love her money a bit. Oh, no!"

"I do love Aunt Martha," Alice said. "I do not see how you and Lucy can forget how kind she has always been to us. And you know—you simply know—that her money has no influence with me. It is as mother says; I cannot forget that she is my dead father's sister."

"Hear, hear!" cried Ella, "Will your reverence pray continue? We always enjoy your little sermons."

"I do not care to discuss Aunt Martha any further," said Alice, indignantly; and gathering up her sewing, she left the room to avoid the discussion.

She and her sisters could never agree upon any subject, and Alice was always retreating to her own little room for peace and solitude. She was not a favorite with her mother, who often said, "Lucy and Ella are Hollisters, but Alice is a King all over, both in looks and disposition."

Mrs. Hollister-King had been a beauty of the orthodox blonde type, and her elder daughters were blessed with the same yellow hair, blank blue eyes, white eye lashes, and fair skins.

"Alice is pretty enough for those who like brunettes," said her mother, "but I never admired dark women myself."

"Two weeks later a sweet-faced old lady with soft waves of gray hair sat placidly knitting in Mrs. Hollister-King's big "family room." She had been there a week, and had learned a good deal about "dear brother's folks" which she vowed in her loving old heart never to tell him when she crossed the river, and sat with him "under the shade of the trees."

Lucy and Ella were both engaged in altering their evening dresses.

"Well," sighed Ella, "when our dearly beloved aunt 'shuffles off' I won't have to make one piece of lace do duty on three or four gowns. This is the third time I have changed around since Monday."

"And I won't have to paint my soiled white slippers to match my red dress, either. I shall have perfect toilettes—won't I be lovely? Oh," she added, as she caught the flash of Alice's eyes, "never mind, Alice! The dear old thing is as deaf as a post. Isn't it fun that we can say what we like about her, and she sits there smiling at us as innocent as a lamb? I'm glad the old girl is so deliciously deaf."

"Mother," cried Alice, her cheeks aflame with anger, "why do you allow such coarse, heartless remarks to be made? If I am to keep the respect for you that I always want to have, you must not let such behavior go on unreproved!"

"Alice," said Mrs. Hollister-King, raising her white eyebrows languidly "you forget yourself. I do not need any advice from you as to how to manage my affairs. I rather enjoy Lucy's and Ella's harmless little jokes. You seem to have no sense of humor whatever. Your poor father had none either."

"Humor! If you call the unfeeling ridicule of our best friend humor, then I thank the good Lord that I have none of it!"

"What is the matter, my dears?" inquired Aunt Martha, mildly, noticing the growing animation of Alice's face.

Innocent Aunt Martha!

"Oh, Alice is angry because she cannot have a new gown for the ball," yelled Mrs. Hollister-King into her ear. "Lucy and Ella, you see, are cheerfully touching up their old ones."

Alice cast a look of scorn at her mother, and Aunt Martha smiled and shook her head reprovingly at her youngest niece.

"I must go home to-morrow, Eliza. I am afraid a deaf old woman like I am is a drawback to the pleasure of the girls, and I don't want to wear out my welcome. If it is not asking too much, I would like one of them to come and stay with me a for week or two now and then."

"Excuse me!" laughed Lucy to Ella.

"I will come any time you want me, auntie," said Alice.

"Do, dear, do!" said Aunt Martha warmly.

"Good little Alice!" said Ella. "Well, you shan't get ahead of me. Here goes!" And she bawled at Aunt Martha "Don't talk of going when you have only just come, dear auntie. And I am coming to see you if you will let me. I would dearly love to go."

Aunt Martha left the next day, amid many expressions of regret from her sister-in-law and her two blonde nieces. Alice did not say much, but Aunt Martha parted with her most affectionately.

"Dear Alice! You are so like my dear Eugene! Do come to see me soon."

It was but a few weeks later that Martha King died. Let us draw a veil over the grief of the Hollister-King's at the reading of the will. Her whole property was left to her "beloved niece, Alice Vivian King," with never a word for Lucy or Ella. But there was a letter for them which ran:—

"My Dear Nieces:—I have played quite a neat little joke on you, and you two are blessed with such rich funds of humor, that I am sure you will think it irresistibly funny. I was not so very deaf the last time I was at your house, and you can fancy how I enjoyed your many pleasant witticisms at my expense. This is 'tit for tat,' my dears, and I trust it will be a lesson to you. Aunt Martha."

What It Might Stand For.

A girl baby was recently brought to a clergyman of the city to be baptized. The latter asked the name of the baby.

"Dinah M.," the father responded.

"But what does the 'M.' stand for?" interrogated the minister.

"Well, I do not know yet; it all depends upon how she turns out."

"How she turns out? Why, I do not understand you," said the dominie.

"Oh, if she turns out nice and sweet and handy about the house, like her mother, I shall call her Dinah May. But if she has a fiery temper and displays a bombshell disposition, like mine, I shall call her Dinah Might."—Syracuse Post.

Categorical.

"But what do you mean by saying that the man was more or less intoxicated?" asked the lawyer.

"Lemme see," said the witness, as he scratched his chin. "I guess I mean that if he had been more intoxicated he would have been drunk, and if he had been less he would have been sober. How'll that do?"—Indianapolis Journal.

The Meanest Man.

"About the meanest man I ever knew," said the steady liar, "was a fellow over in Indiana. His little boy got a leg cut off by a saw mill, and the old villain had a wooden leg made for the kid of green willow in the hope that it might grow as the boy did, and save him the expense of getting a new one so often."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Mrs. Philatthouse—There seems to be no end of inventions. Just think; there has been a piano invented that can be played in bed.

A WOMAN'S CURIOSITY.

The Penalty Sir Walter Scott's Mother Paid for Her Inquisitiveness.

Sir Walter Scott's father, who was an elder of the church, and of course zealous for King George and the Government, once received day after day a mysterious visitor on legal business, who came much muffled up and stayed till a late hour. Mrs. Scott, Sir Walter's mother, was eager to know who this stranger was, but her husband always gave evasive replies to her questions. One evening, however, she attained her end by penetrating to her husband's room with a tray, and persuading the client to take tea. Mr. Scott was perceptibly angry, and would not join them. After the stranger had gone, Mr. Scott took up the cup that he had used, and, carrying it to the window, tossed it out upon the pavement. "I can forgive your little curiosity, madam," he said, "but you must pay the penalty. I may admit into my house on a piece of business persons wholly unworthy to be treated as guests by my wife. Neither lip of me nor of mine comes after Mr. Murray of Broughton's." The mysterious visitor was once Prince Charles Stuart's secretary, and had traitorously borne evidence against his master. Sir Walter Scott preserved the Broughton saucer with reverence, in honor of his father.

WAR CAUSED BY A SINGLE WORD.

The Lack of One "Et Cetera" Incensed the King of Sweden.

In 1654 a Polish nobleman became obnoxious to the laws of his country by reason of a crime. He fled to Sweden, says London Answers, whereupon John Cassimir, king of Poland, wrote to Charles Gustavus, king of Sweden, demanding the extradition of the criminal. The king of Sweden, on reading the dispatch, noticed that his own name and titles were followed by two et ceteras, while the name of the king of Poland was followed by three. The missing et cetera so enraged the king of Sweden that he at once declared war against Poland. This war was carried on with great bitterness until 1660, when a peace was signed at Oliva, near Dantzig. A contemporary writer, Kochowsky, poured out his lamentations on the war in these terms: "How dear has this et cetera been to us! With how many lives have these two potentates paid for these missing eight letters! With what streams of blood has the failure of a few drops of ink been avenged!" In article three of the treaty it was explicitly laid down that the custom of shortening titles by "et ceteration" should still hold good, but for the future each of the two parties should give the other three et ceteras.

The Bet Was Off.

The Electrical Review tells an amusing telephone story of a certain Chicago lady named Brown. One morning recently she proceeded from the breakfast table to the telephone in the hall closet to order things from her market man.

"Hello!" said Mrs. Brown. "Is this the Oakland market?"

"Yes."

"Well, this is Mrs. Brown's residence. Will you please send me a large, thick, juicy steak by four o'clock?"

The boy employed in the Oakland market happened to answer the telephone, and promptly responded:

"Well, you just bet your sweet life I will!"

"Do you know, sir, to whom you are speaking?" indignantly inquired Mrs Brown.

"Sure, I do," said the boy. "You're Jenny, Mrs. Brown's cook."

"You are mistaken, young man. You are speaking with Mrs. Brown herself."

"Is that so?" replied the boy. "Then in that case, madam, we'll call the bet off."

Corean Paper Superior to That of China.

According to a writer in The Paper World, the best paper is made in Corea, excelling that manufactured in China and Japan. It shows the greatest variety of color, transparency and fineness, with strength and flexibility. The product is highly valued in China and Japan, where it is used for umbrella covers, as roofing and as a substitute for window glass. Coreans work it into fans, lanterns of all shapes, tobacco bags, card cases, toys and soles for shoes. They also make waterproof cloth for the rainy season of the same material, saturating it with oil. Paper treated in the same way serves as hat covers. The floors of almost all Corean houses are covered with oiled paper about one-fourth of an inch in thickness.

The Editor's Coup d'Etat.

It has always been a question with the country newspaper man what he would do if an indignant woman set out to horsewhip him. Some years ago W. W. Wick, of Topeka, was running a country paper, and a woman assailed him on the main street of the town. He gathered her up under his arm and paraded around the square. She kicked and squirmed, but he marched laughingly along, displaying her to the crowd that had gathered. It mortified the woman so much that she left town on the next train and never bothered the editor afterward.—Kansas City Journal.

He Knew Them.

In a western town a clergyman was exhorting his congregation in regard to their treatment of the new minister soon to arrive, and closed up with:

"And above all things, when he gets here I want you all to pray for him. He'll need it."—Life.

FIREWORKS FOR ASSESSOR FRENCH.

The Somerville Messenger this week prints the following complimentary editorial about Elston M. French:

Elston Marsh French, who was last week elected assessor for the borough of North Plainfield, is a Democrat well known throughout this county. He has been a delegate from North Plainfield to several county conventions, and has also been a member of the Democratic county executive committee. He is a son of P. M. French, (the miller) of Plainfield, who is a large taxpayer in this and Union counties. Elston M. French is one of the rising young business men of Plainfield. He is at the head of two of the largest real estate and insurance offices in that town, besides assisting his father in the milling business. Mr. French is a bachelor, a member of the Park Club and the Board of Trade of the city of Plainfield. He is a very busy man, and one of those who make friends with all with whom he comes in contact. His majority was nearly 300.

A DEATH TRAP.

As noted in the news columns today, the Freeholders of Middlesex county are to meet the officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad at the Park avenue crossing tomorrow afternoon and suggest some way to relieve the danger that now attends crossing the tracks at that point. It would be a good idea for the Plainfield members of the Union County Board of Freeholders to appear there also tomorrow and add their influence towards having the death trap abolished. Hundreds of Plainfield people endanger their life and limb at this crossing every year, and some immediate action should be taken to protect the travelers of the avenue from hazards now in existence at that point.

OF INTEREST TO CATHOLICS.

Two columns of Catholic news appears on the sixth page of today's Press. One article of especial interest at this time is a sketch of the life of Rev. John Chidwick, the Catholic chaplain of the ill-fated battleship Maine. The Catholic articles will be a regular feature of The Daily Press on Thursdays of each week hereafter.

It would not be possible for the United States to have a minister resident in Cuba, for Cuba is supposed to be only a colony of Spain, and our minister to Spain must live at Madrid. The duties of many of our ministers at foreign courts are, however, far less difficult and important than those of Consul General Lee. His position is a very arduous and awkward one. A consul's duties include ordinarily only the looking after commercial affairs and seeing that the lives and property of citizens of his country are safe in the place to which he is accredited. He has nothing to do with matters political. General Lee's case is, however, exceptional. In the impossibility of our having a direct political representative in Cuba it comes about that the consul general's task is under present conditions almost wholly a political one, and nobly has he performed that task.

Mexico is fonder of Japanese than either the United States or Hawaii seems to be. A great Japanese colony is to be established near San Benito, in the southern part of Mexico. A tract of 100,000 acres has been bought for the immigrants, and they will soon settle there. The Japanese have been called the Yankees of the orient, but they are more like the English in their tendency to scatter out and colonize the earth.

What the Spaniards have made of war in Cuba is best judged by this remark of General Maximo Gomez, the patriot commander in chief, "Personally I feel that I am just as liable to be struck down in the dark with a Spanish stiletto in my back as I am to be shot in battle by a Spanish bullet."

The present war in Cuba has cost the United States already quite $200,000,000, counting the loss to our commerce, the destruction of American properties in the island, the money paid out by the government to suppress filibustering and the disaster to the Maine.

The most popular native American today is perhaps General Fitz-Hugh Lee, consul general to Cuba and ex-Confederate soldier.

COLORED FARMERS' CONFERENCE.

Seven years ago Booker T. Washington, the greatest American negro of his time, called a conference of colored farmers of the south to meet at Tuskegee. The conference has come together annually ever since. It measures year by year the progress of the agricultural negro of the south. The movement has spread from Alabama into neighboring states until the Tuskegee conference that met recently included delegates from Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, Mississippi and even Texas.

Unique and picturesque to a degree were the proceedings of the conference. The blacks of the southern agricultural districts are not hampered by conventionalism as the northern city negro is, and they spoke out in meeting exactly what they thought. There was a tendency manifested to whack the southern negro preacher. The resolutions adopted as the expression of the delegates declared for securing land, diversifying crops, raising fruit and poultry and "improving and purifying the character of the ministry." A brother from Creek Stand, Macon county, brought down the house by making report for Creek Stand as follows: "De colored people in Creek Stand have got 2,000 acres of land, and de preacher am still callin' fur more money dan he gits." He continued, "We gives de preacher all he is wuff, den we quits."

Booker T. Washington, the leader and moving spirit of the conference, made one of his characteristic speeches. Dull and insensate indeed the negro race of the south must be if Booker Washington's words do not rouse answering vibrations of courage and ambition in their souls. The negro leader bade them buy land and own their homes. He said: "I want every one of you to come here with the idea of getting something to make him better off than when he came here. Only a few of those we want to help are here, but if each one comes with the determination to make himself stronger and to go home and help others he will do great good." He bade them improve their schoolhouses, raise their own fruits, vegetables and meat and give their families decent homes to live in.

Eighty-five per cent of the southern negroes are agriculturists. These annual conferences are doing much to stimulate them to progress in civilization. The hope and help of the southern negro rest, however, in the educated young men and women of his own race who are willing to labor for their people.

The experiment that has been making in a small way during the past two years with the branding of female seal pups to make their skins valueless is reported successful. The only objection to it is its cruelty, but the operation is soon over, and the seal can plunge into the depths of the sea to cool the burn. The branding is done so effectually that it destroys half the skin. The female seals pass to and fro in the ocean during the breeding season while engaged in the care of their young. With the skins branded and destroyed poachers will have no object in capturing the mother seals. The young males, technically called "bachelor seals," meantime can be herded during the closed season in the shallow waters of the breeding grounds at St. Paul island. Colonel Joseph Murray, United States treasury agent in charge of the seal islands, believes this plan will effectually preserve the American herds from extermination whether Great Britain co-operates with us or not.

The United States government needs a factory of its own for the manufacture of smokeless powder. An appropriation for this purpose was asked for in the last estimate of expenses in his department made by the secretary of the navy. Such a factory complete would cost nearly $100,000. It should be built at once. If war should occur now with any foreign nation, the government would be seriously crippled for want of powder. It could not buy any from foreign nations, for that would be a breach of the law of international neutrality after war had actually begun.

The time is coming when mechanical power can be transmitted electrically hundreds, perhaps thousands, of miles. It may be that ocean tides will run machinery in the interior of the country. Already lines are being constructed to supply power and light for San Francisco from streams in the Sierra Madre mountains. The current will be sent over a line 110 miles long.

Professor W. J. McGee has an idea all his own. It is that we can bore down deep into the earth and get hot water and air in limitless supply. The great Ponce de Leon hotel at St. Augustine is now heated with water pumped up from a very deep artesian well. There is something creepy in the idea, however, especially to a person educated in the old fashioned way.

If there was ever anything hopelessly fiendish and infernal beyond the possibility of excuse or forgiveness, it is the present attempt of certain speculators to manipulate and make money out of stocks by stirring up a war scare. Those who do it will meet the judgment their crime calls for.

The two new regiments of artillery to be raised immediately by order of congress will increase that arm of the service to 7,000 men, seven regiments.

THEATRICAL.

The Geisha girl flitted about the stage of Music Hall last evening and gave a large and fashionable audience one of the best performances in musical comedy ever witnessed in Plainfield. Japanese in construction, it was bright and modest to a degree that made it extremely popular. The Geisha was picturesquely staged and costumed, and presented with the best talent of Mr. Daly's forces. In the quaint role of the Japanese girl who was the Geisha of the "Tea House of Ten Thousand Joys," coy and innocent in her flirtations with the jaunty English admiral, impersonated cleverly by Julius Steger, Miss Nancy McIntosh imparted a flavor to the character that made it a dainty and enchanting one. Virginia Earle as Molly Seamore, the English girl, whose dashing vivaciousness and inclination for adventure led her into complications upon which the last act hinged, was as clever as anything she has ever appeared in. James Powers, as the Chinese proprietor of the tea house, was wily submissive and deceptive all in one moment in his humorous interpretation. Mr. Powers was never seen to better advantage than in the Geisha. Augustus Cook as the august and imperial potentiate of Japanese official circles was a bluffy official who wielded his power with fun-making proclivities. The supporting company was excellent.

The celebrated Guy Brothers will appear at Stillman Music Hall tonight. The performances throughout are first-class in every particular and are thoroughly enjoyed. The Guy Brothers are cultured singers and musicians, and in their various roles elicit rounds of applause. The Flood Brothers, in their wonderful acrobatic feats, catch the attention of everybody. They are certainly wonders in their particular line. Taken as a whole, it is unquestionably one of the best shows that will strike the town in a long time.

The most flattering praise is being showered upon the comedy, "The Good Mr. Best," as being one of the most wholesome and meritorious attractions of the present theatrical season. This attraction will be seen in this city Saturday evening. The management promise much out of the ordinary.

The simple pathos and genial humor of "Way Down East" at the Manhattan Theatre in New York are making this picturesque idyl of New England country life one of the most remarable successes of recent years. All sorts and conditions of people flock to see this charming drama. Men of National distinction are to be found there. Richard Croker attended twice within a week—a compliment in itself. The officers of the "Monitor Terror" were wildly applauded as they sat in a flag-adorned box the other evening. The clergy are commending the piece as wholesome and sympathetic with a strongly emphasized moral. Rev. Horace Porter, assistant pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, writes thanking Brady and Ziegfeld "for doing a brave and noble service in putting before the world a far more powerful and delightful play than "Shore Acres" and bringing home to thousands of men the lessons which too many of them most seriously need.

PASSING COMMENT.

An amusing story is told in connection with a wedding that took place at Pluckamin some time ago. The name of the bride was Miss Bertha Shinn, and the groom sported the name of William Bone. The wedding was an event of importance in the place, and all went well until newspaper accounts of the wedding from the papers of nearby towns were received. The relatives and friends of the couple were made as angry as wet hens by seeing the accounts of the wedding headed by the startling label, "Shinn-Bone."

* * * * *

A lady who has a large establishment in this city went to the immigrant office in New York one day last week to hire some help. Among the servants she wanted was a man who could attend to the garden and the stable. A fine looking young Irishman passed a creditable examination as to gardening, but when asked if he could drive horses to the woman's amazement replied: "I don't know if I could in this country." She inquired the reason of the difficulty, and he answered: "Sure ma'am, I come from a small town many miles from Dublin, and, ye know, outside of Dublin the horses are all jackasses." It is needless to say that he was promptly engaged.

STERLING, BEYOND BELIEF.

The past six weeks the citizens of Plainfield have been electrified, dumbfounded, bewildered, and finally convinced by a most wonderful occurrence. Nearly every day during that time reports have reached the public press of phenomenal cures being performed upon many well-known citizens, by a young man called the Boy Phenomenon.

While he has daily been accomplishing cures of the most chronic and aggravated cases that for years have defied the skill and ability of the most eminent and learned practitioners, it was not until last week that one cure in particular was accomplished, which was so truly marvelous and phenomenal in its rapidity, that even the physician in charge, who had previously pronounced the case incurable, could hardly realize a cure had been effected.

In this nineteenth century science has made rapid progress in treating with disease in every form. Research and study have brought to light many remedies that are invaluable to suffering humanity, without doubt the greatest and grandest discovery known in the annlas of medical science for the amelioration of chronic diseases, centres on human or vital magnetism as the one great healing power whose potency is unquestioned and unrivaled.

Today there is passing in review before our eyes such a panorama of marvelous cures in the world of natural healing that we stand convulsed and amazed, but it must be patent to all who have given the subject attention, that the advancement made in this particular branch eclipses all others, and whose cures tower like a white shaft to the clouds, above and beyond conception.

The vital magnetism of the Boy Phenomenon is so strong and subtle in its effects that he cures the most difficult cases of chronic diseases, often by a single treatment. He stands unapproached and unapproachable, meeting with the most signal and surprising success after all others have failed, without a compeer in the dazzling noontide of his brilliant career. The light of the marvelous cures he has accomplished in Plainfield are indeed a revelation to the sick, astonishing to the most incredulous, and converting the rankest skeptic to his most enthusiastic follower. He causes the philosopher to stand aloof and wonder and marvel at his miraculous success.

To the Public:

I, Mrs W. H. Haggerty, residing at 41 Chatham street, Plainfield, hereby state my little daughter Viola, 9 years of age, has been totally blind since birth. Doctors had told me she would never be able to see anyway, I took her to the Revere House and she was examined by Dr. Levasseur, consulting physician to the Boy Phenomenon, who said the chances of benefitting her were so slim that he would not take the case. So we were leaving the office when the Boy Phenomenon entered, and seeing her sightless eyes gave her a short treatment. In 10 minutes after he placed his hands over her eyes she was able to see objects the first time in her life. As we were going home she surprised us by calling our attention to different things she saw. She has had three treatments since and her sight is growing strong daily. Words cannot express the deep gratitude I felt at her sight being restored.

Mrs W. H Haggerty

I can cheerfully verify the above statements of facts, as I am personally acquainted with Mrs. Haggerty and knew the pitable condition of her daughter Viola previous to her visiting the Boy Phenomenon, and was myself present when the miracle was performed, and now know after 11 days she is still able to see.

Mrs. J. H. Carney.

PRESIDENT'S POLICY

He Still Thinks There Will Be a Peaceful Settlement.

NO CHANGE IN HIS COURSE

Said That Arbitration Will Probably Be the Outcome—The President Aware That the Maine Was Blown Up by a Spaniard.

Washington, March 17.—A Cabinet officer who has a right to talk for the President, says:

"There has been no change in the policy of the President in the present situation, and he is strictly of the opinion that there will be a peaceful settlement of the Maine matter. The President is handling the question with the utmost skill and wisdom."

The move made by the Spanish Government through Minister Polo, which was virtually asking the President to reverse his Cuban policy, will have no effect. The action of the Sagasta Ministry is considered as a clever diplomatic move, and is made now for effect, not only in this country, but more especially upon foreign nations.

A Diplomatic Document.

The statement sent out by the Associated Press to the effect that Spain wished the United States to deal directly with the insurgents and have them stop their war against Spain and give autonomy a proper trial, and at the same time to withdraw the American fleet from the vicinity of Cuba, is in effect asking the administration to entirely reverse its policy. The statement given out was carefully worded, and it is stated that a diplomatic document was left with the State Department to the same effect.

While the Spanish Minister had no idea that the President would accede to Spain's request, this document will be used to influence foreign governments to show that Spain made an appeal for a fair and uninterrupted trial of autonomy in the island, without the menace of the United States Navy, which gave the insurgents every belief that they would get aid from that country.

The State Department is still exceedingly reticent in regard to the Spanish Minister's call, butthe facts as stated are not denied, and it is generally known that the statement printed yesterday came from the Spanish Legation.

It can also be stated, as a Cabinet officer is quoted above, that there will be no change in the President's policy, and that he will not think for a moment of withdrawing the fleet from Key West, and will continue not only to use his efforts with the Cubans, but also with Spain for peace on the island.

There is still uncertainty at the Navy Department as to the exact time when the report of the Board of Inquiry will reach Washington. The orders lately issued to all naval officers and other officials to refrain from talking on the present situation have had the effect of closing the sources of information, not only at the Navy, but at the War Department, and it is very difficult to get even the routine information.

What a Senator Says.

An administration Senator, who had an hours' talk with Assistant Secretary Day yesterday, said, as he left the White House, that he was confident, from what he knew, that there was no danger of open hostilities between the two countries. The Senator does not care to have his name used, but he said it was evident that the President,from his private sources, knew that the Maine had been blown up from external agencies, and that while the Spanish Government was not directly responsible, the court would show that it was the work of a Spaniard. The Senator further said:

"This Government will demand an indemnity from Spain, but the administration knows, from recent investigations, that Spain will not be able to pay it. Spain will appeal to foreign nations on the ground that the inquiry into the explosion was an ex parte one, and that she had no participation in the investigation, and demand that it be left to arbitration."

Arbitration Probable.

The Senator said that with the example of the Alabama incident before this Government it was his opinion that arbitration would be the outcome, and that it would be some time before the matter would be settled. He said it was his opinion that the Preseident was requiring the Board of Inquiry to make a most thorough and exhaustive investigation, so that when the report was made he would have facts and positive evidence with which to make the demand upon Spain.

The Senator added that, while this evidently disposed of the Maine incident the Cuban question was still unsettled, and that the President was now hoping that the whole matter would be settled at one time, and the independence of Cuba and peace on the island be secured through the same diplomatic channels as the settlement of the Maine explosion.

In speaking about Spain's latest demand the Senator said that he considered it merely a diplomatic scheme, and it would have no effect upon the administration.

Commander Brownson in London.

London, March 17.—Commander W. H. Brownson, United States Navy,who sailed from New York, March 9, on board the American line steamship St. Paul for the purpose of making arrangements for the purchase of warships for the United States Government, arrived at Waterloo station at 6.55 last evening. Mr. Brownson said that he had a very enjoyable voyage and expressed himself as much pleased at the purchase of the Brazilian warship Amazonas by the American Government.

Spanish Trade Treaty Progressing.

London, March 17.—The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"The Customs Commission, at its meeting to-day (Wednesday), approved the report relative to the basis of the treaty of commerce with the United States. Spain will concede certain reductions in tariff on condition that the United States grants benefits under the reciprocity clauses of the Dingley law.

CONGRESS WILL NOT ADJOURN.

The House and Senate Polled—227 Noes; 8 Yeas.

Washington, March 17.—Congress was polled yesterday on the question: "Are you in favor of the adjournment of Congress before the report of the Maine disaster is received and before a settlement of the Cuban question is made?"

The majority sentiment is overwhelmingly in favor of Congress remaining in session until both of these questions are disposed of. Many Republicans in the House who feel very strongly on this matter refused to place themselves on record because they thought their views might show a lack of confidence in the President and his policy. They argue with Chairman Cannon of the Appropriation Committee, that under any circumstances Congress will be in session for six weeks yet transacting routine business, and they confidently anticipate that before the expiration of that period the Maine disaster and the Cuban question will have been settled.

Should it become evident that there is an intention to adjourn Congress before these two questions are disposed of almost to a man these Republicans would vote to remain here all summer if necessary.

House Democrats are almost unanimously against an early adjournment of Congress. In this position they have the support of the Populists, Fusionists and Silverites.

In the Senate an adjournment resolution could not pass. Enough Senators have expressed themselves against adjournment to make sure that Congress wil remain in session.

The following is the result of the poll:

Total number of nays, House and Senate, 227.

Total number of yeas, House and Senate, 8.

Total number of non-committal, House and Senate, 113.

Washington, March. 17.—Gen. Grosvenor, referring to the reports that are current respecting the adjournment of Congress, says that the report that President McKinley had fixed a date for the adjournment, or that he had any desire, wish or expectation that Congress should adjourn at one time rather than at another was not only without foundation, but ridiculous beyond expression. Congress alone and the Constitution, he said, could fix the date.

MAHER WON QUICKLY.

Philadelphia, March 17.—Peter Maher finished up Steve O'Donnell in short order in the Arena last night, the referee stopping the fight in the second round, when Steve was so groggy that he was all but knocked out. At the opening of the bout, which was to have been six rounds, Maher objected to O'Donnell wearing bandages on his right wrist, but this was quickly settled by the Australian removing them.

In the second round Maher began hostilities by landing a left on the ear and a right on the face. O'Donnell came back with a left on Maher's ear. Peter put a stiff right on the jaw and O'Donnell went down. Bang went Maher's right and left on the jaw again, sending O'Donnell down.

Maher walked to his corner as if it was all over. O'Donnell got up and went for him. Maher turned and rushed O'Donnell into his corner and banged away at him. Steve went to his knees and stayed there in a groggy condition and the referee stopped the one-sided contest.

Gen. Miles Reviews the Troops.

New York, March 17.—Madison Square Garden, decorated within with bunting and the seats of all the States of the Union, and with the Stars and Stripes flying from every balcony, presented a scene of animation last night. It was the most successful night in point of attendance that the athletic portion of the military athletic tournament has yet known, and standing room was at a premium, even in the upper balconies. Major-General Nelson A. Miles, the Commander of the United States, was present to review the militiamen and the regular troops who have taken part in the tournament.

The review, of course, was the feature of the night's entertainment, for the 8,000 spectators were anxious to see the boys in blue massed before their commander, and they wanted, too, to catch a glimpse of the man who would direct the movements for their defense in case of war.

Death of Thomas McKean.

Philadelphia, March 17.—Thomas McKean, one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of this city, died last night. A few days ago Mr. McKean suffered a stroke of paralysis and his condition grew steadily worse. His wealth is estimated at between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000. Mr. McKean was president of the North Pennsylvania Railroad, and a director of the Reading Railroad, the Lehigh Valley Railroad and the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, as well as several financial institutions. He was a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania. His gifts to the latter aggregated more than $300,000. He was born in 1842. His great-grandfather, Thomas McKean, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence and Chief Justice and Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

A man who has returned from the Klondike to his home in Sharon, Pa., says the gold-field excitement is largely the work of transportation companies, and he warns all who intend to go to Alaska to abandon the idea.

VERDICT IS EXPECTED SOON.

Doubtless It Will Declare There Was An Outside Explosion.

Washington, March 17.—There is encouraging news in the prospect of an early completion of the report of the Board of Inquiry. Assistant Secretary Day is advised that the court, now at Key West, will not return to Cuba. All the evidence needed has been obtained, except as further investigation by the divers may bring additional confirmation to the theory of an external explosion. Captain Sampson could write the results of the investigation to-day if necessary.

Delay has been occasioned by the earnest attempt to discover the parties guilty of the awful crime. This has been extremely difficult, and may never succeed. The story that the report of the board is being withheld for a purpose is nonsense. A moment's reflection will show the absurdity of this view. There can be no object either of the administration or of the board itself in postponing the day of the verdict. To say that delay is necessary in order that preparations for war may continue indicate a lack of thought. The receipt of the report of the board does not mean war unless it is shown that Spain ordered the Maine blown up.

The degree of Spain's responsibility must be determined before there is a demand for reparation, and this will take time enough. As an indication of the uncertainty existing on the main point it is only necessary to say that the books are being ransacked even now by State Department officials to frame the form of demand upon Spain that may become necessary.

If the report of the court is vague, except as to the fact of an outside explosion, it may fall upon the administration to prove Spain's contributory negligence, or the more vigorous policy may be adopted of demanding indemnity from Spain anyway, in which case Spain must prove that she is not responsible for what happened to the Maine.

These possibilities show that the receipt of the report of the Maine court of inquiry is not necessarily the climax of the situation. Spain's answer to the findings of the court will be of more significance than a report the substance of which already has been anticipated. Meantime the country may expect additional friendly expressions and "representations" from the Spanish Minister at Washington.

Already Minister Polo is recognized as a more skillful diplomat than his predecessor, Dupuy de Lome. Polo apparently is so frank and free from guile that his statements almost carry the conviction of sincerity. Senor de Lome was smooth enough, but not such a consummate and accomplished dissembler as Senor Polo. The administration is on its guard.

WANAMAKER'S OPENING SPEECH.

Not Afraid of War, Says the Ex-Postmaster General.

Lancaster, Pa., March 17.—John Wanamaker, the merchant and former Postmaster-General, opened his campaign for Governor here last night. Mr. Wanamaker will make the fight as the candidate of the Business Men's League of Pennsylvania. He was greeted by an enthusiastic crowd of citizens.

Among other things, Mr. Wanamaker said:

"The beautiful white battleship that steamed out of New York harbor a month ago became a white coffin buried in the dark sea in the dead of night. Without passing hasty judgment on our sister nation and willing to wait for all information, the air is full of the fear of treachery and dastardly brutality.

"We do not seek war, but we are not afraid of it. To the Congress that voted fifty millions into the President's hands for immediate use if necessary, we send loyal greeting, and say, make it a hundred millions if needed. To the Navy Department that bought two battleships yesterday we send cordial approval and give our consent to buy two more to-morrow.

"We are not clamoring for bloodshed, but we are swearing fidelity to the flag and insisting on justice to the honored dead and living."

WATSON FOR GOVERNOR.

Populists in Georgia Ignore His Advance Declination.

Atlanta, March 17.—Notwithstanding the declaration of Thomas E. Watson that he would not be a candidate for Governor he was last night nominated by the Populist Convention amid a scene of the wildest political frenzy.

The full ticket is: For Governor, Thomas E. Watson; for Secretary of State, L. M. Jackson; for Comptroller, Gen. Benjamin Milliken; for Treasurer, J. H. Traylor; for Commissioner of Agriculture, W. L. Peek; for Attorney-General, Cary Thornton; for the Supreme Court, Walter B. Hill, Prohibitionist; W. R. Leakin, Republican, and Hal Lewis, Democrat and present incumbent.

There is little doubt Watson will enter the field and work for the nominee of the convention, looking at it in the third person, and regard himself solely as a supporter of the Populist ticket.

Gov. Dyer Renominated.

Providence, March 17.—The Republican State Convention met yesterday. Gov. George Elisha Dyer was renominated by acclamation, and William Gregory, of North Kingston, the present Senator from that town, was named as candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. Charles P. Bennett, of Providence, was nominated for Secretary of State; Willard B. Tanner, of Providence, for Attorney-General, and Walter A. Reed, of Gloucester, for General Treasurer. The platform adopted eulogized the work done by the Republican party, the many reforms instituted under that regime and the general favorable conditions of the finances of the State.

Peaceful Talk in Spain.

Madrid, March 17.—El Heraldo, in a very conciliatory article supposed in official circles to be inspired, after pooh-poohing the "fiction that Spain desires to provoke a war," says:

"If the United States really wishes peace and Spain is resolved to maintain it, let each go half way, and the pacification of Cuba and the tranquility of Europe will be accomplished."

WILL ANNEX HAWAII

Joint Resolution for That Purpose Reported to the Senate.

USES TREATY PROVISIONS

Action Decided On by the Committee on Foreign Relations—Sent to the Calendar—No Time Set for Discussion—Text of the Resolution.

Washington, March 17.—The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations yesterday agreed to recommend that the Hawaiian Islands be annexed by legislation in open session, and agreed upon a joint resolution for the accomplishment of this purpose, which Senator Davis afterward reported to the Senate.

The resolution went to the calendar, and Senator Davis did not give any notice of calling it up. The following is its text:

"Section 1. The Government of the Republic of Hawaii having in due form signified its consent in the manner provided by its constitution to cede absolutely and without reserve to the United States of America all rights of sovereignty of whatsoever kind in and to the Hawaiian Islands and to their dependencies, also to cede and transfer to the United States the absolute fee and ownership of all public buildings or edifices, forts, harbors, military equipment and all other public property of whatever kind and description belonging to the Government of the Hawaiian Islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining; therefore be it

"Resolved, That said cession is accepted, ratified and confirmed and that the said Hawaiian Islands and their dependencies be and they are hereby annexed as a part of the territory of the United States, and are subject to the sovereign dominion thereof, and that all and singular the property and rights hereinbefore mentioned are vested in the United States of America."

The resolution then adopts the language of the treaty beginning with the second paragraph of the second section, and taking all the remainder of it but does not cite it as a part of the treaty.

These sections provide for the disposal of the Hawaiian public lands, for the temporary government of the islands until Congress decides upon a permanent form of government, the abrogation of Hawaiian treaties and the preservation of Hawaiian customs regulations until those of the United States shall be put into operation the assumption of the public debt of Hawaii by the United States to the extent of $4,000,000, the regulation of Chinese immigration and the apointment by the President of five commissioners to prepare a code of laws for the government of the islands.

Section 2 provides that the commissioners provided for shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The sum of $100,000 is appropriated by the third and last sections for the purpose of carrying the resolution into effect, and this sum is made immediately available.

Senator Davis said no determination had been reached as to when the joint resolution would be called up for consideration in the Senate.

FATAL FIRE IN CHICAGO.

Several Men Killed by Leaping From a Burning Building.

Chicago, March 17.—A fire, in which five persons are known to have lost their lives, broke out in the building at 215 and 217 Wabash avenue at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The fire started with an explosion on the top floor, and spread with remarkable rapidity. It was not under control until it had burned for over an hour. The loss is estimated to be about $1,000,000.

Those known to be dead are Miles Smith, Samuel Clark, Edward Binns, an unidentified woman and a negro janitor. Eight persons were injured and several are said to be missing. Among those missing is Policeman Rogers. It was believed at first that fully a score had been killed, but once the fire was under control many supposed to be dead were found unhurt.

The building was occupied by a number of firms dealing in musical instruments and photographic apparatus and supplies.

The entire front of the building was blown out by a terrific explosion followed by several others in rapid succession, and the entire building was quickly covered with flames.

Just what caused the explosion is not known, but it is supposed that they occurred in the rooms on the top floor occupied by a photographic supply house.

All those who lost their lives were killed by jumping or falling from windows, from which they cried for help.

The building and contents are a total loss. In less than half an hour after the fire broke out the structure, which was seven stories high, eighty feet front by 159 feet deep, was leveled to the ground. It was of what is known as "mill construction," with a front of plate glass and iron columns.

The building was owend by Fred K. Ayres, of Lowell, Mass. It was worth about $75,000, and is said to be partially insured. Insurance men say the loss on contents will be in the neighborhood of $350,000.

The number of dead is still in doubt and probably will not be definitely known until the debris is sufficiently cooled to allow a search for bodies which are undoubtedly in the ruins.

Artillery Goes South on Special Trains.

Fort Riley, Kan., March 17.—Battery F, Fifth Artillery, destined for Savannah, Ga., and Battery B, Fourth Artillery, for New Orleans, left here at 10 o'clock last night in two special trains over the Union Pacific road Battery F, of the Fourth Artillery destined for Fortress Monroe, will not start until to-day.

Don't Want Our Horses.

Paris, March 17.—Premier Meline received yesterday an important deputation of notable persons residing in the province of Brittany, who called to claim protection against the importation into France of American horses.

TO FORTIFY THE DRY TORTUGAS.

Gen. Wilson Expected to Make Report to Government on the Island.

Washington, March 17.—Gen. John H. Wilson, chief of engineers who has been in the south inspecting the forts and looking over our coast defenses, is expected to make a report to the Government this week. It is understood that his report will contain plans for the fortification of Tortugas quarantine station which lies off the coast of Florida below Key West. While South he made an examination of the islands. It is the intention of the Government to use these islands also as a base of supplies in the event of a possible war with Spain.

Dry Tortugas, as it is called, is the group of ten small islands, or keys, at the eastern entrance to the Gulf of Mexico, about seventy-one miles directly west of Key West, and 120 miles southwest of Cape Sable, the most southerly point of mainland in Florida. One of these ten isles is Garden Isle, upon which Fort Jefferson was built under the direction of General Totten, who instituted what was known as the masonry forts, which formed our only kind of seacoast defense from 1850 until 1870.

The Federal Government in 1870 began to discard the solid forts of brick and stone for the more modern breastworks of earth and concrete, which have a greater power of resisting the more powerful rifles of latter days. But it was not until 1888 that the War Department lent Fort Jefferson and other adjoining islands to the Treasury Department for the use of quarantine station between this country and Cuba. At present it is in a defenseless condition and is a positive source of danger, as it could be occupied by an enemy as a base of naval and military operations.

MAP SHOWING LOCATION OF DRY TORTUGAS.

The most essential features of the defenses would be the mounting of heavy guns, and with these the harbor would give one of the best protected roadsteads in Southern waters. The main defenses are on Tortugas (meaning Turtle) Island, and occupy practically the entire island, although a small narrow coral reef sweeps around it, affording additional shelter. The fort is known as Fort Jefferson. It is a three-story brick structure, with casements, the walls being 4 feet 3 inches thick. The garrison quarters are in these casements, the old plan being to place the artillery in the upper stories and the infantry below. The Fortifications Board, headed by Gen. Miles, some time ago reported that the islands were necessary as a part of the system of coast defenses.

The naval scheme for defense of the coast as laid down in the plans of the Naval War College last summer also contemplated the islands as a base. Of operations while the board appointed by Secertary Long to select sites for dry docks last fall also devoted considerable space in its report to showing the importance of the islands from a strategic point of view. This anchorage is probably better than that of Key West. This fact is made evident by the preference for the Tortugas harbor shown by Admiral Sicard during the rendezvous of the North Atlantic Squadron now in progress.

FRENCH NAVY ACTIVE.

The Fleet Reported as Preparing to Mobilize—To Aid Russia.

Paris March 17.—The Aurore affirms that the French fleet is being prepared for mobilization, adding that feverish activity prevails at all the arsenals and shipyards which are working until 10 o'clock at night.

Continuing, the Aurore says the French northern squadron at Cherbourg is ready for immediate departure. The ships, it appears, are being swung during the night, at Cherbourg, for the adjustment of their compasses.

Finally, it is asserted that, in order to complete the necessary number of officers, second-year students are to be appointed midshipmen, and all the admirals have been instructed to arrange to reach Paris within twenty-four hours after being summoned.

The Aurore explains that the mobilization is conected with preparations to support Russia by a naval demonstration in the far East.

Spain Has Not Bought the O'Higgins.

Washington, March 17.—Secretary Long stated to a correspondent that the War Department had hopes that they would secure the Chilian armorclad O'Higgins; that their belief was based on information received from Lieut. Colwell, naval attache at London. Secretary Long said that he had positive assurance that the Spanish Government had not purchased the ship as yet.

London, March 17.—The announce that Spain has bought the warship O'Higgins of Chili is now absolutely denied. It is reported that the United States are now negotiating for the ship.

Benson Bank of Erie Closed

Erie, Pa., March 17.—The Benson Bank established by the late Judge William Benson of Waterford, did not open for business yesterday morning, and a long line of depositors gathered around the building. No statement of asets and liabilities has yet been given out, but it is believed the assets will equal the debts. A committee has been selected to audit the accounts of the bank.

"President's Own" Troops Organize.

Canton, March 17.—A regiment of 600 volunteers, to be known as "The President's Own," has been provisionally formed here. All the officers have been named, subject to the approval of Governor Bushnell. James McKinley, a nephew of the President, is sergeant.

SPAIN REMONSTRATES

Our Preparations Indirectly Encourage Cuban Insurgents.

PREJUDICIAL TO AUTONOMY

Views of the Spanish Cabinet Concerning Our Emergency Measures and the Assembling of Ships at Key West Communicated to State Department.

Washington, March 17.—The war preparations being made by the United States, the assembling of ships at Key West, the purchase of cruisers abroad and the emergency measures in the War and Navy Departments, have come to the official attention of the Spanish Government, and the views of the Spanish Cabinet thereon have been communicated to the State Department.

This has not taken the form of protest, however, as it does not appear that the Spanish Government claims or asserts the right to question such internal measures as the United States may adopt, even though they be of a character to indicate preparations for war. It is rather by way of representations, conveyed in a friendly spirit and without threat, as to the serious influences which these preparations will have in encouraging the Cuban insurgents at the moment when the autonomy plan is to have its crucial trial through the Cuban elections, and in this way defeat the reforms Premier Sagasta is seeking to carry out. It has been specially pointed out that the presence of a large fleet of United States war ships at Key West cannot be regarded as a friendly measure, as the sending of ships was officially represented to be when the Maine went to Havana and the Vizcaya returned the complimentary visit.

In short, the presence of this extensive fleet near Cuba, together with the war measures taken by the United States, are regarded by Spain as seriously prejudicial to the policy of autonomy which Spain and the United States have alike approved, and an indirect encouragement to the insurgents in defeating the desires of both governments for the success of that policy. Finally, and in the same spirit of friendly representation rather than of protest Spain has pointed out that a war by the United States against Spain under such circumstances would be unjustifiable before the world, and a crime against humanity and civilization.

The representations contained no reference whatever to the Maine disaster or to redress or indemnity therefor.

The published semi-official statement of the Spanish Cabinet's views as to the responsibility of the United States in the Cuban situation has created a profound impression.

Officials decline to discuss it publicly, but there is a general belief among them that the publication marks the beginning of a new chapter in the troubled relations between the United States and Spain.

The statement is believed to be a first step toward forming public opinion in Europe in anticipation of a failure on the part of the Spanish officials to make a success of the autonomous programme which it had outlined, and that an attempt is to be made to place the responsibility upon the United States for any failure that may follow. This movement is regarded as adding much to the gravity of the present situation.

That the administration will be influenced by the suggestion that the presence of the fleet of the North Atlantic Squadron at Key West is a disturbing factor is not believed for a moment. Visible evidence of that determination was the ceaseless activity of the naval officials as well as the steady prosecution of the plan of the War Department to-day.

Although the Secretary of the Navy is still pursuing with vigor his quest for suitable warships that may be purchased in Europe, beyond the two already secured at the Armstrong works, no further acquisitions have been made.

INDEMNITY FOR THE MAINE.

Treasury Auditor Morris Says President Will Demand It When Time Arrives.

Cleveland, March 17.—Frank H. Morris, Fourth Auditor of the Treasury and a personal friend of President McKinley, who is at present in Cleveland, in speaking of the Cuban question, said:

"There will be no war. Whatever the agency was, the officials at Washington are positive that the Spanish officials had nothing to do with the blowing up of the Maine. The President, when the time arrives, will demand an indemnity and it will be paid."

Mr. Morris' department has charge of the work of settling the claims of the heirs of those lost by the Maine disaster. "We have found on investigation that out of 378 men who were on the boat, 63 were foreigners," said Mr. Morris.

"Of the 253 who were killed we have succeeded in getting into correspondence with 127 claimants. It will surprise you to know that less than 10 per cent. of this number had families depending on them and many have no direct heirs."

Powderly Confirmed.

Washington, March 17.—T. V. Powderly was confirmed as Commissioner of Immigration by the Senate in executive session yesterday by the vote of 43 to 20. Senator Chandler was the only Republican who cast his vote against confirmation, while many of the Democrats voted for Mr. Powderly. Senator Hann made a brief speech in which he asserted that Mr. Powderly's support of the Republican ticket in the last campaign was not the result of any collusion or bargain.

Praises Moderation of Americans.

London, March 17.—Mr. Sidney Low, formerly editor of the St. James Gazette, has written a long letter from New York extolling the moderation of the Americans on the subject of Cuba, and declaring the British "would not have endured such savagery at their doors," adding, "the Spaniards would have been cleared out of Cuba, bags and baggage, long ago."

CYCLING COMMENT.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company is having a lively trade and reports the sales as very large for this time of the year.

This is just the time of the year to join the L. A. W. Local Consul T. A. Cuming will be glad to furnish any information regarding that organization to anyone.

The Crescent wheel of 1898 includes several new ideas of construction that are worth examination. The wheel is a first-class one in all respects and is placed at a price within the reach of all.

Plainfield is sadly lacking in the way of bicycle clubs. There is a movement on foot at present among some of the young men looking toward the organization of another wheeling club.

Walter L. Long, of Park avenue, met with an accident while riding his wheel to the baseball grounds on Washington avenue last Saturday. He struck a ditch and his front forks broke, throwing him from the wheel. He was not seriously injured.

A schedule of bicycle runs is being arranged by the Y. M. C. A. of this city and the Summit association. The members of the two associations will enjoy the runs together. They will be more frequent and shorter than the runs of last year and under the same auspices.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

A bowling match will be rolled on the Park Club alleys tomorrow evening between the first team and the Junior team of the club.

HELD PRISONER BY A LION.

An interesting tale come from Mashonaland in which a lion and a Kaffir figure. The story is vouched for by Dr. R. Brown, well-known writer on South African topics. The Kaffir was visiting come friends at a distance, and was horrified while resting near a small pool to see a large lion watching him from the other side. Unfortunately the man had laid his loaded gun beyond his reach, and at sign of reaching for it the lion roared menacingly.

The situation now became extremely paiuful—if not for the lion, at least for the man, for, putting aside the imminent prospect of being devoured, the rock on which he sat, exposed to the glare of an African sun, was so hot that he could scarcely bear to touch it with his naked feet. But the enemy was inexorable. Any exhibition of an intention to seize the weapon was followed by a warning roar, so that the man had all day long to temper the almost intolerable heat of the rock by planting one foot on another, until by evening both feet were so roasted that he had lost any sense of peril.

The lion seemed to have only recently dined. Otherwise it is extremely unlikely it would have displayed such tolerance to its helpless vis-a-vis. At noon it walked to the pool to drink, looking around every few steps to watch the Kaffir, and when he reached for his gun it turned in rage and was on the point of pouncing upon him. Then, quenching its thirst, the vigilant brute came back to his old post. Another night passed, but whether the Kaffir slept or not he could not tell. All he knew was that it must have been at very short intervals, and with his eyes open, for he always saw the lion at his feet.

The next forenoon the animal went again to the water, and, while there, apparently heard some noise in an opposite quarter, and disappeared in the bush. The man now made an effort to seize his gun, but, on attempting to rise, he fell, his ankles being apparently without power. However, he got the musket and crept to the pond to drink, determined, if the lion returned, to discharge the contents of his weapon into it; but it did not appear.

Then, unable to walk, with his toes roasted by the sun and the hot rock and his legs flayed by the sharp-edged grass, he crawled along the nearest path on his hands and knees—on the chance of some traveler passing that way. This hope seemed destined to dissapointment, when a countryman came up and took the famished and crippled Kaffir to a place of safety, where he recovered, though he was lame for life.—New York Journal.

"Out of Sorts."

Many common expressions are of legitimate parentage, although most people believe that they spring up like Topsy. The printing craft, for instance, originated several very popular sayings. Take the case of a man who is "out of sorts." In a hand-composition printing office the word "sorts" applies to the letters and marks which should be in the type case, but which are frequently missing. A man who, in the days before the coming of linotype machines, found his "e" box barren or his comma box desolate and bankrupt was said to be out of those particular sorts. By his profanity the calamity was made known, and by his impatient remarks to this day is the man who is out of sorts known, whether he is a banker or a policeman.

I heard Mr. Moody say the other day that a lady had come to him, asking how she might be delivered from the habit of exaggeration, to which she was prone. "Call it lying, madam," was the uncompromising answer, "and deal with it as you would with any other temptation of the devil."—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

It is not recorded what punishment was meted out to this man, but certainly he deserved a dire one. He lived in North Carolina and in 1865 he was given a letter to mail. It was found in his pocket in 1897, and the addressee, being still alive, it was duly forwarded.

SUPERSTITIONS.

Mehemet Ali Signed the Treaty Because Victoria Was a Lucky Queen.

The London Truth gives the following inside view of a great historical event, said to have been hitherto unpublished:

When Sir Charles Napier had conquered Mehemet Ali, he found it impossible to force or coax the wily Egyptian into signing the treaty which only would make his victory effective. He had nineteen interviews with Mehemet, in which the Englishman by turns argued, flattered and threatened his antagonist, who listened day after day with the same immovable, smiling countenance.

One day Sir Charles, in speaking of England, said casually that it "was governed by a lucky woman." A strange flash passed over the Pasha's countenance, but he made no answer. As soon as Napier was gone, Mehemet sent for the English Consul, who was an Egyptian, and demanded:

"You were in London when the English Queen was crowned. Were the omens bad or good?"

"All good."

"You think that good luck is written on her forehead?"

"I did not think upon the matter before, but now that you ask me, I believe that it is. When she asked Allah to help her in her work her eyes ran over. Allah loves the innocent."

"No doubt of that," said Mehemet, anxiously. "She must be lucky."

Early the next morning he sent for Sir Charles and signed the treaty. English power and English cannon he could brave, but not "the luck" written upon the forehead of a good woman whom he had never seen.

FOR AND AGAINST THE X-RAY.

A Farmer Used It to Determine the Layers Among His Chickens.

There seems to be no limit to the use to which the X ray can be put in revealing the true inwardness of things. It is now being used by poultry farmers anxious to discover the laying capacity of hens. One enterprising man, finding the percentage of eggs was not what it should be considering the size of his poultry yard, hit upon the idea of examination by the Roentgen rays, and was thus able to weed out the non-producers. The birds were examined at the rate of thirty per hour, and the "non-efficients" were soon plucked and sent to market. The Roentgen rays are said to have an extremely injurious influence on the action of the heart, causing that organ to palpitate violently, and some of the leading doctors in Paris have issued a warning to medical students and others to exercise great caution in the examination of the action of the heart by the rays. Ill effects have followed the use of the rays after many surgical operations where it was desirable to observe the process of the healing of the tissues, the knitting of the bones and the recreation of various parts. These effects have usually partaken of the nature of burns, and in nearly every instance were caused by placing the exciting tube too near the part under inspection, or making the exposure too long. The tube should never be less than 14 inches from the object, but the time of exposure will vary according to the strength of the apparatus.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A PRINCE WHO BECAME A PRIEST.

He Chooses to Work in London So That His Former Station May Not be Known.

There is a priest living in the Whitechapel district in London, a poor, devout, earnest mission priest, who is a prince and within easy reach of the throne of Saxony.

He abandoned a military career suddenly, and great was the surprise thereat. His relatives and his friends supposed that, having entered the Church, he would be content with his orders and satisfied to accept such ecclesiastical preferment which would give him a religious rank consonant with the loftiness of his birth.

Prince Max of Saxony is made of sterner stuff. Directly after he was ordained in Dresden he went to London. He established himself in the poorest and most miserable quarter. Since then he has devoted his whole life to those about him. They know nothing of the high place in the world that he forsook that he might do mission work.

It was because he knew that he would be treated as a mere mission priest that Prince Max or rather Father Max, as he prefers to be called, chose London as a field for his work. In Germany the authorities as well as the poor would never succeed in blinding themselves to the fact that he was really a royal prince.—New York World.

A Deep Laid Scheme.

Higgins—You say that Muggins is a miserly man when it comes to furnishing his tables. Why, I have taken dinner at his house several times, and it beats any place I ever ate at for nice, large pieces of pie.

Wiggins—Yes, but that's one of his shrewdest games. You see, the children are in such a hurry to get to pie that they don't eat half a meal.—Truth.

"Are you in, pain my little man?" asked the kind old gentleman.

"No," answered the boy. "The pain's in me."—Indianapolis Journal.

Mrs. Newlywed—Henry, you always said a husband should tell his wife everything. But you will not tell me the secrets of any of the societies you belong to.

Mr. Newlywed—Carrie, it is best I shouldn't. If you knew them I'm afraid you wouldn't have much of an opinion of your husband's intellect.—Boston Transcript.

CODDING APOLOGIZED TO THE ASSEMBLYMEN

Declared Hudson County Members Had Been Seen.

TO PUT HIM OUT OF HOUSE.

THE ACRID REMARK GREW OUT OF TROLLEY BILL AMENDMENTS.

Codding Declares That He Did Not Use the Word "Seen" in a Financial Sense When He Said "I Guess Every Member on This Side of the House Has Been Seen on the Squire's Trolley Bill"—Says He Meant That "Democrats Had Determined to Stand Together Against the Republicans."

Trenton, N. J., March 18—The pure white smile of former Assemblyman Charles Codding, of Westfield, took on a sarcastic curl in the Assembly chamber the other day when the Bergen trolley bill was considered, and through the smile came a few sarcastic words that got the Union county man into some very hot water for awhile. Mr. Codding, so it seems, is a member of "third house."

When the bill was brought up for consideration the Hudson county Assemblyman had several amendments to offer. The Democratic action was something of a surprise. Mr. Codding was watching the proceedings very interestedly, but when the Hudson county position developed he walked away and remarked with fine sarcasm:

"The Traction Company must have seen the whole crowd on this side."

When Mr. Codding entered the Assembly chamber yesterday morning he was met by Mr. Murphy, of Hudson, who hailed him thus: "What is this I hear that you said about the Hudson people?"

"I guess my remark was plain English," was the cool response.

Mr. Codding left without prolonging the discussion, and then the Hudson men took counsel together. The upshot of the conference was the preparation of a resolution which was calculated to rule Mr. Codding off the floor of the House.

The news of this action spread rapidly, and soon reached the subject, who took the alarm instantly and went looking for Senator Daly. The Senator listened to Mr. Codding's plea, then went to the Hudson delegation in the House and counseled moderation. Mr. Daly explained that the former Assemblyman was willing to apologize and explain.

The Hudson men agreed that they could ask no more, and a few moments later Mr. Codding made his appearance to square himself.

He was surrounded by Benny, Marnell, Hall, Carroll and Murphy, to whom he explained that when he said that the Hudson men had been "seen," he did not mean "seen" in the financial sense. His remark, he said, was meant in a political sense to infer that the Democrats had made a party stand on the measure as against the Republicans. The apology and explanation was accepted, and so the incident closed.

A WOMAN JOURNALIST.

Death of Mrs. Lucy C. Benedict, a Talented Worker.

Miss Lucy C. Benedict, who died at the St. Could Hotel in New York Tuesday, and whose funeral was held in Plainfield this afternoon at the residence of her mother, Mrs. George Benedict, 72 Summit avenue, was one of the pioneer newspaper women of New York. Miss Benedict was born in Mariella, Ohio. Her specialty in writing was agricultural reporting and kindred subjects. For the last eleven years she has been agricultural editor of the American Press Association. She had practical experience in these matters, having participated in a number of agricultural experiments.

Attired According to the Day.

The Thursday Night Euchre Club was entertained last evening by Robert M. Clark, of Washingtonville. Miss May MacLaughlin and Miss Etta Newman were awarded first and second prizes for the women, while Edward Clark and Benjamin LaVere were presented with the first and second prizes for the gentlemen. An amusing feature of the event was that everyone appeared in green attire. Some of the costumes were very comical and caused much laughter.

Miss Knight's Friends Came at Night.

A pleasant surprise party was given to Miss Knight, of New street, last evening. There were about twenty-five young people present, and the evening was spent in playing games. Miss Knight was completely surprised by her friends for she had no intimation of their coming.

BASEBALL IN HIGH SCHOOL.

CRACK TEAM TO BE PUT IN FIELD.

Principal Players Already Chosen and a List of Promising Candidates for Other Positions.

Baseball and the chances of the High School nine are the all absorbing topics of conversation among the boys of the Plaingeld High School at the present time. Never since there was a High School has such general interest been shown in the establishment of a fitting team to represent the school on the diamond. Not only is the interest unusually great but there is an unusual number of candidates who are anxious to make a place on the team.

The team is very fortunate in having the services of an expert coach in Albert B. Meredith, science instructor at the High School. Mr. Meredith has had much experience in baseball matters. He played for four years with his High School team in Massachusetts and then for four years at college. He was a member of the famous '95 team of Wesleyan College that defeated Yale and other great college teams. He occupied the box for that team. He also pitched for two years for the team of the University of Boston. Mr. Meredith will coach the general work of the team, but will devote his special attention to the battery. He was present at the practice Tuesday afternoon and gave the team many valuable hints.

Claude Edwards will manage the team this year. His experience at Carthage, N. Y., will make him a valuable man for the position. The captain of the team has not been selected, but it is very probable that Arthur W. Lederer will be chosen to fill that responsible position.

The personel of the team is yet to be decided upon. The makeup of the battery is a foregone conclusion. Edwards will pitch and Lederer will catch, unless some new candidate makes phenomenal progress during the next few weeks.

Almost all of last year's team who still remain in the High School have turned out for practice and have stated their intention of trying for the team. They are William A. Fisher, Sidney R. Craig, Aaron D. Thompson, Jr., Arthur W. Lederer and Harry Cuming.

The list of new candidates is a large one. It includes Rhey T. Snodgrass, Louis Schenck, William Morgan, D. Townsend Mason, Roy Radford, Paul Whitall, F. O. Bristol, Alfred Egan, Samuel Atchison, J. Stanley Mosher, Henry W. Brower, Claude Edwards and Walter L. Long.

The candidates were out for practice on the Washington avenue grounds yesterday afternoon. Mr. Meredith was present for a short time. The battery will start special practice in a few days. It is the intention of the management to try to train another complete battery from the school if possible.

READING THE CHARACTER.

Plainfield Women Learning to Analyze Disposition of Their Neighbors.

The interest in Mrs. Clemence M. M. Draper's lectures on Practical Physiognomy increases with each lecture, and a number of Plainfield women are learning to analyze the characters of their acquaintances from their faces. The third lecture, which was given yesterday in the parlors of the Revere House, mentioned all the chief traits of character, such as conscientioness, amativeness, friendship and benevolence, Mrs. Draper showing by means of a large chart where the sign for each was located in the face, and describing each characteristic in detail, and what it would lead to if carried to excess. The usual personal readings were given at the close of the lecture, and were, as the subjects admitted, very correct accounts of their characters.

Could Have a Hitching Post.

Matthew O'Rourke, of New Brunswick, left his horse untied on Somerset street, in the borough, yesterday afternoon. Marshal Schenck arrested the man and arraigned him before Recorder Long. A fine of $2 was imposed. The man settled, and went on his way rejoicing that he did not have to pay any more.

A New Business.

A. F. Naylor, of Hopewell, has moved to Plainfield, and has opened a store at 23 Somerset strret, where he will make mattrasses and pillows of all kinds. He is also agent for "Renovo" a scheme to clean carpets without removing them from the floor.

Press Want Found It.

Yesterday the Daily Press advertised for J. K. Arnold, of the borough, for a lost silk muffler. Soon after the issue of the paper the muffler was found. Miss Gertrude Tier, of Bank place, saw the advertisement and returned the lost article.

TRIFLED WITH TROLLEY.

A LITTLE GIRL'S CAPRICE CAUSED HER TO BE HURT.

Little Daisy Titus Ran in Front of the Somerset Street Car and Was Struck and Knocked Insensible—Soon Recovered.

Little Daisy Titus ran in front of the trolley car once too many times. As she ran across Somerset street, yesterday afternoon, the fender of the car struck her and she was thrown to the ground unconscious.

Car No. 5, under the charge of Motorman William Garno, of Newark, was going toward the mountain at a rapid rate. Suddenly Daisy sprang toward the car. She passed in front of it but could not clear the path of the fender before it struck her. There was a shriek and the girl fell headlong.

The car was at once brought to a standstill, and the prostrate form of the child was carried to the home of her parents. Dr. J. T. Fritts and Dr. Long, who were hastily summoned, found after making a careful examination, that the little girl's injuries were not of a serious nature. They administered restoratives and dressed the few slight wounds about the child's head.

The little playmate of the child, who was with her at the time the accident happened, could not be found afterward, and it was thought that the child was so frightened by the accident to her playmate that she hurridly made her way home.

George F. Randolph, of Somerset street, was an eye witness to the accident, and he says that the motorman was not to blame in the least. Mr. Garno, the motorman, is an expert electrician and he assisted in constructing the trolley in Plainfield.

TROTTING CIRCUIT.

Horsemen to Form an Association to Promote Good Racing.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, March 18.—The horse owners of this and neighboring counties are planning to hold a meeting in this town next month, looking toward the formation of a trotting association for the control of the sport in this section, and for the arrangement of a circuit of meets. The men in the scheme include some of the most wealthy men in this section who are interested in horses. The object will be to secure clean racing and encourage good breeding, rather than to make money. Plainfield will be represented by some of her best known horse owners.

SUMMER DRINKS.

A Practical Discussion Indulged in by W. C. T. U. Members.

Yesterday afternoon at the regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. the subject for discussion was "Summer Drinks." There was a large attendance of members and the subject was quite thoroughly discussed. Some of those present advocated the use of oatmeal water, while others strongly urged the drinking of lemonade as a healthful beverage. None of the members advocated the use of root beer, as there is a feeling of doubt about its healthfulness. Although the subject was very generally discussed, no one drink was decided upon as the chief drink for summer.

Funeral of Jacob Shepard.

The funeral services of the late Jacob Shepard were held yesterday afternoon from the house at 1 o'clock and from Warren chapel at 1:30. Rev. Mr. McKelvey officiated. SHAMROCK AND GREEN REIGNED SUPREME

The Memory of St. Patrick Was Honored Yesterday.

HIBERNIAN BALL AT NIGHT.

NO IPARADE IN THE DAY BECAUSE DUTIFUL IRISH WERE TOO BUSY.

The Dance Held in the Crescent Rink, Which was Decorated in National Colors and Those of the Emerald Isle—A Large Number of Dancers Glided and Whirled to the Inspiring Strains of Delightful Music—It Was the Twenty-Fourth Annual Affair—The Committee in Charge of the Happy Event.

Good old St. Patrick must have looked down and smiled at the festivities held in honor of his name throughout the land yesterday by the wearers of the shamrock and the green. All the good times would have rejoiced the heart of any patron saint, more especially he of the Emerald Isle. Plainfield had no parade in honor of the day, for most of St. Patrick's dutiful sons and daughters were busily employed during the day. In the evening, however, they made up for lost time at the great ball given at the Crescent Rink in honor of the day by the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

The day was a real St. Patrick's Day. Rain and sunshine alternated, but the sun triumphed in the end, and then in the evening the stars came out to light the revelers to the ball.

Although in the midst of the Lenten season, the Hibernians' ball was a great success. The Stars and Stripes and the green of Ireland were prominently displayed about the hall. On the stage where the orchestra held forth, the two flags hung side by side with the emblem of the ancient lodge between them. Prof. O'Reilly and his complete orchestra occupied the front of the stage. Partitions of green hid the rear of the stage where the tables were arranged and supper was served to nearly two hundred. Caterer Rand furnished the supper.

Early in the evening the crowd began to assemble and soon the music started. Then the couples glided and whirled to the inspiring strains of the orchestra until way into the morning hours. At 10 o'clock came the grand march, led by Martin Kane, with Miss Mary Motley as his partner. They were followed by Mr. and Mrs. James McCarthy and then sixty-three other couples. As is the annual custom at the grand march at the Hibernians' ball, the couples made the initials of the order, A. O. H. in their march. Then they "cut the shamrock" in their evolutions. The figures were well executed.

It was the twenty-fourth annual ball of the order and by far the most successful. There were fully six hundred sons and daughters of Erwin who assembled to do honor to their patron saint. The committee has been hard at work preparing for the event for some days and their efforts were very satisfactory. P. Casey was chairman of the committee of arrangements, with James McCarty as secretary and John Casey as treasurer. Of the ball, Martin Kane was general director, James McCarty as floor manager. The other members of the floor committee were Sylvester Gaynor, Samuel Goff and Patrick Cullen. The reception committee was composed of J. Loughlin, W. Smith, P. Casey, F. Gunning, E Ryan, M. Cullen, J. Traynor and J. Casey.

CHANGED COURSE OF BROOK.

Improvements Now Being Made Near Scott Place and South Avenue.

A great improvement has been made near Scott place and South avenue. The fields have been improved and are being prepared for building lots. Cedar brook, which used to run diagonally across the fields, has had its course so changed that it will make the division of the land much easier and greatly facilitate building operations. The brook is now confined in a new channel with heavy abutments on either side.

It was decided to hold the next encampment of the Department at Long Branch June 23d. and 24th. After the transaction of the business, the members of the council adjourned to the rooms of Phil. Sheridan Post, when the members of the Post entertained the officers in grand style.

IRISH BALLADS SUNG.

FASHIONABLE ST. PATRICK'S DAY CONCERT IN THE CASINO.

Hall Trimmed in Commemoration of the Emerald Isle—Fine Singers Rendered Ballads Popular in the Land.

A large audience composed of Plainfield's most fashionable set gathered in the Casino last evening to enjoy the Saint Patrick's Day concert of Irish songs.

The stage was prettily furnished to represent a drawing room, with the tint of the Emerald Isle everywhere in evidence.

The songs were old, well-known pieces descriptive of the beauty of Ireland, and the sentiment and pathos which cling to her memory in the heart of her children.

The greatest hit of the evening was scored by Gwilym Miles, who sang in a splendid bass voice and with an amount of expression that bordered on dramatic talent. His solo selections were "The Minstrel Boy," the words by Thomas Moore and the air "The Moreen;" and Rory O'More, the words and music of which were by Samuel Lover. Among the number of encores which this popular singer gave was a little song entitled "I start for Philadelphia in the morning" which scored a great success.

Miss Edith J. Miller, contralto, made a pleasing impression on the audience, rendering in winsome fashion "Killarney," Balfe, and Kathleen Mavourneen. As an encore she sang "The Wearing of the Green."

Madame Anita Rio displayed a soprano voice of fine quality in her first selection, "The meeting of the Waters," to the air "Old Head of Dennis." Later in the evening she sang "Angel's Whisper," a song written in accordance with the Irish superstition that a baby, when it smiles in its sleep, is conversing with angles. She received an enthusiastic encore.

Dr. Ion A. Jackson was the tenor, and proved a most popular artist with the audience. With Mr. Miles he sang a duet "Lily of Killarney" as the opening selection of the evening. His other pieces were "Lament of the Irish Immigrant," the music of which was by W. R. Demster and the words by Lady Dufferin; and "Believe Me If All Those Endeavoring Young Charms," the familar lines of Thomas Moore. As an encore he sang "Oft in the Stilly Night." His voice was remarkable in its compass and strength.

The entertainment closed with two quartette selections by Madame Rio, Miss Miller, Dr. Jackson and Mr. Miles. They were "Erin the Tear and the Smile in Thine Eyes," and "The Last Rose of Summer." Both selections were sung with sweetness and perfect taste. Much of the success of the performers was due to the excellent work of Frank J. Smith who acted as accompanist throughout the evening.

The prtronesses were:

JEWS FAR FROM THE TRUTH.

STATEMENT BY A FORMER RABBI.

Rev. Samuel Freuder Became a Christian After He Read the New Testament.

"The Hebrews of Today" was the subject of an address given in Vincent chapel last evening under the auspices of the Epworth League by Rev. Samuel Freuder, of New York, a converted Jew. There was a good-sized attendance and the address was profitable and thoroughly interesting. During the evening Mr. Freuder gave illustrations of Jewish customs as to dress, worship and eating. He also sang several hymns used in Jewish services. He quoted words of the late Dr. Gordon, of Boston, as to why people should love the Jew. In part Mr. Freuder spoke as follows:

"We often wonder why it is, after eighteen centuries, that the very people who have a right to say 'Unto Us a Child is Born, Unto Us a Son is Given,' should fail to believe in Christ and His teachings. Fifty years ago there was only 15,000 Jews in this country. Today there are 250,000 in New York alone. The Jews, in part, are no nearer the truth today than they were years ago. They think that at some future time the Messiah will come. The reformed Jew has given the idea that his people will return to Jerusalem. There is, however, today, a better feeling on the part of the Jews toward Christ and Christianity.

"This Jew has become prejudiced against Christianty. He has been abused by everyone, and it is not strange that he should have such feelings. The New Testament is rarely read by Jews. Up till eight years ago I had never read it, although I was educated in college and was a Rabbi. As soon as I read it my mind was not prejudiced as before. A Jew that accepts Christ adds much to the faith and principles of his father. In this country the Jew has been treated fairly and with credit to the Nation. The Jew is a living example of the truth found in the Bible. He is evidence of the providence of God." At this time Mr. Freuder sang the Psalm and gave the translated version. In conclusion the speaker said he looked forward to the time when there would be one flock and one Shepherd. He also prayed that the Gospel might speedily be carried to the Jews and to all nations, and for the time when Christ would be crowned King of all. After the address Mr. Freuder exhibited samples of the unleaven bread and all present were given pieces of it to take home. A collection was taken for the speaker and a goodly sum was realized.

A MOCK TRIAL.

Pioneer Debating Society Hold an Interesting and Instructive Session.

The Pioneer Debating Society of the North Plainfield Public High School, Ninth Grade, held a mock trial Wednesday, and it proved to be instructive. The defendant, Mr. Bach, was held for arson. The alleged deed was committeed on the evening of Feb. 22d, when Miss Waring's house was consumed by fire. The lawyer for the State was Mr. McGee, while Miss Henderson represented the defendant. Mr. Shepherd served as a sheriff, and the clerk of the court was Miss Valiant. The jury was composed of Mr. Farlee, Miss Hoagland, Miss Martin, Miss Haffner, Miss Loomis, Miss Fountain, Miss Morse, Miss Everitt, Miss Weiss, Mr. George, Mr. Bellis and Mr. Callahan. The witnesses for the plaintiff were Miss Waring, Miss Honeyman, Mr. Horne and Mr. Simpson, while Miss Kennedy, Miss Emmons and Mr. Townsend were witnesses for the defense.

The jury were unable to agree and another trial will be held later.

STORM SEWER PROBABLE.

DOCTORS WANT BOY PHENOMENON TO GO.

Complaint Made to State Board of Medical Examiners.

THREATENED WITH ARREST.

BUT MANAGER SHERMAN WILL STAY AND FIGHT PROSECUTION.

Two Local Physicians Notified the State Officials and Charge That the Boy Phenomenon is Practicing His Powers in Violation of the Laws—Officials Warn the Manager of the Healer to Leave the State—Manager Sherman Writes an Explanation of His Methods Which Will Be a Defense.

The New Jersey medical authorities are now arrayed against the Boy Phenomenon and threaten to use all their power to compel him to give up his lucrative practice in this city and depart from the State. The initistory steps against this wonderful young healer were taken by two Plainfield physicians, who claim that the young man has no right to attempt to use his alleged power and receive compensation for it. The reason they give is that he is not a practicing physician, has never passed any examinations for the same, and is altogether unfit to attend to the ills of the people of Plainfield.

Charles Dwinell, of New Hampshire, is the real name of the Boy Phenomenon, as he is called. He came here over a month ago, and after giving a free exhibition of his so-called "animal magnetism," by improving the condition of the subjects brought upon the stage, he opened private offices at the Revere House, where he has been ever since. The story of his remarkable cures have attracted many to him for treatment. Some, it is claimed, he has cured; others he has improved, while some have been beyond the reach of his treatment. At any rate, his practice has been large, and the local physicians have suffered in consequence.

Last Monday, Mr. Sherman, his manager, received an official notification from Dr. Godfrey, of Camden, secretary of the State Board of Medical Examiners, informing him that complaint had been made against the Boy Phenomenon by two practising physicians in Plainfield. The substance of the complaint was that he had no right to attempt to cure anybody without being a regular physician, which he is not.

Mr. Sherman responded with a complete description of the methods used. Wednesday there came another communication from Dr. Godfrey saying that if the young man did not stop practicing in Plainfield or any other city or town in the State and leave at once he would be prosecuted by the State Board.

To a Press reporter this morning Mr. Sherman was very free to speak. They intend to remain in Plainfield, he said, as long as there was a demand for the healing powers of the young man. They also intend to fight any attempt to drive him out of the State.

Mr. Sherman's defence was very simple and ingenious. The Boy Phenomenon is accompanied by a physician who has right to practice anywhere. This physician examines all the patients and prescribes the magnetic rubbing by the Boy Phenomenon. This, Mr. Sherman claims, is no different than prescribing a pill or tonic. Then doctors frequently recommend massage treatment.

FIRST BLOOD.

Louis Drake Hurt as He was Boarding a Training Ship.

Bound Brook, March 18.—The first blood in the war for Cuba has been shed. The victim was Louis L. Drake, of this place, son of the illustrious Mayor of Lincoln, Silas D. Drake. 'Twas no steel projectile fired by some crafty enemy of the Stars and Stripes that drew blood, but a falling spar from the rigging of the training ship New Hampshire, lying at anchor at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Drake is a veteran of the Seventh Regiment of New York. He is now a member of the New York Naval Reserve. Last evening he went in to attend drill on the New Hampshire. As he marched over the gang plank with his mates, a heavy spar fell, striking him on the ankle and cutting a deep gash. The blood flowed freely. Some of the sailors carried him to the sick-bay where his wound was dressed. He is now able to hobble about.

ARMY ON WAR BASIS

Bill to Be Introduced at Request of the War Department.

FOR THE FULL STRENGTH

The Plan Has Been Carefully Gone Over by the Department and Will Be Presented in the House by Mr. Hill—Three Battalion Organization the Basis.

Washington, March 18.—The largest measure of preparation yet made by the War Department to meet the contingencies of the future has just been completed. It is the preparation of a bill providing, among other sections, for the placing of the army on a war footing for the full strength of 104,000 men.

The bill has been carefully gone over by the War Department, and will be introduced in the House by Representative Hull, chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, who, it is expected, will urge it vigorously inasmuch as it is an administration measure.

The basis of the bill will be the well known three battalion organizations, that is the ideal peace status of the army, but provision is made for the exercise by the President of full power to increase each one of the existing companies from seventy-five men, the present strength, to 250 men.

In view of the possibility of a conflict with Spain, considerable interest centres just now in the strength of the militia force, which would be called upon in case of necessity. The latest report to Congress on the militia strength was made to Congress by Acting Secretary of War Meikeljohn, and was based on returns received at the Aujutant-General's office for 1897. This statemnt shows that the total organized strength of the militia of the United States is 114,362 men, while the number of men available for military duty (unorganized), of which a report was made at the time that the statement of the militia was sent in, was 10,201,339.

FOR THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.

Yousouf, the Turkish Wrestler, and Ernest Roeber Will Wrestle.

New York, March 18.—The managers of the two famous strong men and wrestlers, Yousouf and Roeber, are announced to meet to-morrow and make final arrangements for a wrestling match for the championship of the world.

Yousouf, or "the terrible Turk," as he is called, has conquered all the famous strong men of Europe, and the Orient. He has issued a challenge to any who desires to meet him and has placed $500 on deposit as a forfeit should he back out.

Ernest Roeber, the American champion wrestler, who is announced to meet the Turk, has won many victories in this country. He says he feels confident of defeating the Turkish wonder.

THE AMAZONAS READY.

Will Sail Under Sealed Orders as Speedily as Possible.

London, March 18.—The war ship Amazonas will be formally transferred to the United States to-day at Gravesend. Lieutenant-Commander Colwell, the United States naval attache here, will take possession of the vessel on behalf of the Government, and will receive the ship from her Brazilian commander. A crew from the San Francisco will then be marched on board and the Brazilian flag will be hauled down and the Brazilians will be landed.

The executive officer of the San Francisco will probably take command of the Amazonas, and she will sail for the United States as speedily as possible under sealed orders. It is supposed she is going to the nearest American station, where her crew can be reinforced.

The Amazonas had just been provisioned and coaled for her trip to Brazil. The United States Government purchased all her supplies.

Pretty Actress to Wed a Banker.

Pittsburg, March 18.—It is announced here that Claudia Carlstadt, the contralto of Frank Daniels's "Idol's Eye" Company, is to marry Albert Wheeler, Jr., millionaire banker and broker of New York. Miss Carlstadt is authority for the announcement. Mr. Wheeler, who is 23 years of age, lives in the Osborne Apartments, Seventh avenue and Fifty-seventh street, with his parents. He is said to be worth $2,000,000 in his own right.

Torpedo Boat Destroyer.

London, March 18.—According to a special dispatch from Sunderland, the United States Government has purchased a torpedo boat destroyer from a shipbuilder of that place, named Doxford. It is further said that the torpedo boat destroyer purchased by the United States at Sunderland is to have a speed of thirty knots per hour. Men are reported to be working on her day and night.

Spain Buys a Cruiser.

London, March 18.—A special dispatch from Rome says the Italian Government has sold the armored cruiser Varese to Spain. An earlier dispatch from Rome said the Italian Minister of Marine, Admiral Brin, has informed the Spanish Ambassador to Italy, Count de Bonomar, that his request that Italy will sell three war ships to Spain will be discussed at the next Cabinet meeting.

INTERNATIONAL CHESS BY CABLE.

New York, March 18.—While the Government authorities of the United States and Spain are contemplating war the American and British chess teams are preparing to enjoy a "quiet game" of chess. Preparations have been completed and the teams are ready for the battle royal for the handsome trophy presented to the winner of last year's game by Sir George Newnes. Play will begin to-day and continue till to-morrow evening.

England this year has selected a very strong team and it will take some very fine playing on the part of the Americans if they care to win the trophy. The English team consists of J. H. Blackburne, Amos Burn, H. B. Atkins, G. E. H. Bellingham, H. H. Jackson, C. D. Locock, D. Y. Hills, H. Jacobs, H. Caro and H. W. Trenchard. Of these neither Burn, Caro nor Trenchard participated last year. The team as thus constituted, is a powerful one in every respect, superior to last year's, and one that will be very hard to beat. Amos Burn, who was beaten by Showalter in 1896, has just won first prize in the amateur tournament in Wales, beating out Bellingham, the former winner. He is now in tip-top trim and it is quite likely that he will be again pitted against the Kentuckian in order to give him a chance to obtain revenge. The English players will be in the Grand Hall of the Hotel Cecil.

The men who will compose the American team are D. G. Baird, New York; J. F. Barry, Boston; Eugene Delmar, New York; J. A. Galbreath, New Orleans; A. B. Hedges, New York; E. Hymes, New York; H. H. Pillsbury, New York; A. K. Robinson, Philadelphia; J. W. Showalter, Georgetown, Ky., and F. K. Young, Boston. Reserves, J. H. Hanham and Louis Schmidt of New York.

Professor Rice of the Manhattan Club will again act in the capacity of umpire for the British team in Brooklyn, while Baron Albert von Rothschild of Vienna and Champion Lasker will, as before, fill the positions of referee and adjudicator, respectively. The Brooklyn Chess Club will have charge of all the arrangements at this end. President Hagen of the club has charge of the United States team.

BLANCHE K. BRUCE DEAD.

Register of Treasury Succumbs to Complication of Diseases.

Washington, March 18.—Blanche K. Bruce, Register of Treasury, died yesterday. His death had been expected for several days. He suffered from a complication of stomach troubles which at first appeared not serious, but last week he lost strength steadily, and toward the close of the week it became apparent that his vitality was ebbing rapidly.

Blanche K. Bruce was born in Prince Edward County, Virginia, March 1, 1841. He was of African descent, was born a slave and received the rudiments of education from the tutor of his master's son. He taught school for a time in Hannibal, Mo., and later became a planter in Mississippi, and was appointed a member of the Mississippi Levee Board. He was elected Sheriff of his county and subsequently Superintendent of Education.

In 1873 he was elected United States Senator as a Republican, and served until 1881. He was a member of every Republican national convention held since 1868. In 1881 he was appointed by President Garfield Register of the Treasury, and later was appointed Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia. About six months ago he was again appointed Register of the Treasury by President McKinley. Next after Fred Douglass Mr. Bruce had long been regarded as perhaps the most conspicuous man of his race.

BROKE OLEOMARGARINE LAW.

Two Men Fined and Sentenced to Prison by a Philadelphia Court.

Philadelphia, March 18.—Joseph Wilkins, of the firm of Wilkins & Co., oleomargarine dealers of Washington, D. C., and Howard Butler, an employe of the firm, who were recently convicted of violating the laws governing the sale of oleomargarine, were yesterday sentenced by Judge Butler in the United States District Court.

Wilkins was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,500 and the costs of prosecution and undergo an imprisonment of six months, and Butler was fined $500 and given four months' imprisonment.

It was shown at the trial that Wilkins had frequently violated the law, as in this case, by removing Government stamps and labels from packages of oleomargarine, but had never before been convicted.

Tons of Food for Cuba.

New York, March 18.—Tons of food were sent to Cuba yesterday on the Ward line steamship City of Washington, but according to the officers of the Central Cuban Relief Committee this supply will be exhausted almost as soon as it is received. Mr. Klopsch, secretary of the National Committee, cabled from Havana that 500 tons of cornmeal, 50 tons of bacon and 10 tons of codfish are needed immediately. This has been accrued, and most of it was sent yesterday, the balance going by other steamship to sail this week.

May Be 20 Victims in Chicago Fire.

Chicago, March 18.—Three burned and mangled bodies were yesterday taken from the ruins of the building on Wabash avenue, which was destroyed by the fire Wednesday. This brings the number of known dead to six, while fourteen persons reported as missing had not been accounted for at a late hour last night.

REPORT ON ITS WAY

Verdict of the Court of Inquiry Expected Soon at Washington.

MAY ARRIVE TO-MORROW

The Report Forwarded in the Care of a Naval Officer—The Exact Time When It Will Reach Washington is Kept a Secret.

Washington, March 18.—On the authority of a Cabinet officer, it can be stated that the report of the Maine Court of Inquiry is on its way from Key West to Washington. The Cabinet officers stated that when the court arrived at Key West on board the Mangrove it reported to Admiral Sicard that it had completed its report, and was ready to send it to Washington.

This word was received Wednesday, and it was the first intention to have a synopsis made of the document and have it cabled in cipher from Key West, but after the President had consulted with a number of the Cabinet officers, he decided that it was best to have the report come in manuscript, and he then ordered that word be sent to Admiral Sicard to dispatch the document direct to Washington in care of a naval officer.

This message was sent to Adimarl Sicard, and word was received that the naval officer with the report left Key West Wednesday. It is thought advisable at this time to withhold the name of the officer, and as a number of the surviving officers of the Maine left Key West Wednesday the identity of the message bearer cannot be learned.

For obvious reasons the exact time when the report will reach Washington is kept a secret, but it is thought if close connections were made by the officer at Tampa he will be able to reach this city some time to-morrow at the very latest. It takes about thirty-six hours to come from Tampa to Washington, and it requires twelve to fourteen hours to go from Key West to Tampa by boat.

The reports from Key West state that the naval officers of the Maine left there on the steamer Olivette Wednesday night, and that there was a great demonstration when the steamer departed. The dispatches also describe the great activity at that place and tell of numerous conferences between Admiral Sicard and Captain Sampson, and finally the departure of the seven naval officers.

The Cabinet officer mentioned above stated that while the document now on its way to Washington may not be the full report, with all the appendices, exhibits and memoranda, it will in substance be the full finding of the Court of Inquiry and will be all that is required to give the President and Congress full information on the subject.

Secretary Long expressed some surprise that the news of the departure of the report had gotten out, and stated that he did not expect it would be made public until next week. In fact, the administration had been anxious to keep the fact of the departure of the report quiet, so that it could be received this week, and digested by the President and Cabinet before being made public.

It is learned at the Navy Department that it was hardly possible for the naval officer to reach Washington with the report before to-morrow.

While it is not known positively what naval officer has the report in his keeping, it is surmised from the orders that Lieut. Catlin, First Lieutenant of Marines, is the officer intrusted with it. The other six officers have been ordered to their homes to await orders, while Lieut. Catlin is ordered to report by telegraph to Washington on his arrival at Tampa.

Special Report Sent to President.

Washington, March 18.—A dispatch from Key West last night says:

"It is learned to-night that a special report of the court, which have not yet been agreed upon, but it is in the nature of a communication for the use of the President, which he may or may not make public, as he sees fit.

"In any event it will prepare the President for what the board will report, and enable him to take measures accordingly, as the court will find that the Maine was blown up from the outside.

"The full report, it is said to-night, will not be formulated and in the hands of the Secretary of the Navy for some days yet."

ALLIANCE WITH ENGLAND.

Lord Beresford Thinks the Hour Has Come for an Alliance.

London, March 18.—Rear Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, member of Parliament for York City, in an interview, warmly advocated an Anglo-American alliance as "a move in the direction of peace and calculated to immensely develop trade." He added:

"Such an alliance is natural and I believe the mere fact of its conclusion would deter other from attacking any inadequately defended interests of either country. Now is the time to accomplish it, when the advantages are apparent to both countries. A decade hence, when, if she desires, the United States can have become a first class naval power, and will, perhaps, have adopted the policy of free trade, it might not be worth her while to undertake the responsibilities of an alliance with Great Britain.

"When America has built her navy she will be in a position to enforce her demands, which will not take her long now with her enormous latent resources and mechanical and engineering facilities. An Anglo-American alliance would be the most powerful factor in the world for peace and the development of commerce."

Speaking of the possibilities of the United States going to war, Lord Beresford remarked: "If she ever does, no matter what happens at the beginning, she must eventually win, because of the enthusiasm and intense patriotism of her people."

Barry Gets the Decision.

Chicago, March 18.—Jimmy Barry, of Chicago, and Johnny Connors, of Springfield, fought six rounds here last night, Barry getting the decision.

Jack Everhard, of New Orleans, got the decision over Kid McGleen, of Philadelphia, after five rounds.

It would be surprising

if, with our immense business, we did not handle the choice of the hundred odd makes of Pianos that are manufactured. We do.

The seven best in their different grades, that America produces—CHICKERINGS, GABLERS, HARDMANS, VOSES, STERLINGS, STANDARDS and HUNTINGTONS—are here.

There is absolutely no other as good as the first named; there may be other makes that will equal the last six, but they will cost you from $75 to $150 more than we would ask for the same grade and quality.

PROCTOR'S TRIP TO CUBA.

The Senator Makes a Statement Concerning His Visit to the Island.

Washington, March 18.—Senator Proctor, of Vermont, who returned last Sunday from an extended trip to and through the Island of Cuba, yesterday afternoon made a statement to the Senate of his observations on the island. He began by saying that more importance had been attached to his visit than necessary, but thought a public statement would be beneficial.

The only thing, he said, that he had said about the matter to the President was that he was going and asked if there was any objection to it and was told that there was none. He had letters from Assistant Secretary of State Day. He said that General Lee and other United States representatives in Cuba afforded him opportunity to secure information. He denied that he made the statement that the Maine was blown up from the outside, but might have said that was the opinion in Havana. The Senator thought there was no definite information to be obtained upon this feature. Outside of Havana there was desolation and misery. People were surrounded by trochas and controlled by forts or blockhouses.

His observations, he said, were in the four western provinces. Outside of the trochas and forts there were no habitations or people living. The Spaniards, he said, held in the four provinces only what their army sits on.

Senator Proctor described at some length the condition of the reconcentrados, saying one-half of them had died owing to the manner in which they had been kept in the small houses and sanitation. It was no wonder that half had died, he added. He went to Cuba, he said, thinking the condition of the people had been overdrawn, but found their situation terrible. What he saw he could not tell so others could see.

In one place in Havana, the Senator said, he saw 400 emaciated people lying on stone floors with little clothing. The children had no clothing.

Mr. Proctor stated that the food supplies sent from the United States had greatly relieved the sufferings. There was no telling, however, when the supplies would cease to be needed unless the war should soon come to an end. Gen. Blanco, he declared, was an amiable and kind man, but he knew all Cubans were insurgents at heart, and therefore rather rigorous military regulations had to be enforced.

American people may be assured, he continued, that their bounty will reach the destitute and he added the condition of the reconcentrados will not be changed until peace comes.

Speaking of the military power of Spain in Cuba, Mr. Proctor said that there were now 60,000 soldiers there—all that were left of 200,000 that had been sent there. He described them as for the most part young and small—not weighing on an average over 130 pounds.

He understood that they never saw a drill. He had seen perhaps 10,000 Spanish troops who had not a piece of artillery or a tent, and who had little or no equipment for a field campaign. Their cavalry horses were scrubby little native ponies, tough and hardy, but generally in wretched condition, reminding him of the mounts of Don Quixote and his squire.

Of the 1,600,000 people in Cuba, Mr. Proctor thought that not over 200,000 exclusive of the soldiers give allegiance to the Spanish Government. Not over 25 per cent. of the people of the island were white; the balance were colored, and the white population had been gradually decreasing.

In conclusion he said:

"I have endeavored to state what I saw and heard. It was the spectacle of a million and a half of people—the entire native population of Cuba—struggling for freedom and deliverance, with practical unanimity, from the worst mis-government of which I ever had knowledge.

"Whether our action ought to be influenced by any of these things, and if so, how far, is another question. I am not in favor of annexation. Remedial steps may safely be left to an American President and the American people."

Mr. Proctor's statement led to no comment in the Senate.

Seeks Protection for Cuba.

Washington, March 18.—General Wheeler, of Alabama, introduced in the House yesterday afternoon the following resolution:

Resolved, That a joint committee, consisting of five members of the Senate, to be appointed by the Vive-President, and five members of the House, to be appointed by the Speaker, be created to report without delay to the two Houses an address to th Government if Spain declaring in firm diplomatic language that Americans and American interests in Cuba must be protected, and that the atrocities now being perpetrated on that island must cease.

Resolved, That the Executive be requested to immediately transmit this address to the Government of Spain by such method as he may deem advisable, together with a letter of indorsement and approval of this action in the part of Congress.

The resolution was referred to committee.

Money for Rapid Fire Guns.

Washington, March 18.—The first disbursement under the recent act of Congress appropriating $50,000,000 for the national defense has been made by the Treasury Department on an executive order for $145,995, to be cabled to London to the credit of Sir William Armstrong in part payment for twelve rapid-fire guns, including mounts and ammunition. The purchase price, including mounts, etc., is $21,000 for each gun, or $252,000 for the twelve. In addition to this payment the Treasury Department to-day cabled Rothschilds at London $1,689,621 in full payment for the Brazilian cruiser Amazonas and in part payment for the Abrouall.

For New Revenue Cutters.

Washington, March 18.—The Senate Committee on Finance yesterday authorized a favorable report on Senator Frye's proposed amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill, providing for the construction of five new revenue cutters to be located as follows: One on the Oregon coast, one on the Gulf of Mexico, one for the Charleston (S. C.), district, and one for Boston and Philadelphia harbors.

TO CLAIM ACCIDENT

WILL REFUSE INDEMNITY

Any Demand of the United States Based on an Outside Explosion Will Be "Indignantly Repelled"—Semi-Official's Note Made Public in Madrid.

Madrid, March 18.—The following semi-official note was issued here yesterday:

"The report of the Spanish Commission on the Maine is not yet known, but the statement of several technical officers, who have made a close examination of the scene of the disaster, show that it was indisputably due to an internal accident. American assertions to the contrary are therefore deplored in official quarters, as tending to mislead public opinion and render the situation still more difficult from the standpoint of maintaining friendly relations between the two countries.

"It may be regarded as certain that should the American technical commission present a report declaring the disaster to be due to an external explosion the public here will refuse to accept such a finding, and any demand for an indemnity based thereon will be indignantly repelled by Spain."

Will Not Withdraw Our Fleet.

Washington, March 18.—Senor Polo, the Spanish Minister, called at the State Department yesterday afternoon and held a conference with Secretary Day. During the consultation everybody was refused admittance to the Secretary's office, and several foreign ministers were informed that the Secretary was engaged with the Spanish Minister and could not be seen.

Neither Secretary Day nor Minister Polo would say anything about what took place at the meeting, but it is pretty certain that Judge Day informed the Minister of the refusal of the United States to withdraw the American fleet from Florida waters and the declining to submit to the other requests of the Spanish Government.

It was officially given out at the Navy Department that a new division of the White Squadron has been authorized. The fleet is to be composed of the Brooklyn, Columbia and the Minneapolis. They are to form at Hampton Roads immediately. No particulars are given, and it is not stated who will be placed in command.

It is believed that the formation is for the defense of the National Capital and the city of Baltimore, which will be commanded at the mouth of the Chesapeake. The order is looked upon as of the greatest importance.

Mrs. Thurston's Body Arrives.

Washington, March 18.—Senator Thurston arrived in Washington last night with the body of Mrs. Thurston, who died at Sagua la Grande, Cuba, on Monday last. At the railway station he was met by a Congressional committee consisting of the Nebraska delegation and a number of old friends. The body will be forwarded to-day at 3 o'clock to Omaha, where the interment will take place. Senator Thurston accompanied by his son Clarence and a party of friends, among whom will be Representatives of the House and Senate, and probably Assistant Secretary of War Meiklejohn, will accompany the body.

Daly Stood Off Lavigne.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 18.—George (Kid) Lavigne found Jack Daly, the Wilmington light-weight an exceedingly tough customer last night. The men fought twenty furious rounds, and at the end the referee declared the bout a draw amid mingled cheers and hisses. Every inning was a fast one. First one would secure an advantage and then the other would even it up. Men familiar with fights say it was one of the prettiest encounters ever seen. The last round was like the others, a fast affair, and Daly clearly had the best of it.

Sentenced for Two Years.

Philadelphia, March 18.—Eugene J. Lindsey, former prothonotary of the city courts, who was convicted of conspiracy with several others in issuing fraudulent naturalization certificates, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Butler to two years' imprisonment, a fine of $2,000 and costs. Richard W. Merrick, formerly assistant clerk in the court, who pleaded guilty of conspiracy with Lindsey, was sentenced to imprisonment for one year and six months and to pay a fine of $1,000. Henry Casper, an ex-policeman, who also pleaded guilty of conspiracy in the same case, received a sentence of one year and one month and a fine of $500.

Gold Man to Lead Democrats.

Atlanta, Ga., March 18.—The Democratic State Executive Committee here yesterday, although composed entirely of Free Silver men, elected Fleming G. Dubignon, a Standard Gold man, as chairman. Dubignon always has been an enthusiastic Cleveland supporter, but subscribed perfirce to the Chicago platform committee.

Billings Honorably Retired.

Washington, March 18.—The order by Secretary Long that all proceedings if the court martial that recently tried and convicted Pay Director Billings be stricken from the record of the department, gives great satisfaction to the many friends of Pay Director Billings. The accused officer has been honorably retired.

The O'Higgins Not Sold.

London, March 18.—The correspondent of the Times at Santiago de Chili cables as follows:

"The Chilian Government authorizes me to deny the sale of the O'Higgins. No offer for any ship would be listened to until pending international questions are definitely arranged.

Cubans and Independence.

New York, March 18.—Tomas Estrada Palma, the Cuban Delegate to this country, has made an official announcement that the Cubans, notwithstanding opposite reports will never accept anything from Spain, but absolute freedom. They would, he says, prefer to be exterminated.

AN IMPORTANT LAW.

The only fear that North Plainfield entertains towards not being able to build a new school house, sufficient to accommodate the scholars that are attending the public school, comes from a realization that in every community there are the parsimonious whose ideas of frugal administration of public affairs fail to fit in with the actual needs of the community. But the bill passed by the Assembly Wednesday, formulated by Mr. Benny, may overcome that condition. The measure provides that every municipality must provide school room for at least seventy five per cent of the children of school age in the limits, and does not leave it at the discretion of the voters to decide the question of providing sufficient room. It makes it imperative. At the rate of North Plainfield's growth it will not be long before such a condition would confront the borough, and if the bill becomes a law, as it ought to, the niggardly element of taxpayers could be easily bested. Happy to say, however, the disposition of North Plainfield's citizens is to provide sufficient school room without quibbling dissatrously to the plans

TIME LIMIT ON FRANCHISES.

What might properly be denominated one of the most important bills of the session passed the Assembly Wednesday afternoon. The bill, if it becomes a law, will revolutionize the granting of franchises, as it probibits the conforing of any municipal franchise for a longer period than twenty five years. What the fate of the bill will be in the Senate it is hard to tell. A plan abolishing the granting of franchises in perpetuity would certainly be regarded as a radical step, and in the Senate there is a large element which votes on general principle against any proposition having even the appearance of curtailing the powers and privileges of corporations. This element will of course vote against this bill with little regard of what it does or does not provide.

Catering to all classes of newspaper readers, The Daily Press tomorrow commences a feature that will be appreciated by a host of its most ardent and faithful friends and supporters—the women. Arrangements have just been completed whereby we will be able to present a department of woman's news each day. The articles will include subjects in the whole range of woman's endeavors and duties, prepared by the leading woman writers of the present day. One particular feature of this department will be the weekly fashion letters of the New York Sun, which are copyrighted and illustrated—considered by the well dressed women as about the best of their kind that appear in print.

KEEP UP THE INTEREST.

"No quorum present." That's the excuse given for the failure to hold a scheduled meeting of the managers of the Board of Trade. In effect, no doubt, it is a lack of interest; or, at least, a lack of interest and activity that is vital to the success of the organization designed to make Plainfield a better industrial and commercial centre. Too many Boards of Trade are afflicted with the ailment—"no quorum present." Members of the Board of Trade must not depend upon the other fellow to look after the affairs of the organization if they expect to succeed. The present Board of Trade started out very well. Let it keep up the interest first manifested.

—Edward White made yesterday the largest purchase of matting he ever made. The matting was sold by order of an importer, who had to have money. Mr. White bought over ten thousand yards and bought them at twenty-five per cent less than they cost to import. It means for his customers a saving of twenty-five per cent on all matting they purchase.

A FINE OLD CHINESE GENTLEMAN.

A fine old Chinese gentleman
Of most exemplary mind,
Who wears a flowered robe of silk
And long pig tail behind:
Who worships his dead ancestors,
As pious heathen ought,
And tries to mind his business
As good Confucius taught:
Is sad, ah! very sad today—
Because from East to West
His privacy's invaded so
He never can find rest.

This wise old Chinese gentleman
Lives on a grand estate,
And in his soul considers all
The world within its gate.
He scorns confusion, rush and noise,
And loves to contemplate
The lives of his forefathers, and
Their ways to emulate.
But, sad to tell, because he is
Not fully up-to-date
A grabbing mob is hastening
His land to confiscate.

This oriental gentleman,
Who loves not strife but ease,
Munificently tries with gifts
This grabbing mob to please.
And asks, alone, with tearful eyes,
The right to meditate,
In silken robe, behind the bars
Of his ancestral gate.
But ah! how sad, the air resounds
With naught but jibes and jeers
Alarming to the sensitive
Tympanum of his ears.

Some say this Chinese gentleman
Has "darkish tricks and ways"
Which might arpear "peculiar" if Examined by X rays.
But, don't you see, his ancestors
Ne'er saw this dazzling light,
So, obvious'y, what it shows
Could never be called right.
"Where ignorance is bliss," 'tis hard
That wisdom should be thrust:
And, after all, to wear out may
Be sadder than to rust.

Washington G. Fair.

PASSING COMMENT.

A little circumstance that occurred in the East End last Saturday evening bore evidence of the manner in which many of the alleged attempted hold-ups really take place. It was 7:30 o'clock that evening and the fire alarm had just blown, when a young woman living in the neighborhood started down one of the streets. As she walked along she heard hurried footsteps behind her. Looking back she saw a man with his hat pulled over his eyes hurrying after her. She walked faster. Then the man broke into a run The young woman, thoroughly frightened by this time and sure that the man was after her, ran as fast as she could. For nearly a block the apparent chase continued. Then the man stopped and kneeling by a tree, apparently retied his shoestrings. Seeing that she was pursued no longer, the young woman slowed down to a walk. Turning a corner she saw nothing more of the stranger. Now it happened that the supposed highwayman was no other than a respectable and very inoffensive young man living on that street. He started for the fire and never noticed that there was a woman in front of him He finally decided to run and started off until his shoestring came untied and he had to stop to retie it. It was not until it was all over that he learned that he had been taken for some villianous personage intent on some horrible act.

Ten years ago at this season of the year New Jersey was buried under two feet of snow, the remains of the famous blizzard of '88. The blizzard itself occurred just ten years ago last Saturday. There are many who remember the exciting experiences of that eventful week, and the stories of what they passed through have formed the topic for conversation for many years since. The storm was the greatest one that has visited this part of the country within the memory of this generation, and will stand as an event in the lives of those who passed through the blizzard week, where it was at its worst.

THEATRICAL.

"The Good Mr Best," with all its novel features, presented by an exceedingly strong company, will play an engagement at Music Hall tomorrow evening. The announcement of the coming of this comedy should be the means of drawing out the entire theatre going public, as it is without a doubt one of the strongest and most satisfactory comedies on the road. The sale of seats will open at the usual place three days in advance and the regular house prices will prevail for this engagement.

"The Good Mr. Best" management announce a special performance to morrow for children and ladies. Prices are reduced—children, 10 cents, adults, 25 cents—and every school child presenting a ticket will be given a bag of candy.

The theatregoers of Plainfield will have a rare treat during the first four nights of next week in the way of a genuine hypnotic entertainment at Stillman Music Hall. The company is composed of the four leading hypnotists of the world, headed by X. La-Motte Sage, who is a deep scientific scholar, and as an entertainer he has no equal. The production is presented with elaborate costumes and electric effects and the scenes are new and up-to-date.

Guy Brothers minstrels in Music Hall last night was a clean up-to-date performance.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, March 19—It is almost a settled fact that Prof. Witney will not be superintendent of the public schools another year. Just who will be selected to take his place has not yet been decided, but it will not be Miss Imogene Smith, a teacher, who was reported in the Plainfield News as being a candidate. The school meeting last Tuesday evening was the most harmonious held in years, in spite of the fact that the News reported the meeting falsely and incorrect Everything passed off without a dissenting vote. It is the Board of Education that decides who shall be superintendent and who shall act as teachers, and not the people of the borough at large. Miss Smith has never had any idea of being superintendent and it is not likely that she would take the position should it be offered to her.

Last evening at the M. E. church the Ladies' Aid Society held a very enjoyable time. The members each brought in one dollar and related the experience of earning it. There were many amusing experiences and a goodly sum was realized. The members of the Junior League made a report of the collections made on selling blocks of a quilt made. From this source a goodly sum was received. The balance of the evening was devoted to sociability, during which a fine programme was presented.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.—Prov. iv: 23. March 20, 1898.

1. "At that time Herod the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus." In Mark vi, 14, it is written that His name was spread abroad, and in Luke ix, 7, it is said that Herod was perplexed because that it was said of some that John was risen from the dead. The context in Mark and Luke would indicate that it was about the time of the sending forth of the twelve. It seems to me that the heart thought for us is that something of the words and works of Jesus by some means reached Herod. If we are redeemed by His blood, it is that through us the fame of Him may be far and wide made known. He brought Israel out of Egypt, dividing the waters of the Red Sea, leading them through the desert and drying up Jordan before them to make His glorious name known, that the many might be blessed in Him (Isa. lxiii, 12, 14; Joshua iv, 24).

2. "And said unto His rsevants, This is John the Baptist; he is risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him." It is said in Mark vi, 20, that Herod heard John gladly and did many things, knowing that he was a just and holy man, but as neither hearing nor doing will avail unless Christ is actually received into the heart (I John v, 12; John i, 12).

3. "For Herod had laid hold on John and bound him and put him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife." These are among the seemingly strange things. That God who controls all things, even the devil, for there can be nothing beyond His control, should permit Joseph to be stolen, sold into slavery, falsely accused and imprisoned; David to be hunted as a partridge upon the mountains; Jeremiah to know the horrors of the dungeon mire, and John the Baptist, His own herald, none greater born of woman (Math. xi, 11), to suffer imprisonment and death.

4. "For John said unto him, It is not lawful for thee to have her." Therefore, for this faithfulness, he is put in prison. Would it have been better for him to have said nothing about this sin? Might he have said, It is no affair of mine? They are the children of the devil anyway, and to him they are going, whether Herodias lives with Herod or with Philip? Some would say so, and there are no doubt many things in which we are to take no part, as they are not given to us to meddle with, but in this case John was brought face to face with the sin, and either had to be blind to it for peace's sake or speak faithfully for Christ's sake.

5. "And when he would have put him to death he feared the multitude, because they counted him as a prophet." How full of fears this wretched specimen of self indulgent humanity was. He feared the woman under whose control he had placed himself for lust's sake. He feared the people over whom he was placed, and he evidently feared the hereafter, for he did many things, and doubtless would have done more if such doing would have made him sure of heaven without requiring him to give up his darling sin.

6, 7. "But when Herods' birthday was kept the daughter of Herodias danced before them and pleased Herod. Whereupon he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask." Feast days and birthdays must be kept, the entertainment business must go on, no matter what becomes of Christ or His heralds. We are sure that He was not invited to this feast, and neither was His faithful John. This was like Belshazzar's feast, the devil's own, and he knew what he was up to. He was running this thing to accomplish his purpose. How well he enabled that poor, godless girl to dance that day! How he enabled her to captivate the sinful heart of Herod, and to lead him in his excitement to make her this great promise, and all to secure the death of John!

8. "And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger." We read in II. Chron. xxii, 3, concerning a certain king that "his mother was his counselor to do wickedly." We know also that Rebekah was neither her own friend nor her son's friend when she counseled him to lie to his father. Lying and deceit have the same author as lust, and envy, and hatred, and murder. Let us resist the devil lest he use even us as he did Simon Peter, when he said, "Pity Thyself, Lord" (Math. xvi, 22, margin).

9. "And the king was sorry; nevertheless for the oath's sake and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her." His honor before his guests was at stake and he dared not show himself a man. Perhaps there was no man in him. It may have been all beast, all carnal of the lowest kind. He could truthfully have said, I cannot give what is not mine, and human life is not in my power to give or take. That, however, was too noble for such a creature, and he dared not go against Herodias. We have all had other masters; can we now truly say, "One is my Master, even Christ, whose I am and whom I serve?"

10. "And he sent and beheaded John in the prison." Not long before John had sent messengers to Jesus inquiring if He was the Christ, or if there was yet another to be looked for. Jesus wrought miracles and sent the messengers to tell John what they had seen and heard and added, "Blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in Me" (chapter xi, 6). We have no record that Jesus ever went to see him. Now is heard the tramp of feet. Some one is coming to see him. Is it the Lord and Master? His cell door swings open. He is wanted, not for earth, but for heaven. In a moment it is over, for the damsel awaits her gift and angels and redeemed spirits wait to welcome the faithful messenger to bliss eternal and indescribable.

11. "And his head was brought in a charger (or on a dish) and given to the damsel, and she brought it to her mother." Did ever mother ask or a daughter carry such a grewsome dish? What did they do with it? How did they treat it? Well, the devil accomplished his purpose and John's sojourn in a mortal body was ended. But can it be that the devil has the least idea of the bliss of the redeemed when he is allowed to kill their bodies? If so, would he be so desirous to usher them into such glory?

Lesson For the Week Beginning March 20. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, Strange Ways In Which God Leads Us.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Acts xiii, 45-49.

It is not in human nature to enjoy pain or to be pleased when troubles and dangers hedge in our path. Yet we often see, after we have passed through difficulties and trials, that they have been great blessings to us and that in no other way could we have been so benefited.

It seemed strange that the Jews of Antioch in Pisidia should refuse to listen to Paul and Barnabas. It was a trial to patience and faith and must have sorely tested the charity of heart and judgment of these Christian messengers to be so rejected by their own countrymen and coreligionists. But it led to the preaching of the gospel to the heathen and to the establishment of the Christian church on foundations of breadth and depth impossible if Jews alone had remained the influential ones in the work. The persecution of Paul and his sufferings in this region, especially at Lystra, where he was almost killed, must have had a deep effect upon the young man Timothy. He became converted and for many years was Paul's traveling companion and most intimate friend. The last message ever [illegible]en by the apostle from his place of imprisonment in Rome was to this faithful helper and son in the gospel.

Pleasant paths are not always the most beneficial. When God seems to lead us in ways that are difficult and filled with peril or pain, it is wise to cling closely to Him in patience and faith. Some great blessing never before realized is often in waiting at the end of the pathway so narrow and hard.

Bishop D. A. Goodsell.

many, Norway, south Germany, Sweden and Switzerland. He has held each conference twice and by personal inspection of each field has acquired knowledge of conditions, prospects and needs which will be of great value in planning the future operations of the church in these fields. He consummated the union of the Wesleyan Methodist missions of Germany with our own as one of his most important official acts. This was done after full debate and the consent of the Wesleyan conference and our own general conference as well as of all the churches and ministers connected with the mission. One of the most interesting exercises possible for the League is to have a series of evenings devoted to the representation of the various missions of our church.

Be Still.

Our modern life is full of hustle and rush and bustle. But noise is not an index of work done. The best machines often work most quietly. No soul can grow unless it takes time for quiet thinking alone with God. One can be too busy. There is such a thing as attending too many meetings and doing too much work for others. Whoever neglects to cultivate intimate acquaintance with God in quietness and retirement alone fails to use the best means of growth in grace given to us. Stop the talking and doing for a little while; be still and know God.

The Joy of Service.

To be at work, to do things for the world, to turn the current of things about us at our will, to make our existence a positive element, even though it be no bigger than a grain of sand in this great system where we live—that is a new joy of which the idle man knows no more than the mole knows of sunshine or the serpent of the eagle's triumphant flight into the upper air. The man who knows, indeed, what it is to act, to work, cries out, "This alone is to live!"—Phillips Brooks.

Harsh Judgments.

Time was when I believed that wrong
In others to detect
Was part of genius and a gift
To cherish, not reject.

Now, better taught by Thee, O Lord,
This truth dawns on my mind,
The best effect of heavenly light
Is earth's false eyes to blind.

How Thou canst think so well of us,
Yet be the God Thou art,
Is darkness to my intellect,
But sunshine to my heart.

Yet habits linger in the soul;
More grace, O Lord, more grace!
More sweetness from Thy loving heart,
More sunshine from Thy face!

We paint from self the evil things
We think that others are,
While to the self despising soul
All things but self are fair.

I need Thy mercy for my sin,
But more than this I need—
Thy mercy's likeness in my soul
For others' sins to bleed.

All bitterness is from ourselves,
All sweetness is from Thee.
Sweet God, forevermore be Thou
Fountain and fire in me.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

TOPIC.—The evils of intemperance.—Prov. xxiii, 20, 21, 29-35.

Intemperance is one of the greatest curses of humanity. Its evils are innumerable and indescribable. It destroys men bodily, mentally, morally and spiritually. It debauches a man absolutely and completely. It has been doing so for centuries, and yet it still finds those who are willing to be debauched. It is one of the greatest mysteries of modern civilization that intemperance has not been stamped out of existence either by legislation or by the voluntary actions of men in giving up that which has only proved a curse and ruination to man the world over. But progress is being made in the cause of temperance. More and more, the drink traffic is being outlawed. More and more men who persist in surrendering themselves to strong drink are being considered unfitted for responsible duties in life. The time was when public men could openly display their drunkenness with impunity, but that time has happily passed forever. It's a dangerous as well as a disgraceful thing today for a public man to have the charge of drunkenness proved against him. In these things at least the public conscience is being aroused, and the cause of temperance is advancing The Christian Endeavor society should use all its influence to destroy this evil in our land.

Solomon in the verses quoted points out some of the evils of intemperance.

1. Intemperance brings poverty. "Be not among wine bibbers, among riotous eaters of flesh, for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty" (verses 20, 21). How many have learned by an awful experience that this is true? Drink brings thousands to poverty. It impoverishes body, mind and soul. It robs homes of furniture and the comforts of life; it robs faithful wives of the love and care of husbands; it robs children of their clothing and of daily bread. It numbers in its poverty stricken hosts more than were ever impoverished by war, famine or pestilence. How can a man take that into himself which robs him of reason, of wealth, of home, of love, of honor, of position, of friends, of God? Poor indeed is he who has lost all these.

2. Intemperance brings countless evils, woe, babbling, wounds without cause, redness of eyes. Into what countless woes and babblings one deprived of reason by drink comes! How many wounds he receives that would not have been caused but for drink!

3. Intemperance leads to nearly all other sins and crimes (verses 29-35). Were it not for drunkenness our prison doors might almost be closed.

4. Intemperance alienates from God and separates from heaven (Gal. v, 21).

Bible Readings.—Lev. x, 9, 10; Isa. v, 11; xxviii, 1-4; Joel i, 5; Amos vi, 1-6; Num. vi, 1-14; Deut. xxi, 18-21; Nah. i, 10; Rom. xiii, 12-14; I Cor. vi, 10; Gal. v, 19-26; Eph. v, 18; I Pet. iv, 1-5; Rev. xxii, 12-15.

The Parting of the Paths.

We see the good—a way that may have to be reached, as one fights with tempests on the mountain top, but which, when reached, is a path of pleasantness and peace. We see the wrong—a way too often adorned with specious promises of ease and plenty, but which leads at last into doubt and disappointment and despair. We see the human soul here on this earth placed forever at the parting of these paths, where it must choose its way and abide the consequences of its choice, however angels may plead or demons may cajole. We see these paths reaching out into an endless future, and, though we dare not predict to what depths of infamy and woe the one course may or may not at last descend, we dare to say that whoever, through the way of sacrifice, has climbed the heavenly steeps shall receive as his reward gifts worthy to be carried throughout eternity with solemn gratitude and sacred awe.—Christian Register.

The Sunday School Army.

Rev. Dr. James A. Worden, superintendent of the Sunday school department of the northern Presbyterian church, is endeavoring to secure 500,000 more Sunday school scholars before April 1, 1901, and thus celebrate the opening of the twentieth century. The Sunday school army of this church already numbers 1,000,000.

Shut In Endeavorers.

That unique Christian Endeavor society, the Shut In Endeavor band, has seven members in seven different states —Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Illinois, Virginia, Maryland and Minnesota. Letters concerning it should be addressed to Mrs. C. C. Wonters, Howley, Minn.

"Ah, say, mister, you preached a goodish sermon tonight, but if it had been cut short at beath ends and set afire in the middle it wad a dean us mare good!"—Exchange.

Song of the Armenian Shepherd.

One by one the stars arise
In the meadows of the skies.
One by one, all white and still,
Rest my sheep on yonder hill.
Now I lay my crook away,
Toil is over with the day;
Kneeling at my frugal board,
Break the bread and bless the Lord.

Lord, look on me and on us all
And make us blest
And send us rest
At this and every evenfall.

All the day afar from me
They have wandered wild and free.
All the day I followed still,
Rock to rock and hill to hill,
Calling down the gorges deep,
"Come ye back, my wandering sheep,"
Till at eve I brought them home,
Safe in fold, no more to roam!

Lord, do thus much for me and all,
And when we stray
From Thy good way,
Oh, fetch us home at evenfall!

—Quiver.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Sachsen.

Dresden. Hier ist der Rechtsanwalt und Notar E. Lehmann gestorben. Er entfaltete im Interesse seiner israelitischen Glaubensgenossen eine fruchtbare literarische Thätigkeit. In weiten Kreisen ist namentlich seine Schrift „Höre Israel" bekannt geworden. Der zweiten sächsischen Kammer gehörte Lehmann von 1878 ab längere Zeit an.—Im Vorort Löbtau sind 320 Personen nach dem Genuß von Backwerk zum Theil schwer erkrankt.—Die sächsische Papier-Industrie war im vergangenen Jahre sehr gut beschäftigt. Der Hauptkonsum entfiel auf mittlere und geringere Papiersorten. Neben dem deutschen Geschäfte war auch der Export nach England, Südamerika u. s. w. bedeutend. Die Preise für den Holzstoff haben sich erhöht. Die Aussichten im Papiergeschäfte werden als gut bezeichnet.

Oelsnitz im Vogtland. Im Himmer'schen Steinbruche bei Lottengrün wurde der 24jährige Arbeiter Martin Beyer von einer plötzlich niedergehenden Wand (welche sich wahrscheinlich in Folge des Thauwetters gelockert hatte) getroffen und buchstäblich zermalmt. Ein anderer Arbeiter wurde am Rücken erheblich verletzt.

Pirna. Der Hausbesitzer August Robert Hennicke ist gestorben. Durch so manche Eigenheit hatte der „alte Hennicke," wie der Verblichene kurzweg genannt wurde, oftmals die Aufmerksamkeit weiterer Kreise auf sich gelenkt. Die Hinterlassenschaft des Heimgegangenen soll zu je einem Drittel der Stadtgemeinde Pirna, sowie der Gemeindediakonie und dem Frauenverein zufließen, während außerdem noch Legate in der Höhe von 2700 Mark ausgesetzt sind.

Thüringische Staaten.

Coburg. Der hiesige Turnverein wird in den Tagen vom 11. bis 12. Juni 1898 sein 50jähriges Jubiläum festlich begehen.

Frankenhausen. In der Stadtverwaltung haben es die Sozialdemokraten bei Berathung des Haushaltsplanes für 1898 durchgesetzt, daß beschlossen wurde, mit dem 1. Januar 1898 das Schulgeld für die Volksschule aufzuheben.

Freie Städte.

Hamburg. Eine vom Senat erlassene Verordnung betreffend das Verbot der Verwendung von Kindern beim Austragen von Milch, Brod, Zeitungen u. s. w. wurde durch Erkenntniß des Oberlandesgerichts für ungiltig erklärt, weil der Senat zwar die oberste Verwaltungsbehörde, jedoch zum Verbotserlaß nicht befugt sei; hierfür sei nach der Gewerbeordnung ausschließlich der Bundesrath zuständig.—Bei den letzten Grundeigenthümerwahlen zur Bürgerschaft wurden drei Kandidaten der Rechten, sechs des Centrums und zehn der Linken gewählt. Der Anschluß eines Kandidaten ist noch unbestimmt. Die Rechte gewann einen Sitz, die Linke hat zwei verloren, das Centrum blieb unverändert.

Bremen. Eine Erweiterung der bremischen Hafenanlagen im Freibezirk ist nach dem günstigen Aufschwung, den der Verkehr genommen hat, unerläßlich. Damit in Verbindung steht der Antrag, 583,000 Mark für neue Geleisanlagen zu bewilligen. Dazu wird später ein großer Rangirbahnhof kommen. Die Handelskammer, die darüber zum Gutachten aufgefordert wurde, verlangt, daß mit dem Bau eines zweiten Hafens, für den das Gelände vorhanden ist, nicht gezögert werde, da anderenfalls die natürliche Verkehrsentwickelung gehemmt werde.

Lübeck. Das Staatsbudget für 1898—99 veranschlagt die Gesammtausgaben auf 4,737,671.21 Mark, die Gesammteinnahme auf 4,673,091.10, so daß ein Fehlbetrag von 64,580.11 Mark berechnet ist. Dieser ist auf die Reservekasse angewiesen, welche über 217,284.02 Mark verfügt.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And stil what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

SAYS WEYLER LAID THE MINES.

Prosecuted Correspondent Publishes Letter Attributed to Ex-Commander.

New York, March 18.—Honore F. Laine, one of the newspaper correspondents in Cuba who was arrested and imprisoned there, yesterday published a letter dated January 8, attributed to General Weyler, in which the destruction of the Maine was foretasted. Laine says that on Jan. 24 Francisco Diaz, a reporter of the Spanish paper in Havana, Le Union Constitutional, gave him a copy of the letter, explaining that the original had been sent to the editor of the paper in order that he might temper his editorials accordingly. Laine says the police of Havana, learning that he had a copy of the letter arrested him, hoping to get it. They failed, and he now makes the letter public. It is:

"Excellency Don Francisco de los Santos Guzman, Havana.

"My distinguished Personal and Political Friend—Since the latest events I have changed my views about the attitude which our political party in Cuba ought to assume. If I have thought before that it was more dignified for us to abstain from the electoral contest, I believe now that it is a patriotic duty for us to go to the polls. Our success cannot be doubted, neither can be our majority of voters nor that with a programme of defense of the national honor we will have side by side with us all these lukewarm politicians who, though Spaniards by heart, are deceived by the inside combinations of Moret and Sagasta, and take as scientific solutions of our colonial problems what are really dishonorable humiliations of our country before the United States.

"Write on your flag, the flag of Spain, Defense of national honor,' and I offer you my name as your candidate.

"After having commanded during two years 200,000 Spanish heroes in Cuba, the title I shall be more proud of is that of Deputy from Havana at the Cortes of Spain.

"By the way, I have read these days that the Americans are pondering about sending one of their warships to that city. During my command in Cuba they did not even dare to dream about it. They knew the terrible punishment that awaited them.

"I had Havana Harbor well prepared for such an emergency. I rapidly finished the work that Martinez Campos carelessly abandoned. If that insult is made I hope that there will be a Spanish hand to punish it as terribly as it deserves.

"Romero is in better health than his friends could have expected, and, notwithstanding how morally sick I feel breathing this humiliating atmosphere, am well, also, your affectionate friend and servant.

"VALERIANO WEYLER."

"Madrid, Jan. 8, 1898."

Spanish Consul Baldasano refused to be interviewed on this letter yesterday. The Spanish Vice-Consul, Mariano Fabrigas however, through an interpreter, denounced it vehemently. "It is a lie," he said, "General Weyler never wrote such a letter."

No one at the Cuban Junta yesterday would speak of the letter. No one seemed to have any knowledge of it. The fact that the original is not in this country detracted from the importance accorded to it.

T. Estrada Palma said: "I do not know whether the latter is genuine or not. I believe the correspondent is telling the truth as to how the letter came into his possession. But he has not seen the original. From what I know of Weyler it would not surprise me if the letter were genuine."

Washington, March 18.—The alleged letter of General Weyler to Santos Guzman is taken here as possibly confirmatory of the advices which all along have indicated that the Maine was destroyed through treachery. The Spanish Minister will not discuss the possibility of the genuineness of the letter, but it is accepted everywhere in the national capital as in keeping with Weyler's bloody methods. In official circles there is reserve in comment, as the source of the communication is not above suspicion, but it fits into all that has happened.

Michael Davitt Censured.

London, March 18.—The Daily Chronicle this morning reproaches Mr. Michael Davitt, member of Parliament for South Mayo, for his cable message to a New York newspaper on the subject of Great Britain's attitude toward the United States in the Cuban complications. It says the message will "ill serve the Irish cause," and declares that it is "absolutely untrue that the English ruling classes are in sympathy with Spain and hostile to America."

Soldiers Hurt at the Tournament.

New York, March 18.—Last night while the Madison Square Garden was ringing with cheers for their daring, three men, soldiers of Uncle Sam, were hurled from the limber of a field piece, two were badly injured, the other escaped with a few slight bruises and was badly shaken up.

To Bar American Bicycles.

Washington, March 18.—Consul Mason, of Frankfort, has notified the State Department that Germany wants to bar American bicycles by putting a prohibitory duty on them.

Vatican Robbed by an Official.

Rome, March 18.—The Italie says that a confidential official at the Vatican has decamped with 1,500,000 lire. He is said to have gone to Corfu, one of the Ionian Islands.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

An engagement between General Gomez and the Spaniards was reported. The report added that the Cuban general had been routed with heavy loss.

In the Canadian House of Commons the Canadian Yukon Railway bill was read a third time and sent to the Senate, where many believe it will meet with its death blow.

A clergyman, while opening the Senate at Trenton, N. J., with prayer yesterday, asked that Emperor Wilhelm might be forgiven if his failure "to size this country up properly was due to being demented."

The Spaniards in Havana were very much exercised over a report received by the Government that the Prince of Wales had declared that England would support the United States and intervene with her fleet if necessary.

HE CORNERED WHEAT

METHODS OF YOUNG JOSEPH LEITER OF CHICAGO.

He Went Into the Wheat Deal to Help a Friend and Became Interested—Several Old Timers Done to the Tune of Hundreds of Thousands, P. D. Armour Was Among Them.

If a story told in Chicago club circles is correct, Joe Leiter's entrance into speculation on the Board of Trade was with no thought of undertaking operations which have made him an international figure. George French came here broke and went to work for a railroad company. He exchanged his job for that of a solictor of buisness for a firm on the board, where there was a chance of doing a little better.

In that capacity he met Leiter. Both men are young and congenial, and Joe is generous and more to help French got his commissions. The deals won a little money and Leiter got interested.

Now Joe Leiter is possibly a little peculiar for a young man who is so rich that he has no incentive to labor. He has a habit of studying things and deciding for himself. His father is heavily interested in the Edison Company and the City Railway Companies and in gass and manufacturing companies, and for two or three years Joe has looked after his interests. He looked into them so deeply that he mastered the technical details of each company's physical plant. He can tell anybody all about electric lighting or street railroading or gas making from the ground up. There is no detail which he has not examined and weighed to such good effect that probably Mr. Leiter could step right in and run any of the companies in which the Leiter family's money is invested.

This habit of observation prevailed when he stepped into the whirlpool of grain speculation a tenderfoot. It was not French who figured out that natural conditions of supply and demand all pointed to higher prices for wheat, but Leiter himself. It was the latter himself who saw no reason why wheat could not be bought, carried and disposed of like merchandise, despite the venerable belief on the board that the process was impossible. Having reached these conclusions he got in for keeps.

P. D. ARMOUR.

The story of the deal, with its turns and twists and collateral parts, such as the expedition for wheat P. D. Armour sent out need not here be retold. There have been others on the board where the quantity of wheat involved was immense. Cudahy was long 28,000,000 bushels in 1893, but he did not take it. Armour in his deal of 1888 took in 6,000,000 bushels. The Harper deal, the Keane deal, all included prodigious quantities. In every big deal that failed the causes were much alike. The manipulators conducted them with practically the same end in view, namely, to make their profits out of the shorts, calculating it would be heavy enough to easily to make good the loss they expected to sustain the marketing the cash wheat they were obliged to take.

L. Z. Leiter has backed his son, by the latter's own confession. L. Z. Leiter is one of the richest men in America. His real estate in Chicago is worth more than $10,000,000. He owns blocks of the choicest local stocks and bonds, besides railroad and industrial securities, land and mines. No matter how rich, no man keeps an amount of cash on hand sufficient to carry 10,000,000 bushels of wheat, which Joe Leiter is supposed to own stored in Chicago, Buffalo, Duluth and Liverpool, besides 8,000,000 bushels of options. But it has been much easier than to ordinary mortals for these financial heavy weights to supply and borrow the round sum of $12,000,000 that has been used to take care of the deal. The figures are given on the strongest authority. The sum, immense as it is, was got easily, and the entire deal has been financed here It was no strain watever.

There will be no regular basket ball game among the girls of the Plainfield High School, this afternoon. Instead, the girls of the Junior class will hold their regular practice. A match game is being arranged for next week between the girls of the Senior class and the Third class.

The basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. will play its next game Monday evening in this city. The opposing team will be the second team from the Twenty-third Street Branch of the New York Y. M. C. A. The game will begin at 8:15 o'clock. The Twenty-third Street boys are well known in this district as the best that there is. The first team far outclasses the Plainfield boys, but the second team is expected to make a lively fight for the honors of victory.

NOT A CONGRESSIONAL ASPIRANT.

Senator Reed Will Not Oppose Congressman Howell in Politics.

The New Jersey Editor of the New York Press today says:

Senator Charles A. Reed, of Somerset, informs me that he is neither a candidate for Congress in the Third district, nor an opponent of Congressman Howell for renomination.

The Senator does not understand how any such impression could have gone abroad that he sought the Congress nomination. "I am a friend of Mr. Howell," he said, "and would like to see him win a third term." Mr. Howell, it would seem, has nothing more to fear. Senator Reed's position is honestly defined and entirely in the Congressman's favor.

Easter Rates for Students.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey announces a special rate of one and a third fare for the round trip for students at schools, colleges and seminaries returning home for the Easter holidays. Tickets will be sold not later than three days after commencement of vacation, good returning within fifteen days from date of sale but in no case later than April 30th. To be able to secure the reduced rate it will be necessary for students to present certificate signed by the proper officer of the school, college or seminary showing that the holder is a student at such institution.

"GENTLE WILLIE" MURPHY.

Said to Have Made $50,000 in African Gold Fields.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Meriden, Conn., March 18.—James Henry, a brother of John M. Henry, of Hartford, the well-known ball player, has just returned after an eight years' stay in South Africa and Australia, and he told a Meriden man on the train the other night coming up from New York that "Gentle Willie" Murphy, the old Meriden ball player, was in South Africa and worth at least $50,000, which he had made in the gold fields.

That story may be true, but the chances are that Mr. Henry has "Gentle Willie" mixed up with some other Murphy. Meriden people think they have a picture of Willie's finish if Mr. Henry's report is correct. But if it is true and Willie has $50,000, a more mysterious thing than the blowing up of the Maine has happened. When around these parts Willie had hard work to keep 50 cents together, let alone $50,000.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The meeting at Reform Hall last evening was interesting and well attended. The programme consisted of remars by B. W. Hand, N. W. Pike, Mr. Armstrong and M. F. Marcley, and a cornet solo by Mrs. J. D. Anderson, with piano accompaniment by Miss Jennie Smith.

EUROPEAN BURIAL CUSTOMS.

The Dead Never Arrayed in the Ordinary Clothing.

"Until I came to this country," said an attache of a European legation to a Washington Star reporter, "I never knew or had never heard of the custom which prevails in this country of dressing the dead in the ordinary clothing. The custom therefore strikes a foreigner as very peculiar. Throughout Europe the custom is to dress the dead in what is called the 'dead gown,' a loose gown, or habit, as it is called in some places. This is generally inexpensive, though, of course, there are some exceptions, and in these the gowns are often very costly. The comparatively inexpensive gown, however, prevails. Marie Teresa, the wife of the King of Austria, according to the legends, made with her own hands the gown in which the King was buried. She also cut off her hair with her own hands to show to the world that she was a widow. In many instances old ladies have their dead gowns made up for years before they are called upon to use them. I found the same custom prevails in Ireland and elsewhere. It is a matter that no one should criticise, from the nature and sacredness of it, but I am sure the ordinary European will never make any change in this respect, and the dead gown will always remain in use."

From a Personal Standpoint.

"I'm free to admit," remarked Farmer Corntossel, "that I won't never git through demandin' more prosperity."

"But you are in comfortable circumstances. What do you mean by prosperity?"

"There's jes' the difficulty. It means somethin' different fur everybody. Ef you've got a mortgage, 'prosperity's' gettin' it paid off. Ef ye've got it paid off, 'prosperity's' ownin' a cabinet organ. Ef ye've got a cabinet organ, 'prosperity's' havin' enough to be able to trade it in fur a grand pie-anno—an' so on, without no limit whatsomever."—Washington Star.

His Promise.

"And you will never think of letting me build the kitchen fire?" she said, as she shook the rice out of her parasol.

"No," he answered, earnestly; "I never will. If it becomes necessary we'll move the stove out in the dining-room."—Washington Star.

Said more than He Meant.

Sallie De Witte—Do you play whist, Mr. Lange?

Willis Lange—Me play whist? Well, I don't think!

Sallie De Witte—Ah, true! I had forgotten that.—Brooklyn Life.

THEY RIDICULE IT.

Ridicule, However, is Not Argument and Facts are Stubborn Things.

Stomach troubles are so common and in many cases so obstinate to cure that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and indigestion. Many such pride themselves on never being humbugged especially on medicine.

This fear of being humbugged may be carried too far; so far, in fact, that many persons suffer for years with weak digestion, rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims of a preparation so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Now Stuart s Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary proprietary medicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret is made of their ingredients, but analysis shows them to contain the natural digestive ferments, pure aseptic pepsin, the digestive acids, Golden Seal, bismuth, hydrastis and nux. They are not cathartic, neither do they act powerfully on any organ, but they cure indigestion on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten promptly, thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles because they act entirely upon the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, taken after meals, digest the food. That is all there is to it. Food not digested or half digested is poison, as it creates gas, acidity, headaches, palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite, and many other troubles which are often called by some other name.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. Address Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., for book on stomach diseases or ask your druggist for it. 3 14 16 18

THE BULL DOG A GOOD DOG

A Most Intelligent Canine and Very Affectionate.

No member of the canine family has been more persistently maligned than the bulldog. Writers who have no intimate knowledge of the dog and his attributes have described him as stupidly ferocious, and illustrators have pictured him as a sort of semi-wild beast, till the general public has come to look upon him as dangerous.

"Give a dog a bad name," is an old saw, and perhaps a true one, but when it is applied to the bulldog it is manifestly unjust. Writers, too, have fallen into grave error in claiming that the bulldog is deficient not only in affection but in intelligence.

Stonehenge, who is considered one of the greatest of canine scientists, claims that the bulldog's brain is relatively larger than that of the spaniel, which dog is generally considered to be the most intelligent of the canine race, while the bulldog's affection is never to be doubted.—Outing.

POSSE OF FARMERS ATTACKED THE PLACE, BUT ENEMY HAD GONE.

Wholesale Robberies Committed in Somerset County—Railroad Property, Private Houses and Farmers' Hen Roosts Invaded—Two Men Arrested at Washington, With Stolen Property in Their Possession, Supposed to be of the Gang of Thieves—Now Incarcerated in Somerset County Jail at Somerville.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, March 19—Two tough looking characters now repose behind the grated doors of the Somerset county jail who are supposed to be concerned with the gang of robbers who have been terrifying a large section of the county.

Thursday night the station of the New Jersey Central Railroad at Raritan was broken into by thieves, who stole a keg of wine, a small sum of money, and several express packages. Detective Joshua B. Grey, of the Central Railroad, took to the county jail in Somerville Joseph Brown and John Dorsey, whom he captured at Washington with some of the stolen goods in their possession.

A freight car standing on the tracks of the Jersey Central at Bound Brook was forced open Thureday night and $300 worth of merchandise was carried off. The country authorities have also received information of robberies that have been committed in the rural towns of Millstone, Rocky Hill and Bedminster during the last two days. The band of thieves operating in Bedminster township and the northern part of the county are equipped with a team of horses and a road wagon, and have been suspected of having a rendezvous in the mountains.

Children playing near the summer residence of D. Bradley Farrington, a wealthy Newark merchant, at the base of the mountain, were attracted recently by smoke issuing from a window on the ground floor. The residence had been closed for the winter, and it was found that the thieves had turned it into a rendezvous.

When a posse of farmers headed by Constable George D. Totten entered the house Thursday its contents from cellar to garret had the appearance of having been struck by a cyclone. Beds had been carried from the upper stories and placed around the kitchen floor Every room had been ransacked and much of the fine furniture wantonly destroyed. The thieves, who fled on being detected by the children, left behind them a great quantity of canned goods, groceries and chickens, which they had stolen in the surrounding country.

CHARGE IS A SERIOUS ONE.

An Employe at Pond's Arrested and Put Under Heavy Bonds

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 19.—The overseer of the poor of Piscataway township made a complaint against John Overland, of Plainfield, yesterday before Justice Storms, of New Market. The charge is a serious one. Miss Hannah Willett, seventeen years old, of this place, is the complaining witness.

A constable from New Market came to Justice Nash's court in this city yesterday afternoon with a warrant for John Overland issued by Justice Storms, of New Market. Justice Nash indorsed the warrant. Overland was arrested at the Pond Tool Works, where he was employed. Justice Nash placed him under $500 bonds for appearance at trial Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. H. E. Rider, of this city, went bail for him.

Deputy Sheriff in Charge.

The contest between Constables Mattox and Rockafellow for the possession of the goods and fixtures of the Gem Pharmacy, corner of Liberty and West Fourth streets, was ended abruptly today by Sheriff Kirk, who placed two of his deputies in possession and had the goods removed from the store. They will be held to satisfy the chattel mortgage held by Dr. M. S. Simpson.

Thinks He is in Danger.

Edward Allen, Jr., who lives on the extension of Johnston's Drive, went before Justice of the Peace Speer yesterday add swore out a complaint against William Calloway, of North Plainfield township, charging the latter with making threats against the plaintiff. Calloway was arraigned and after a hearing the Justice placed him under $100 bonds to keep the peace.

FREE MUSIC FOR MASSES.

CHORAL ORATORIOS MAY BE GIVEN.

A Plan to Educate the People to a Taste for Really Fine Music.

A project is now on foot among the old members of the Choral Society looking toward the rendition of some of the oratorios for the Plainfield public. The object is to give the people a chance to hear good music free of charge. The chances seem very good that the project will be carried to a successful termination.

Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards was the originator of the plan. He brought it to the attention of some of the Choral Society people and it was received with great favor. The oratorios have already been sung and the members are sufficiently acquainted with them as to be able to pick them up again with a very few rehearsals. The concerts, it is proposed, are to be held in the Crescent Avenue church and are to be free to the public.

The cost of the concerts would be small as the members still have the music and the cost of securing Mr. Fitzhugh to lead would be small when divided among all the members.

No action has been taken on the matter as yet but the members, or some of them, will probably hold an informal meeting in the near future, when arrangements will be made for the concerts.

The object is to educate the people to a love of really good music and place it where everybody can hear it It is understood that the Crescent Avenue church could be secured for such a purpose.

PET COON KILLED.

Strangers Didn't Know its Kind Disposition and Executed it.

Ed Campbell's pet raccoon is dead. Its death was due to a sorrowful mistake. Campbell lives on Park avenue, near Avon Park. It was the custom to allow the 'coon to run out in the yard early in the morning. Last Tuesday morning the rodent followed its usual custom and sat on the front fence. Some men passing, who were employed as carpenters on a neighboring building, saw the animal and thought it a wild one. So they armed themselves with clubs and attacked it. The poor 'coon, unconscious of its approaching doom, started to make friends with the strangers. They quickly knocked it in the head and killed it. Then they carried it away amid rejoicing.

Campbell was very indignant at the wanton destruction of his pet. He finally recovered the body. It was the only known raccoon to be born and raised in captivity.

KEARNEY STAYS IN NEW YORK.

Paid a Fine for Intoxication and Escaped Brookside Retreat Keepers.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New York, March 19.—John Watts Kearney, Jr., who made a sensational escape from Brookside Sanitarium in North Plainfield last Sunday night, was arraigned in court yesterday before Magistrate Cornell.

Kearney said that his arrest was simply a trumped-up charge so as to detain him for the sanitarium people.

Just before court adjourned yesterday morning a heavy-set and well-dressed man entered the courtroom and suggested to Magistrate Cornell that Kearney be fined and discharged. Magistrate Cornell said he would be treated like other offenders. The young man was then arraigned and pleaded guilty to intoxication. He was fined $3 and discharged. The fine was paid by the heavy-set man, who refused to give his name.

William Pangborn, a constable of North Plainfield, was in court when Kearney was arraigned, and presented papers from the Chancellor of New York showing the authority for the commitment of the young man to the retreat from which he escaped. The constable requested that Kearney be turned over to him so that he could be taken back to the retreat. The magistrate decided that inasmuch as the retreat was a private one, he had no authority to grant the application of the constable.

Surprised Their Employer.

Last Thursday evening the clerks in the employ of Woodhull & Martin, the dry goods merchants, called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin, of Putnam avenue, and gave them a surprise. The evening was passed in a very pleasant social manner. The event was strong evidence of the good feeling existing between employes and employer.

A Fagot Social.

The Friday night meeting at the Monroe Avenve church took the form of a fagot sociable. The attendance of young people was large. Speeches were made, a guessing contest was held and a number of songs were sung.

CIRCUIT OF RACE MEETS.

HORSEMEN IN THIS SECTION ARRANGING FOR GOOD TROTTING.

Fast Horse Owners of Four Counties are in the Scheme, Which Will Assume Definite Shape in the Near Future.

The fact that the horsemen of this part of New Jersey were contemplating an organized effort toward good sport was noticed in a dispatch to yesterday's Daily Press. The plan seems almost certain of being carried through and is attracting much interest among the local horse owners.

The interested parties are among the most prominent horse owners in Middlesex, Hunterdon, Union and Somerset counties. They are men who own fast horses for the enjoyment they get out of them rather than from financial reasons. They are now planning to hold a meeting about the first of April. The leaders in the organization are mostly from Somerset and Hunterdon counties and they are very anxious that the first meeting or convention should be held at Somerville. It will probably be agreed upon by the rest.

The organization, if the ideas that prevail are carried out, will be an informal one. Its real object will be to provide for a connected circuit of race meets. Heretofore, they have been held in the different counties without regard to the rest, sometimes two falling on the same day. The object is to have a circuit to last through the summer. The places spoken of at present to form the circuit are Waverley Park, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Somerville, Mt. Holly and Trenton.

The spirit of the organization will be similar to that of the Plainfield Driving Park Association. This makes the project specially favorable to the Plainfield horse owners, a large proportion of whom take part in the sport for the mere love of it. A number of the Plainfielders have pledged their assistance to the new plan and it is understood that the principal members of the Driving Park Association will be a moving element in the new organization.

CLOSE OF THE THIRD TERM.

A Pleasant Social Affair Given in Vincent Chapel.

The closing of the third term of the Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church took place yesterday, and was marked by a pleasing entertainment and social time. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Miss Mabel Smith, chairman; Miss Lillian Hope, Miss Florence Symons, Miss Beulah Waters, Miss Lucy Jennings and Charles Lyman. Everybody worked hard and energetically to make the entertainment a success. Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor, was in charge and his pleasant remarks were a source of enjoyment to all present.

The programme consisted of recitations by Alice Barker, Fred Lynn, Eva Webster, Beulah Waters, Edna Kennedy, Gertrude Tier, Jennie Addis, Maude Disborough, Mabel Symons; vocal solo, Mabel Symons; violin solo, Clarence Mills; piano duet, Florence Symons and Grace Webster; vocal solo, Carrie Mulford, accompanied by Mrs. J. M. Lewis.

The entertainment was given under the direction of the literary department of the League, of which Mrs. J. Wier is the adviser. After the entertainment, which was very creditable, refreshments was served by the committee and a general social time enjoyed.

Looking For Work, He Had a Fit.

Harry Lamont, aged 52 years, of New Brunswick, was found on Prospect place last evening in a fit. Chief Marshal Wilson was telephoned for and he responded and took charge of the man. Medical aid was given and in a little while Lamont was able to walk. Mr. Griffin, of Prospect place, assisted Lamont to the North Avenue station, where he left for home. Lamont told Chief Wilson that he was subject to fits, and that he had been been looking for work without success.

MAYOR'S RAID TO BE FOUGHT IN CITY COURT.

Margentino Will Defend His Right to Sell Hard Cider.

LAWYER HETFIELD HEARD.

CULPRIT DETERMINED TO DISPUTE THE COUNCIL ORDINANCE.

Mr. Hetfield, as a Lawyer, will Try to Break the Law for Which as Councilman He is in a Way Responsible for—Trial to be Heard Next Saturday—A Non-support Case Dismissed—Sentence Suspended on a Disturber of the Peace and She Was Put Under Bonds for Good Behavior.

The raids, engineered by Mayor Charles J. Fisk, last Sunday afternoon, promise to make things lively for the city for a time at least. While one of the alleged offenders pleaded guilty and departed with a fine, the other, Donatio Margentino, whose little establishment is conducted at 128 Park avenue, is determined to make a strong fight for freedom. His lawyer, Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, has laid out an active campaign for his defence.

The trial of Margentino was to have been held this morning Court was called at the City Court room in the jail and after the cases of minor importance were transacted, the Margentino case, for the alleged sale of "hard cider" on Sunday, came up. Owing to the crowd, the court adjourned to the Council Chambers.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was present to represent the city while Mr. Hetfield was in attendance for his client. As soon as the case was called Mr. Marsh asked the Councilman to admit the cider ordinance from the printed slip that he had. Mr. Hetfield said he would admit nothing and so the City Clerk was sent for to prove the ordinance. Then it was discovered that the City Clerk was out of town and so Mr. Marsh asked for an adjournment. Mr. Hetfield would not agree on any time for the trial so the Judge set the trial down for next Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. It will be held in the Council Chambers.

The trial of Wm. Sanderson, colored, for using improper language to John Scott, came before the City Judge this morning and was adjourned for a week.

The case against Charles Drake for non-support was dismissed by the City Judge.

Mrs. Bessie Ritter, who was charged with making trouble up in the Eight Row, was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. Her counsel, Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, made a plea of non vult in her behalf and asked for a suspension of sentence. S. S. Swackhamer appeared for John Richards, the complaining witness, and asked that she be severely punished. Mrs. Ritter was ill and hardly able to appear in court. The Judge suspended sentence on her, but compelled her to give $100 bonds to keep the peace. He warned her that any future trouble on her part would secure for her the full penalty of the law.

A CONSTABLE'S TRIBULATIONS.

J. W. VanHorn Levied on a Horse Which He Had to Board.

Constable J. W. VanHorn states to The Daily Press that the statement made in another newspaper to the effect that he is being sued for the board of a horse in the case of Hoff against VanHorn, now pending in Justice Mosher's court, is misleading. The constable states that the suit against him is the result of his discharging his duty as constable in conformity with the law. He made a levy upon certain goods last October, and among them was a horse and wagon. He was compelled to place the horse in a stable to board. Later on the levy was raised by the court and the goods restored to their owner. VanHorn states that he gave the liveryman orders not to part with the horse and wagon until the money for board was forthcoming. The action is now brought to recover the amount of the liveryman's bill. The case was adjourned yesterday for one week.

BEST TO TRY TO REFORM.

REV. A. C. NICKERSON'S IDEAS OF DEALING WITH CRIME.

In His Lecture He Takes a Stand Against the Death Penalty and Says Effort Should be Made to stop Small Crimes.

The subject of Natural Selection and Crime was discussed in an interesting manner by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, in the fifth of his series of lectures on the subject of Evolution, in the parlors of the Public Library last evening.

The audience was a large one, and showed the increasing popularity of the course. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall presided.

To the ancient Greeks, the lecturer said, evolution was known as destiny, and by the more modern school of Calvinistic theologians it is called election. Both doctrines are now obsolete. The modern docurine of heredity is not that men are either altogether good or altogether bad; but that criminals can be reclaimed and socially reinstated, according to the power of each individual to recuperate morally and cooperate with the saving enironment in which he may be placed. To a deranged nervous system is undoubtedly due much of the emotional excesses, the vices crimes and general degeneracy that inflict the race.

Is crime increasing? The common opinion is in the affirmative, but I do not believe that it is. There are many explanations for the apparent increase which statistics display. In the first place we should not forget that the methods of compiling statistics have improved to such an extent that the returns of today cannot with justness be compared with those of past years. Moreover, today the law notices more smaller offences than formerly, and the number of arrests is larger for a given number of offenses. To this greater care to arrest criminals, resulting in a greater jail population, is due the apparently rapid increase of crime in the western States.

The death penalty should be abolished and greater attention should be paid to the prevention of small crimes. The criminal should be dealt with in a reformatory spirit. Reformatories should be substituted for prisons. The reformatory is designed to combat the bad hereditary traits of the individual. The efficacy of the system is shown in the work accomplished by the Elmira Reformatory. It is said that over 80 per cent. of the inmates of this place have, after being released, established themselves as law abiding citizens in their communities. The criminal cannot always of himself change character, but he can attach himself to recuperative moral forces and persons.

Better than reformation, however, is the prevention of crime, and to this end the children of the slums and all inclined to criminality should be given an intellectual, moral and religious training that will act as a deterrent to crime. The kindergarten method is a most happy and natural one for the training of children.

AT ODDS OVER A SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

A Central Railroad Official Appealed to to Adjust the Differences.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Garwood, March 19.—Superintendent Maxwell, of the Central Railroad Company, has been appealed to by the people of this place to use his efforts toward an adjustment of the troubles which have sprung up in the Sunday-school here.

The school has met heretofore in the schoolhouse built by the Land Improvement Company, and a leading part in its management was taken by Frank W. Morse, superintendent of the Land Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Morse are Christian scientists, and some differences of belief between them and other members of the school caused the separation. Mr. and Mrs. Morse and Superintendent W. B. Woodruff, of Westfield, continued to meet in the schoolhouse, but the other members of the school held opposition services in a building around the corner.

Wednesday night a meeting was held for the election of three trustees, and it is understood that all those elected were averse to Mr. Morse and Superintendent Woodruff. It is said that the new trustees will take legal proceedings to recover the organ and certain other furniture to the use of which Superintendent Maxwell has decided they are entitled, as well as is Mr. Morse.

A Malicious Practice.

During last night some persons with evil intent called at the business place of J. E. Townsend & Co. on Somerset street and caused considerable trouble by upsetting some of the headstones and monuments. Many of the stones were thrown over and pieces were broken off. So far as can be learned no stones were taken away from the place. Thus far there is no clue as to who committed the deed.

CAKE WALK THE FEATURE.

MRS. HARNED'S PLEASANT AFFAIR.

Entertained Friends in Honor of a Wedding Anniversary—Guests Who Were There.

One of the pleasant events of the season was the salamagundi party given last evening by Mrs. Harned, of Craig place, to a number of her friends. The affair was given in honor of the sixteenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Harned.

The early part of the evening was passed in playing games. One of the most enjoyable was the spider-web game. Mrs. Walton was awarded a prize. At the card table, Mrs. Will F. Williams and Mrs. Edgar D. George were presented with the first and second prizes for the women, while John H. VanWinkle, Sr., and Eugene Laing were awarded the second prizes for the men. Edgar D. George secured the consolation prize.

A decided feature enjoyed later in the evening was a cake walk which was participated in by all present. The artistic swing and grace displayed was greatly admired. At the conclusion of the performance it was unanimously agreed that T. S. Armstrong and Miss Sydenham were entitled to first prizes.

Interspersing the above programme were piano selections by Miss Mabel Force, Mrs. J. H. VanWinkle and Mrs. Walton, while a vocal solo was given by Mr. Caldwell. The last part of the evening was devoted to dancing and it was rather early when the happy event came to an end.

As a pleasant reminder of the event, Mr. and Mrs. Harned received from Mr. and Mrs. George a beautiful bunch of Jack roses. Those who were present included the following: Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Needham, Mr. and Mrs. Harned, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar D. George, Mr. and Mrs. T. S Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs John H. VanWinkle, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Laing, Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moore, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Devoll, Mrs. D. H. Devoll, Miss Mabelle Force, Miss Nora Williams, Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Ebie, Miss Tantum, Miss Sydenham, Mrs. Walton, Miss Helen Harned, Miss Helen Walton, Allan Laing, Mr. Caldwell, Ephraim Vail, J. H. VanWinkle, Jr., Bert Moore.

COLLECTOR'S BOOKS TURNED OVER.

H. N. Spencer Transfers Borough Records and Monies to G. F. Brown.

Last evening the books of former Collector H. N. Spencer were formally turned over to Collector George F. Brown. Among those present to witness the event were Borough Counsel Reed, Councilmen Valiant, MacLaughlin, Rogers, School Commissioner H. A. McGee, and W. W. Rowley, the delinquent tax collector. There were thirty-three books turned over and $8,690.56 on account of school fund; $1,396.03 borough fund, and $350.59 on account of Watchung avenue assessment fund, making a total of $10,437.18. For the above Collector Brown gave Mr. Spencer a receipt. The books were transferred to Collector Brown's office on Somerset street. Mr. Brown will be ready to receive taxes commencing with next Monday. Mr. Brown will have regular office hours to receive taxes.

The special song services given in the past by the members of the choir of Grace M. E. church have been so successful that there has been a growing demand of late for a service of a similar nature. The service tomorrow evening will be devoted to the rendering of some of the music lately procured by the choir.

RED MEN THIRST FOR SCALPS OF SPANISH.

Miantonomoh Tribe on Record in the Present Crisis.

WILL FIGHT IF THERE IS WAR.

PATRIOTIC RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED WITH GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

Fervent Addresses in Support of the Resolutions Made by a Number of the Braves—Say the Country is in a Crisis That May Culminate in War With Spain—In the Case of War They Tender Their Volunteer Services to the Call of Governor Voorhees—Governor to be Notified Personally in a Short Time.

If war is declared by Spain, then the scalps of all the members of the Sagasta ministry may be expected to hang in the wigwams of the Miantonomoh Tribe of Improved Order of Red Men. Last night, at the meeting of the tribe, the braves decided to don their warpaint and feathers if the necessity arose and offered themselves to Governor Voorhees in defence of this land.

There was one adoption at the meeting and two propositions were received. The degree team received an invitation to visit Indianola Tribe at Bound Brook Thursday to work the adoption degree. The invitation was accepted.

The event of the meeting was the introduction of the resolutions tendering the services of the members of the tribe in the event of war with Spain. The resolutions were unanimously adopted and there were fervent addresses by Past Sachems Mague, Westphal, Newcorn, Leahy, Holdstein and others. The special committee to present the resolutions in person to the Governor was composed of Past Sachems Newcorn and Westphal, and Brother David Miadonvick.

The resolutions were as follows:

WHEREAS, Our country is passing through a crisis that may culminate in war with Spain, and

WHEREAS, The Improved Order of Red Men is strictly an American organization, having been conceived and nurtured in the war for American independence, therefore be it

Resolved, That Miantonomoh Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, tender the voluntary services of its members to his excellency, the Hon. Foster M. Voorhees, Governor of the State of New Jersey. In case of war with Spain; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, under the seal of the tribe, be presented in person by a committee of three appointed by the tribe, to his excellency, Hon. Foster M. Voorhees.

Exciting Bowling Game at Park Club Last Night.

The active bowling season at the Park Club practically came to an end last evening, with a match between the Seniors and Juniors of the club. The Seniors were really the members of the team that represented the club in the Central Journal Bowling League. To make the games exciting it was arranged that the Juniors were to receive a handicap of 50 pins on each game. The wounds bled profusely. Lawrence Green and another man picked up the injured man and took him to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where his injuries were treated. The wagon was badly demolished.

NEW PLAN FOR CUBA

The Most Complete Home Rule for Three Years.

TO VOTE ON INDEPENDENCE

The President Confident That There Will Be No War, and That the Maine Disaster and Cuban Question Will Be Settled by Peaceful Methods.

Washington, March 19.—Despite the fact that the report of the Court of Inquiry is expected in Washington some time to-day, and may, in all probability, be made public next week, there seems to be less apprehension of a crisis than at any time for a week past. The President is still firm in his belief that there will be no war, and that not only the explosion of the Maine, but the Cuban question can be settled honorably and peacefully by diplomacy.

Significant Conferences.

The frequent conferences at the State Department between the Spanish Minister and Assistant Secretary Day have been significant in this regard, because the advent of Senor Polo seems to have instituted a new policy toward the United States, and that is to endeavor, if possible, to avoid a conflict between the two governments, and to discuss methods by which this end can be obtained.

Beyond doubt the Spanish Minister is endeavoring, by both direct and indirect means, to try to induce the President to give the present autonomous government at Havana a fair test. He has been showing that Spain has done everything that the President has recommended, and now that the critical time has come, it is only just for the Spanish Government to expect some encouragement and support from this Government to make genuine home rule in Cuba a success.

In view of the reports from Cuba of the failure of autonomy, it may seem strange that the Administration is considering further trial, but it is nevertheless true that a plan with this end in view has been suggested to the President by a Cabinet officer, who carries weight in the official councils. This Cabinet officer, during the past week, has drawn up a plan, which has been submitted to the President, as well as to prominent members of the Government which may have a bearing on the solution of the Cuban question. It has been talked over at the Cabinet meeting, and while it may not be accepted, it is nevertheless being seriously considered.

Practical Independence.

The plan as drafted consists of offering the Cubans a much fuller and more complete system of home rule than has ever been offered or intimated by the Spanish Government. It is to give the Cubans a government of practical independence. Spain is to concede everything the Cubans demand, except the hauling down of her flag. This Government is to have a trial for three years, during which time Cuba is to pay Spain $10,000,000 annually as revenue, and is to restore the island, its manufactories, industries and general condition to its normal state. At the end of the three years, an election is to be held to decide whether Cuba is willing to continue under this government, or desires her complete independence. If by a two-thirds vote the inhabitants declare that they are not satisfied with the government and wish independence, then Spain is to haul down her flag and renounce her sovereignty, and Cuban independence be declared.

The Cubans are to pay Spain a reasonable sum, $350,000,000 being suggested, to repay her for all she has expended, and reimburse her for her loss.

The plan does not include the guaranteeing by the United States of any of this money, nor does it involve the United States in any protectorate over the island.

It only makes the United States a sponsor to see that the conditions are carried out to start the new government, and relieve her or all responsibility thereafter.

Position of the Insurgents.

As stated, this plan has been submitted to Spain, but the difficulty seems to be in getting the Cubans to consent to any such arrangement. The representatives of Cuba in this city have issued a proclamation declaring that they will have nothing but independence, and it is acknowledged that there is great difficulty in reaching the insurgents, who seem to thrive upon the present condition in Cuba, and who would rather continue their life in the mountains than submit to anything like surrender.

In view of the Spanish Minister's representation at the State Department that the Sagasta Ministry is anxious for a full trial of the Autonomist scheme, it is thought that they will be willing to at least try the new plan, feeling sure that at the end of three years they can make it such a success that the Cubans would not vote for their entire independence.

As to the Maine.

The situation in regard to the Maine is still extremely delicate. The President cannot and will not decide what can be done until he has the full report, and beyond doubt, he will give it a full and wise consideration before he acts. It is significant, however, in view of the interview published in these dispatches with a Senator, that the whole matter, as to the cause of the explosion, might be left to arbitration; that Senor Sagasta, in a Madrid dispatch is quoted as saying that an international arbitration court will naturally be the next step in the Maine proceedings. There is undoubtedly a feeling among a number of conservative Senators that such a demand will be made by Spain, and while they do not call it arbitration, they intimate that an international Court of Inquiry is among the probabilities.

Undoubtedly Spain's report will be that the cause of the battleship's destruction was from an internal explosion, and, from all trustworthy accounts, the United States Naval Court of Inquiry will declare it was due to external agencies, and, although it will not implicate the Spanish Government, it will show, in all probability, negligence on the part of Havana authorities. A prominent Senator, speaking about this matter, said that, if a demand is made upon Spain, that Government will in turn demand her right of a "day in court," and suggest that the question to be left to an international court of inquiry. The Senator added: "If Spain says that we can appoint or select our own arbitrators from other nations, then, in all justice, if the court does not directly implicate the Spanish Government, we will be obliged to accede to this request, although we may not consent to the final settlement."

He did not think that participation in this international inquiry meant acceptance of its findings, but, unless the report most explicitly proved that the Spanish Government was responsible, it was the only way out, except by a conflict, and this would be had without giving Spain a right to be heard in defense.

CABINET CONSIDERS AUTONOMY.

Bliss, Long, Griggs and Gary Favor Spain's Offer.

Washington, March 19.—At the Cabinet meeting yesterday, which lasted nearly two hours, the Cuban situation was discussed in every aspect. No conclusion was reached, and the subject was postponed until the arrival of the report of the Maine court of inquiry.

All of the plans to restore peace received attention. The chief controversy was over Minister Polo's proposition for the amplification of the autonomy plan. This arrangement contemplates the withdrawal of Spanish troops from the island the full pardon of the insurgents, the election of a native Cuban legislature, and, in fact, the complete surrender of Spanish dominion in nearly every respect except the withdrawal of Spanish sovereignty.

In favor of acquisition in this plan were Secretaries Long and Bliss, Attorney-General Griggs and Postmaster-General Gary. Against it were Secretaries Alger and Wilson. Secretary Gage was absent in Cleveland.

When this division in the Cabinet became known several Republican members of Congress called on the President in the afternoon to protest against further consideration of the autonomy plan. Any compromise with Spain, it was held, would result only in continued revolutions and disorder, as the Cubans would accept nothing short of independence.

The President did not commit himself. It is expected that the developments of the day will cause a general commotion throughout the country, and that the autonomist Cabinet officials, in response to public sentiment, may yield to the President's original desire for the recognition of Cuban independence.

TWO HUNDRED REINDEER SOLD.

Reported Sold to Private Purchasers at $100 a Head.

Seattle, Wash., March 19.—Rev. Sheldon Jackson, acting on behalf of the War Department, has sold 200 head of the reindeer herd that was purchased for the Yukon Relief Expedition to private parties. It is understood that the Government received about $100 per head. The purchasers were P. C. Richardson, an Alaskan mail carrier, and W. A. Brooman, who is connected with an Alaskan transportation company.

Can't Cross the Valdes Glacier.

Seattle, Wash., March 19.—W. A. Conover, of Red Bank, N. J., who arrived here on the steamer Excelsior from Copper River, says:

'Soft snow on the Valdes glacier is proving a stumbling block to argonauts and there is a small blockade at Valdes and Cooper City. There are about 2,000 men there now, and if colder weather does not come the blockade will be serious. It is twenty-seven miles across the glacier. Up to March 12 but ten men had succeeded in getting through with their outfits.

Return Tide from Klondike.

Tacoma, Wash., March 19.—H. C. Pettit of Snohomish who returned from Alaska on the City of Seattle, says that next June and July will witness a stampede from Dawson that will be equalled only by the present rush of gold seekers to the Klondike. Up to Feb. 8, when Pettit left, there had been about 1,500 applications for passage south. The accommodations of all the first boats had been sold, and no more applications would be received. When boodings open for the second boats there will be another rush. Practically every one of the 1,500 are anxious to get out early and will bring gold, many in large amounts.

DON GUZAM'S DENIAL.

Says He Died Not Receive a Letter from General Weyler.

Havana, March 19.—A correspondent saw Don Francisco de los Santos Guzman, to whom General Weyler, the former Captain-General of Cuba, is alleged to have written a letter, published in New York papers yesterday, apparently suggesting among other things, the destruction of the United States battleship Maine. Don Guzman lives in the suburb of Cerro, in a beautiful house handsomely finished in European style. The distinguished former president of the Cortes was much surprised when asked if he had received such a leter. He said:

"I have not received any such letter from General Weyler and for that reason it is impossible that any one could have stolen such a letter from me. I am ignorant of the existence of such a letter and consequently of its alleged contents."

Laine's Report Sworn to.

Washington, March 19.—Honore had it been sent there during his Department the scartling story of Weyler's laying submarine mines in Havana harbor and of the latter's letter to friends in that city, telling what he would have done to a battle ship Francois Laine presented to the State regime. Mr. Laine has made an affidavit to the truth of this story and to the exactness of the copy of the letter.

Sixty Killed by an Explosion.

Madrid, March 19.—An explosion occurred yesterday in the Santa Isabel mine at Belmez, Province of Cordova. Sixty corpses already have been recovered and many men are as yet unaccounted for.

Plague's Terrible Record.

Monday, March 19.—Two hundred and fifteen new cases and 216 deaths from the plague were reported yesterday. Five Europeans have been attacked.

SENATOR GALLINGER SPEAKS.

Says the Condition of Affars in Cuba Is Indescribable in Its Misery.

Washington, March 19.—Senator Gallinger was at the Capitol yesterday for the first time since his return from Cuba. When requested to make a statement as to the condition on the island, he responded:

"You can sign my name to any picture you may draw of utter wretchedness, destitution and hellishness in that country. The condition of affairs, so far as I had opportunity to observe it, I was only in Havana and Matanzas, is simply indescribable; I had not expected to find it half as bad as it is, and I do not believe any one who simply reads the accounts and does not see for himself can form an adequate idea of the situation. The reconcentrados are wedged into all available places in those cities, and are perishing by the thousand for want of the commonest necessaries of life. The best information obtainable leads to the conclusion that there have been beyond doubt 400,000 deaths as a result of Spain's brutal policy, and the tragedy goes on from day to day. The society of the Red Cross is furnishing some relief by its efforts, but the most of those people are beyond the reach of aid, whether through medicine or food. The mortality in Matanzas for the last four months previous to our visit had been equal to ten times the ordinary death rate.

"With reference to the military aspect of affairs in Cuba, I saw nothing which impressed me with the idea that Spain knows much about modern warfare. The solders I saw are not drilled as our soldiers are. Indeed, they lack every element of soldierly bearing, whatever may be said of their merits as fighters. The drills that I witnessed were a travesty on modern military ideas. While they were undergoing their evolutions the soldiers were talking to each other and smoking as freely and unconcernedly as they would do in their mess room. From my observation of them I should not consider them very formidable antagonists on the field of battle.

"Naturally there was much talk about the Maine disaster, and so far as I could ascertain from my conversation with Americans and with those not entirely under the influence of the Spaniards the opinion was universal that the Maine had been destroyed by an external agency, and almost every person with whom I discussed the subject in Cuba expects that the findings of the American Court of Inquiry will substantiate this view.

"There is a divergence of opinion on the island as to the probabilities of war between Spain and the United States, and I am sure that I am within the bounds of the truth when I say that almost the entire native population would wlecome any turn of events, however tragic, that would wrest Cuba from Spanish dominion. This is true not only of those who are avowedly favorable to a war for independence, but of many of those who are ranked as Spanish sympathizers, but who are at heart advocates of Cuban independence. The fact is that even in Havana the allegiance to Spain is of a very weak and doubtful character, and if war should come it will be found that there will be an uprising in that city against the mother country which would be a most important factor in shortening the contest and deciding it against Spain."

THE PRESIDENT'S TERM.

Favorable Report of Proposed Amendment Changing Date of Expiration.

Washington, March 19.—The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections has authorized a favorable report on the amendment to the Constitution of the United States, introduced by Senator Hoar, changing the time of year for the expiration of the terms of the President, Vice-President, Senators and Representatives of Congress from March 4 to the last Wednesday in April.

The change is made to take effect in 1901 and if the amendment should be accepted by Congress and be ratified by a sufficient number of States, it would have the effect of extending the terms of President McKinley and Vice-President Hobart for almost two months. The object of the amendment is to avoid the harsh weather which sometimes interferes with inauguration ceremonies when held on the 4th of March.

Destruction of the Montgomery Planned.

Key West, March 19.—There was a story here last night that the destruction of the Montgomery had been planned and would have been accomplished had she not been moved out of Havana Harbor by orders of the United States Navy Department.

Spanish officers were heard in a Havana cafe speaking in regretful tones that she had not been blown up. One said it was not too late, but the next day the Montgomery was moved out of the harbor. Meantime Captain Converse had sent a cipher dispatch to Washington and received an answer.

Naval officers here deny that the Montgomery was ordered out of Havana Harbor because of danger apprehended, but say the order was sent merely in pursuance of the plan of naval operations adopted in Washington.

New York Vaults Full of Gold.

New York, March 19.—There never has been a time, according to well-informed bankers, when the vaults of the New York Clearing House contained so much gold as at present. The $86,000,000 mark has been passed by yesterday's deposit of $3,000,000 by the National City Bank. This is the second installment of $3,000,000 within the present week.

Lynched for Stealing $20.

Batesville, Ark., March 19.—A negro boy, whose name cannot be learned, was lynched at Marcella, in Stone County, on Tuesday night. He was accused of stealing $20. The mob strung him up three times in an effort to make him confess, and finally left him on the ground in a dying condition.

Bryan Gate Receipts Where $1,300.

Jackson, Miss., March 19.—W. J. Bryan addressed an audience of 5,000 here yesterday and left immediately thereafter for Vicksburg. The crowd in town was the largest in many years. The gate receipts were more than 1,300.

Two more bodies of the Chicago fire victims have been found in the ruins.

You can't do as well anywhere else in buying a Piano, as you can here, for you can get one from us for less money, quality considered, than you could anywhere else in America. That is because our prices are not made by competition; it has not been our object to keep in line with others, but to sell Pianos at the lowest possible profit, regardless of competitors' charges.

Our immense business and low profit methods have matured side by side—the more Pianos we sell the smaller we can make the price on each instrument handled—so that to-day we have no real competitors.

You save $75 to $150 in buying your Piano from us.

What is Scott's Emulsion?

It is the best cod-liver oil, partly digested, and combined with the hypophosphites and glycerine. What will it do? It will make the poor blood of the anæmic rich and red.

It will give nervous energy to the overworked brain and nerves. It will add flesh to the thin form of a child, wasted from fat-starvation.

It is everywhere acknowledged as The Standard of the World.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

Americans Seem Able to Talk War and Do an Increasing Volume of Business at the Same Time.

New York, March 19.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade, says that neither peace nor war reports have changed the onward current of business. Orders for more than $25,000,000 gold from Europe have blocked any drift toward stringency in rates for money, and Treasury receipts of about $1,100,000 per day have kept in check any question about the currency, while exports of products have continued at a rate considerably increased, and the demand for products of the great industries shows steady expansion. Prompt action by the Senate and House has removed all fear of embarrassment through conflicting purposes at Washington. The Government is making ready without any waste of time, while frankly asuring everybody that it looks for a peaceful settlement, and hopes that its preparations may prove unnecessary.

The backbone of the situation is the excess of merchandise exports, again more than $41,000,000 in February, with an increase of $2,600,000 in miscellaneous products, $2,100,000 in provisions, $4,500,000 in cotton, and $7,000,000 in breadstuffs compared with last year, and $15,100,000 in all products. In two weeks of March exports have been 16 per cent. larger than last year, and imports have gained but 8.7 per cent.; although especially swelled by receipts of india rubber, sugar and hides. The outgo of cotton surpasses all expectations, though the price was stronger last week, and the export demand apparently paid no atention to market fluctuations. Receipts from plantations continue much greater than at the corresponding date from the largest crop heretofore produced, so that guesses about the future crop are now the main reliance of speculators.

Wheat also moves in spite of all speculation. The price has varied with conflicting reports, but closed 1-4 higher for the week, and corn was fairly well sustained, though a fraction lower, with exports from a short crop not far below the unprecedented exports from the large crop last year. Nothing yet appears in all foreign returns to indicate that anything less than the utmost this country can spare in grain will be required by foreign countries before September, but as soon as the coming crop can be fairly measured the volume of supplies available here will be reckoned against the foreign demand.

Little encouragement appears in the market for cotton goods, with print cloths a sixteenth lower than a week ago, and standard grades undersold by many of less note. The demand is large, but not large enough. In woolen goods, on the contrary, the material advance in prices has raised the only obstacle to increased transactions, and somewhat frequent cancellations indicate that dealers have been disappointed in their distribution. The boot and shoe manufacture, having chosen the opposite policy, has secured by far the largest orders ever known at this season through concessions which leave scarcely any profit for the works, but insure active operations for a half year or more to the establishments producing most heavilly. Leather is slightly weaker, and hides at Chicago average a little lower in price.

Failures for two weeks of March have been $4,206,425 in amount against $4,997,301 last year, manufacturing $1,849,058 against $2,126,279 last year, and trading $2,172,539 against $2,717,165 last year. Failures for the week have been 208 in the United States against 216 last year and 27 in Canada against 50 last year.

LATTIMER PRIEST ROBBED.

Father Aust, the Miners Friend, Chloroformed by the Burglars.

Hazleton, Pa., March 19.—The police have no clue thus far to the identity of the thieves who chloroformed and robbed the Rev. Father Aust, on Thursday night. Father Aust is the leader of the committee that pressed the case against Sheriff Martin and his deputies. He is one of the most popular priests in this neighborhood, and the outrage has excited the greatest indignation. The robbery was committed about midnight by whom or what number of men is a mystery.

It is the impression of the priest's friends that the intruders intended bodily harm, but were scared off., Father Aust is a very powerful man, standing six feet three inches in height and of magnificent physique. He would prove a dangerous opponent. He awoke early with a violent headache and nausea. His bedroom had been invaded and his clothes taken. These he found in the hall. To his calls the servants failed to respond, and after he recovered sufficiently a physician was summoned. The servants were also stupefied by the drug.

Two gold chalices and a lot of silverware, a gold cross and other trinkets were found piled in the study, evidently placed there for removal when the robbers were scared off. The priest's gold watch, chain, a heavy gold cross worth $400 and $100 in money were taken from his clothes and the garments thrown on the floor. Even the penny collections of last Sunday ewere taken, but $300 which was in the desk was overlooked.

THE SPANISH FLEET

Torpedo Boats Wait for a Cruiser at the Canaries.

SPAIN AND THE VARESA

An Official Denial Made by the Italian Government of the Reported Sale of the Armored Cruiser—Spain Willing to Submit to Arbitration.

Madrid, March 19.—The Imparcial says: "The instructions sent to the torpedo flotilla to remain at the Canary Islands are due to the Government's desire that the squadron should be escorted to Cuba by a cruiser and for no other reason."

Spain Hasn't Got the Varese.

Rome, March 19.—An official denial is given to the report that the armored cruiser Varese has been sold.

Washington, March 19.—The Navy Department has information that Spain so far has not accomplished the purchase of the Italian cruiser Varese.

Spain Would Arbitrate.

Havana, March 19.—Cable dispatches received here say that a rumor prevails in Madrid to the effect that in case of a conflict with the United States Spain would be willing to submit to arbitration by the Queen of England and the Emperor of Austra.

MR. WANAMAKER'S PLAN.

Wants This Country and Spain to Resort to Arbitration.

Lancaster, Pa., March 19.—In the course of a speech delivered here last night in furtherance of his candidacy for Governor, ex-Postmaster-General Wanamaker said:

"America requires from Spain prompt and exact recognition and settlement of her rights as the best safeguard of her own standing with the nations of the world.

"Let the whole question of the strained relations between the nations be referred for adjustment to five of our sister nations, two to be chosen by the United States and two by Spain, and these four so chosen to select the fifth arbitrator, with instructions to close up all questions in thirty days. Then the shadow of fear will lift and the country can start on again to develop its industries and fulfill its mission."

Censuring Premier Crispi.

Rome, March 19.—The Chamber of Deputies received the report last night of the Parliamentary Commission appointed last year to inquire into the charges against Signor Francesco Crispi, former Premier, in connection with the Bank of Naples scandals and the alleged illegal traffic in decorations. The commission decided unanimously that there was no ground to impeach Signor Crispi before the Senate or the ordinary courts for peculation, but that his conduct as Minister of State merited the censure of the Chamber of Deputies.

Secretary Gage's Views.

Cleveland, March 19.—Lyman J. Gage, Secretary of the United States Treasury, in an address before the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce last night, said that the main issue of the campaign of 1896, the financial question, would the leading issue in 1900, tion, would be the leading issue in 1900, again. Mr. Gage based his authority in part upon the addresses issued by the National Committees of the Democratic, Silver Republican and Populist parties. He spoke at length in favor of the gold standard.

The Pennsylvania Governorship.

Philadelphia, March 19.—A letter embodying a formal request from a committee representing signers of a petition asking the Rev. Dr. S. C. Swallow to stand as an independent candidate for Governor was sent from this city to Dr. Swallow at Harrisburg last evening. The letter is signed by thirty-six business men of Philadelphia. Dr. Swallow was the Prohibition candidate for State Treasurer last November and received the surprisingly large vote of 119,000. The normal Prohibition vote is 20,000.

Mr. Gladstone Not Improving.

Bournemouth, March 19.—The following bulletin has been issued with respect to Mr. Gladstone:

"In the absence of any improvement in Mr. Gladstone's condition, it has been settled in consultation that he should return to Hawarden next week."

The bulletin is regarded as having only one meaning. It is understood that the grievous facial plains have returned, and will no longer yield to the usual remedies.

Advance in Window Glass.

Chicago, March 19.—Semi-official announcement of an advance of 5 per cent. in the price of nearly all sizes of window glass, to go into effect April 1, was made yesterday, with the immediate effect that large orders were placed by jobbers with the trust's purchasing agency at Pittsburg. The forthcoming advance will make an increase of 40 per cent. in prices since November.

Kid McCoy Married Again.

Cleveland, March 19.—Kid McCoy was secretly married at St. Louis on March 6. It is known only that the bride is a New York girl. Doc Payne, McCoy's trainer said that McCoy was married in St. Louis on March 6, but that there were reasons why he could not divulge the name of the young woman. He was married the day after the decree of divorce was granted from his wife at Hamilton, Ohio.

To Succeed B. K. Bruce.

Washington, March 19.—It is said to be probable that President McKinley will appoint Judson C. Lyons, colored, National Committeeman from Georgia, Register of the Treasury, to succeed late B. K. Bruce. Mr. Lyons was a candidate for Postmaster of Augusta, Ga., but the white people there successfully opposed his appointment.

NO LACK OF MATERIAL.

The Newark Evening News editorially reviews the candidates for the Democratic Gubernatorial nominee, and says:

In Union ex-Senator Frederick Marsh is thought to possess the requisite qualities. Ex-Senator Robert Adrain, of Middlesex, who was once looked upon as the sure successor of Governor Werts, appears to have retired permanently from politics, and is not mentioned even as a possibility, but Middlesex none the less comes to the front with its present Senator, James H. VanCleef, whose nomination is urged by the New Brunswick Times, regardless of the fact that in 1896 Mr. VanCleef was a follower of Bryan, while The Times repudiated the Chicago ticket and gave its support to Palmer and Buckner. In the adjoining county of Somerset ex-Speaker James J. Bergen is believed by his fellow-Democrats to combine unusual elements of success, and over in Hunterdon the same opinion is expressed of ex-Senator Richard Kuhl.

MODERN CATECHISM.

The New York Tribune's Jersey editor prints the following catechism of the county trolley scheme:

What is the substance and purpose of the so-called Bergen trolley bill?

It permits Boards of Freeholders to sell trolley franchises and apply the income to the improvement of the public highways.

Does it restrict or usurp the rights or powers of citizens or municipalities?

Not in the slightest.

Why are the trolley companies opposing it?

Because its passage will effectually bar any further free gift of franchises. Cash offers made at public auction would take the place of the influence or influences now used in getting franchises.

THE STREET APPROPRIATION.

From reliable authority The Daily Press is assured that the Common Council will appropriate $20,000 for the use of the street committee for the ensuing year. The appropriation will show that the Councilmen recognize in a practical manner one of the most urgent needs of the city—good streets.

New Jersey's organized militia includes 4,297 men. Her unorganized but available force of men is 385,273.

THEATRICAL.

Farce comedy in its best expression will be the initial attraction at Music Hall this evening, when the latest farcial comedy will be offered, entitled "The Good Mr. Best," which comes fresh from triumphant engagements in all the larger cities and has succeeded in playing to the capacity of the theatres nightly. Farce comedy when well presented, is always an appreciated entertainment. Lively tunes, spirited dances, numereus songs, good natured and fresh nonsense form a very palatable amusement dish. Special scenery and electrical effects are carried intact for the proper presentation of the play. Secure your seats three days in advance at the usual place. The regular house prices will prevail for this engagement.

The most amusing and startling entertainment ever witnessed upon a public stage will be seen at Stillman Music Hall next week. The Sages, who have been creating such startling sensations throughout the country during the past season and testing the capacity of opera houses nightly, will give their first of a series of entertainments Monday evening. The entertainments are refined, remarkable and extremely interesting, and are patronized by the leading people everywhere.

BACHELORS ENTERTAINED.

They Received Striking Mementoes of Their Evening's Pleasure.

The members of the Bachelors' Club were entertained very pleasantly at the home of Carroll L. Runyon, of East Ninth street, Wednesday evening. Each of the guests was presented with a little souvenir card on which was a verse appropriate to him. Some of them were very amusing. After the game of whist was concluded, Councilman William N. Runyon entertained the "Bachelors" with song and story.

PASSING COMMENT.

The rule in this city regarding informants in illegal liquor selling cases is that one-half of the fine imposed goes to the one who acts as informer. In connection with this it has been suggested by a resident of this city, that the informant receive one-half of the penalty. For example, if the violator is given a certain number of days in the county jail, let the informant spend half of that time at the same place. The person suggesting this scheme says that it is a poor rule that won't work both ways.

* * * * * *

A little, old man walked into the office of the Bergen County Democrat at Hackensack the other day with a firm step, and said to former Senator Winton: "I want to subscribe for your paper!"

While the receipt was being made out, the new subscriber ventured:

"I guess I must be one of your old est subscribers, ain't I? How old do you think I am, anyway?"

"I should judge about seventy," guessed the former Senator.

"Ha! Ha! He! He!" laughed the old man. "I am ninety-four and going on ninety five. My name is George C. Demarest, and I have lived at Teaneck a great many years."

KIND WORDS FOR THE PRESS.

Comment of New Jersey Papers on the Improvements Made.

The Plainfield Daily Press has been enlarged and otherwise improved. The Press is a credit to the city in which it is published.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

The Daily Press, of Plainfield, one of the brightest and best newspapers of the State, was enlarged Wednesday to a seven column eight-page paper.—Madison Eagle.

The Plainfield Press has grown so that a new press has become necessary. This evidence of growth and prosperity in Plainfield affords satisfaction all around. The Press is a good newspaper.—Elizabeth Journal.

The people of Plainfield are to be congratulated in having a newspaper which appreciates the necessities of the town. The Press has just gone to a great expense in order to enlarge its sheet and thus accommodate the growing needs of the community.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

The ever progressive Plainfield Daily Press has just enlarged by the addition of eight columns to its bright pages. A German department is an innovation and cannot fail to please the multitude already tired of reading about what Spain is going to do with us.—Bound Brook State Center.

The Plainfield Daily Press appeared Wednesday in an enlarged form, having added a column to each of its eight pages. It has just added a new press and folder and is up to date in every particular. We congratulate Brother Force on this evidence of prosperity, and also congratulate Plainfield on having such an enterprising, newsy publication.—Somerville Democrat.

The Plainfield Press has forced its way to the front rank of New Jersey newspapers by the old-fashioned but invincible lever of merit. Not spasmodically, but day after day, its publisher has issued a readable and complete record of the incidents in which the people of Plainfield are interested. Plainfield has grown to such a size that The Press recently found eight pages of six columns each inadequate to hold the daily round up of news and advertising matter, and Wednesday an additional column was added to each page. Brother Force is about to install a new press in his printing establishment, making its mechanical facilities not only up-to-date, but a little ahead.—Cranford Chronicle.

Another Mock Trial.

Another mock trial was held at the Borough Public High School yesterday, and this time the jury was able to agree. The jury was selected from the 10th, 11th and 12th grades. The case was for arson and Mr. Bach, the defendant, was charged with setting fire to a building. The same lawyers that officiated last Wednesday acted yesterday, and the same witnesses were used. The jury brought in a verdict that the prisoner was not guilty, as he was under hypnotic influence when he committed the deed. At the trial one of the witnesses, a professed hypnotic, attempted to hypnotize one of the jurymen. The attempt, although very amusing, was not successful.

Stop drugging yourself with quack nostrums or "cures." Get a well-known pharmaceutical remedy that will do the work. Catarrh and Cold in the head will not cause suffering if Ely's Cream Balm is used. Druggists will supply 10c trial size or 50c full size. We mail it. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y. City. Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mont., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement, "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Pres. Church, Helena, Mont.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, March 19—The programme for the entertainment to be given this evening in the First Baptist church, New Market, under the auspices of the Father Light Missionary Society, is as follows: Violin duet, Mrs. J. H. Buckley, Mrs. C. V. D Corle, accompanied by Miss Nelson; reading, Miss Charlotte Grenelle; soprano solo, Mrs. Robert L. Giddis, with violin obligato, Mrs. J. H. Buckley; cornet solo, Mrs. J. D. Anderson; vocal trio, Mrs. Robert Giddis, Miss Jessie Haynes, Miss Cora Dayton; violin duet, Mrs. J. H. Buckley, Mrs. C. V. D. Corle; vocal duet, Miss Jessie Haynes, J. E. Low; "Delsarte," Miss Charlotte Grenelle. The affair is in charge of a committee consisting of Mrs. Robert Giddis, Mis Cora Dayton, Miss Estelis Sofield, Miss Emma Nelson. Those who will act as ushers are Miss Sadie Lawton, Miss Emma Smalley, Miss Allie Pierce, Mrs. George Harris, Miss Van-Middlesworth and Mrs. John Brokaw.

At the M. E. church last Thursday evening nearly $90 was realized from the entertainment and the proceeds from the selling of the blocks in the quilt. The sum of $70 was received from the quilt. Sadie Tilton brought in the largest amount, $22, and she received the quilt. Edna Vail turned in $17 and Stephen Kennedy $11. Other smaller amounts were received, all of which made the $70. The entire amount received was presented to Rev. Joshua Mead, the pastor of the church, as a gift of esteem from the members of the church. The pre sentation was a surprise to the pastor and he scarcely knew what to say. However he thanked the donors and wished them God-speed. A week from tomorrow Mr. Mead will preach his farewell sermon at the church.

Next Tuesday evening at the Presbyterian church a musical entertainment will be given for the benefit of the church. The programme will be an interesting one and will consist of selections by Mrs. Buckley's Ladies' Orchestra, of Plainfield; vocal trio, Mrs. Anna Abbott, Mrs. H. L. Terry and Mrs. O. B. Chandler; a piano duet, the Misses Edith Boice and Josie Deelaman; vocal solo, E. C. Martin, of Plainfield; vocal duet, Miss Clara Davis and Mrs. O. B. Chandler; banjo solo, Robert Carpenter, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Carpenter.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Scotch Plains, March 19.—The Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company, which was recently granted a franchise to run its tracks through Fanwood township, is now preparing to apply to the Township Committee to have the route changed. Instead of reaching Scotch Plains from Westfield by way of Fanwood station, the company proposes to take a more direct route, and not touch Fanwood borough. The application for the change will be made to the Committee at its meeting March 29th. The proposed change is not a popular one with the Scotch Plains property owners, as one of the greatest advantages of the trolley would be to give the town a direct connection with the Fanwood station.

Miss Lucile Drew has returned to her home in Cranford after spending a few days with friends in Fanwood.

Rev. J. S. Braker led the prayer meeting in the Baptist church last evening.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Westfield, March 19.—At the meeting of the Westfield Township Committee held last evening Col. E. W. Hein and A. A. Gaddis, the representatives of the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company, were present and discussed with the Committee the different sections of the proposed ordinance granting the company a franchise to operate a trolley road through the township. The questions discussed were the length of time of the franchise, the rates of fare, the company's liability for the paving of streets and several other matters. No definite action was taken upon any of the clauses, and the hearing will be continued next Friday night. It is probable that after the Committee comes to an agreement with the trolley representatives a popular election will be held to secure the sense of the voters upon the question of granting or refusing the franchise. The Committee also received the monthly report of E. W. Chamberlain, superintendent of the sewers, enclosing a check for fees received for five sewer permits. A communication calling attention to the bad condition of the roadbed on Clark street was referred to the superintendent of roads. A communication was read from Paul Q. Oliver, the township attorney, stating that by its articles of incorporation the Cranford Gas Light Company is given the right to lay its pipes in the township, and the Committee is powerless to interfere with the work. The only method of the legality of the company's incorporation is by quo warranto proceedings brought by the attorney general on behalf of the State. W. H. Barton presented a claim for $50 for injuries received by one of his horses through a defect in the street pavement. The claim was referred to the township attorney for investigation. Oaths of office of H. C. Sergeant, commissioner of appeal, Sherman Cooper, surveyor of highways, and Gustave Koester, constable, and the bonds of Gustave Koester and Township Treasurer Harden were received and placed on file. The question of renting town rooms for the coming year was brought up, and on motion of Committeeman Dennis the clerk was instructed to advertise for sealed bids for rooms, to be received and opened next Friday evening. Specifications and plans for the new sewer on the extension of Kimball avenue were submitted by Engineers Marsh and VanEmburgh, and they were instructed to advertise for bids for the construction of the same. A number of bills were ordered paid and the Committee adjourned to meet next Friday night.

The latest subscribers to the telephone service in Westfield are: A. E. Pearsall, residence, Carleton place; E. L. Fitch, grocery; W. B. Elliott, residence, Dudley avenue, and Powers' Hotel The company is represented in this section by Irving I. Ross.

A union service of all the Westfield Sunday-schools will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Presbyterian church.

STARTLING, BEYOND BELIEF.

The past six weeks the citizens of Plainfield have been electrified, dumbfounded, bewildered, and finally convinced by a most wonderful occurrence. Nearly every day during that time reports have reached the public press of phenomenal cures being performed upon many well-known citizens, by a young man called the Boy Phenomenon.

While he has daily been accomplishing cures of the most chronic and aggravated cases that for years have defied the skill and ability of the most eminent and learned practitioners, it was not until last week that one cure in particular was accomplished, which was so truly marvelous and phenomenal in its rapidity, that even the physician in charge, who had previously pronounced the case incurable, could hardly realize a cure had been effected.

In this nineteenth century science has made rapid progress in treating with disease in every form. Research and study have brought to light many remedies that are invaluable to suffering humanity, without doubt the greatest and grandest discovery known in the annlas of medical science for the amelioration of chronic diseases, centres on human or vital magnetism as the one great healing power whose potency is unquestioned and unrivaled.

Today there is passing in reviews before our eyes such a panorama of marvelous cures in the world of natural healing that we stand convulsed and amazed, but it must be patent to all who have given the subject attention, that the advancement made in this particular branch eclipses all others, and whose cures tower like a white shaft to the clouds, above and beyond conception.

The vital magnetism of the Boy Phenomenon is so strong and subtle in its effects that he cures the most difficult cases of chronic diseases, often by a single treatment. He stands unapproached and unapproachable, meeting with the most signal and surprising success after all others have failed, without a compeer in the dazzling noontide of his brilliant carreer. The light of the marvelous cures he has accomplished in Plainfield are indeed a revelation to the sick, astonishing to the most incredulous, and converting the rankest skeptic to his most enthusiastic follower. He causes the philosopher to stand aloof and wonder and marvel at his miraculous success.

To the Public:

I, Mrs. W. H. Haggerty, residing at 41 Chatham street, Plainfield, hereby state my little daughter Viola, 9 years of age, has been totally blind since birth. Doctors had told me she could never be cured. Anyway I took her to the Revere House and she was examined by Dr. Levasseur, the physician in charge of the Boy Phenomenon, who said the chances of benefiting her were so slim that he would not take the case. As we were leaving the office the Boy Phenomenon entered, and seeing her sightless eyes gave her a short treatment. In 10 minutes after he placed his hands over her eyes she was able to see objects the first time in her life. As we were going home she repeatedly surprised us by pointing out different objects she saw. She has had three treatments since and her sight is getting stronger daily. Words cannot express the heartfelt gratitude I feel at her sight being given back to her.

Mrs W. H Haggerty.

I can cheerfully verify the above statements of facts, as I am personally acquainted with Mrs. Haggerty and knew the pitable condition of her daughter Viola, previous to her visiting the Boy Phenomenon, and was myself an eye witness when the miracle was performed, and now after 11 days have passed, know her sight is growing stronger ever day.

Mrs. J. H. Carney.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

To Dry Children's Shoes.

When the little ones have finished their play, they should be taught to remove their shoes and stockings and put on dry ones. House shoes of soft leather or felt are inexpensive and comfortable, and they last a long time, besides being a great saving in noise and the nerve irritation that is often harder to bear than the laborious work with which the housemother has to struggle.

As soon as the shoes are taken off they should be filled to the very tops with dry oats. It is a custom of one of the most provident women who ever raised a family to prepare stocking feet of the sizes of the various shoes worn by the children. These are numbered and hung up on a nail in the entryway, where the little ones keep their wrappings. These stocking feet have short tops; in fact, they are shaped more like a baby's sock than anything else. They are filled with oats and sewed up at the top. A couple of inches of extra room is allowed at the top, and when the shoes are to be filled, the oats are shaken loosely through the stocking; then it is put into the shoe and adjusted as nearly in the form of the human foot as posible. A few gentle raps will settle the oats into the shoe; then a strong cord is tied around the stocking top as close to the grain as possible. The oats being perfectly dry occupy a given amount of space. As they absorb the moisture, which they begin to do immediately, they swell a little and keep the leather from shrinking.—Buffalo Express.

How to "Look Indian."

Somebody dropped a stickpin in the hall the other day and had hard work to find it. She hunted high and low and on her hands and knees, and with a candle specially procured for the purpose, but it was no use; the pin was very tiny and unperceivable, its value being that of association rather than size or brilliancy. The somebody, after a final shake of the rugs, was about to give it up forever, when one of the children chanced to come along. "Why don't you look 'Indian' for it?" he asked. Before the somebody realized what was meant, down dropped the youngster on the floor, his head and his whole body lying sidewise and just as close to the dead level as possible. In this position his eyes roved rapidly over the floor. "I have it," he shouted presently, and sure enough, right in the middle of the floor, in so plain a place that it had escaped notice, was the missing stickpin. The youngster then explained that "looking Indian" meant putting the head to the ground in order to catch sight of the smallest object between himself and the horizon. "They do it on the plains all the time," he said. "That's why they can always tell who's coming. But it works in houses just as well as on the plains. Why, we never lose anything in the nursery nowadays; we just 'look Indian' and find it right off."

The Sin of Worrying.

It is care that kills. One who deliberately cultivates a disposition to throw care to the winds soon becomes an indispensable person to his friends. Care is worry, pure and simple. The burden that causes us to worry is heavy enough to bear, in all probability, without adding to it that of all-engrossing care, which never lets the mind rest for an instant. Suppose you do "have troubles of your own." Can you cure them by worrying? One's best effort to overcome the trials and tribulations of this life is all that is demanded. If that effort surmounts the difficulties, well and good. If it fails, the fret that wears wrinkles in one's soul, the worry that makes us hated by our friends, the care that wears deep furrows on the brow do not help one out of the slough of despond, but rather bury us the deeper. The world gets very tired of men and women who placard their woes on their faces and moan it in their voices in hourly conversation. But the world dearly loves those people who are merry and companionable. We owe something to society, to the world of people about us, and have no right to make ourselves public nuisances because the clouds obscure our sun.—Washington Star.

Veils Considered Injurious.

Paradoxes are in fashion—a woman pays $7 for a dotted veil and $70 to her oculist to to correct astigmatism. An oculist once said that every dot in a woman's veil was worth $5 to the gentlemen of his profession. The eye is being constantly strained to avoid these obstacles in its way, and, of course, it is weakened and tortured. Think of a woman paying $1.50 for something that will, in time, destroy her eyesight just as sure as fate. But women do these things in spite of everything—except when the overworked eyes begin to pain, and then they're glad enough to do most anything for quick relief.

A Suggestion for Corn Bread.

Put the milk that the recipe calls for on the stove, and when it is hot stir in the cornmeal and let it cook for ten or fifteen minutes. An easy way to prevent it from burning is to set the dish on an asbestos pad. Then proceed with the mixing in the usual way. The extra cooking removes the raw taste of the meal and greatly improves the flavor of the bread, besides making it entirely digestible.

LACE APPLIQUE TO HAVE ITS REIGN

Sashes of All Kinds, Both for the Neck and Waist in Favor.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

Dame Fashion always presents some disturbing elements, or suggestions like the bustle, crinoline, or long trains on street gowns, each season, just to excite interest and the spirit of opposition in women, and this time it is the sloping shoulder, which no one can contemplate with any degree of satisfaction. The long shoulder seam reaching down on to the arm hampers our movements and is altogether un comfortable, but it is safe to assume, from previous revivals of old-time modes, that when this condition does come about modern ingenuity will have devised some means of giving the appearance of sloping shoulders without the discomfort. We have been threatened with the bustle, too; but while the skirt is so close fitting around the hips it cannot materialize in any very extensive proportions.

In all the details of dress we can indulge our fancies to the utmost, as trimmings of every sort are to be worn, and the advance importations show a variety in colors and kinds never surpassed. Black braid, black satin, and velvet ribbon are to be very much used for trimming the new spring gowns of wool and net; and garnitures in the form of yokes, bole ros, and skirt panels are shown in a great variety, made of silk and mohair braid, silk and jetted net and chiffon, and gorgeously jewelled lace. Bands of Honiton lace applique, on chiffon and net foundation, studded here and there with tiny spangles, are among the novelties. Lace appplique of any sort is the vogue, and, if properly applied, it is sure to be an artistic trimming. Applique sprays are sewn on velvet, satin, and silk, as well as chiffon and net, of which yokes and vests are made, and the one point to be considered in the use of applique lace is that the material to which it is applied shall be fine and handsome. Wide Cluny lace insertion is used to trim fancy waists of white chiffon, and there seems to be a preference for the Honiton variety of lace this season. Yak laces have also put in an appearance again.

Sashes of all kinds and conditions are well to the front in fashion, and the new ribbons are more beautiful than ever. There are Roman stripes, checks and plaids, with satin bordered edges, and flowered, corded, and watered ribbons of all kinds. Net, chiffon, and lace sashes will continue in favor; but it is not alone sashes for the waist that swell the list. The sashes for the neck are quite as conspicuous and more generally worn, for all women seem to like the long silken cravats around their throats. They are made of liberty gauze, chiffon and thin silk, or of Swiss, with hemstitched and lace-trimmed ends. The newest of these neck sashes is a scarf of net with an elaborate lace pattern at the ends and an edge all around. They range in price from $4 to $15, and are really very elegant. In smaller things for the neck there is unlimited variety. Short bows and knotted cravats of pure white lawn, with knife-plaited frills on the ends, are added to an array of lace knots and neck frills, which are beyond description.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

When She is Most Fascinating.

When 30 years of age woman is most fascinating. All the women famous for power over the hearts of men, from Cleopatra to Helen down, were nearer 40 than 20 when at the zenith of their power.

At a literary salon in Paris Balzac was once asked by a pretty little miss of 17 why it was he liked women she would call passe. "Why, monsieur, even when they are as old as 40 you seem to enjoy their society!" Balzac looked at her earnestly for a second and then laughed heartily. He bent over to explain matters and remarked in a serious voice as though weighing every word he said: "Perhaps the secret lies in the simple fact that the woman of 20 must be pleased, while the woman of 40 tries to please, and the older woman's power consists, not as has been so often said, in understanding and making the most of her own charms, but in comprehending and with happy tact calling out and making the most of the good qualities of the man whose favor she seeks."

There is no doubt that a man always admires a clever woman, yet he enjoys himself better with a woman who makes him feel that he is clever. Of course all the men like being entertained for a while by a well-informed woman, but man is essentially vain, and he enjoys much better the happy tact which makes him believe that he is entertaining the well-informed woman.

The woman a man likes best is not always the smartest or most brilliant. No, indeed. A pair of brown, sympathetic eyes, a sweet voice, will do away with all the logic and philosophy of a man's brain has ever entertained. Of course the woman must have the happy knack of discovering what subject the man talks about best. Then she must listen quietly and in an interested manner. Perhaps it would be a good suggestion for her to draw him out with happy queries until he is astonished at his own brilliancy.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Amateur Book Cover Making.

Who that is at all aesthetic has not tried her hand at an original poster. A variation of this particular talent is the latest fad in polite society for making book covers. Of course the finishing is left to the binder. The amateur is supposed to make a suitable design, which must be drawn upon a fine piece of leather. The designs most in favor are those rich in color, which are carried out in a perfect incrustation of mock gems. Only favorite authors are thus honored. The bejeweled volume when finished is left in some conspicuous place to show the taste as well as the accomplishment of the possessor.

Magazines, instead of being left loose, are placed between two stiffened covers, held together by silk elastic. For these covers, chamois skin is used. The chamois is first handsomely embroidered in original pattern, or grewsomely hand-painted in poster fashion. Cabochons, spangles, silver and gold thread and jewels are coquettishly combined in the adornment of the new poster book covers. They are unique and charming, and can be made as individual as heart could desire.

Black and yellow dragons, strange scarlet serpents, showers of golden rain and white-faced maidens exceedingly thin and with dark black hair, are some of the nightmarish themes that are worked into the uncanny effects that writhe under the misnomer of "artistic productions." As a rule the poorer the artist, the more delightfully dreadful is the result.—Chicago Times Herald.

New Style of Haircut for Boys.

There's a new cut to little boys' hair. The Little Lord Fauntleroy style went out some years ago, since when there has been an era of close-clipped heads. Ringlets and fluffy manes and poodle-dog effects, and all else that made boys look like girls, were tabooed. Even "snappering," that unaesthetic process that made a head look as though it had been treated by a razor or a lawn-mower was not uncommon. The new cut continues to scorn anything like curl or fluff, but it makes concessions as regards length. Parted in the middle, the hair hangs down in straight, uncompromising lines until it grazes the shoulders, where the mass is hacked off, whisk-broom fashion. There is no hint of fringe or bang, or even of shingling. The ears are completely covered, and only a narrow slit of little face peeps out between the curtaining locks. The effect, as a whole, is mediæval, and that it is now and then out of keeping with the wide-awake face of the average American youngster is not to be denied. The average mother is no more dismayed by this incongruity, however, than she was by that confronting her when she set out to Fauntleroy her little lad.—Harper's Bazar.

Salt and Scabby Potatoes.

Salt will not prevent or cure potato scab unless used in such quantities as to destroy the potatoes also. Applications of corrosive sublimate or flowers of sulphur at the time of planting the seed are the best remedies in use.

Among suggestions to book lovers by a lover of books are these: "Books are neither card racks, crumb baskets, nor receptacles for dead leaves." "It is better to give a book than to lend it." The last seems to be a distinction without a difference.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And stil what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

CHINA MUST YIELD

Russia Refuses to Withdraw Her Recent Demands.

FRANCE ALSO SPEAKS OUT

She Serves Notice of the Concessions She Will Expect, and Gives China Eight Days in Which to Make Reply—No Alternative But to Agree.

London, March 19.—It is announced in a dispatch to the Times, from Pekin, that the mission of Shu-King-Chen, the Chinese Minister ta Germany, who was sent to St. Petersburg in an effort to prevail upon Russia to modify her demands upon China, has been unsuccessful, and it is added that there is no alternative but to agree to the Russian demands.

The demands made by Russia recently upon China include, according to a dispatch from the Pekin correspondent of the Times, published March 7, the surrender to Russia of all sovereign rights over Port Arthur and Ta-lien-Wan for the same period and on the same conditions as in the case of Germany at Kiao-Chou. In addition, Russia demands the right to construct a railroad under the same conditions as the Trans-Manchurian Railroad from Petuna, on that line, to Kwang-Chung-Tzu, Mukden and Port Arthur. Five days, it apears, were allowed China in which to reply, and in the event of her non-compliance Russia threatened to move troops into Manchuria. Action, however, was postponed, in view of the desire of the Chinese Government to intercede directly at St. Petersburg, for which purpose the Chinese Minister at Berlin was sent to the Russian capital.

FRANCE'S CURT DEMAND.

She Will Give China Eight Days in Which to Reply.

London, March 19.—The French demands upon China, in addition to those cabled from Pekin last night (that China shall not cede any portion of the four provinces of Kwang-Tung Kwang-Si Yun-Nan and Kwei-Chou; that the railroad from Lung-Chou-Ting, on the northern frontier of Tonquin, shall be extended via Pase Siam into the Yun-Nan province, and that a coaling station be granted to France at Lei-Chou-Ful, in the Hen-Chou peninsula, north of Hai-Nan), include that the director of the Imperial Post Office be a Frenchman, evidently with a view of separating it from the control of Sir Robert Hart, the director of the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs. The cession of a coaling station at Kwang-Chou is also demanded, on the same terms as Kiao-Chou Bay, ceded to Germany, with a railroad concession to include exclusive mining privileges.

Eight days are allowed China in which to reply to the French demands and threats are interpreted to indicate the French occupation of the province of Hai-Nan, unless the Chinese comply.

ENGLAND WILL NOT INTERFERE.

Recognizes That We Have the Foremost Interests in Hawaii.

London, March 19.—The Government of Great Britain is surprised at the reports of the Senate Commitees on Foreign Relations, which after presenting a joint resolution for the annexation of Hawaii, set forth that Great Brtain was plotting for the absorption of Hawaii. A high official of the British Foreign Office said yesterday:

"It is unfortunate that the committee has such an erroneous impression. I cannot imagine upon what supposed facts they base their report. It seems improbable that the Senators would issue official statements on no other basis than rumors and suspicions. As a matter of fact, nothing is further from Great Britain's intention than to interfere in any way with the existing regime in Hawaii. No steps in that direction were ever contemplated. On the contrary, her majesty's government has recognized the United States has the foremost interests in Hawaii and that it is inevitable that Hawaii should be under American influence."

Army Reorganization Bill.

Washington, March 19.—From remarks made by the members of the House Committee on Military Affairs it is inferred that they unanimously favor Chairman Hull's bill providing for the reorganization of the army on a war footing of 104,000 men. Two of the members, Messrs. Cox of Tennessee and Hay of Virginia, desire that the provision authorizing the President to call the increased force into service shall be made more specific. As the bill is drawn, the President is authorized to issue his call "in time of war." The committee yesterday began the consideration of the bill, but did not finish its work. Another meeting of the committee will be held to-day.

McDonald to Referee.

San Francisco, Cal., March 19.—The representatives of Peter Jackson and Jim Jeffries have agreed upon James McDonald, the baseball umpire, as referee for the battle of the heavyweights. McDonald was the only man proposed. It was also agreed not to hit in the clinches, but the men are permitted to protect themselves in the breakaway, which means that they may hit at that time if they deem it advisable. The fight will take place Tuesday.

Congress Will Act Quickly.

Washington, March 19.—Senator Hawley called upon the President and Secretary Alger yesterday and said he would get the Senate Committee on Military Affairs together at any time the department thought it desirable to act on any pending legislaton, with regard to the armq. It is the belief of General Hawley that Congress will pass the Three Battalion Military bill introduced by Representative Hull at the request of Secretary Alger.

Indians Said to Be Starving.

Seattle, Wash., March 19.—The tribe of 300 Indians located along the Tanana River in Alaska have been battling with starvation the last winter. This news was brought by a trapper, a fur buyer, to Circle City. He stated that the Indians had eaten up all their dogs. A relief expedition has been sent with food.

NEW YORK LETTER.

Sol Smith Russell is one of the actors who had been looking for many years for a good play. He has had many which partly suited him and in which the unique charm of his personality atoned for lack of interest in the drama. This year Martha Morton wrote him "A Bachelor's Romance," and Mr. Russell played it for many weeks at the Garden Theater, Manhattan. It was generally agreed to be the best play, on the whole, which he has had, and Mr. Russell has dropped his list of dramas and is devoting his entire season to "A Bachelor's Romance." The play is thoroughly American, of course. Mr. Russell has tried several un-American parts, among them Bob Acres, but he has never proved successful in making them seem real, and he is likely to continue in parts in which his own strongly marked characteristics are appropriate. David Holmes, the bachelor of this story, is a middle aged editor of a magazine, much in love with his young ward, Sylvia. The girl loves David, of course—no girl could help it when David is Mr. Russell—but not at all as she loves young Harold Reynolds. David learns this and about the same time learns that Harold is a competitor for a $10,000 prize which his magazine has offered. He is the judge and Harold's manuscript is good. If he gets the prize he will be able to marry Sylvia; if he doesn't there is a possible chance for the bachelor. The young man gets the prize and the girl—and the bachelor gets the audience. No one can doubt Mr. Russell's complete fitness to express everything which the author may have given him in the plot.

Disinfecting Library Books.

When the New York Public Library moves into the building of the future on the present site of the reservoir in Bryant Park it will be a circulating library. All citizens of New York will have the privilege of taking books to their homes. Each book, upon its return from the people to the library, is to be put through a process of fumigation sterilization, warranted to destroy all microbes and bacilli, however latent.

This system has been approved by Dr. John S. Billings, director of the library, who conducted a series of experiments in the Horton laboratory in Philadelphia.

A number of old Patent Office reports were inoculated with bacteria and in a short time the books were full of germs of measles, scarlet fever smallpox and other diseases. Trials were then made of various germ-destroying substances, and as a result of the experiments Dr. Billings says that he has a perfect disinfectant in the gas formaldehyde. The volume is placed in a glass or metal box, with a solution of formalin in water, and left for an hour or two. At the end of that time the vapor has penetrated into every particle of the book and not a live germ can be found.

Bibliophile will be glad to know that the formalin will destroy the Croton bug, responsible for the ruin of so many fine bindings in this country. The traditional book worm is now a rarity in America, but the Croton bug has taken its place, and the collector of rare volumes has in Dr. Billings discovery a preventive of the ravages that the insect's passion for morocco and calfskin causes.

It is difficult to get the people in New York to use the name "Manhattan" when speaking of that part of the city which is on Manhattan Island. Brooklynites are now residents of New York, but when they are about to cross the bridge they always speak of it as going, not to "Manhattan," but to "New York." The Brooklyn street cars that cross the bridge carry signs "direct to New York." Is, then, Manhattan still to be New York, as of old in all except official language?

New York has expended $5,000,000 for a speedway for fast horses and now it is prepared to spend $800,000 for a speedway for bicycles. Plans have been drawn for such a speedway along the road connecting the Bronx and Pelham Parks. Wheelmen number 600,000 in New York, or one-fifth of the entire population. The wheelmen should have their speedway.

New York may well be proud of its police force that has 400 men more than six feet tall. The Broadway squad ninety giants, picked from this regiment of giants, will divide the honors with the "sky-scrapers" in the eyes of open-mouthed strangers wandering up Broadway. CYRUS THORP.

THE REAL KING OF NORWAY.

Traces His Descent from "Harold the Fair-Haired."

Few people are aware, save those who know the country well, that there is another King besides Oscar.

His name is Ivar Tofte, and he keeps what is called a "station" in the Gudbrandsdal, a valley beyond the Romsdal, on the way to Christiania, where many very old Norwegian families live. A "station," it should be explained, is a house where horses and carriages can be hired. Where there are no railway routes in Norway there are those "land-skyds," some fast and some slow. Here a certain number of horses and carioles, stolkjaerres or trilles, must be kept for the use of travelers.

Old Ivar Tofte then—he is an elderly man—keeps a station. But for all that, he traces his descent straight down from Harold Haarfager—Harold the fair-haired—and says he is really King of Norway. This Harold's date is so remote that it is "wrapped in mystery," but the chronologers give it as from 860 (?) to 933. In his own district Tofte is considered King and disputes have been brought to him to be settled, just as if he were King, disputes which would not be taken to the real one. It is asserted that on one occasion King Oscar and Ivar Tofte met, and Tofte, patting Oscar on the back, exclaimed: "Ah, old fellow, if every one had their rights, I should be where you are, and you should be some where else."

Tofte is not without evidence of his royal lineage. He possesses a glorious service of gold plate, besides other relics of bygone splendor, and, rumor has it, keeps the best store of aquavitae in Norway. Aquavitae is the national spirit, and it is only here and there in recognized shops that it is for sale. You cannot buy either it or whisky at most of the hotels, for the sale of spirits is very rigorously legislated for in the two kingdoms, and as for public houses (so-called), there are none.—Montreal Star.

THE ORIGIN OF CHESS.

A Peculiar Story Regarding the Introduction of the Game.

To-day it is the accepted belief that India was the original home of chess, and that it was transplanted thence to Persia in the sixth century of our era. Firdusi, the Persian poet, tells, in his great epic, "Shah Nameh" (the Book of Kings), a curious story about the introduction of the game. There came one day to the great king, Naushirawan, an envoy from his tributary, the king of Hind, bearing among rich presents a handsome chessboard and the strangest letter ever sent to overlord, proposing a riddle to his almighty majesty, and insisting on a solution to it. Naushirawan was to set his wise men to discover, from the board and the pieces the principles of the game. If they succeeded, then the king of Hind would dutifully pay his tribute as heretofore. If they failed, then clearly wisdom did not dwell with them, and he could no longer demean himself by paying tribute to the lord of such ignoramuses rather would he claim tribute himself. Naushirawan was sorely perplexed. He handled the pieces and examined the board; he tried to bribe the envoy to reveal the secret; at length he begged seven days' grace. Then he summoned his wise men from far and near, and put to them the puzzle. They were as nonplussed as the Egyptian wise men were to interpret Pharaoh's dreams. They pulled long faces and consulted the stars; they wrangled and argued; but all was in vain. At length a Joseph appeared in the person of the king's chief counsellor who had hitherto held aloof in regard for his dignity, but who now promised that, given secrecy and seclusion he would read this riddle. In a day and a night he returned from his study, and expounded to the court the mysteries of the game of chess, to the king's great joy, the envoy's chagrin, and the salvation of the revenue.

A Fence Seventy Miles Long.

The longest fence in the world is probably that which has just been finished by the Erie Cattle Company along the Mexican border. It is seventy-five miles in length and separates exactly, for its entire distance, the two republics of North America. The fence was built to keep the cattle from running across the border and falling easy prey to the Mexican cow-punchers. Although it cost a great deal of money it is estimated that cattle enough will be saved in one year to more than pay for it. It is a barbed-wire fence, with mesquite and cottonwood poles, and for the entire length of it runs as straight as the crow flies.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Feeding Elephants.

Elephants in the Indian army are fed twice a day. When meal time arrives, they are drawn up in line before a row of piles of food. Each animal's breakfast includes ten pounds of raw rice, done up in five two-pound packages. The rice is wrapped in leaves and then tied with grass. At the command, "Attention!" each elephant raises its trunk and a package is thrown into its capacious mouth. By this method of feeding not a single grain of rice is wasted.—Golden Days.

When the poor law was first introduced a Dublin beggar woman whom a gentleman referred to the poorhouse said: "This poor law's a grand thing for the sowls of the gintlemen." "Why so?" Bekaise now when we axes for alms they only say go to the poorhouse, but before there was a poorhouse they used to say 'Go to the devil!'"

WHITE RIBBON ARMY'S TRIBUTE OF SORROW.

Memorial Service For the Late Miss Frances E. Williard.

EULOGISTIC WORDS SPOKEN.

W. C. T. U. MEMBERS ACKNOWLEDGE HER GREAT LEADERSHIP.

Pulpit of the First Baptist Church, Where the Service Was Held, Distinguished by a Picture of the Great Temperance Leader—Mrs. Emma Bourne, State President of the W. C. T. U., Delivered an Address Appropriate to the Occasion—Remarks by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Who Had Charge of the Service—Other Speakers.

There was a mark of impressiveness evidenced at the memorial services held in the First Baptist church last evening in honor of the late Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the National W. C. T. U. The large number of people present testified strongly to the high regard and esteem felt for the departed woman.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, superintendent of the Union County Union, was in charge of the services, and Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the church, assisted by reading the Scriptures and offering a fervent prayer. In the prayer Dr. Yerkes mentioned lovingly the departed woman, in whose honor the services were held.

Directly in front of the pulpit there was arranged a large picture of Miss Willard, surrounded by bunches of lillies and white ribbon.

The selections by the choir were impressive and appropriate, while the solos by Miss Harris and Mrs. Ward were rendered with strong effect. After the opening exercises the congregation sang "Gently, Gently, Lead Us Lord," which hymn was sung by Miss Anna Gordon to Miss Willard just before she died.

Mrs. Tomlinson made a few remarks at the opening, in which she expressed the feelings and sentiments of many regarding Miss Willard's life and character. She was acquainted with Miss Willard and her remarks were fully enjoyed. In part she spoke as follows:

"Miss Willard was very strong in her purposes, and so lovely in her character. We all loved Miss Willard. Her name was a household name at home and abroad. I was much impressed a few years ago, while visiting an Indian settlement in Rhode Island, with a picture of Miss Willard. When asked what the picture was doing there, the inmate replied, 'We all love Miss Willard.'

"Miss Willard was a recognized leader. We shall miss her face and her cheer. We cannot tell why she was taken away, but we know that God never makes any mistakes. We know God will lead us on to victory."

Mrs. Tomlinson then introduced the State president of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Emma Bourne, of Newark, who spoke impressive words of the late Miss Willard. In part she talked as follows:

"When the names of many prominent persons are forgotten, the name of Miss Willard will be remembered. She had a peculiar faculty of setting in motion many forces.

"From early childhood Miss Willard had a great desire to relieve suffering humanity. Many times she has breathed the prayer, 'Lord help the crowd.' In a few years the Lord helped her to answer that prayer. She accepted the position of president of president of the Chicago W. C. T. U., in preference to taking a high-salaried position. Later she was selected as National president of our large body of white-ribboners.

"Wherever Miss Willard went and whenever she spoke, she was always received grandly and cordially. She never forgot to thank anyone who did anything for her or the cause she represented.

"At one time in Chicago a reporter called on her and asked her if she had a motto. Miss Willard replied in the affirmative, and said her motto was 'My Life a Vow.'

"There was something about Miss Willard that drew about her the best men and women. Her annual address was watched for eagerly by the world at large. We are glad that for so many years we had this matchless leader. We are glad she had the desire to uplift humanity.

"While we realized that we were bereft of our leader, we also realized that we still have a heavenly leader who will lead us safely through this life. We don't need to be anxious about dying if we only live right. This glorious temperance work will go on for it is God's work."

At the conclusion of Mrs. Bourne's

TURNERBUND MET HERE

IMPORTANT GATHERING OF GERMANS IN SAENGERBUND HALL.

Delegates Present From Many Places in the Metropolitan District—Will Contest for Prizes in Paterson in July

Delegates from the Independent Turnerbund, including societies from Paterson, Passaic, Newark, Williamsburgh, Brooklyn, Union Hill, Hoboken, Elizabthport and Plainfield, met yesterday in Saengerbund Hall on Somerset street. Each society was represented by three delegates who arrived early in the forenoon and remained until 5:30 in the afternoon. During the above hours the delegates were in session. On their arrival they were given dinner at the Crescent Hotel.

One main feature of the meeting was the consideration for adoption of the new constitution. The matter was generally discussed and adopted. Several resolutions were adopted signifying the desire of the members to take part in the prize Swiss Turnerbund tournament of the United States to be held at Paterson July 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th. At this tournament members of the society from Switzerland will be present and take part. There will also be representatives from all parts of this country.

Another important matter discussed was the advisability of giving an excursion next fall. The plan suggested is to give an outing at Fort Lee and to have the members walk from Passaic to the former place, as was the customs years ago. The matter was left to a committee to arrange and report at a later meeting. The other business transacted was of a routine nature chiefly.

Funeral of a Former Plainfielder.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Asbury Park, March 21.—The funeral of the late Alonzo Wallace, formerly of Plainfield, was held yesterday afternoon from the Bradley Beach Methodist church. Wallace met his death while engaged in work Friday. He was employed by a house mover, and while busy at his duty the sweep used to provide the power for moving buildings broke and struck him with fatal effect. He was a member of the Red Men and that order assisted at the funeral. Joseph Noel and daughter, of Plainfield, were in attendance at the obsequies.

Card From Councilman Hetfield.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In your issue of Saturday night you mention that I am in a way responsible for the ordinance prohibiting the sale of cider Sunday. My views have been well-known for a long time by the city authorities as to the selling of cider or other merchandise Sunday by those who observe Saturday as their Sabbath. I had nothing whatever to do with framing or passing the ordinance in question.

SHOPPING BY COPS, THEN ARRESTS.

POLICE DETERMINED TO ENFORCE THE SUNDAY OBSERVANCE LAW AGAINST THE LOCAL VIOLATORS.

Three Squads Went in as Many Different Directions, Made Purchases Ranging From Cigars to Doll Babies, and Then Swore Out Warrants and Made Arrests When They Went Out on Their Beats—Culprits Before City Judge.

There was weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth among those of the small store keepers who kept "open house" yesterday. The mighty arm of the law was stretched forth and gathered them in without regard for nationality or religion. According to the ordinance relating to the morals, peace and good order of the community, only the sale of milk, drugs and other necessities are allowed on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday. Under this law, the police raided eleven small establishments in every corner of the city and haled the proprietors before the City Judge. The same ordinance provides that any person who habitually observes the seventh day as the Sabbath may carry on his business Sunday in such a manner as not to disturb the religious observance of Sunday as the Sabbath.

The raid against the alleged "cider joints," which was inaugurated by Mayor Fisk last week, was really the preliminary start toward the movement that was begun yesterday. It is claimed that these stores have had a bad influence against the good morals of the city when open on Sunday. A conference between the Mayor, City Judge and the Chief of Police was held and a wholesale raid was decided.

Three details of officers in citizens clothes were sent out in search of the necessary evidence for raiding. Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson went in one direction. They visited the stores of Jose Carbone, 126 North avenue, and Vito Ferero, 224 West Front street. They purchased cigars, cigarettes and tobacco at the places for the varied amounts of 25 cents and 20 cents respectively.

Roundsman Flynn and Patrolman McCarthy made a trip visiting the stores of Augusta J. Gold, 653 West Third street; Morris Hedenskie, 836 South Second street; Fred Huff, West Front street and Jefferson avenue; Fortunato Margentino, 128 Park avenue. These stores are all small places where tobacco, candy and soft drinks are sold. The officers purchased small articles, principally cigars, the sales amounting to 63 cents in all.

The third detail was composed of Patrolmen Mattox and Totten. They went to the stores of Joseph Riggi, 401 Plainfield avenue; Tony Cregan, 521 West Third street; Mrs. Catherine Goeller, 219 Plainfield avenue; John Wilson, 310 Liberty street, and Pasynolisso Daruso, 711 Park avenue. Cregan has a little grocery besides a small assortment of various other lines. There they bought a can of salmon for 15 cents. At Riggi's they bought cigars and a bottle of blueing; at Mrs. Goeller's some candy, and at Wilson's a top and cord and a doll baby with fluffy hair and a very scanty wardrobe. Their purchases amounted to sixty cents in all.

The details started out on their rounds at 1 o'clock and made their purchases. Then they returned to the Mayor's office, where they were examined and the warrants sworn out before the City Judge.

When the night squad came on duty at 7 o'clock last evening they were given the warrants to serve, and the prisoners were brought to the station house at once. The visits of the officers to the different stores were received with dismay. Some of the victims were indignant and expressed their ideas in no measured terms. There was weeping by the families as the husbands were marched away. One poor man, thoroughly frightened at the course events had taken, dropped on his knees and begged the policemen for mercy.

City Judge DeMeza and Mayor Fisk were both present at the station house when the excited prisoners were brought there. With their friends and followers, they soon crowded the little courtroom.

The alleged offenders were arraigned one after another before the City Judge and given a chance to plead. Mrs. Augusta J. Gold was the first to appear. She was indignantly tearful. She did sell Sunday, she said, but she did not sell Saturday.

"I won't break my religion," she exclaimed. "I didn't sell yesterday. I don't want to sell yesterday." The Judge considered that a plea of guilty and entered it as such.

Huff pleaded not guilty and explained that he did not own the place, but was running it for the proprietor. He was held in $200 bail for trial next morning. Margentino pleaded guilty without debate. Hendeskie declared that he had never heard of the law before and was not guilty. He was held under $200 bonds for trial. Riggi pleaded not guilty.

Daruso entered a plea of guilty, but begged the Judge to remember that he only ran the place for Judge Nash who, he said, everybody knew as a "Seventh-day." Wilson also pleaded guilty, but said his wife ran his store. Carbone entered a plea of guilty without discussion. Ferrero declared that he was not guilty. Cregan admitted his own guilt.

Councilman Walter L. Hetfield appeared for several of the prisoners, and after consulting with them asked the Judge that Carbone and Margentino be allowed to retract their pleas as they did not understand. Justice William Newcorn made the same request for Mrs. Gold. The Judge decided to think it over.

The other three who pleaded guilty, Tony Cregan, John Wilson and Pasynolisso Daruso, were then each sentenced to pay a fine of $5 or go to jail for twenty days. Wilson would not pay at first, but a short acquaintance with one of the cells soon decided him in favor of paying the $5 to the city. The other two paid.

The trial of the rest was set for this morning at the Council Chambers. Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh was present to represent the city. Justice Newcorn acted as attorney for Mrs. Gold. Councilman Hetfield was lawyer for Huff, Margentino, Carbone, Ferero, Riggi and Mrs. Goelier. Mrs. Goeller was unable to be present on account of illness, but her husband appeared for her. Mr. Hetfield entered a plea of guilty for her and asked for a suspension of sentence on account of extenuating circumstances. Mr. Marsh made no objection. The Judge reserved his decision.

After a consultation on the part of the three lawyers, it was announced that the old complaints would be dropped and new ones started so that the correct names might be used. The attorneys for the prisoners entered pleas of not guilty on all the other cases and the Judge set down the trial for Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

It can be stated on good authority that there were several other places visited for evidence besides the eleven stores that were raided. Other arrests may follow.

GOOD FOR NINETY-NINE YEARS.

Cranford Committee Advances the Westfield and Elizabeth Ordinance.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Cranford, March 21.—The Township Committee held a special meeting Saturday evening to consider the ordinance granting a franchise to the Westfield and Elizabeth trolley road. There was a large attendance of the citizens, and much interest was taken in the proceedings. Ex-Sheriff Hine, of Newark, was here, representing the company.

There was considerable discussion as to the length of time for which the franchise should be granted. Many citizens and members of the committee advocated a period of fifty or seventy-five years. It was finally decided to make the limitation ninety-nine years. In this form the ordinance was passed to its second reading.

WARRENVILLE SCHOOL STRIFE.

Friends of Young Fred Sage Rally to Support of the Teacher.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Warrenville, March 21—The story of the strife at the annual school election over the question of employing a man or woman teacher, as tersely exploited in The Daily Press, has made gossip for this rural community for several days. Friends of Fred Sage, the young man who has taught the school for the past year, say that the school under his direction was complimented by the County Superintendent Rev. J Mets as one of the best in Somerset. Young Mr. Sage was so well thought of, it is said, that he was invited to make an address before the county teachers' association which will meet in North Plainfield next Saturday. He has had a number of offers of schools to teach the ensuing year, and it is probable will accept one of the offers as he has decided not to teach at Warrenville any longer.

HAD TEARS AND HUNGER

PLIGHT OF SMALL BOY WHO WANDERED AWAY FROM HOME.

Found by the Y. M. C. A. Janitor and Turned Over to Justice Mosher—Parents Alarmed and Notified the Police.

Janitor John Gettleson of the Y. M. C. A. found a six-year-old lad adrift on East Front street last evening as darkness began to come on. The little fellow was badly scared, and at first inquiries as to his name and the location of his home only brought forth tears.

Justice Joseph E. Mosher was present at the men's meeting in the Y. M. C. A. and the janitor turned over the diminutive piece of humanity to the Justice's care.

To him the lad confided the information that his name was John Connolly and that he was hungry.

The lad's parents, who live at 338 East Third street, had in the meantime sent word to the police that their son was missing, and the Justice turned the lad over to Policeman Totten. The latter knew at once where the boy belonged, and restored him to his parents.

Early in the afternoon John had gone to St. Mary's Sunday-school in company with his sister. When the school was dismissed John became separated from his sister and attempted to make his way home alone. He became confused and the approach of darkness made his plight a hopeless one until help came.

Done in His Name.

Last Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Howard A. Pope, West Fifth street, the members of the King's Daughters of the First Presbyterian church, held a cake and candy sale for the purpose of securing a sufficient amount of money to purchase flowers for the church for Easter Sunday. The sale was in charge of Mrs. Pope, assisted by the members of the society. Everything was disposed of during the afternoon and the result was most encouraging to the workers, who think that they will have almost enough to accomplish their object.

Entertaining Speakers.

Councilman Fred H. Andrews and W. D. Murray, who were present at the convention of the student volunteers recently held in Cleveland, O., will tell about that great convention at the prayer meeting in Trinity Reformed church next Wednesday evening. Everybody welcome.

At the Park Club.

A delightful entertainment is being arranged at the Park Club for Thursday evening, beginning at 8:30 o'clock. Mrs. Frank J. Smith will recite, Mrs. William L. Saunders will sing, and it is expected Fletcher Hallock will give banjo and mouthophone solos.

Looking Towards Easter.

OUR RIGHT TO MEDDLE IN CUBA'S SUFFERINGS.

Uncle Sam Pictured in Role of Good Samaritan.

DUTY OF THE U. S. JUST NOW

SYMPATHY SHOULD BE CHARACTERISTIC OF A CHRISTIAN NATION.

State of Affairs in Cuba at the Present is Almost Beyond Description—We Went Wild Over Persecutions and Suffering of the Armenians and Yet Within 130 Miles of Our Coast is a Much Worse Condition—Thinks We Ought to Fight if Necessary to Fulfill Our Duty as a Christian Nation Toward a Suffering People.

Rev. C. E. Herring preached a rousing sermon on "Christian Interest in Cuba" to a large audience in the First Presbyterian church, last evening.

The substance of the pastor's remarks was, that as a Christian nation the United States is justified in interfering to prevent the present terrible suffering in Cuba. After reading the parable of the good Samaritan, the speaker called attention to the fact that the Samaritan was a meddler, while the priest who passed by on the other side minded his own business; yet the Smaritan received Christ's commendation. Minding one's own business may be quite landable at times, but the plain duty of the United States at this time seems to be that of the Samaritan. Sympathy should be a characteristic of every Christian nation.

The state of affairs in Cuba at the present time is almost beyond description. We go wild over the persecutions and sufferings of the Armenians, and here, within 130 miles of our coast, is a much worse condition of affairs.

The population of the Island of Cuba was at the beginning of the late war about 1,600,000. Of that number fully 480,000 have died of starvation, and Spain is no nearer a conquest of the island than three years ago.

This condition of affairs is a disgrace to Christianity. In the interest of humanity, whether the Maine was blown up from the outside or the inside, it seems that the barbarous conflict should come to a close. I am not a jingo, but there are times when war is necessary and advisable, and I think we should be willing to fight if necessary to fulfill our duty as a Christian nation toward a suffering people.

Senator Proctor, who has made a cool and careful investigation of the conditions, outside of Havana, says: "This is not a question of peace or war, but of desolation and starvation, and the only hope for Cuba is America." Here is our privilege. Christ was a man of war as well as of peace. I believe God will be with this nation if we decide to interfere in behalf of Cuba."

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS.

Important Meeting of State and County Associations in this City.

The recent convention of Equal Suffragists held at Washington in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the first convention of the sort, was a marked success. The presence of women members of the Legislatures of Colorada, and other western States, was a specially interesting feature, and gave the people of the east an object lesson. Mrs. Martha B. Conul, of the Colorado Legislature, says of her election:

"The issues, as we women looked upon them, were the alleviation of poverty, the prevention of crime, the reformation of criminals and better election laws."

Delegates from New Jersey were also present at the Washington convention, and some of them will give an account of it at the meeting of the State Suffrage Convention to be held in this city, at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Wednesday afternoon of this week at 3 o'clock; business meeting of Union county branch at 2 o'clock.

The public is cordially invited and it is hoped that many people will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear about the progress of woman in the last half century, which proved the main topic of the Washington Convention.

Music for the Conference.

The Plainfield Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club has secured the engagement to play at the M. E. conference to be held at East Orange, Monday evening, April 4th, in the Calvary church on Main street.

Annual Church Meeting.

Next Wednesday evening the annual church business meeting will be held at the First Baptist church, when reports from officers of the church and societies will be made.

AWAITING THE REPORT

The Document Expected in Washington To-day or To-morrow.

THE PRESIDENT WILL ACT

To Some of Those Who Have Talked With Him He Has Intimated That if Action Is Necessary He Will Act Quickly—Congress Restless.

Washington, March 21.—President McKinley did not attend church yesterday morning, as is his custom, but instead spent two hours and more in conference with several members of the Cabinet. Assistant Secretary Day called about 10.30 o'clock and remained until nearly 1. Secretary Long and Secretary Bliss were the other members present. They remained less than an hour.

Commander Clover, in company with Charles R. Flint, who has been acting for the Government in the negotiations for the purchase of ships, also called and went into the President's private office.

The members of the Cabinet on leaving the White House said there was no special significance in the meeting. The report of the Maine Court of Inquiry had not been received, nor was it definitely known when it would reach here. It was expected, however, early in the present week, and as soon as received it would be handed at once to the President, and when it had been read and considered by the President it would be made public.

Washington, March 21.—President McKinley perturbed inwardly perhaps, is preserving an outward appearance of calm that is viewed with a mixture of admiration and astonishment by those with whom he is brought in contact, as the time grows shorter within which he must act on the basis of the Naval Court's findings. He does not indicate what will be his course, although the character of the questions he asks in seeking advice from his intimate associates shows that he is contemplating a demand for a puntitive and compensatory indemnity if the board's report declares that the Maine disaster was due to design. If the President knows what the verdict of the court will be, he has not communicated the information to his advisers.

Senator Chandler, after a conference with several of the Cabinet officers, expressed the opinion that the report of the Court of Inquiry on the Maine disaster would arrive to-day or to-morrow, and he was quite confident that the President would send it to Congress as soon as received if it is of a nature to permit such a course to to be taken.

"It is barely possible," said the Senator, "that the character of the document may be such as to render it inexpedient to give it out until Congress can be made aware gradually of its contents. If, for instance, it indicates beyond doubt the culpability of the Spaniards in connection with the Maine disaster it would not be wise to place Congress in immediate possession of the facts, officially, for fear that war would be declared instantly and without regard to all the conditions."

The Senator, however, reiterated his belief which was the result of his conferences with the executive officials, that the report, and the testimony also, whatever their purport, would be sent to Congress just as soon as this could be done in the interest of the public service. He thought the Navy Department was ignorant of the contents of the board's findings.

There is much talk here about a preliminary message from the court embodying its verdict, but there does not appear to be anything in it beyond the suggestions made to the President that he should direct Admiral Sicard to telegraph the gist of the court's findings just as soon as the record of their investigation is placed in his hands.

The determination of the President to make public the report of the court with as little delay as possible is contingent on the character of its contents. It can easily be understood that the findings may be of such a startling nature that immediate publicity would plunge the country into war before it was quite prepared for a resort to arms, and without more time to get its physical forces in condition for the emergency. Still the general understanding is that the Congress and the people of the United States will not be obliged to wait long for light on the court's verdict, although a definite statement cannot now be made with accuracy.

Brought face to face with the knowledge that the court may furnish such information and views that the question of peace or war must be answered at once, the administration is considering, in the absence of positive advices, as to the court's findings, what course should be followed if hostilities became dependent on the attitude of the United States. The most serious consideration has been given to the dangers of a summer campaign in the tropics. Death from disease in the Cuban valleys and plateaus is more feared than the troops of Spain.

It has been represented to the President and discussed by him with members of the Cabinet, that thousands of unacclimated Americans attached to an army of invasion would almost surely succumb to the ravages of yellow fever and the other plagues of the tropical rainy season. The President has also been told that yellow jack will also be likely to attack the men of the North Atlantic Squadron if they are kept in gulf waters much longer.

These matters have been brought to Mr. McKinley's attention by those who think that the beginning of hostilities, if a resort to arms cannot be avoided, should be delayed until the end of the unhealthy season. That some members of the Cabinet have been impressed with the human considerations involved, there is no doubt, but the President has not indicated what he will do in the matter. To some of those with whom he has talked he has given the impression that if action is necessary on the basis of the Maine report, he will act quickly, and will not allow anything to stand in the way of a speedy vindication of the national honor.

Others whose opinions the President values have asked him to move quickly in whatever policy is decided on. They believe that the country will not want delay, and that the soldiers and sailors of the nation will be most willing to take their chances in the fever-laden shore and waters of the West Indies. That the President is giving consideration to such questions as these shows how critical the situation appears to those who have the interests of the country in charge.

In the meantime Congress is becoming very restless. The reports that have been in circulation so persistently during the week, to the effect that there is now serious talk of giving autonomy another chance and perhaps submitting to arbitration the conflicting reports of the Spanish and American courts of inquiry, have aroused the greatest indignation. If it were not for a disinclination to force the President's hand and cause him to reveal diplomatic secrets at this critical juncture, it is not improbable that some of the impatient statesmen would break forth with a resolution of inquiry, if not of actual declaration of a Cuban policy.

The reports that the administration is inclined to temporize with Spain are undoubtedly due n a large measure to the knowledge that some members of the Cabinet are so strongly for peace that they are willing and anxious to take every possible chance and to give Spain the fullest opportunity to avoid war.

Big Money Offered for "Tips."

Key West, Fla., March 21.—Offers of money from Wall street for information as to the finding of the Maine Court continue to pour in here. There is a fairly well authenticated story that an offer of $25,000 was made yesterday. All sensational statements to the contrary notwithstanding, the court has not given the slightest inkling as to its finding, and all connected with the court are proof against Wall Street money.

FROZEN UP ALL WINTER.

Klondike Pilgrims Passed the Time in Washing Pans of Gold.

Seattle, March 21.—Steamers arriving from Alaska bring important news from the lower Yukon in the vicinity of Tanana and Minock, where Governor McGraw and Ex-Mayor Woods' expeditions were frozen up and compelled to make landing for the winter. These expeditions numbered about 700 men, mostly citizens of Seattle, and were the first to start after the first news of wonderful discoveries came out. They have made the best of their enforced imprisonment, and have been industriously engaged in building a city and prospecting the country immediately surrounding them.

A large number of locations have been made along the Minook and its tributaries which have been worked during the winter, ground paying from forty cents to a hundred and thirty dollars to a pan, and nuggets taken out worth five to one hundred dollars. They anticipate handsome clean-ups and good shipments of dust on the first boats coming out in the spring.

The camp is reported well supplied with provisions, exceedingly orderly, and but one death recorded. It bids fair to make one of the best and most permanent camps on the Yukon, having the merit of being on American soil and exclusively American ground.

Ex-Mayor Woods of Seattle had made the trip up the Yukon to Dawson, a distance of seven hundred miles, using dogs and sleds. He is expected to arrive here next week.

Tariff on Klondike Goods.

Washington, March 21.—The State Department has been informed by the United States Consul-General at Ottawa that the same duties are imposed on goods destined for the Klondike region as are imposed on goods imported into any other part of Canada. The instructions to the Canadians custom officers touching this matter are as follows: Wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles, and similar personal effects of persons arriving in Canada may be passed free, without entry at Customs as traveler's baggage, under the provisions of the Customs tariff, but this provision shall only include such articles as actually accompany and are in the use of and are necessary and imperative for the wear and use of such persons for the immediate purpose of journey and present comfort and convenience, and shall not be held to apply to merchandise or articles intended for other persons or for sale.

SPAIN'S IDEA OF US.

Forced to Smile at American Attempts to Create a Panic.

Madrid, March 21.—The following extract from the Heradlo gives to American readers a fair sample of the current Spanish press comment on the situation:

"Though we know our own defects, yet we cannot help smiling as we watch the Yankees slaving hard at their self-imposed task of trying to frighten us with bellicose bluster.

"They remind us of a swell rastagonere, whose hunting ground is in front of a Paris cafe. Inflated with dollar pride, he thinks that his glance fascinates every passing grande dame, but Spain is a woman of pure, noble breed, and goes her own way unheeding his ridiculous efforts.

"The foreign press admires our prudent attitude. If need arises it will be obliged to record that we proved true to the grand traditions of our race. Castilian valor is as serene and strong as the firmament overspreading our vast plains. It is no product of alluvial civilization. It is the sum total of historic ideas attained and of heroic feats accomplished, whose brilliancy illuminates the pages of European history."

Pledged to Wanamaker.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., March 21.—At the Republican primaries held in Blair County Saturday night Matthew S. Quay was indorsed unanimously for United States Senator; William C. Arnold, of Clearfield County, for Congressman-at-large, and John P. Elkin, of Indiana County, for State Chairman. The following named five delegates, pledged to support John Wanamaker for Governor in the State Convention were elected: Joshua Burley, William H. Gottschalk, George B. Reed, John Shuff and William Van Allman.

BAILEY ON THE SITUATION.

No Hope for Democrats if Republicans Declare War.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 21.—Congressman Joseph M. Bailey, in an interview regarding the present complications with Spain, said:

"If the independence of Cuba had been recognized six months ago by the United States there would have been no necessity for the present situation, and the Maine would never have been blown up. I wish to Heaven that I was empowered to declare war. My first call would raise a vast army of volunteers. I would stake all I hold dear on earth that within forty days I would have the Stars and Stripes floating over Havana. Why, in such a case you could not keep Americans away from Cuba. They would cross over in small boats, raft themselves over. The trouble would be to keep too many from going there.

"If the Republican party declares war they will undoubtedly beat us—the Democrats—in the next political campaign. If they do not declare war there will not be enough Republicans left in this country to make a showing. When the matter of the $50,000,000 war appropriation came up the Democrats in the House realized the truth of the statement I have just made. They deliberately sunk party feeling and voted for it, though they knew that if voted it would result in party defeat. The people of this country are deeply exasperated. They demand immediate and decisive action, and the party which gives such action or is responsible for it will win the next campaign.

"I would rather see the Cuban flag than 'Old Glory' floating over Havana and the entire island. I am against the annexation of more territory. No thinking man can find anything to fear in the idea of war between this country and Spain. We would win so quickly and decisively that the war would be over before we fairly realized that it had begun. This talk of foreign complications and hostility on the part of other foreign powers in such an event is all bosh. The United States is too good a buyer in foreign markets and too great a producer of products which Europe must buy to permit of such a thing."

BELITTLES OUR COAST DEFENSES.

Spain's Army Organ Attempts to Describe the Weakness of the United States.

Havana, March 21.—Diario del Ejercito, the organ of the army, devotes its first page to describing the unprotected coast and Gulf States, and says the principal fortifications are at New York, Hampton Roads, Key West and New Orleans. Dry Tortugas, it says, is simply a naval station, while Philadelphia and Wilmington are defenseless. The United States made a mistake in using only home-made guns, and while it requires 1,818 guns for proper coast defense, it has only 100.

The Diaro del Ejercito shows that Spain has not been idle in the matter of gathering information, as it is able to describe at length all the defenses near New York from Sandy Hook and Long Island Sound to Fort Hamilton, giving the number, size and strength of the guns. It declares that any modern fleet could easly take New York, hence the fleet could be drawn from Cuba by simply making a demonstration against New York. Our monitors are described as antiquated and useless against good ships of the present day. Hampton Roads is not considered of great strength.

We May Get Three Great Ships.

Washington, March 21.—Negotiations are still on for the purchase of the Aquidaban, the San Martino and the O'Higgins. These three vessels are the only ones belonging to any South American powers that are in any wise desirable. Others have been offered, but are not wanted. They would not be of as much service as would some of the coasting steamers fitted out with ammunition. The situation with reference to the San Martino and the O'Higgins. There is a possibility that we will get both, but the chances at present are against it.

Gage on War Probabilities.

Pittsburg, March 21.—Secretary of the Treasury Gage, who spoke Saturday night at the dinner of the Chamber of Commerce, said in an interview:

"If the report shows that the Maine was blown up at the instigation of the Spanish Government war would follow in fifteen minutes. The report will arrive early this week. I believe that a majority of the American people are now convinced that the authorities in Havana had no hand in the loss of the Maine. Unless the report should prove to the contrary, it is not likely that war will result."

McKinley Declines Literary Work.

Mexico, Mo., March 21.—A special writer of this city wrote to President McKinley asking him to give his definition of "Bible faith." John Addison Porter, the President's private secretary, replied that the President had adopted a rule which precludes him from contributing to any literary work, however meritorious.

Wills $10,000 to Barnum's Circus.

Niles, Mich., March 21.—William Olmstead, who died recently at his home, four miles from Cassopolis, left a strange will. He gave his wife the homestead, consisting of buildings and forty acres of land, and the balance of his possessions, amounting to about $10,000, was left to Barnum's circus.

A POPULAR MISTAKE.

Regarding Remedies for Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

The national disease of Americans is indigestion or in its chronic form, dyspepsia, and for the very reason that it is so common many people neglect taking proper treatment for what they consider trifling stomach trouble, when, as a matter of fact, indigestion lays the foundation of many incurable diseases. No person with a vigorous, healthy stomach will fall a victim to consumption. Many kidney diseases and heart troubles date their beginning from poor digestion; thin, nervous people are really so because their stomachs are out of gear; weary, languid, faded out woman owe their condition to imperfect digestion.

When nearly every person you meet is afflicted with weak digestion it is not surprising that nearly every secret patent medicine on the market claims to be a cure for dyspepsia, as well as a score of other troubles, when in fact, as Dr. Werthier says, there is but one genuine dyspepsia cure which is perfectly safe and reliable, and moreover, this remedy is not a patent medicine, but it is a scientific combination of pure pepsin (free from animal matter) vegetable essences, fruits salts and bismuth. It is sold by druggists under name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. No extravagant claims are made for them, but for indegestion or any stomach trouble, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are far ahead of any remedy yet discovered. They act on the food eaten, no dieting is necessary, simply eat all the wholesome food you want and these tablets will digest it. A cure results, because all the stomach needs is a rest, which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give by doing the work of digestion.

Druggists sell these tablets at 50 cents per package. Little book on stomach diseases and testimonials sent free by addressing Stuart Co., chemists, Marshall, Mich. 3 21 23 25

FAVOR AN ALLIANCE

Remarkable Unanimity of Approval by the British Public.

SURE GUARANTEE OF PEACE

Statesmen Realize That Closer Bonds of Friendship Would Lead to Great Mutual Advantages—Situation Has Served to Awaken Race Feeling.

London, March 21.—Remarkable unanimity of the approval by both classes and masses of the mere suggestion of an Anglo-American alliance compels belief in the sincerity of the desire of the British public for an entente with the United States. The fact that most of the cable dispatches from America have proclaimed that the suggestion has been seriously discussed is heartily welcomed here and is regarded as extremely important and gratifying, as evincing a friendly spirit.

"They are," as a diplomatist put it, "inspiring hope that the differences of the past will be buried and that Anglo-Saxons in the near future will be found issuing identical notes to all opposed to their common interests."

"It is not any stretch of imagination," the diplatist continued, "to say that such a union has been longed for by the best men in Great Britain for many years, not only because of the genuine wish for closer bonds of friendship, but because it is a known fact that all the statesmen of Europe realize that a close alliance between America and Great Britain would constitute not only the surest guarantee of the peace of the world, but would afford proof that the reign of law and individual liberty is to be extended for the benefit of mankind, in spite of the efforts to extinguish it made by reactionary rulers and governments."

Weekly newspapers pay considerable attention to the subject. The Speaker says:

"It is impossible for the statesmen of either country to find a nobler object to which to devote their energies and their lives. Whatever the actual relations in which the governments of London and Washington regard the matter, the American people may be assured that if they wish for an agreement the people of Great Britain also wish for one. We do not wish to ask the Americans to fight our battles, just as we feel convinced that they are too proud to desire that we should fight theirs. But what we do wish and what wise men on both sides must earnestly desire, is that each nation shall feel that it has the other a friend and a brother, on whose sympathy it can rely in time of need."

The Speeker noting the good feeling expressed in the United States says:

"The Americans are quite right in assuming that they will have the support of the Britisher should a Continental alliance attempt to oppress them. If our people once realize the condition of Cuba, half of England would be calling America hard names because they had not intervened earlier to stop the horrors perpetrated at their very doors."

New Comet Discovered.

Cambridge Mass., March 21.—A telegram has been received at the Harvard College Observatory from Professor Schaeberle, at the Lick Observatory, stating that Dr. Perrine has just discovered a bright comet. Its position on March 20, d. 0374 (Oh. 53m. 52s.) Greenwich mean time, was as follows: Right ascension, 21h. 18m. 36.6s.; declination north, 16 degrees 43m. 23s.; daily motion in right ascension plus 3m. 44s.; daily motion in declination plus 1 degree 1m. The comet is 2m. in diameter, of the seventh magnitude, has strong central condensation and a tail 1 degree long.

No Interference by Germany.

London, March 21.—The Berlin correspondent of the Times confirms the statement that Germany has no inclination to interfere in the Cuban question. He cites the Berlin Post as saying that Germany's complex commercial interests, as well as her regard for the German residents in the United States, forbid such an interference. The Daily Chronicle this morning repeats editorially its declaration that Michael Davitt's attempt to show that England hates America has been "ludicrously unsuccessful," and challenges him to obtain half a dozen votes in support of a pro-Spanish resolution in any open meeting in any town in England, Scotland, or Wales.

Sheriff Martin to be Tried Again.

Wilkesbarre, March 19.—Sheriff Martin and six or seven of the fifty-six deputies who were recently acquitted in the Lattimer cae will once more face a jury on the charge of murder. This was determined at a meeting to-day of the Prosecuting Committee and Attorneys Garman, McGahren and Scarlet. The attorneys suggested that a change of venue would be desirable and that it might result in the admission of much of the evidence ruled out by Judge Woodward in the recent trial. There is some evidence to present.

Gladstone's Health Critical.

London, March 21.—The Pall Mall Gazette asserts that Mr. Gladstone's physical condition is appreciably worse. Intense pains whether neuralgic or due to a malignant growth, have caused him extreme suffering, and the result is that his physical powers and the action of his heart have become gravely enfeebled.

Old Star Route Cases Killed.

San Francisco, March 21.—The Assistant United States District Attorney says that telegraphic instructions have been received from Washington to dismiss the Star Route cases. These old suits were begun by the Government to recover about half a million dollars, with interest, from the year 1882.

May Shut Out Our Meats.

Berlin, March 21.—Officials of the Brunswick Government report that they lately discovered trichinosis in several packages of American meat, and the Government of Brunswick has asked the Bundesrath to issue a decree prohibiting the import of American meat.

SPANISH TORPEDO FLOTILLA.

Washington Authorities Keep Themselves Informed as to Its Movements.

Washington, March 21.—There is no doubt that the authorities here are keeping themselves fully advised as to the movement of the Spanish torpedo flotilla, now en route from Spain. Up to last night the official advices were to the effect that the flotilla had not left the Canaries, where a stop was made to await the arrival of a Spanish cruiser.

Persons acquainted with the facts say that the stop at the Canaries is only temporary, and that there is no purpose on the part of the Spanish Government to turn back the torpedo boats because of the removal of the Texas and Massachusetts from Key West. On the contrary, the purpose, as made known in Washington, is that the torpedo flotilla will continue its trip to Cuba and Puerto Rico.

It was stated by a person high in naval authority that no steps had been taken toward intercepting this flotilla or warning it away. There has been considerable conjecture in this line by naval officers, based on the idea that if an emergency was in fact near at hand it would be inexpedient to allow a large torpedo flotilla to rendezvous on this side.

SAUERKRAUT AND PICKLES.

Legal Opinion as to Whether They Should Be Sold by Dry or Wet Measure.

Washington March 21.—The Sealer of Weights and Measures for the District of Columbia recently submitted to the attorney for the District for his opinion the question as to whether sauerkraut and pickles should be sold by wet or dry measure. The attorney has decided the vexed point in the following opinion:

"The well-known German preparation of cabbage, known as sauerkraut, from the methods of its manufacture contains more or less of liquids, but the greater part of the preparation is solid. My opinion is that it should be sold by dry measure. As to pickles, the customs, as I am informed, is to sell both by dry and liquid measure. If the pickles are not drained they are sold by liquid measure. If the brine or vinegar is drained off, they are sold by dry measure. My opinion is that sauerkraut should be sold by dry measure and that pickles should be sold by dry and liquid measure, according as they are drained or not."

Set-Back for Wanamaker.

Lancaster, Pa., March 21.—The incursion of ex-Postmaster-General Wanamaker into this city's Quay preserve does not seem to have been a shining success, gauged by the result of Saturday's hotly fought Republican primary election. In fact his visit here has proved a boomerang, for every Quay candidate in sight has come out ahead as far as heard from. Included in the slaughter is State Senator C. C. Kauffman, the anti-Quay leader in the last Legislature, who is beaten by J. A. Stober, an out-and-out Quay adherent, who has a majority of 800 or so, reassuring a similar plurality of four years ago. A solid Quay delegation to the next Legislature, seven all told, is also chosen; likewise a full contingent of a dozen Quay delegates to the next State Convention.

Big Order for Projectiles.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 21—The Wheeler-Sterling Projectile Works of McKeeport, Pa., has secured contracts from the United States Government for over a million dollars worth of projectiles. They are to be of all qualities of the armor-piercing kind, from four inches up to thirteen inches, the largest made for use in the United States Army and Navy. The contract calls for $551,900 worth of projectiles for the Navy; $300,000 for the army, and $200,000 for both departments. It will require at least a year, working coninually on the contract day and night, Sundays included, to complete the contract.

Mrs. Burnett Seeks Divorce.

Washington, March 21.—Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett the well-known novelist has instituted proceedings for divorce against her husband Dr. Swan M. Burnett. The papers in the case are withheld from publication. The grounds on which the decree is asked are understood to be desertion, abandonment and failure to support. The last named, however, is only technical, as Mrs. Burnett is believed to have an independent fortune.

Widow Found Dead in the River.

Newark, N. J., March 21.—The body of Catherine Hogan, a widow, was found floating in the Passaic River off Kearny last evening. A bottle which had contained carbolic acid was found in her pocket and from marks on her lips and in her mouth it would appear that she had first taken carbolic acid and then thrown herself in the river.

Pando Rumor Untrue.

Havana, March 21.—The report that General Pando, the Spanish commander in Cuba has been captured by the insurgent General Garcia, is untrue. According to the latest advices General Pando had left Ciego de Avila and was proceeding to the eastward, probably with Puerto Principe as his destination.

Hoyt & Co., a big wholesale grocery firm of Chicago, has revolted against the Sugar Trust, and other concerns are following.

CRISIS IN THE FAR EAST

France's Ultimatum to China Causes Alarm in England.

THE SWEEPING DEMANDS

May be Considered as a Casus Belli if Officials Have Not Been Warned of the Demands—England Will Not Permit China to Obey the Mandate.

London, March 21.—The far Eastern crisis still overshadows the Spanish-American situation in European estimation, and the latest steps towards the dismemberment of China has caused fresh dismay in England. The sweeping demands made by France apparently constitute a more serious attack upon British interests and plans than does Russia's virtual annexation of Manchuria. There is, however, one important difference in the effect of these two developments.

Russia's move demoralized the financial world, but the news of the French ultimatum has had no important effect upon stocks, which leads to the inference that the French policy is not so bellicose as it appears.

The English press takes the gloomiest view of the latest development, but the situation is so obscure in many respects that this fact is not of the greatest significance. It is perfectly true, however, that if France has taken this step on the heels of the Russian demand, without any assurance or understanding with Great Britain, it would constitute almost a casus belli.

The British Government, however, puts no such interpretation upon the French action. Presumably this country will not allow China to concede the full French demand for territory, for they hit British interests right in the face. It is pretty certain that China will not be permitted to turn the Province of Yunan over to the French, for England wants that for herself.

The outcome will probably be a long diplomatic struggle, which may in the end result in an amicable division of the spoils.

France Will Not Use Force.

Paris, March 21.—A semi-official statement has been issued saying that there is no connection between the demands of the French Government in China and the Chinese loan. The French demands reached Pekin at the beginning of the month, and the negotiations were immediately transferred to Paris, where they are proceeding between the Chinese Minister, Thing Thang, and M. Hanotaux, the French Foreign Minister. The French charge that there is no occasion to threaten or menace China with the forcible seizure of a coaling station.

BRITAIN'S HANDS ARE FULL.

Feels We Are Able to Cope with Spaniards and Their Paper Navy.

London, March 21.—The Daily Mail this morning, in an editorial refuting "some of the American accusations of British coldness," says:

"Among many reasons for Great Britain's comparative non-interest not the least is our better knowledge of the Spaniards and their paper navy and our conviction that the Anglo-Saxon will always defeat the Latin. Indeed, the trend of British thought is toward surprise that the greatest of the republics should excite itself unduly about so poor a foe.

"The Americans should remember that, while we are full of trust in their capability to deal with Spanish impertinence, we are fully occupied with far greater troubles, threatened or active, in various parts of the world. They have our full sympathy at a time when France, Germany and Russia are backing Spain as fully and almost as openly as they are opposing British efforts for the freedom of foreign trade throughout the world.

"But there is no occasion now to talk of an offensive and defensive alliance. The disproportion between our mission and America's makes one impossible. There will be time to propose this way of recementing the race when America is ready to face the splendid responsibilities it entails."

Kruger Theatens War.

Johannesburg, March 21.—The Standard and Diggers' News in a seemingly inspired article says: "War is almost inevitable unless England abandons her claim to suzerainty."

Food for Starving Cubans.

Kansas City, March 21.—A relief fund of $9,033 and twenty-one carloads of provisions and clothing, collected in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma for the starving Cubans of Matanzas were forwarded from Kansas City yesterday. These supplies are being carried free on a special train over the Memphis road to Memphis, thence over the Illinois Central to New Orleans. The United States Government has guaranteed the transportation from New Orleans to Matanzas. The principal articles of food sent are wheat, flour, corn meal, rice, potatoes, rolled oats, condensed milk and soup extracts. The contributions of clothing include a great number of calico dresses for women and children made by church sewing circles.

RUNYON'S FINE CHARACTER.

We reproduce the following from the editorial columns of The News of last Saturday:

The North avenue paper is printing, daily now, plate editorial matter, otherwise known as "boiler plate" editorials. This matter is considered very useful to newspapers whose editors have no ideas of their own, or, having them, are afraid to express them lest a subscriber or two may be lost to them. These editorials are written in New York and furnished to weak-minded editors already set in type. The Press has struck a "cinch."

That editorial is the reflection in cold type of a character that we thank God prevails with but few likenesses in Christian communities. The animus that prompted such an utterance and sentiment comes from one of an ilk who cut woefully little influence with their designs.

IN CASE OF WAR.

It is denied that the rumors of war will interfere in any way with an adjournment of the Legislature. Should war be declared after adjournment the Governor has power to call the Legislature in extra session to meet any emergencies which might be created. New Jersey can at a few days' notice muster 4,000 trained troops, and in a week's time thousands of volunteers would offer their services. As the State is without a public debt it could raise at least a million dollars on short notice for the equipment of its troops. The members of the Legislature would be in hearty accord with any proposition to strengthen the right arm of the Government. All party lines would be obliterated, and patriotism alone would be the ruling power.

A TIMELY WARNING.

City Judge DeMeza made an announcement from the bench Saturday that is deserving of commendation. The only pity is that it was not made before. He instructed the police force to notify the ashmen who do not have solid, substantial bottoms to their ash wagons to make a change at once. Many of the ash wagons are so filled with cracks and openings that they scatter their trademark along the streets that they pass through. If the ashmen do not comply with the ordinance that provides for the kind of wagons that they shall have, it is within the power of the city to revoke their licenses.

ENFORCING SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

A hypocritical religious attitude has been assumed by sundry persons in various parts of the city as a means of evading the ordinance providing for a proper observance of Sunday, until the practices have become a burlesque on the intent of the law. The intention of the city authorities, as evidenced in the numerous raids made by the police yesterday afternoon, to suppress these violations, is to be commended and supported by every good citizen of Plainfield. The existence of these establishments is a strong contributory source of poor morals, and at times a direct cause of crime. The sanctimonious excuse by which they have made a pretense of complying with the purport of the law is so shallow, and such a reflection on Christianity, that their eradication from local life cannot be accomplished too quick for the consistency and good reputation of the town. The culprits who were made to feel the strong arm of the law yesterday were mostly inferior offenders, but we understand that the authorities will prosecute all violators, irrespective of their standing or influence, before they finish the campaign of arrests To do otherwise would be hypocrisy even worse than that practiced by the men arrested yesterday. There should be no distinctions nor exceptions in the crusade.

ANOTHER'S VIEW.

Would we could see another's soul
As we can see our own,
'Twould save us many sad mistakes,
Were such a power known.
How often we misjudge someone,
Because we cannot see
Their hearts, but as we feel our own,
And think, so their's must be.

Could we but step right in their place
And feel as they would feel,
Our symyathy would be aroused,
Their souls would seem more real.
We then would less misunderstand,
And other's hearts we'd know.
A sympathetic cord would bind,
And other's feelings show.

CUBA AND CHINA.

There is little apparent connection between these two countries in their present situation, and yet there might easily be a very real relation between them.

In China England has a direct interest in not letting Russia obtain permanent possession of any territory. England does not want China herself, but England is a trading nation. Her prosperity at home depends on the amount of her commerce abroad. If Russia and Germany got possession of the Chinese coast, they would hamper trade with restrictions particularly irksome to other countries. England wants the ports of China to be free to all nations. On account of our great and growing commerce between Asia and our Pacific ports the United States also wants open trade with China. Thus it seems that we might indirectly become mixed up in the eastern question.

Diplomatists in England see great possibilities in a thoroughly good Anglo-American understanding. Suppose war should come between the United States and Spain. England, with her great fleets, could easily prevent a Spanish ship from even leaving port to attack the United States. In return, if a contest should come between England and Russia, the United States could back up Great Britain in the demand for free Chinese ports. Japan would add her weight on the same side, and these three powers could stand against the world. That is the idea in the minds of some Englishmen in their present attitude of friendliness to this country.

PASSING COMMENT.

Charles Andrews, of Union Township, thinks he holds the record for the longest service on a school board of any man in the State. He has been on the Union Township School Board for twenty-five years without a break. He refused election this year.

* * * *

Theatrical troupes, no matter how inferior their regular performance may be, are always able to make a "hit" during the evening by singing one of our many patriotic songs and waving the stars and stripes. This never fails to rouse the audience to prolonged applause and is resorted to by both first-class and inferior companies.

* * * * *

The story is told of how a fashionable Plainfield woman whose early educational advantages were somewhat neglected, and who is not as well read as she would like to have people suppose, made a ludicrous mistake not long since while in conversation with a number of friends. The talk turned to books, and when the name of Victor Hugo was mentioned one of the ladies said:

"I have not read many of Hugo's books, only 'Ninety-three,' I think."

"Good gracious," broke in the woman at whose expense the story is told, "I haven't read over sixty or seventy of them."

Her friends, with cruel politeness, did not explain to her that "Ninety-three" was the name of a book and that Hugo's novels would not reach one-tenth of that number.

KIND WORDS FOR THE PRESS.

Comment of New Jersey Papers on the Improvements Made.

The Plainfield Press is a good and prosperous newspaper. It appeared Thursday enlarged to a fifty-six column eight page paper, printed on a new press, and with several new features, the most prominent of which was a column of news for German readers in their own type and language. The editor and publisher, Mr. Force, is to be commended for his enterprise, and the readers of the Press are to be congratulated upon having so good a local newspaper.—Camden Courier.

The Daily Press of Plainfield, one of the liveliest and most flourishing dailies in the State, has found it necessary to increase its space by an addition of eight columns. The Press is an up-to-date paper, published in a thoroughly wide-awake city, and its breezy columns are in tune with its enlightened readers. The best wishes of the News are that its bright contemporary may find it necessary to increase its size again ere long, for it is certainly deserving of its splendid success.—Irvington News.

We are pleased to notice the evidence of prosperity in the Plainfield Daily Press, the editor and proprietor of which excellent newspaper is Mr. A. L. Force. The Press patronized home industry by purchasing a splendid new press from a local firm, Walter Scott & Co., which has a reputation second to none in this country, and at the same time Mr. Force increased the size of his paper by eight colums. Other decided improvements have been made which the patrons of The Press must appreciate highly. We congratulate Mr. Force on his success.—New Brunswick Home News.

A. L. Force, editor and proprietor of the Plainfield Daily Press, is to be congratulated upon the success which is crowning his work in newspaper business in his native town. His paper has steadily grown in circulation and influence, and, as an inevitable result, advertising and news patronage has compelled an enlargement of the paper, with a corresponding increase in the facilities of the plant. Both demands have just been met, the latter by the installation of a superb new press, and the first by the enlargement of The Daily Press to a seven-column, eight page paper. The initial number of the paper in its new form reached the Times office a few days ago, and it is certainly a model of typographical and editorial excellence. The Press has been successful because it has deserved success, and the Times congratulates it most heartily upon the unmistakable evidence it is giving of prosperity.—New Brunswick Times.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, March 21.—The entertainment given in the First Baptist church at New Market last Saturday evening was in every respect a complete success. The attendance was very large and the members of the Farther Light Missionary Society, under whose auspices it was given, will receive almost enough to furnish the pulpit, which was the object for which the affair was given. The programme was rendered as published in The Press of last Saturday, and every number was well received.

Next Sunday Rev. Mr. Mead will preach his farewell sermon at the M. E. church. There will no doubt be a large attendance of people. During Mr. Mead's stay in the borough he has made many friends and all will regret to see him go.

Already pipes have arrived for the Watchung Water Company, and as soon as possible they will be laid through the borough. Manager Sebring is a hustler and he intends to push the work rapidly.

Tomorrow evening a fine entertainment will be given in the chapel of the Presbyterian church by local talent. The proceeds will be devoted to the work of the church.

Tomorrow evening the regular meeting of Wm. G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be held and it is expected that there will be an initiation.

Next Thursday evening the Building and Loan Association will hold a business meeting. This evening the Association will meet to receive dues.

As soon as the work of fixing the grade on North avenue is completed the work of constructing the trolley will commence.

This week Wednesday evening the Daughters of Liberty, of New Market, will give an entertainment in Friendship Hall.

The work of changing the grade of North avenue has been started, also the work of setting the curb to the grade.

The Improved Order of Foresters will meet this evening and initiate several candidates.

The evening of March 28th a vitascope entertainment will be given in the M. E. church.

Captain and Mrs. William Thompson have returned from a visit with New York friends.

A. Rea and family moved to Bayonne today, where they will reside in the future.

W. H. Terry, who has been visiting friends in Plainfield, has returned home.

The condition of Mrs. John Runyon, of Washington avenue, is much improved.

P. C. Staats, of North avenue, is very much improved from his severe illness.

Mrs. Mary Laing, of Millstone, is the guest of friends in the borough.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Scotch Plains Baptist church will hold its annual business in the church parlor tomorrow evening.

Mrs. J. S. Braker led the Christian Endeavor meeting in the Baptist church last evening.

Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company will hold a business meeting in its rooms tonight.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Westfield, March 21.—A union service of the Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist and Congregational Sunday-schools and the schools of the outlying districts, was held in the Westfield Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon. The large audience room was filled, and the service was a most interesting one. Samuel Johnston, superintendent of the Presbyterian Sunday-school, presided. The programme included a Scripture reading by Rev. W. H. Ruth, pastor of the Methodist church, a prayer by Rev. Henry Ketcham, of the Congregational church, singing by the primary department of the Presbyterian school, a recitation by Miss Jennie Darrow, "The Little Cup Bearer." The lesson of the day was taught by W. R. Woodward, superintendent of the Sunday-school of the Third Presbyterian church of Elizabeth. Little Miss Etta Woodring sang a song entitled "The Bluebird's Temperance Song;" and Edward Clark recited "A Time for Everything." Rev. J. S. Braker, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, and president of the Union County Sunday-school Association, delivered a short talk, and took a number of snap-shot photographs of the audience. J. L. Clayton, chairman of the Sunday-school temperance committee, made a brief report, and an offering was taken. The service closed with a brief devotional service, led by Rev. G. A. Francis, pastor of the Westfield Baptist church, and Rev. N. W. Cadwell pronounced the benediction.

Jesse Brown, the ten-year-old son of C. A. Brown, of New York avenue, was badly bitten by a mad dog while at play on Elmer street, Saturday afternoon. A number of citizens who witnessed the attack pursued the animal with the intention of killing it, but it escaped.

Harry E. Knight, W. G. Delamater, J. D. Stephens, C. Ismon and Paul Q. Oliver have been appointed a nominating committee by the Westfield Club.

Harleman, trainmaster, will have his jurisdiction extended so as to cover not only the Lehigh division, but also the Easton and Amboy road, with headquarters at Easton instead of at South Bethlehem. The position of trainmaster of the Easton and Amboy road, held by Garrett Brodhead, of South Plainfield, has been abandoned, and Mr. Brodhead has been made assistant trainmaster, with his headquarters at Perth Amboy. Mr. Lannon will also be an assistant trainmaster, with office at Mauch Chunk.

THEATRICAL.

Tonight at Stillman Music Hall the Sages open a series of entertainments in a marvelous production of LeGrand Hypnotism. Among other scenes will be presented Hypnotic Tableaux with colored lights and among the pictures presented are the cambat of the gladiators, the girdle duelists, death of Pichegen, stoning of St. Stephen, duel after the ball. This last scene represents a man who has been mortally wounded in a duel. His second is holding him, while the doctor examines him. Horrified, the visitor and his second have just turned to walk away. The entertainments throughout are extremely interesting as well as exceptionally amusing and after a brief lecture of about 12 minutes the audience is kept in a continual roar of laughter. Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O, contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

CONSULTATION FREE.

For 10 Days Only by the Physician in Charge of the Boy Phenomenon.

ALSO PRICE OF TREATMENT GREATLY REDUCED FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE SICK.

An Unprecedented Opportunity Offered the Afflicted to be Examined Entirely Free and Treated at Very Small Expense by the Famous Boy Phenomenon Now at the Revere House.

In order that none will be denied the privilege of learning their true physical condition, and that all may have the opportunity of being cured at a greatly reduced price, the Boy Phenomenon has decided that his physician will give consultation, examination and a thorough diagnosis of each patient entirely free of charge the rest of this month commencing today.

The same careful and thorough examination will be given each patient during this free consultation period as is in vogue at all times when the dollar consultation fee was charged, which is now withdrawn for 10 days in order to become more quickly acquainted with the sick and suffering and at the same time to accommodate those wishing treatment and are aware of their affliction, but object to paying for consultation.

If the case is incurable or not amenable to magnetism, no fee is high enough that will tempt him to accept it.

Those who have previously called, were examined, and received an envelope, but were unable to pay the price named, are especially invited to return with their envelopes and take advantage of the greatly reduced prices.

The fact of his having discharged 127 patients as permanently cured during the past 6 weeks, accounts for this very generous offer of reducing the prices of treatment; because having discharged so large a number he has more time now to devote to new cases.

Reference will be given to those holding envelopes, showing they have previously called and been examined. By presenting the same to the ushers in the reception parlors on arrival, they will be admitted at once.

It is not necessary to dwell at length upon the meritorious work done by the Boy Phenomenon since his advent in Plainfield. The many miraculous cures he has accomplished have been seen and witnessed by thousands of our best people, and testimonials have been published and are on file in his office from many of our prominent citizens that have accumulated until they are overwhelming in their force and directness, proving beyond the possibility of a doubt that his power in healing the sick is certainly unquestioned, and little less than miraculous.

Compare, if you will, the discharge of 127 patients, who declare they were cured by the Boy Phenomenon in less than six weeks, by that of any or all other methods, and then ask yourself which method has made the largest number of permanent cures, and then, if you are sick, act as your judgment dictates.

If you intend securing the services of the Boy Phenomenon, you must act quickly, as this month ends the free consultation.

While he will remain here two or three weeks longer, no new cases will be taken for treatment after Saturday, April 2d. Office hours at the Revere House from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., daily except Sunday.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

REVIVAL OF THE BUSTLE DID NOT MEET POPULAR APPROVAL

Blue and Red Are the Colors for Spring—Skirts Are Long, Even to the Ground, and Have a Slope to the Back—Other Frills That Must be Met.

Velvet is now puffed, waved, box-pleated, and accordion-pleated by machine processes, and the result is anything but elegant. It is like painting the rose or perfuming the violet to thus maltreat so beautiful a material as velvet. The rich, lustrous surface of the fabric is spoiled, and its value bemeaned by such manipulation. As well starch point lace or cut up sable into minute fancy bits to trim a gown. If ever beauty unadorned is adorned the most, it is in sparing the scissors and withholding every sort of "decoration" from either silk, velvet, or costly fur.

A Theatre Blouse.

Theatre waists and those for house wear are even more varied in style than the shirt waist. They may be of any material and style according to the occasion for which they are to be used. One of the reigning styles is the bodice with neck cut low and long sleeves, a collarette of velvet or satin being worn around the throat.

A Neat Style.

The coming summer promises more variations in the styles of shirt waists than were ever seen, and there will certainly be no reason to complain of monotony. The heavier materials will be most popular for early spring wear, and gingham and madras make up dainty and serviceable waists.

A simple shirt waist is made with the yoke extending well over on the shoulders, being rounded in the back. The material is brought to a point at the waist-line and the fastening down the center is trimmed on both sides with ruffles of white lawn. Regulation shirt sleeve, finished with narrow linen cuff.

Handsome Theatre Gown.

A most becoming and beautiful costume was worn in a box at the Vaudeville the other night by a handsome woman, considerably past her youth

The gown was of black mousseline de soie, accordion-pleated, and glittering with lengthwise rows of jet bands. Over her shoulders was thrown a long boa of black ostrich plumes, in a way to outline the square decolettage, and about the throat was a very full, yet very light, neck-ruche, of black gauze, fastened with a diamond buckle. A big jet butterfly on the head made the merest excuse for a theatre bonnet. In France it is quite common to see well-dressed women wear a small theatre hat with a low-necked corsage.

To Keep Baby's Ears Flat.

Mothers cannot very well endow their children with shell-like ears, but by the judicious use of a proper cap they can do a great deal towards improving the appearance of the ear. No matter what people say, prominent ears are a disfigurement, and no one is more conscious of the fact than the owners. And the pity of it is that no one need be disfiguered in such a way, thanks to an ear-cap, which can be worn without the slightest discomfort. This boon is in the form of an open-meshed cap fitted with tapes and elastic, and so arranged that, when in position, a uniform and elastic pressure is maintained. This pressure causes the growing cartilage of the ear so to mould itself that the ears are prevented from standing out. Not only does the ear-cap prevent the ears of a child crumpling forward, but it keeps the hair tidy.

Potato Fritters.

Mash three large, mealy potatoes very lightly, add three well-beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of cream, a little lemon-juice and some grated nutmeg. Beat all well together for about a quarter of an hour, or until the batter is very light. Drop spoonfuls of it into a deep pan of boiling fat, and when they become a nice brown color take them out and drain them upon soft butter muslin. Serve them with sifted sugar sprinkled over them and with or without wine sauce, as may be preferred.

A LITTLE BOY'S SUIT.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Aus der Rheinpfalz.

Speyer. Vom 1. Mai an, dem Anfang des neuen Schuljahres, tritt nach einer Verfügung der Kreisregierung eine anerkennenswerthe Verordnung in Kraft. Es wurde bestimmt, daß von diesem Zeitpunkt ab in allen Volksschulen der Unterricht in den weiblichen Handarbeiten eingeführt wird. Von der dritten Klasse an erstreckt sich der Unterricht auf alle werktagspflichtigen Mädchen, er kann aber auch auf die beiden untersten Klassen ausgedehnt werden. Durch den Unterricht sollen die Schülerinnen befähigt werden, die in der Haushaltung vorkommenden einfachen Arbeiten im Stricken, Nähen und Ausbessern selbst vorzunehmen.

Ludwigshafen. In dem nahen Mundenheim fuhr der 66jährige Tagner Georg Käb in die Sandgrube, um Sand zu laden. Später Hinzukommende fanden den schon bejahrten Mann von einer herabgefallenen Sandschicht verschüttet und als Leiche vor.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Dieser Tage fand die 11. Generalversammlung der Stuttgarter Badegesellschaft statt. Der von Herrn Kommerzienrath Leo Vetter erstattete Bericht hebt vor Allem hervor, daß die Anstalt im Jahre 1897 in der Bäderabgabe 500,000 überschritten hat, das höchste Resultat, das bis jetzt in Deutschland erzielt worden ist. Von den Gesammteinnahmen von 183,400 Mark entfallen auf die Schwimmhallen 64,240 Mark, Wannebäder 58,165 Mark, Dampfbäder 31,723 Mark, Fangokuren, Lohtannin- und kohlensaure Bäder 8997 Mark, Wäsche 10,770 Mark.

Cannstatt. Die Stadt Cannstatt hat beim Reichsgericht ihren Prozeß gegen den Fiskus auf Zurückerstattung der bei der Konvertirung der städtischen Anleihe erhobenen Reichsstempelabgabe gewonnen. Mehrere analoge Prozesse, von anderen württembergischen Städten gegen den Fiskus angestrengt, dürften damit gleichfalls entschieden sein.

Feuerbach. Hier wurde der 69 Jahre alte Schuhmacher Georg Fauser im Hofe hinter seinem Hause todt aufgefunden; er scheint erdrosselt worden zu sein. Wegen Verdachts der Tödtung wurden der Sohn und dessen Geliebte verhaftet, die letztere jedoch als zweifellos unbetheiligt wieder in Freiheit gesetzt.

Giengen. Auf merkwürdige Weise wurde hier ein Brand verhütet. Eine Katze weckte den Bewohner eines Hauses aus dem Schlafe durch ihr unruhiges Wesen und wurde von ihm aus dem Zimmer getrieben. Bei Oeffnung der Thüre drang ihm starker Rauch entgegen. Unten in einer Werkstatt hatte der Fußboden Feuer gefangen, das nun noch rechtzeitig gelöscht werden konnte.

Mergentheim. Hier wurde ein Bauernverein gegründet, dem sofort 50 Mitglieder beitraten.

Ulm. Welch' riesige Steigerung die Preise der Grundstücke erfahren haben, beweist ein Verkauf dahier. Der hiesige Engelwirth kaufte vor nicht vielen Jahren ein Areal von elf Morgen beim Söflinger Bahnhof um 17,000 Mark und verkaufte es dieser Tage an die Eisenbahnverwaltung um —107,000 Mark.

Weinsberg. In Bälde soll den Landtag die Frage der Herstellung einer weiteren Landesirrenanstalt beschäftigen. Sie soll im Norden des Landes errichtet werden und sind die Städte Weinsberg und Oehringen als besonders geeignet in Vorschlag gebracht. Hervorragend günstig erscheint die in der Nähe unserer Stadt gelegene Staatsdomäne Weißenhof.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Im nahen Durlach wurde ein römisches Grab jenseits der Pfinz in einer Tiefe von zwei Metern in Sandsteineinfassung aufgefunden. Nach Annahme hiesiger Professoren stammt dieses Grab aus dem 3. oder 4. Jahrhundert n. Chr. Der 1½ Meter hohe und 1 Meter breite Grabstein hat folgende Inschrift: „Dis Manibus F(lavio) Sterio Veterano annorum C. F. VEHEMENS Filius et he(res) posuit." (Den Manen des Verstorbenen F. Sterius dem Veteranen, 100 Jahre alt, hat F. Vehemens, sein Sohn und Erbe, dieses Grabmal errichten lassen).

Baden-Baden. Professor Reinhold Begas hat hier ein Grundstück an der Friesenbergerstraße erworben, um sich daselbst eine Villa bauen zu lassen, in der er mit seiner Familie künftig einen Theil des Jahres zu verbringen gedenkt.

Herbolzheim. Hier ließ sich der Hafner Kunz, Vater von sechs Kindern, vom Schnellzuge überfahren. Es wurde ihm dabei der Kopf vom Rumpfe getrennt.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And stil what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

THE RAILROAD KING.

William K. Vanderbilt Proves a Worthy Successor of the "Commodore."

William Kissam Vanderbilt, who in one day stepped into the center of the American railroad stage, and is now the most important railroad official in the country, is perhaps the only member of the descendants of the old Commodore who has the ability to take the place of the late William H. Vanderbilt. Mr. Vanderbilt will relieve Chauncey M. Depew, it is said, of the presidency of the New York Central, and will unite in one corporation that great road with all the roads the Vanderbilt wealth controls. His plan is to form a continuous band across the continent, and his single hand will be on the lever that will control the movements of this grand industrial mechanism. In all the empire of railroads there is nothing to compare with this man's scheme. Mr. Vanderbilt is the second son of William H. His father left him less of the stupendous fortune than fell to the share of Cornelius, the eldest son. But Cornelius is not strong, and oesn't like enterprise, while William Kissam has abundant health, and loves industrial sway. He is already in substance, the controlling power of the Vanderbilt wealth. He is now about to show the world something of the marvelous capacity that accumulated that wealth. The new Caesar of railroad empire is 49 years old, and active as a man of 30. His new career will be watched with intense interest.

WILLIAM K. VANDERBILT.

HABITS OF THE FUR SEAL.

Sea Animals That Has Many of the Traits of Sheep.

"Never mind, father, blindness shall not interfere with my success in life," said the young law student, Henry Fawcett, when his father reproached himself for carelessly destroying all his son's prospects of advancement.

"One pleasant day in 1858 the two had gone hunting together. A flock of partridges flew over a fence where the father had no right to shoot; but as he was moving forward, they flew back toward his son. The father, so eager to bring down a bird that he did not think of his son's danger, fired. Several shots entered Henry's breast, and one went through each glass of a pair of spectacles he wore. In an instant he was stone blind for life.

"But within ten minutes from the time of the accident which deprived him of eyesight forever this boy of iron nerve had determined that even blindness should not swerve him from his purpose.

"'Will you read the newspaper to me?' were his first words to his sister when they carried him home.

"He was obliged to abandon law, but he began the study of political economy with a zeal rarely equaled, meanwhile having friends read to him in his moments of leisure the works of Milton, Burke, Wordsworth, all of George Eliot's novels, and a wide course of general literature, for he was determined that his blindness should not limit the breadth of his culture."—Orison Marden in Success.

Good to Kick with.

There is a wooden-legged steer at a livery stable in Bowling Green, Ky. Some time ago the steer's leg was broken by a falling tree, while on a farm. A veterinary surgeon was sent for, and he amputated the leg just below the knee. It healed in twenty days, and the doctor then made a wooden leg, which he strapped on. Since being furnished with the wooden leg the steer walks with no signs of awkwardness, and can run almost as swiftly as before. The wooden leg is a hind one, and the steer uses it by preference to kick with.

Insect Chewing Gum.

A strange insect discovery has been made in California. The vegetation in this district is infested with an insect, which, on being removed from the twigs of oak on which it thrives, and compressed in quantities by the hand, becomes a more or less pliable lump, somewhat resembling rubber. The substance makes admirable chewing gum, as it takes and retains flavors better than any other gums, although doubtless many people would not care to chew it. It has other valuable commercial uses.—Chicago News.

A BRIGHT BOSTONIAN

IN TWO YEARS SHE BECAME AMERICA'S GREATEST EGYPTOLOGIST.

From Just an Ordinary Domesticated Woman with a Sunday School Class She Advanced to the Front Rank of Our Scholars in a Very Short Time.

Mrs. Marie N. Buckman, an unassuming little New England woman, was teaching a class of boys in Sunday school one day when the subject of the Egyptian influence upon the Israelites was taken up. At once she felt an awakened interest in the lesson that seemed strange to her. She grew enthusiastic at the thought of the rich life of the people who lived along the banks of the Nile ages ago and left such enduring witnesses of their skill and art for the instruction and enjoyment of the nations that were yet to be born.

The grandeur of their civilization and the sublimity of their history touched her as nothing ever had before. She announced to her class that during the week she read everything she could concerning the Egyptians feeling all the time that it was strangely familiar to her, although she knew that she was reading it for the first time.

MARIE N. BUCKMAN.

Sunday after Sunday, whatever they would take up the subject for further study the coming Sunday, and formal topic of the lesson might be something of the lore of Egypt would creep in, and the boys in Mrs. Buckman's class gained a wider and deeper knowledge of ancient history than is usual in the conning of the routine Old Testament Sunday school lessons.

In an almost incredibly short time after Mrs. Buckman had first followed the children of Israel into Egypt she was ready to measure swords with the most erudite Egyptian scholars of the present day. Her studies and investigations brought her in contact with Dr. William Copley Winslow and Dr. Charles H. S. Davis, as well as with famous Egyptologists abroad, all of whom treated her opinions with the utmost respect.

Certainly no woman, perhaps no man, in this country has done or is doing as much practical and effective work in the cause of Egyptology as she. About a year ago she was appointed the secretary for the United States of the Egypt Exploration Fund, of which Sir John Fowler is president and Charles Dudley Warner, honorary vice-president.

Mrs. Buckman is as Oriental in her personal appearance as in her mental trend, and the art students in the Museum noticing her, a pale, spirit-like creature, with dark eyes in which mystery seemed to dwell, named her the reincarnated Egyptian princess. She is not a learned woman in the ordinary sense of the term. She was never drilled in the classics and no outside influence was brought to bear upon her to turn her mind in this direction. It was a natural and almost irresistible impulse, for which she is no more able to account than any one else.

She states as a simple fact that when her interest in Egyptology was first awakened she used to be asked the meaning of certain emblems and hieroglyphics and would answer without hesitation, never stopping to think that she had not ascertained it for herself, but in looking the matter up she invariably found that she had given the correct interpretation.

The language, too, which would naturally be supposed to be difficult for one to acquire who was master of no tongue but the English, came to her with rare facility. "It is so simple and so musical that one cannot help remembering it," she explained on being asked how it was possible for her to commit to memory the long selections which she has ever ready at her tongue's end.

Theosophists would doubtless explain her intuitive knowledge of everything pertaining to Egypt, as well as her physical personality, by the reincarnation theory. Mrs. Buckman neither accepts nor rejects it. She is an orthodox Christian and merely smiles when asked about the possibility of her having lived a previous existence in a palace by the Nile.

The Whyness of It.

"I wonder," said she, "what causes that drumming sound to come from the beehive."

"I don't know, darling," said he "unless it is caused by the bees whacks!"

And 'twas for this they parted in the aviary.—New York Journal.

CYCLING COMMENT.

All of the letter-carriers of the Plainfield postoffice are now riding Eldridge wheels.

Charles Burdette Morse, of the staff of The Daily Press, has received his new Cleveland wheel, purchased of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

It was not until a late hour Saturday night that the F. L. C Martin Cycle Company closed the doers to its sales rooms on Park avenue. Over twenty new wheels were sold during the day.

Saturday was a big day for most of the bicycle dealers and they report large sales. Most of the trade of the season, it is evident from Saturday's showing, will be in the moderate priced wheels. There was a great demand for them and most of the purchasers were for cash.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

"Doc" Thiers holds the high score and the lead in the "head pin" tournament on the Park Club alleys. He has won eight games and lost none while his high score is 171.

Former Councilman J. C. Peck now holds the high score at the Park Club alleys. He rolled 232 March 15th, 5 pins better than Fred S. Gould. The record for the month of March only.

In the contest for the greatest number of scores above 200, now in progress at the Park Club alleys, W. J. Roome, Jr. is in the lead for the month of March. He has rolled three games above 200. J. C. Peck and F. H. Ball have both rolled two scores during the month.

BASKET BALL.

Basket ball is rapidly nearing its end for this season, on account of the approach of warm weather. The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team has one more big game scheduled, however. That will be played this evening at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium with the second team from the Twenty-third Street Branch of the New York Y. M. C. A. The game will begin at 8:15 o'clock. The Twenty-third Street boys are sure to give the Plainfield team a lively game, and it will only be by fine playing that they can be defeated.

Trolley on East Front Street.

Notwithstanding that several of the prominent property owners on East Front street are working against the plan of the Plainfield Street Railway to use that thoroughfare for their extension to Scotch Plains, instead of East Second street, it is said on good authority that the company have already enough consents to guarantee the right of way. It is expected that application for a franchise for the extension will be made before the Common Council this spring.

A TRIBUTE OF SORROW.

remarks, Dr. Yerkes spoke briefly concerning the beautiful life and character of Miss Willard. He said that it was the idea of the W. C. T. U to name the Union Temple in Chicago the Willard Hall, and he asked the congregation to contribute liberally toward helping to raise the amount of indebtedness now on the building. In responce a liberal collection was received. The service closed with the singing of a hymn, after which Dr. Yerkes pronounced the benediction.

Those who acted as ushers at the service were Harold Serrell, Herbert Case, John MacLoughlin, Samuel Case and George F. Brown. Each one wore a bow of white ribbon.

The members of the local W. C. T. U. and members from nearby towns were present and occupied seats together in the main part of the church. Each one wore a piece of white ribbon tied with a piece of black ribbon.

Agreeably Surprised.

Henry Rummell, of Grove street, was agreeably surprised last Saturday evening by a number of his friends from the German and Swedish sections of the singing societies of the Saengerbund. The occasion was the anniversary of Mr. Rummell's birthday and he had no knowledge of the intended surprise. The guests met at Saengerbund Hall and marched to Mr. Rummell's home where they found him. The members of the singing societies serenaded their host after which dancing was indulged in and continued until a late hour. Music was furnished by Claus Wallander.

"According to this cablegram they were married in Paris yesterday," he said.

"We must send our congratulations at once," she returned.

"By mail or cable?" he asked.

"From what I know of both of them," she replied, "we ought to send them by cable if we wish to be sure that they will be acceptable when they reach them."—Chicago Post.

Father—Come young man, get your coat off and come with me!

Tommy—You're not going to lick me, are you, dad?

Father—Certainly. Didn't I tell you this morning that I would settle with you for your bad behavior?

Tommy—Yes, but I thought it was only a joke, like when you told the grocer you were going to settle with him.—Chicago News.

Tommy—I want to make a name for myself in the world; I want to be a hero.

Mother—The dear boy! And why do you want to be a hero, Tommy?

Tommy—Because heroes have a bully time and never get killed. 'T any rate, that's the way 't was with all the heroes I ever read about.—Boston Transcript.

HE DIDN'T LIKE RUINS.

Preferred Modern Architecture to That of the Antique.

Some Americans-in-Europe while sight-seeing in one of the famous capitals not long ago stumbled upon a typical son of the soil from their own far West. He was big and brawny and uncouth and outlandish, but the instant he spied his fellow-countrymen he made for them. "I knew ye were Americans soon's I saw ye," he said; "an' I tell ye what, I was mighty glad, too. Why, it's been weeks sence I've run across anybody from home." Being of genial disposition, the Americans-in-Europe gave their compatriot a cordial greeting and were presently rewarded by the following revelations: He was from Arizona; "Yessir, made my pile in one of the biggest mining camps in the place," and he had come to Europe because it was the proper thing to do. He was, however, horribly homesick. "'Tisn't just the folks," he said; "it's the place. Why, when I first come over here I engaged a guide and told him to take me round and show me all the sights. Well, sir, he did; an' what do ye spose he had to show? Nothin' in the world but ruins, just one tumble-down, worm-eaten, no 'count old shanty after another, until I got tired. 'Look here,' I says at last, 'I've had enough of this ruin business. If you've got any brand-new twenty-six story sky scrapers I'll take a look at them, but no more of yer ruins fer me."—New York Sun.

JAPANESE STUDENTS IN AMERICA.

The United States, and particularly California, is now educating the younger generations of Japan. Already five bear diplomas from the universities of this state, three of whom have graduated in civil engineering, one in social science and one in zoology. At present there are fifteen students in the universities, three being at Stamford and twelve at the University of California. Of these, six are taking the social science course, fitting themselves to be teachers in Japan, three are studying electrical science, two are taking mechanics, and there is one each in the sciences of medicine, dentistry, chemistry and political economy.

After completing their course in the University, many of the students aspire to take post-graduate courses in Eastern colleges. Thus there are those now studying at Johns Hopkins, at Yale and at Cornell. Many of those now at the University of California, in addition to their accomplishments through such studies as they are now pursuing, have visions of seeking what further polish the educational fields of Europe can afford, ultimately returning to Japan, heavy with parchments and honors, blazing with a sort of halo of erudition, ready to illuminate the darkness.—Chautauquan.

SHE'S A MOTHER TO THE GAMINS.

A Kindly Old Lady Who Spends Her Time Sewing for Street Urchins.

There is really something new in philanthropic work. A dear old lady, who prefers to remain unnamed, being left alone in her declining years, has adopted all the street urchins as her family. There are too many of them to take to her own home, and she is too feeble to care for so large a family in that way. She therefore seeks them out and gives them mittens and pulse warmers of her own make. She also sews buttons on their clothes and does light mending for them.

Sometimes this kindly woman spends the entire night working for "her boys," plying the needle to replenish her stock, which is largely made from fulled cloth. Friends give her old clothes, and she uses the less worn parts in making her mittens and pulse warmers. Once in a while she fills her roomy old bag with an assortment of buttons, needles and thread and she sallies forth to seek the alleys where her proteges congregate. There she will devote herself to replacing buttons and sewing up rents in the garments, which admit more ventilation than is desirable either for health or comfort.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Mosquito Bite an Accident.

People who hold accident insurance policies may now rest easy regarding the effect of mosquito bites. A Kentucky court has decided that a mosquito bite is an accident, and that insurance companies must so regard it. The case in question was that of a man who died as the result of a mosquito bite, and the accident company in which he held a $5,000 policy, refused to pay, holding that the mosquito bite was not an accident. Yet, when you come to think of it, if it wasn't an accident, what was it? No person ever deliberately allowed a mosquito to bite him, certainly not enough to risk his life.

Merchant (testily to clerk in next room)—John, send in some one with a practical education.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Mistress—Mary, you didn't half dust the front room. I was in there just now, and I could write my name on the mantlepiece.

Domestic—Ah, mem, what a thing it do be to have an eddication!—Boston Transcript.

COUNTY TROLLEY BILL PASSED BY ASSEMBLY.

Delegation of Union County Men Urged Its Passage.

AMENDMENTS TAKEN OUT.

THE PLAN FULLY EXPLAINED TO THE MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE.

The Measure was Sent to Third Reading Unanimously and Later was Passed by the House by a Vote of 33 to 19—Result Greeted With Applause by the Union County Delegation—Advocates Will Try to Convince Senators Now so That the Measure Will Surely Go to the Governor for Approval.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 22.—The most important measure for Union county pending before the Legislature—the Bergen county trolley bill—was passed last night by the Assembly, as was predicted in this correspondence last week. Now the advocates will turn their attention to the Senatorial end of the Legislature in the effort to have the bill go straight to the Governor.

A large delegation of Union county men was present last night and did considerable missionary work in favor of the measure among the Assemblymen who had not become thoroughly convinced of the merits of the bill. The delegation was headed by Mayor John C. Rankin, of Elizabeth; ex-Mayor Peter Bennett, Judge Gilhooley, ex-Mayor John J. Howell, of Roselle; ex-Congressman Dunn, Director Hubbard, of the Board of Freeholders; City Clerk Manning, City Controller Carlton and J. E. Martine.

The delegation did some hard work in the House before the measure came up, and then they divided up into committees and made personal calls upon individual Senators, to whom they set forth the merits of No. 125.

To aid the lawmakers the better to understand the benefit to Union county from the passage of the bill each Legislator was given a draft of the proposed boulevard from Elizabeth to Plainfield, which showed a highway twelve miles long and one hundred feet wide, with sidewalks the entire length of the boulevard on both sides, and next to the sidewalks a bicycle path, and next to the path a macadam road. In the centre is to be a double-track electric road, and on the north side of the track a dirt road. Beneath this draft are these words:

"This is the plan of a boulevard from Elizabeth to Plainfield, one hundred feet wide and twelve miles long. It was prepared and recommended by a committee of citizens of Union county. The cost of this great improvement can be obtained from a street railroad company in exchange for a franchise under the provisions of Assembly Bill No. 125."

That the delegation did effective work was shown later, when the House took up the Squire measure, and straightening out the parliamentary tangle in which it was left last week, when the House inserted a twenty-five year limit clause and one providing that a certain percentage of the gross receipts of the company should annually be paid to the township through which the road passed.

The amendments were stricken out and the measure was sent to third reading unanimously. Later Mr. Squire had his bill brought up and it passed the House by a vote of 33 to 19, without dicsussion, amid applause from the Union county delegation.

SPRING VACATION.

Scholars Will Rest From Friday of This Week to April 4th.

The spring vacation in the Plainfield Public Schools will begin Friday afternoon of this week. The vacation will last until Monday, April 4th. While many of the schools have their spring vacations at Easter time, it has always been the custom of the Plainfield schools to have the vacation include the first day of April, which is commonly known as "moving day" in this part of the country. So many families move at that time that it seems best to allow the children a holiday then.

AT THE GATE TO RICHES.

A Plainfield Woman Writes Her Experiences in the Klondike.

Several weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. George R. Musgrave, of this city, left to seek their fortune in Alaska. A letter from Mrs. Musgrave, dated at Saguay, Alaska, has just been received by Mrs. R. F. Hazard, 422 East Sixth street, which contains a number of interesting references to the country and the hardships of travelers in that portion of the globe.

The letter, which was written Feb. 27th, said that the vessel bearing the party had just reached Saguay, and the men had gone ashore to find a place to pitch the tents. The sickness there had been very great. There were at that time eleven bodies on a boat about to start for Seattle. Juneau, the writer says, is a thriving place. The party had spent five hours there the day before. The visit of the party to an Indian village, and the living customs of the natives, are described at length.

The party, at the time the letter was written, were making preparations to start for Dawson City, sending the luggage on pack animals. Exorbitant prices were being charged the travelers for every necessity of life.

The natives in the region from which the letter was written are spoken of as a simple people, with rude customs. They have nearly all been Christianized of late years.

SIX CENTS FOR PLAINTIFF.

Result of the Suit of John H. French Against Edward White.

The case of John H. French against Edward White, the dry goods merchant, to recover the amount of $16, which the plaintiff claimed was due him as rental for an alley way at the rear of Mr. White's store, was tried by a jury of six men in Justice Moffett's court yesterday afternoon.

The defendant claimed that he had not made a lease for the alley way in question, and had directed his men not to use it when unloading goods at the store. The attorneys for the plaintiff were Pope & Runyon, and ex-Judge Wm. A. Coddington, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, appeared for the defense.

The jury brought in a verdict of six cents for the plaintiff and ordered that the defendant should pay the costs of the action. The jurors were John J. Lloyd, John McPeek, J. Cahill, Richard Mattis, Alexander Bonella and Walter C. Linbarger.

A Singular Accident.

A singular accident occurred at the corner of Chatham and Somerset streets this morning at about 10:30. Samuel Proud, a resident of this city, was driving toward Front street, and tied to the rear of his wagon was a spirited horse. Presently a trolley car appeared on the scene and frightened the horse so that he made a wild dash for the front of the wagon. This move upset the wagon and threw Mr. Proud out into the gutter. The assistance of the motorman, conductor and several men standing near soon resulted in the wagon being rightly turned up.

PLAINFIELD DEFEATED.

THE NEW YORK BASKET BALL TEAM WON THE GAME.

The Game was Fiercely Contested By Both Sides—Rough Play was Very Noticeable—Plainfield in Hard Luck.

One of the fiercest games of basket ball ever contested in this city was played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last evening between the local team and the second team from the Twenty-third Street Branch of the New York Y. M. C. A. The visitors won by a score of 28 to 12. The audience that thronged the gallery was given an exhibition of how they play basket ball in New York. It was by far the roughest game ever played in the gymnasium. Both sides played well, but the visitors used tactics that somewhat resembled those of football. Despite the repeated instructions of Physical Director Heywood, the visiting umpire refused to call them down for the rough play. As a consequence, the game was a decidedly lively one.

The first half was decidedly in favor of the visitors. They threw goals very accurately and gave a pretty exhibition of passing. They used tactics, however, that were certainly not according to the spirit of the rules. The score at the end of the first half stood 16 to 4 in favor of the visitors.

Then the Plainfield boys braced up and played a pretty game. They were very unfortunate in throwing goals, for time after time the ball rolled around the edge of the goal, but failed to enter.

Egan could not play on account of illness and G. P. Smith took his place at centre. Bonny played forward with Long and the Moraller Brothers acted as guards. The loss of Egan was severely felt, although Smith played an excellent game.

The visiting team was composed of Wilson, Grief, Moir, Baumgard and Steiner. Wilson and Grief distinguished themselves by their fine goal throwing. The goals on the Plainfield side were divided among all the team. Four fouls were called on the home team and none on the visitors.

Mr. Heywood refereed and Messrs. Ginters and Robertson, of New York, umpired.

PROFESSOR VAN INGEN'S LECTURE.

An Interesting Talk on the Dutch School of Art Before Club Women.

Professor Henry VanIngen, of Vassar College, gave a most charming lecture on the Dutch School of Art before the Monday Afternoon Club yesterday afternoon in the Casino. Stereopticon illustrations of many pictures gave force to Professor VanIngen's descriptions and gave a clearer understanding of the realistic school founded by Dutch artists. Truth to nature, to home life and homely things and fidelity to common subjects, as shown in the perfect painting of a broom stick were the characteristics of the Dutch painters. Representative pictures of Rembrandt, Paul Potter, Ruysdale and many others were thrown upon the canvas and described in a manner as naive and charmingly natural as the pictures themselves.

RIVAL WATER AND LIGHT COMPANY.

A New Corporation to Be Formed to Serve Cranford People.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Cranford, March 22—A movement is on foot in this place to organize the Cranford Electric Light and Water Company, to act as a rival to the Suburban Electric Light Company, whose contract with the Cranford Township Committee will expire July 1st. The new company will also prove a competitor to the Union Water Company for the patronage of the town. The new company applied to the Township Committee at its meeting Saturday night for a franchise to carry on its operations in the town for a period of 99 years. The ordinance granting the franchise was passed to its first reading. Its further consideration will be continued at the next meeting of the Committee, Thursday evening. The new company is backed entirely by citizens of Cranford.

COUNCILMEN ECHOED A PRESS EDITORIAL.

Endorse Action of Police in the Sunday Raids.

MR. HETFIELD VOTED ALONE

HE WANTED THE RESOLUTIONS TABLED, BUT WAS DEFEATED.

The Action of Councilman Andrews Stirred up a Lively Discussion, and Some Caustic Remarks Were Passed—Annual Appropriations—Street Committee Get $20,000 for Their Work, Police $14,500 and Firemen $16,000—Petitions from Liquor Dealers who Would Like to Have More Liberal Laws.

At the adjourned meeting of the City Council held last evening Councilman Andrews offered the following resolution:

"Resolved, that the Council of the city of Plainfield do most heartily endorse the action taken by the Mayor, Police Board and City Judge in enforcing the laws and the observance of the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, and that the City Council recommends the further enforcement of the laws until the illicit trading is stopped."

It was this resolution that caused a breeze in the Council Chamber. Mr. Hetfield at once moved that the resolution lie on the table and to substantiate his motion he stated that there were many ordinances on the books that referred to Sunday selling, and most of the places complained of last Sunday had been running for five years, and the proprietors had never been asked to close. He said that in his opinion he thought the men had a right to sell, and he proposed to defend some of them. Mr. Hetfield admitted that he was in a peculiar position, but he had no doubt of the result. A vote was then taken and every member voted against laying the resolution on the table except Messrs. Hetfield, Liefke and Newman.

Continuing, Mr. Hetfield said: "Your police make purchases, serve the warrants, draw the jury and assist in convicting those men. It is an outrage! This is not the place to create sympathy. These men who were arrested believe they are right, and I don't think that this is a case to try before the Council. Are we to commend the Mayor and sergeant of police in creating a sympathy against these men among the people?"

Mr. Barrows responded somewhat as follows:

"Heretofore we had no Mayor or Police Board who had the courage to take this matter up. The members of the Seventh-day Baptist church have repeatedly come to the Mayor asking him to do something, as these people were simply masquerading under the law. The thing is a farce and the Mayor should receive our support."

Mr. Newman was pronounced in his remarks. He said: "I ob erve one day as Sunday. I don't go to church but rarely, but if I smoke a cigar, or drink a glass of beer, which I frequently do, it's nobody's business. The second day I was in Plainfield I took a walk out in the country and I saw people cutting down trees and plowing the fields. I asked if people were allowed to do that sort of thing, and was told that they were Seventh-day people. It was the first that I heard of that sort of people. I think that everyone has a right to observe any day they see fit, but in order to support the Mayor and Council I shall vote against laying the resolution on the table."

On the second ballot the only one to vote for laying the resolution on the table was Mr. Hetfield. Mr. Liefke asked for the privilege of changing his vote, and Mr. Newman also changed his vote.

Mr. Andrews stated that the resolution was not offered to create sympathy, but that there are a large number of people in Plainfield who are in favor of the Mayor and officials in this work and he thought it no more than right that their action should be commended. Mr. Barrows told Mr. Hetfield that he should have read the editorial in last evening's Press and he would have noticed the sound of alarm. To this Mr. Hetfield said that the press of the country or Plainfield was not trying these men, neither the Council.

The discussion was quite unexpected and consumed considerable time in the meeting. After the discussion the regular business was continued.

A communication was received from R. G. Wood, of New York, offering to settle the assessment on the Ophelia G. Reilly property, at 1328 Watchung avenue, if the interest charges were

NO RECESS FOR PUPILS.

BOROUGH SCHOLARS AND TEACHERS WANT A CONTINUOUS SESSION.

Board of Education Find That the Prevailing Sentiment is Against a Recess—Board Was Organized For the Year.

The regular monthly meeting of the Borough Board of Education was held last evening at which time the organization of officers was effected. S. St. John McCutchen was chosen president, and R. M. Fountain, district clerk. The old committees were reappointed.

The committee of which Henry Wells is chairman, which had in charge the matter of ascertaining the advisability of instituting a medical examination amoag the scholars in the school, similar to the one held in this city, reported favorably. Mr. Wells and Mr. Honeyman were appointed a committee to investigate the matter further and ascertain the cost of such work, and report at the next meeting of the Board. It is understood that the members are heartily in favor of the proposed examination.

Regarding the question of a recess during school hours, the members stated that they had learned that the superintendent, teachers and many scholars were opposed to the recess. The scholars are opposed for the reason that it lengthens their school hours. The officers of the school do not think it advisable to have the recess. The board agreed to stand by the present system, and recommended that the superintendent experiment with a few of the lowest grades by giving the scholars a recess. The scheme will be given a fair trial.

The board will meet again next Monday evening for the purpose of formulating and determining upon a report to be presented to the voters of the borough regarding a new school. No other matter will be considered at the meeting.

A SPRINKLER CAR.

An Improvement to be Put in Use on the Street Railway.

The Plainfield Street Railway is preparing to introduce an improvement that The Paess has long advocated. It is a sprinkler car. Superintendent John Adelmann is now figuring on a car of that variety which will be constructed according to his plans. It is probable that the trucks from the old sweeper will be utilized and a tank of large capacity will be placed on the car with sprinkling pipes by the side. The car will be ready by the first of May. It will be used in the outlying districts where the city street sprinklers never reach and where great clouds of dust used to in former years follow the passage of each car. The residents along West Front street and the Netherwood district have long complained of this very thing.

A QUIET MARRIAGE.

Harry Coddington Takes a Brooklyn Belle for His Wife.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Rev. Cornelius Schenck, West End Park, Saturday afternoon, when Miss Lillian A. Mercready, of Brooklyn, and Harry H. Coddington, of Mountain avenue, were united in marriage. While it was known that the young people were engaged, their marriage was somewhat of a surprise to their friends. Mr. Coddington is a popular young man of the borough, and is in the employ of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, of which his father is one of the principal stockholders.

Millinery Opening at Lederer's

Those women who admire the most fashionable in millinery will be delighted with the charming productions in trimmed hats, which go on exhibition at Lederer's Thursday and Friday of this week. Special effort has been made to produce designs exclusive in character, a fact to be appreciated by those who seek the beautiful in millinery. The display of trimmed hats, flowers, ribbons, etc., far surpasses that of any previous season. The entire display reflects great credit upon Miss Flanagan, whose ability is recognized by a large and increasing patronage.

Talked Temperance.

There was a large attendance at the Christian Endeavor meeting at Trinity Reformed church, considering the inclement weather. The subject of the meeting was "Temperance," and Henry Seader was in charge. During the service Miss Krymer and Miss Williams sang effectively and sweetly "Can a Boy Forget His Mother."

Getting Open Cars Ready

The open cars of the Plainfied Street Railway are now being prepared for summer use and will be put in service by the first of May. The contract for the painting and varnishing of the wood work of the cars has been granted to Marsh, Ayers & Co.

SCHOOL ATHLETICS.

A Conference Held in Newark Attended by Plainfield Representatives.

Representatives from the faculty of all but one of the schools in the New Jersey Interscholastic Athlectic Association, held an informal meeting at Newark Academy, Newark, last Saturday. The Plainfield High School was represented there by Ira W. Travell and Albert B. Meredith. The New Jersey Military Academy, of this city, was represented by Percy Colwell, one of the instructors. Several schools who could not send representatives replied by letter.

The meeting was called by Principal Farrand, of Newark Academy, who acted as chairman. There was an informal discussion of the needs of the different schools in the way of athletics. There were two questions that were principally discussed and which resulted in the following amendments to the constitution and by-laws of the Interscholastic Athletic Association being drawn:

Amendment to Article 4 section 2. There shall be an advisory committee consisting of the principal of each school represented in the association or a teacher appointed by him.

Amendment to Article 6, section 2 of the by-laws. No one shall act as judge, referee, umpire or starter at the annual field meeting or at any champion contest who is or has been a teacher or student in one of the competing schools.

These amendments are merely suggestions of the teachers which will be submittad to the members of the association. There is little doubt but that they will be adopted, however, as they are designed to do away with troubles that have bothered the association in the past.

A RIDING CLUB.

Horseback Riding Becoming Popular in Plainfield Society.

The question now occupying the minds of many fashionable people is "Shall there be a riding school in this city?" Plainfield has many wealthy people who love to ride horseback, and during the fine weather they can be seen enjoying that sport. These people are inclined to think that there are many more who would like to have an opportunity to learn to ride a horse and a club for that purpose is strongly talked about. A meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. building this evening, at which time an expert rider and one who has formed clubs, will be present to tell all that is necessary concerning such a club. Those who have issued the call for the meeting are C. J. Fisk, C. W. McCutchen, M. S. Ackerman, W. J. Roome, Palmer Smith, H. G. Runkle, D. H. Rowland, A. C. Vail, W. J. Buttfield and A. W. Haviland. There seems to be no doubt but what the club will be formed and that it will be a success.

Their Friends Were Surprised.

The marriage of Miss Fanny F. Creveling, of North avenue, this city, and Samuel F. Tinsman, of Dunellen, occurred last Sunday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at his residence, West End Park. Both of the contracting parties are well known, popular young people, and when the announcement of their marriage was made known their friends were not a little surprised. Mr. and Mrs. Tinsman will reside in Dunellen.

For Municipal Ownership.

At the meeting of the Board of Trade to be held this evening a resolution will be offered suggesting that the city purchase Plainfield's water supply plant. It is also the intention to appoint a committee to confer with a similar committee from the city council.

Along Legal Lines.

Justice Mosher issued a summons today in the case of Dunham against Wright, on contract, returnable the 31st. The case of Sadoski against Drake, on contract, which was set for trial in Justice Moshers court today, was adjourned to the 31st.

A Fine Tenor Voice.

Last Sunday at St. Mary's R. C. church, the services of William Bradley, of West Sixth street, were appreciated in the choir. Mr. Bradley has an excellent tenor voice and he will no doubt be retained as a regular member.

Jerry Looks Fine.

Patrolman Cash has recived his new spring uniform and he presents a fine appearance. The other members of the force will receive their new uniforms.

Hospital Cases.

Two medical patients have been admitted to the hospital since yesterday.

—The New Jersey conference of the Methodist churches will be held next week.

—William Wowinkel and family have moved from East Third street to 136 Duer street.

HYPNOTIC SUBJECTS WERE FUNNY ACTORS.

The Sages Made Music Hall Ring With Laughter.

POWER OF THE INFLUENCE.

MANY PHYSICIANS AND CLERGYMEN WERE IN THE AUDIENCE.

Prof. Sage Gave a Short and Interesting Oral Exposition of the Science of Hypnotism and Dispelled the Queer Ideas Some People Have of the Power—Twenty-five Young Men Volunteered Their Services and Only Two Were Unable to Feel the Influence to Some Degree—Laughable Incidents Occurred.

If Music Hall ever contained more hearty laughs to the square inch than were evidenced by the audience that witnessed Prof. Sage's hypnotic performance last night, it is not within the memory of the oldest habitue of that thespian temple. On the programme the entertainment was termed "Le Grand Hypnotism," a French inscription. In a coined prase of the language of these parts it would be translated "It is to laugh." True, tears were shed during the performance, but they flowed not as a result of grief but of laughter.

The audience was a fair sized one and contained a number of physicians and clergymen, and liberal number of those who move in fashionable circles.

The curtain rose to show Prof. Sage standing in the centre of the stage. For fifteen minutes he gave an oral exposition of the science of hypnotism—a talk that was clear in its explanations and entertaining in a general way.

The idea that anyone could come under the influence of a hypnotist unconsciously, as illustrated in the case of Trilby, was pure fiction, he said. Some little difficulty was encountered at first in securing subjects, but finally about twenty-five young men were seated upon the stage. A few of them were members of the company, but after last night Prof. Sage explained that only townsmen would be used in the exhibitions.

The first test was simple, but none the less wonderful to the uninitiated, and humorous to all. The subjects were asked to stand still, close their eyes and concentrate their thought on falling backward. Prof. Sage—and, in fact, his wife and two assistants, who seemed able to exercise a certain amount of influence—made a few passes across the foreheads of the subjects. Then using a hypnotic ball—a simple glass globe—they pressed the object to the base of the skull and at slight intervals drew it away. Some of the subjects were so susceptible to the influence that in a few seconds their bodies wavered and then fell backward, to be caught by the operators. In a few instances it took two or three minutes to bring the spell over the subjects, but there were only two who failed to succumb. For a second or two some of the young men seemed to be dazed when caught and aroused out of their reverie, then a mystified look came over their faces and they walked to their seats with solemn visages denoting puzzled thoughts as to just how the semi-trance was induced.

Several tests of a similar nature followed, such as clasping the hands and being unable to open them and revolving the palms and being unable to stop, until the spell was broken.

The hypnotic influence was acquired by producing sleep, then waking the subjects and impressively telling them to do whatever was to be demonstrated. As for instance, the scene where the subjects were made to believe that a small stick was a red hot rod of iron. The young men were asked to close their eyes and think hard about going to sleep. Prof. Sage and his assistants, after they became apparently unconscious, rubbed and opened their eyes. They were told that the stick was a red hot iron. Prodding them with the harmless piece of wood, they assumed tortured expressions and ran helter skelter over the stage to escape the touch of the stick. Their antics were realistic and ludicrous and the audience simply howled with delight.

To bring them out of the spell the operators spoke sharply the words "wake up, wake up," and snapped the fingers in their faces. The influence was different in nearly every instance. Some came out of the trance forthwith while with others it took half a minute or more.

Then followed scene after scene which the subjects participated in with humorous effect. One was the belief that bees were down their backs, another in which two were selected to impersonate a dentist and a

REPORT ON THE MAINE

It Was Submitted to Admiral Sicard Yesterday.

VERDICT STILL A SECRET

President Will Require a Day or Two to Consider the Evidence, and It Will Then Be Made Public by Sending It to Congress.

Key West, Fla., March 22.—The report of the Board of Inquiry with the typewritten evidence was submitted formally to Admiral Sicard yesterday afternoon and by him approved.

The report, with the evidence, makes a pile of manuscript of the size of legal cap and six inches high.

When Judge Advocate Marix was asked if the package was the report of the Board, he declined to answer. He said, however, that the report had not yet been forwarded.

After seeing the manuscript safely on its way in the hands of Judge Advocate Marix, the Admiral and his wife went for a drive.

When Judge Advocate Marix handed the document to Admiral Sicard he said:

"Sir, I have the honor to submit to you the report of the Court of Inquiry convened by you to investigate the causes of the disaster to the battleship Maine in Havana harbor on Feb. 15."

The report was in the Admiral's care about six hours. Judge Advocate Marix, as he carried the report to the pier, was very cheerful, and there is a noticeable feeling of relief among the survivors of the Maine now at the hotel.

Two points of this report will be the entire exoneration of Captain Sigsbee and all his crew from blame in the matter of the destruction of the Maine, and no Spanish officer of any rank whatever will be charged with complicity in that destruction.

AWAITING THE REPORT.

Long Says It Will Not Arrive Until Thursday or Friday.

Washington, March 22.—"The report on the Maine will be here the last of this week."

This statement was made by Secretary Long yesterday afternoon, when he left the White House after having been in consultation with the President for nearly two hours.

"It may be Thursday or Friday before the report reaches here," continued the Secretary, "and the President will require a day or so to examine it and make himself familiar with the evidence before he makes it public, because at present he is without any knowledge of the contents.

This is a material change from the expectation prior to this time. The cause of the delay is not known, but it is assumed that the conclusions of the court would be brought to Washington under a guard, or that it was now on the way, and stated that such a thing would not be necessary.

He also declared that he did not know whether the report would be brought by an officer of the court or by a special messenger. All he knew and all that he would state was that the report would be here at the end of the week.

This will be the crucial week in the matter of the Maine disaster, and every one in Washington is anxiously awaiting events, but as a Cabinet officer said:

"The President is not a man to act precipitately, and when the report is received he will follow the same wise and conservative course he has followed throughout this crucial period. One thing is determined. As soon as the President has read the report, he will make it public through the proper channels, and that is by sending it to Congress."

No Preliminary Report.

Although the President has talked with the officers of the Maine who arrived here on Saturday afternoon, he has not had anything that may be called a preliminary report from the court. All information that may be considered in any way official, however, has corroborated the general impression that the explosion was caused by external agencies, and was not due to accident from internal causes, nor negligence of the officers of the Maine.

The information the President has is not sufficient for him to definitely outline his exact procedure, and not until the report is in his hands and he has carefully digested it will he decide upon his policy. But naturally, with the semi-official information of an external explosion, he has determined that the verdict being such, the next step will be to inform Spain of the findings, and at the same time diplomatically intimating that this Government awaits some expression on the question from the Spanish Government. At the same time the President expects to make the report public by sending it to Congress.

Thus far the administration sees its way clear. But it is only conjecture as to what will follow, for no one can tell what Spain will do. All sorts of intimations have been made as to the course of Spain but until the President acts nothing definite can be known. Certainly had the explosion of a Spanish warship taken place in New York harbor the United States would have instantly made every effort to show that it was not due to any negligence of the authorities or connivance on the part of this Government, and every effort at reparation would have been made. It is therefore supposed that when the findings of the court are made known to Spain she will follow the course this Government would have taken under similar circumstances.

As to Arbitration.

But as Spain does not seem to have exerted herself to make a thorough investigation of the explosion in Havana harbor, it is surmised by some that she will refuse to accept the verdict of the American Court of Inquiry, and demand that the question be left to arbitration. It is here that a serious point arises, which has been considered by the administration. It is whether the Court of Inquiry, having conclusively established the fact of an external explosion, the United States can consent to arbitrating this fact. While it may be an open question as to the justice of leaving the subsequent question of indemnity or adequate reparation to arbitration for a settlement, the advisers of the President doubt whether he could submit the fact of the external explosion to any such agreement. It is, therefore, most important to exactly know how decisively the Court of Inquiry has established the cause of the explosion.

As Congress will be in possession of all the facts, the President's course will, beyond doubt, be in unison with the opinion of Congress. Although there is a seemingly strong sentiment against any dickering with Spain over the verdict, it is not thought for an instant that Congress and the President will differ as to the policy to be pursued, after once the President has acted.

JACKSON AND JEFFRIES.

Much Interest Manifested in the Outcome of the Fight To-night.

San Francisco, Cal., March 22.—A great deal of interest is being manifested in the result of the fight between Peter Jackson and Jim Jeffries, which will be decided at Woodward's Pavilion to-night.

Jackson has undergone a six weeks' preparation, and much to the surprise of his various admirers he has shown great form in the last week or ten days. In fact, he has shown such good form in his practice that those who thought him a "has been" are now laying their money on him. He is apparently strong, and so far as boxing is concerned has lost none of his cleverness or agility; still, having those quick, peculiar blows that won him so many battles. Jackson will weight 195 pounds. He has taken off but 10 or 15 pounds.

Youth and strength are the two principal aids that Jim Jeffries will have on his side. His youth and strength will be pitted against the science of Jackson and the rule has generally been that youth counts more than anything in pugilistic encounters where both men are more or less experienced. Jeffries has a trifle the advantage in height, measuring 6 feet 1 inch and weighs more by about 20 pounds. He will enter the ring at 215 pounds. All things considered it will be a contest between two of the largest men in the pugilistic world to-day, and has been very aptly styled the "battle of the giants." The betting favors Jeffries at 10 to 8 with the prospects of the odds evening up by to-night.

SPAIN HURRIES PREPARATIONS.

Determined to Fight Us Rather Than Sell or Surrender Cuba.

Madrid, March 22.—Despite the admitted conviction of all, except bluffers, that war with the United States would eventually result in the loss not only of Cuba, but of Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands, there is no wavering in the determination to fight rather than to sell or surrender Cuba. Warlike preparations are being pushed vigorously. Transports leave almost weekly, conveying troops and munitions of war to Cuba. The arsenals at Ferrol, Cartagena and Cadiz are working night and day. Conscription and enlistment are active.

Senor Moret, Minister of the Colonies, shows no sign of abandoning his enthusiastic faith in autonomy as a means of restoring peace in Cuba, and, equally, he does not abandon hope that the United States will postpone any action until autonomy has had what he regards as a fair trial. The supporters of Senor Moret contend that Spain has yielded to every demand made by the United States, thereby acknowledging the justice of the demands, and that there are no more discredited men in Spain than General Weyler and Senores de Lome and Robledo.

RING FIGHT MAY RESULT FATALLY.

Harry Brown, Who Sparred With Jack Smith, Seriously Injured.

Trenton, March 22.—Henry Brown, of this city, was given a fatal blow, the doctors fear, in his six-round bout with Jack Smith, also of Trenton, at the Palace Sporting Club last night.

Brown had the best of the contest until the fifth round, when Smith landed a terrific left swing on his jaw, felling him to the stage. Brown arose weak and tottering, and was sent down again by one of Smith's swings.

In the sixth round matters were the same, but Brown managed to last the round out. Smith was declared the winner. After the contest Brown was carried to his dressing-room. His condition became alarming in a short time and Dr. Joseph B. Shaw was summoned. He pronounced the case a serious one, and Brown was conveyed to St. Francis' Hospital.

Pugilist Smith, Referee Sam C. Austin, Manager Jack Shelly and others connected with the fight were arrested.

Reed at the White House.

Washington, March 22.—There were several important conferences at the White House yesterday, chief among them being the visit of Speaker Reed, who made his first call at the White House during the day time within the last year. The only time the Speaker has been to the White House this Winter was on the night before the $50,000,000 appropriation bill was passed. Speaker Reed arrived while the President was consulting with Secretary Long and remained half an hour, talking with the President in his private office. The subject of the discussion was the pending legislation before Congress and the reception of the representative of the Maine Court of Inquiry. The President informed Speaker Reed that the report would be here at the end of the week, but that it might be a day or two before it was sent to Congress. The Navy Reorganization bill, the Naval Appropriation and the Army bill were all discussed, as well as other legislation bearing on the situation.

Brownson Goes to France.

London, March 22.—Commander Willard H. Brownson, U. S. N., has started for France to inspect the ships which are being built at La Seyne, for Brazil. He has inspected the Admiral Abrouall, a sister vessel of the Amazonas, and some torpedo craft at Elliswick and elsewhere. Commander Brownson is understood to have been highly pleased with the Abrouall, though the United States authorities may decide to change some details of her plans.

SIGSBEE TO RETURN

The Captain of the Maine to Leave Havana To-morrow.

MAGAZINES NOT EXPLODED

The Texas and Massachusetts to Go to Norfolk for Repairs, Not to Join the Flying Squadron—Report to Be Ready This Week.

Key West, Fla., March 22.—Admiral Sicard says that the report of the Maine Court of Inquiry is not yet completed, but that it would be finished this week. The officials here say that the story that Captain Barker is carrying the report, or even an epitome of it, to Washington, is a fake. The Court is still deliberating.

Captain Sigsbee and the other officers of the Maine who are still at Havana are expected to leave on the steamer Olivette to-morrow. Hood, Morris, Helms, Bronson, Bowers, Juagers and Hill will probably start home from here the same evening. The wreck will then be practically abandoned, except by the wreckers.

Admiral Sicard received a cable from Captain Sigsbee saying that a quantity of gun cotton and shells had been recovered on Saturday by the divers, indicating that neither the ten-inch nor the six-inch magazine exploded. This is important, as showng that the explosion probably came from the outside.

Lispenard Stewart is now en route for home via Tampa from his trip after tarpon. He came here Saturday after a week in Havana. He says he went to Cuba with the idea that the Maine disaster was an accident. He is quite satisfied now that the battleship was wantonly destroyed. Said Mr. Stewart:

"Spain should be whipped into paying an indemnity, and quick, too. There is too much suffering in Cuba for Americans to remain silent longer."

Mr. Stewart was much impressed by the misery of the reconcentrados.

A friend of Admiral Sicard says the latter now admits he made a great mistake in not massing his squadron outside Havana the day after the Maine was destroyed. The fleet was then off Dry Tortugas, and practically cut off from the Navy Department at Washington. The latter would have had to back up the Admiral's warlike measures. Others would have staked their wide reputation for the chance. Admiral Sicard lost a golden opportunity and a reputation, according to the experts here.

The massing of war ships and the hurrying of work on the fortifications here are proof that President McKinley has been daily informed of the progress of the Court of Inquiry. The evidence and the court's deliberations, it is said on good authority, have been furnished to him, but as private, and not official information.

Appearances here are still warlike. The preparations indicate how the court will decide.

The Texas and Massachusetts will leave the Dry Tortugas to-day. It is not intended that the battle ships shall join the flying squadron. The Texas will be dry-docked at Norfolk, and the Massachusetts will have her turrets fixed. Both are badly in need of repairs, the Texas especially.

To Answer Bribery Charges.

Philadelphia, March 22.—Peter E. Smith, the politician accused of offering Common Councilman Walter N. Stevenson a bribe of $5,000 to vote for the Schuylkill Valley water ordinance, was surrendered to District Attorney Graham at 5 o'clock last evening by his counsel, A. S. L. Shields. Smith, when brought to the District Attorney's office by Detective Henderson, made no statement. He came voluntarily. A bail bond was prepared and Smith entered $10,000 for his appearance at a hearing before Judges Gordon and Bregy to-morrow in the Court of Quarter Sessions.

Populists May Force Special Session.

Lincoln, Neb., March 22.—Populists from all parts of the State are joining in a cry to force Governor Holcomb to call an immediate session of the Legislature to re-enact the maximum freight law. The pressure is becoming so intense from political parties that it is believed the Governor will be controlled by the influence. The Populist leaders desire it as a political masure, and think it will earn them much capital. The call is expected next week.

President to See Warships Launched.

Newport News, Va., March 22.—The Kearsarge and the Kentucky will be launched Thursday. Preparations are being made to celebrate the event with grat ceremonies, and President McKinley and Secretary Long are expected to be present. The Fourth Regiment of Virginia will act as an escort for Governor Tyler, of this State. Governor Bradley, of Kentucky, will reach the city to-morrow on a special train, accompanied by a special staff.

To Be Named "Albany."

Washington, March 22.—Secretary Long has rechristened the cruiser Abrouall, recently purchased from Brazil. She will be known as the Albany, in honor of the capital of the Empire State.

WAR SEEMS INEVITABLE"

Senator Hale Believes That Trouble Cannot Now Be Avoided.

Washington, March 22.—"The country is on the verge of war. I feel nothing can prevent hostilities." Senator Eugene Hale, of Maine, said this to a reporter last night. He was seated in the library of his elegantly artistic mansion on Sixteenth street.

Senator Hale as is well known, is ultra conservative as regards our foreign relations. His attitude in the Senate as to the Cuban question has been often described as pro-Spanish. Continuing, Senator Hale said:

"The speech of Senator Proctor appears to have wrought such an impression on the public mind that the President feels unable to withstand the demand for action. President McKinley has pursued a dignified and statesmanlike course. He has done all he could to avoid plunging the country into war. He now feels that in view of what has occurred that it is his duty to let Congress assume its share of responsibility. This he will probably do at an early day."

Continuing, he said: "I have been conservative as regards Cuba. My attitude has been consistent and in accordance with my earnest convictions. Now that the crisis has arrived, perhaps, it will be best for what I fear is inevitable to occur and have it over. Congress in its present frame of mind will take some radical action—action that means war. It will cost the United States possibly $500,000,000 and the business interests a much larger sum. I hoped that Congress would have an early adjournment and have left the President to have settled the Cuban question alone. Events have crowded on too rapidly and the President has been carried off his feet. The Maine incident is going to be secondary. The speech of Senator Proctor delivered in his cool, unimpassioned, and I may say, judicial manner, has invoked the crisis."

Senator Hale was asked if war was certain. "It is imminent," was the response. "There are many more of the Senate than is popularly supposed who would avert hostilities. Naturally they will try to do all possible. But I fear it is too late."

Senator Hale expressed himself freely on other phases of the situation, all tending to show that he regarded the country as being on the threshold of hostilities with Spain.

LATEST NEWS FROM ALASKA.

The Epidemic of Spinal Meningitis Abating in Skaguay.

Astoria, Ore., March 22.—The steamer Oregon arrived from Dyea and Skaguay, making the passage in five days. She brings 146 passengers, who report the epidemic of spinal meningitis in Skaguay as abating, no deaths having occurred for some days.

Frank Clement, of Hillsboro, Ore., was shot and killed at Sheep Camp on the 14th by Gottlieb Schneider, of Howard County, Md. Lynching was averted only by the prompt action of the officers in getting the murderer out of the way. He is now in jail here. Clement lived several hours, but failed to give an account of the quarrel.

Three gamblers and all-round toughs have been arrested on suspicion of being the murderers of Sam Roberts, who was killed on the 14th. One of them, named Corbett, had a bullet wound in his shoulder, supposed to have been inflicted in the melee.

Railroad to the Yukon.

San Francisco, Cal., March 22.—At a meeting of capitalists interested in the construction of a railroad to the Yukon country, W. C. Alberger presented a report based upon recent explorations and observations made during an exhaustive surveying trip to Alaska, showing that a route up Copper River was not only feasible but practicable. It was decided to organize a party of surveyors, who will start as soon as weather conditions permit, probbaly by May 15. The programme is to go to Orca and proceed up Copper River to its head and thence across to the Yukon at its junction with the American boundary line.

Troops Ordered Out.

Washington, March 22.—Information has reached the War Department that the rowdy element of Alaska have seized Bennett's road, leading to Andover, White Pass, and have terrorized the country. Instructions were telegraphed yesterday to Gen. Merriam, commanding the Department of the Columbia, at Vancouver, Wash., to order the infantry garrison at Skaguay to take proper steps for the protection of persons and property in the disturbed region, regardless of the expense attending such a movement.

TO RECOGNIZE CUBA.

Resolution in Congress to Acknowledge the Republic's Independence.

Washington, March 22.—Representative King, of Utah, yesterday introduced the following resolution looking to the recognition of the Republic of Cuba by Congress:

"Resolved, That the Republic of Cuba, having established and maintained an independent Government capable of performing those duties, foreign and domestic, which appertain to independent governments, and it appearing that there is no longer any reasonable prospect of the successful prosecution of the war by Spain against said State, it is expedient and proper and in conformity with the law of nations, and the practice of this Government in like cases, that the independent political existence of said State be acknowledged by the Government of the United States."

Tribute to Mrs. Cleveland.

Washington, March 22.—Several Washington women met last week and formed a plan for honoring Mrs. Cleveland. They propose to raise money enough to have her picture painted by the most skillful portrait painter in the country, and when finished it will be hung in the Corcoran Gallery, a place made especially appropriate from the fact that Mrs. Cleveland's last official appearance took place there.

TWENTY MISSING AFTER A FIRE.

Anaconda Miners Lose Their Lives in Flame—Boarding House Burned.

Butte, Mont., March 22.—The Hale House, a large, three-story brick building in East Broadway, used for a lodging and boarding house by miners in the employ of the Anaconda company, was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. So far as known two men are dead from injuries received in jumping from windows, another is dying and twenty are missing, while a search of the ruins may disclose the fact that some transient lodgers also lost their lives.

There were 250 men and women in the building when the fire began. Of these about 200 escaped without injury. The fire began in the bakery in the centre of the building, and had a good start before it was discovered.

It was impossible to obtain a full list of many who are slightly hurt. The night was bitterly cold, the thermometer registering five degrees below zero. It is possible some if the missing men may turn up. Early in the day the list of the supposed dead ran up as high as fifty. This was because many of the men who escaped did not report for work at the mines. Little by little only twenty known lodgers were unaccounted for. It is possible, however, that some transient roomers, who are not well known, may be dead in the ruins.

The Hale House belonged to the Anaconda company. It was built in 1895 at a cost of $70,000, and, with the furniture and belongings of the lodgers, the loss will reach fully $100,000.

RELIEF BILL PASSED

House Votes Aid to the Heirs of the Maine's Crew.

SHORT AND SHARP DEBATE

The Bill Called Up by Mr. Boutelle and Passed by a Unanimous Vote Without a Division—Several Amendments Offered and Killed.

Washington, March 22.—The bill "for the relief of the sufferers by the destruction of the United States steamer Maine in the harbor of Havana" was passed by the House yesterday afternoon by a unanimous vote.

It reimburses the survivors of the officers and crew of the vessel for losses of personal effects, and gives heirs of those who perished a sum equal to to twelve months' pay—not, however, to interfere with the right to pensions.

In calling up the bill Mr. Boutelle said he hoped the House would join him in voting on the measure at once.

Mr. Bailey, of Texas, however, thought that the measure should be discussed under the five-minute rule, in order to give members an opportunity to offer amendments.

Considerable discussion was precipitated on the question as to whether the survivors and relatives should be allowed to receive a sum, in addition to one year's sea pay, equal to rations for that period.

To the first section Mr. Cannon, of Illinois, in lieu of the provision appropriating a sum equal to the personal losses sustained by the survivors, not exceeding twelve months' pay, and requiring schedules and affidavits as to the losses, proposed to substitute an outright appropriation of twelve months' sea pay without rations to cover those losses.

He did this, he said, in order that even the shadow of temptation be not put in anybody's way, and he read a report concerning claims under the similar Samoan relief bill, showing that the claims in almost every case were for the full amount of the limit.

Mrs. Sayers, of Texas, asked Mr. Cannon to state to the House whether there were not the grossest frauds perpetrated on the Treasury under the Samoan relief act.

Mr. Cannon said it was true that claims for the full amount had been filed by a majority of the survivors. His amendment would do away with attorneys, do away with delay, and do away with temptation. The sum carried would be $47,800 for the officers and $18,324 for the enlisted men.

Representative Shelbourne, of California, and Boutelle thought that there would be no attempt to defraud the Government by falsifying the accounts. Mr. Boutelle said that the debate on the bill ought to close.

Several amendments were then offered and killed, after which the House passed the bill on a viva voce vote.

SENATORS EXPECT ACTION.

Cuban Question Excludes Other Topics from Their Consideration.

Washington, March 22.—The short session of the Senate yesterday was quite unusual for the first working day of the week. The opinion was expressed by some of the Senators that while the Cuban question remained in such suspense, there was no desire to take up important legislation. The outlook as to Cuba was discussed almost to the exclusion of other topics, and the belief was decided that the Administration is preparing to take a positive position within the next week.

Several Senator made the prediction that the United States would intervene. Being pressed for a reason they said that they had reached this conclusion after more or less conference with executive officers, but at the same time saying emphatically that they had no positive information on this point. Other Senators thought the recognition of Cuban independence more probable than intervention. Almost all expressed the view that some action surely will follow the report of the Maine Court of Inquiry, regardless of its purport.

TRIUMPH FOR DR. SCHENCK!

Countess of Warwick Took His Treatment and Bore a Son.

London, March 22.—The Countess of Warwick, better known as Lady Brooke, after spending some months in retirement, has given birth to a son. Mother and babe are both reported to be doing well.

It had been known among her intimates that the Countess about three months ago placed herself in the hands of Dr. Samuel Schenk, the distinguished embryologist of Vienna, and that he had undertaken to insure the birth of a male child.

Two assistants of Dr. Schenck, thoroughly versed in his methods, were sent on from Vienna and the Countess has followed their directions implicitly. The result is one for which she and her husband have ardently prayed, for while they have a son living, his health is so delicate that it is doubtful if he ever becomes a robust man, and it is said that he will probably never marry.

The birth of a male heir gives assurance that the house of Warwick will not fail for another generation or two at least.

The South Carolina Murder.

Washington, March 22.—Mrs. Ida B. Wells Bennett presented to President McKinley a set of resolutions adopted at a mass meeting in Chicago, denouncing the recent murder of a colored postmaster in South Carolina and requested the President to use his best efforts to bring the perpetrators to justice. President McKinley assured Mrs. Bennett that both the Post Office Department and the Department of Justice were doing all in their power to ferret out and punish the members of the mob.

Berks County Furnaces in Blast.

Reading, Pa., March 22.—The furnace at Temple, Berks County, Pa., which has been idle since July 1896, was put in blast yesterday, giving employment to a large force of men. Mrs. William L. Graul, wife of the chairman of the Berks County Gold Democrats, applied the match that started the fires.

LOWER TAX RATE.

Unless there is an increase in the county and State tax this year, the tax rate in Plainfield for the year 1898 will be five points lower than last year. This statement is made on the authority of a prominent Councilman who stands close to the administration. It can therefore be looked on as semi-official. The administration has been doing some figuring on the appropriations and the assessments of the property in the city and they have reached the conclusion that the hoped-for reduction of the rate of taxation will be possible. While some of the appropriations have been increased over last year's, the Councilman said there was sufficient retrenchment in other places to allow the reduction. If this be true that the tax rate is reduced without any but the natural increase in valuations, the new Council will have accomplished one of the things for which it was elected.

GAS FOR THE STREETS.

There is a strong inclination on the part of the city council to adopt the Welshbach light for street lighting in place of the electric light. Several of the members have witnessed exhibitions of the light in New York and express themselves pleased with the result. In case the light should be introduced in Plainfield the Welshbach Company would have full charge of the operating of the system. The only part the city would have to do would be to pay for the lighting. It is said that most of the Councilmen are not pleased with the exhibition of the arc lighs at the corner of Front street and Park avenue.

UP TO THE TIMES.

A year ago the Trenton Evening Times was "just behind the times." Today, under its present aggressive management, it is right up-to-date. The latest improvement made by The Times is the installation of a telegraphic news service by direct wire. The present prosperous condition of The Times is highly flattering to the business and editorial ability of its young editor, who, as a receiver, took the paper when, to use a trite phrase, it was on its last legs.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

The new arrangement and division o the military departments are of interes as showing the future attitude of the United States toward other nations. The rearrangement is a result of the complications and possible war with Spain. That prospect impelled the president and his advisers to look around at our national defenses and see what was lacking. They saw so much that they began energetic measures to supply the need, and one of the first of these was the redistricting of the country's military departments and the creation of two entirely new ones, so that there are now eight of these departments.

The new shuffle and deal were made with a view particularly to our coast defenses. Of the two newly created districts one is composed of the states fringing the lakes and will be known as the department of the lakes, headquarters at Chicago. The other is to be called the department of the gulf and is composed of the states bordering the south Atlantic beginning with South Carolina and following the ocean and gulf coast around till it ends with the southwestern border of Texas. Its headquarters are at Atlanta, which will delight the citizens of that ambitious town. The department of the east, headquarters Governor's island, New York city, includes the Atlantic states north of South Carolina.

On the Pacific coast the department of Columbia includes all the coast line from the farthest corner of Alaska to the northern corner of California, headquarters at Vancouver barracks, Washington. The rest of the Pacific coast line belongs to the department of California, headquarters San Francisco.

It will thus be seen that of the eight military departments into which the country is henceforth to be divided five are along our coast lines, north, east, south and west.

It is to be noted that the house committee on election of president, vice president and representatives has reported in favor of a joint resolution amending the United States constitution so that representatives will be elected every four years instead of every two years. If the resolution should pass the house, it would have to pass also the senate. Then it would be submitted to the legislatures of the states to vote whether they would have it or not. If it were submitted to the people at large, they would be unanimous in its favor. If a congressman were elected for four years instead of two, he could spend all the first half of his term learning the business instead of planning to get in a second term, as he now does. Congressional elections in that case should come in the off year from presidential contests.

THE COAL QUESTION.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

Now a war is raging.
Blood is in the eye,
"We are selling cheapest,
Come to us and buy."

Thus the mighty chieftains
Advertise their wares,
Sometimes speaking honestly,
Sometimes laying snares.

While the price is cut to cost,
Buying is intense,
Patrons saving dollars,
Dealers losing sense.

They have changed their principle.
Do not sell for gain,
But each one cuts the profits
To cause his neighbor pain.

Comic actors are these men,
Plainfield is their stage,
Her people are the audience
Whom they would engage.

"Anthracite," the wond'rous play,
Is having quite a run,
For the talent—only loss,
For the people—fun.

When the game is over,
When they stop the fight,
Tell me what the actors gain,
I can't see it quite.

But the mighty chieftains
Surely we extol,
Their most philanthropic act
In giving us our coal.

PASSING COMMENT.

Many fruit growers are beginning to grow apprehensive of a bad season for fruits, on account of the mild weather setting in so soon in March. They argue, from past experience, that whenever spring is unduly advanced it means a snap of frost toward the end of April or in the first part of May, and a consequent impairment, if not complete blight, of the fruit crop.

Peter Pfinger, proprietor of the Washingtonville Hotel, has just completed a walk from the rear of his garden leading to the top of the mountain. In the steep parts stone steps are placed, making it easy of ascent. On the top of the mountain is located a fine spring, benches, etc. School teachers taking their classes for a day's outing and others will find this a desirable spot to spend a day. No charges will be made for use of the grounds, and nothing will be allowed to be sold.

* * * * *

In the recent spell of warm weather, there was no man in Plainfield brave, or rather foolhardy, enough to venture among his fellowmen in a straw hat. Several small boys, however, startled their friends by announcing their intention of going in swimming last Saturday afternoon. And swimming they went in the Green brook near Clinton avenue. They shivered somewhat when they plunged in the chilly water but they declared that they had a lovely time. Luckily, for the mortality of the place there are but very few boys who care to go swimming during March in this climate.

KIND WORDS FOR THE PRESS.

Since last week Plainfield's Daily Press appears in enlarged form, at the same time treating its many German subscribers with news from the old "Heimat" in their mother tongue. This is undoubtedly a progress in journalistic territory which is well worthy of imitation. Some time ago we took occasion to recommend to the English reading Germans The Daily Press as the only reliable paper in Plainfield.—Der Somerset Bote.

The Daily Press has introduced a new Scott press into its office, and has increased every page one column in size. One special feature of the enlarged paper is the German news department. Plainfield is a city where many Germans reside, and wield a healthy influence in the community. The Press is an excellent newspaper.—Westerly (R. I.) Daily Sun.

AN ORDINANCE

FREE CONSULTATION

During This Month by the Examining Physician to the Boy Phenomenon.

THE PRICE OF TREATMENT HAS BEEN GREATLY REDUCED FOR TEN DAYS.

AN OPPORTUNITY THE SICK MAY NEVER HAVE AGAIN—TO BE TREATED AT PRICES WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

Those Who Have Received Consultation the Past Six Weeks Are Invited to Return and Take Advantage of These Reduced Prices.

The great success since the introduction of Vital Magnetism in Plainfield six weeks ago and its triumph over diseases that has been daily demonstrated by the Boy Phenomenon, is indeed a revelation, not only to the public but to our most eminent medical scientists.

The past six weeks have been a period of surprising and extraordinary cures, the like of which has never been witnessed in Plainfield before. The public have had time for consideration and investigation, and it has been improved, for nearly every patient calling on the doctor have stated they first investigated some of the advertised cures, and being satisfied they were true, then decided to place themselves under treatment.

His appearance in this city has been a campaign against disease and death, the like of which has never been equalled, and the great results of which are so long and many it would require columns to enumerate them.

The large crowds made it necessary for him to charge one dollar consultation fee, but having discharged 127 patients as permanently cured since his advent here, he can now devote more time to new patients. Therefore in order that no one will be denied the privilege of learning their true physical condition, and that all may have the opportunity of being cured at a greatly reduced price, the Boy Phenomenon has decided that his physician will give consultation, examination, advice and a thorough diagnosis to all patients entirely free of charge during the rest of this month.

Therefore, all who desire to know if they can be cured, and if so what the cost will be, are invited to take advantage of this offer of Free Consultation and Reduced Price of treatment.

The Boy Phenomenon needs no further commendation from the public than he has already received from his many cured patients, who have given him their unsolicited testimonials relating cures of the most startling character; so wonderful, in fact, that the medical fraternity have been nonplussed and bewildered, but after investigation were forced to believe that the marvelous cures daily performed by the Boy Phenomenon were unparalleled and beyond their comprehension.

Those who have already paid their consultation fee, and been examined, but were not able to pay the price named, are invited to return with their envelopes, and take advantage of this greatly reduced offer, as the consultation fee will also be applied on the reduced cost of treatment.

While he will remain in Plainfield two weeks longer, no new cases will be taken after Saturday night, April 2d. Office hours at Revere House daily except Sunday from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

REIGN OF THE FLOUNCE BEGINS.

Dame Rumor Says We Will Have Ruffles Galore on Gowns.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun)

If rumors may be taken as straws showing which way the wind blows, we may calmly contemplate ruffled skirts as one of the assured revivals of fashions worn more than a hundred years ago. That the reign of the flounce is about to begin is one of the positive declarations from the hub of all things fashionable which need not be questioned. So our Summer gowns may be flounced and ruffled from waist to hem or from the hem to any intermediate point that may suit the figure or fancy, with all necessary confidence in the result.

There are pinked ruffles, ruffles trimmed with graduated rows of velvet ribbon, with lace and passementaries; ruffles edged with rows of baby ribbon and tiny ruches of chiffion, and ruffles with plain hems, according to the material employed; but the flounce in some form is inevitable. Of course it is the ultra tall, slim women who can indulge in skirts covered with flounces with satisfactory results, and, as usual, most of the new fashions are designed for women with slender figures; but there are always modifications to make them becoming to every one.

Ruffles are not confined to skirts chiefly, and waists and sleeves are both generously trimmed with ruffles.

Cording is another popular feature of dress trimming which bids fair to flourish to a much greater extent later on when the thin Summer gowns appear. Vests of chiffon, mull, and thin silk are shirred crosswise in fine cords in groups of three, and bodices of thin material are corded horizontally to form a yoke, or up and down all around with an inch space between cords. Various skirt trimmings are made of cords run into two inches wide when finished. Two cords as large as the small end of a pipe stem from the centre of the band, and the edges of the silk are double frills. This is set on the skirt of a blue and black bayadere striped silk gown.

The latest skirts are so close fitting aroung the hip that there is very little room for any petticoat underneath, which fact suggests the possibility of their being abolished altogether. But this is hardly probable, and the skirt makers are as busy as ever bringing out all sorts of novel and attractive models to tempt feminine fancy. One of the latest designs is silk for petticoats is in three shades of one color, each in a bayadere stripe fully an inch wide. The darkest medium, and lightest shade follow each other in successive bands.

New Nun's Veiling.

The new importation of nun's veiling is extremely beautiful this season, the qualities even more sheer than the dainty variety already familiar to us, and the colorings are lovely beyond description. These fabrics are invaluable to those who have to guard against sudden changes of temperature in our fitful climate; for, in effect, these textiles are as dainty as organdy or India mull, while yet being exceedingly protective against the influence of night air, or sea breezes of the summer. Another great point in their favor is, that they rumple less easily than cotton fabrics, or light silks, and they can, with care, be worn an entire season without a visit to the cleaner's. The newest weaves have handsome, fancy borderings.

The Latest in Skirts.

The newest imported models furnish a variety in skirts that is at least noteworthy as an exhibition of the dress designer's ingenuity, but whether or not they will on this side the water banish the plain sheath-fronted skirt, minus all decorations, from all but the several styles of tailor gown, remains to be found out later on, when dressmakers begin to busy themselves in earnest with spring gowns. One of the very old styles revived is the demi-trained evening dress, finished with long, slender peplum points, the skirt of one rich material, the long points of another; these two fabrics are repeated on the bodice to complete the double effect. Silk braid put on cloth skirts on wide trellis patterns, this trimming covering more than half the depth of the skirt, is a very popular garniture. This elaborate and stylish effect is carried out on the full blouse waist often front and back, or the crossing braids appear only on the front of a full blouse vest worn beneath an open jacket made of the cloth.

Fancy Dress, "Roses."

A pretty idea for a fancy dress would be an impersonation of roses, carried out with a white satin skirt, festooned with deep yellow roses and brown foliage, the bodice having a foundation of satin, over which gold braid should be interlaced and trimmed with roses to correspond with those on skirt. Another idea would be to have the white satin skirt festooned across with roses of all shades or any one color preferred, such as pink or red with green foliage, the bodice being interlaced with a green satin ribbon to give the basket effect; then a pink silk or satin skirt would look well with roses shading from pale pink to deep red, and the bodice be of plaited gold or silver braid, or of green velvet or satin ribbon. Silk stockings and shoes to match dress, white, cream, or pink gloves.

Teacher—"What do you know about the law of gravity?"

Pupil—"Oh, if I snicker in church I have to read two chapters in the Bible when I get home."

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Metz. Der „Metzer Zeitung" zufolge erfuhr die Metzer Abordnung, die vom Kaiser empfangen wurde, daß das Fort Steinmetz bestehen bleibe, ebenso das Deutsche Thor als historisches Denkmal. Die Rayonbeschränkung werde nach Durchführung der Schleifung aufgehoben werden. Das in Betracht kommende Gelände muß vorher verkauft und der Bebauungsplan festgestellt sein. Die Stadt Metz hat das Vorkaufsrecht.

Oesterreich.

Wien. Die stürmischen Auftritte im hiesigen Gemeinderath, wo sich das liberale Gemeindemitglied Mittler mit den Luegerianern und Christlich-Sozialen fast in jeder Sitzung herumzankt, haben ein gerichtliches Nachspiel gehabt. Gemeinderath Mittler hatte sich von seiner Erregung über einen engherzigen Majoritätsbeschluß zu einigen beleidigenden Ausfällen gegen den Ex-Bürgermeister Strohbach hinreißen lassen und ist dafür in letzter Instanz vom Appellsenat des Wiener Landesgerichts zu 12stündigem Arrest verurtheilt worden.—Neulich Abends war beim Kränzchen der alpinen Gesellschaft „Krummholz" in Weigls Katharinensaal eine Alpenlandschaft mit Auf- und Abstiegen hergestellt, die von den Besuchern und Besucherinnen lebhaft frequentirt wurde. Gelegentlich eines Abstieges stürzte die 54jährige Private Anna Rosenwald über eine Stufe und brach den rechten Unterschenkel.

Bozen. Zwei Kurgäste unternahmen dieser Tage ohne Ausrüstung eine Tour auf die Meraner Muthspitze. Es gelang ihnen, bis 300 Meter unterhalb des Gipfels zu kommen, wo sie wegen Erschöpfung liegen blieben. Erst nach mehreren Stunden konnten sie den halsbrecherischen Abstieg unternehmen; sie legten ihn größtentheils kriechend zurück und langten in kläglichem Zustande Abends in Longwall ein.

Budapest. Die Polizei verhaftete den Grafen Tibor Sztaray wegen Wechselfälschung.

Budweis. Ein Rädelsführer der Demonstranten, welche hier die Deutschenhetze inszenirten und Steine in die Fenster der Schulen, Wohnhäuser und Restaurants warfen, wobei auch Personen verletzt wurden, der Spenglergehilfe Joseph Slamschidlo, wurde neulich vom Kreisgerichte zu sieben Monaten schweren Kerkers verurtheilt.

Meran. In den letzten Tagen fanden Sandarbeiter am Sinich unter dem aus dem Nalfthal heruntergeführten Sande zwei Goldmineralien mit bedeutendem Feingoldgehalt. Es besteht die Absicht, den Nalfschotter einer genauen fachmännischen Untersuchung zu unterziehen.

Prag. Der „Politik" zufolge hatten die Ereignisse der Dezembertage die Uebergabe von sieben Personen in die Irrenanstalt zur Folge. Die Geistesstörung sei in Folge von Verwundung durch Waffen oder durch Pferdehufschläge, sowie in Folge von Schrecken und Furcht eingetreten.

Schweiz.

Bern. Das Schweizervolk hat die Eisenbahn-Verstaatlichungsvorlage mit 384,146 gegen 177,130 Stimmen angenommen. Verworfen wurde sie von den Kantonen Uri, Schwyz, Freiburg, Appenzell, Innerrhoden, Wallis und Obwalden, ferner von Neuenburg und Genf. Im Kanton Zürich stimmten 69,713 mit Ja, 13,871 mit Nein, in Bern 74,260 Ja, 20,040 Nein, St. Gallen 37,085 Ja, 7737 Nein, Aargau 33,754 Ja, 7260 Nein, Luzern 14,763 Ja, 12,366 Nein, Thurgau 18,857 Ja, 2179 Nein. Es herrscht großer Jubel unter den Freunden der Verstaatlichung der Eisenbahnen.

Zürich. In Zürich ist vor Kurzem die Wittwe des 1886 gestorbenen Kulturhistorikers Johannes Scherr, die es nach dem Tode seiner ersten Gattin verstanden hatte, sein Haus zum Sammelplatz der schöngeistigen Welt der schweizerischen Musenstadt zu machen, nach längerer Krankheit aus dem Leben geschieden.

Freiburg. Nationalrath Wuillert, der Alterspräsident des Nationalraths, dem er seit 1853 angehörte, ist im Alter von 83 Jahren in Freiburg gestorben. Wuillert, seines Zeichens Jurist, stand früher an der Spitze der Freiburger Ultramontanen, die jetzt sein Schwiegersohn, der Staatsrath Python, befehligt, der zu dem Exodus der deutschen Professoren aus Freiburg mitgeholfen hat.

Solothurn. Einen sonderbaren Tod fand in Solothurn ein junger Mann. Er hatte, als Domino verkleidet, den Faschingsfreuden allzusehr gehuldigt, so daß er, in einen Wassergraben gefallen, nicht mehr im Stande war, sich zu retten. Am Morgen fanden Kinder den todten blauen Domino.

St. Gallen. Ein Brand, der das Telegraphenbureau in Rorschach in Asche legte, hatte eine seltsame Ursache: Es wird nämlich angenommen, daß sich durch den starken Schneefall die Telephondrähte senkten, diese die Leitung des Elektrizitätswerks berührten und so eine Starkstromleitung erzeugten. Die Richtigkeit dieser Annahme wird durch Aussagen von Augenzeugen bestätigt, die ein periodisch erscheinendes elektrisches Funkensprühen beobachten konnten; auch bestätigen die verschiedenartigen Erscheinungen an den Telephons die genannte Brandursache.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And stil what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all-odds.

MISS MAUDE ADAMS TELLS OF HER STAGE FRIGHT.

On Her First Night in The Little Minister, A Cage of Lions Would Have Been a Place of Refuge So Great Was Her Consternation.

The greatest American actress is little Miss Maude Adams. She has played a season through in New York, and every night to houses that were sold weeks in advance. As leading lady to Mr. John Drew, Miss Adams had won a place in the popular heart, but at her first appearance as a star she rounded to heights heretofore unattained by any actress on this continent. Miss Adams is such a modest and lovely young woman, and so thought of by all who know her, that her description of her stage fright, given after much persuasion, reads like the confidential chat of a school girl to a friend. It was soon after the first night of "The Little Minister" that she wrote the New York Herald:

MISS MAUDE ADAMS.

"Mr. Frohman tried to pirepare me for it beforehand, and warned me not to let a welcoming burst of applause overcome me. I think he was afraid that, between nervousness natural to the occasion and emotion when I met a hearty welcome, I might lose my head and my heart and my lines all at one and the same time, and break down at the outset—as I very nearly did when that overgenerous welcome brought me to a standstill after my first entrance. I was almost frightened to death.

"An anecdote I'd heard flashed through my mind about the lion tamer who left his lions and started to walk up Broadway; but the crowd and the noise frightened him so that he turned right about and went back and sat down in the cage with his lions and congratulated himself that he was in a safe, quiet place again.

"And I thought how safe I'd been these last five years, when I only had to face an audience in a new part with John Drew. I felt he was right alongside of me and that if I were to go to pieces he was there to take everything on his shoulders.

"But when I went on the stage of the Empire Theatre I suddenly realized—after that little anecdote of the lion tamer—that I was responsible all by my own poor self and had no quiet right.

MISS MAUDE ADAMS.

"I grew so nervous and fidgety at home on Monday that by six o'clock I couldn't stay there any longer, and I got up and went to the theatre. I had hardly set foot in my dressing room before a telegram was handed me from Mr. Drew, who had been buoying me up over the wire for a week. His telegram told me not to worry; that I was going to make a hit—and he said all manner of pleasant things. Then came, among others, one from Mr. Gillette. I hardly dare repeat what he said, for in his kindness he seemed to so much exaggerate what I had accomplished.

"I don't suppose I could have done anything worse than to have gone to the theatre so early. I was made up and ready to go on by half-past six and had two hours to wait and get more nervous. They must have been two terrible hours for Mr. Frohman, for he simply devoted himself to the endeavor to turn my mind and make me think of something else than the cage to go back to.

"What surprised me, however, was that as soon as I began to speak my first lines all nervousness left me, but every time I left the stage, it all came back with a rush, and I almost felt as though I should collapse. But I pulled myself together at my cues, and every time I went on again I was all ordeal through which I was to pass.

"The curtain went up, and there I stood at the wings waiting for my cue. But I might have been kneeling with my head on the block waiting for the guillotine to fall, or sitting in the electric chair waiting for the current to be turned on. I had something worse than stage fright; I had "wing fright." But I caught Mr. Frohman's eye, and somehow managed to get through the few bars I sing before I go on the stage.

"As I have said, when I once got on the stage and the applause was over, I was all right. But as often as I got off the stage I was simply beside myself—not hysterical, but oblivious of everything. After my first long exit I cried like a child. In fact, every time I left the stage I broke down. They tell me there was many recalls after each act, but I knew nothing about them at the time. Mr. Edeson simply took my hand and led me on till, as he afterward told me in a kindly, humorous way, his arm was tired. I, of course, was very happy; but if my good mother had been there to "'Please telegraph to my mother,' I share it with me I would have been happier still.

said to Mr. Frohman, and then, with final handshaking with all, I went home.

"I couldn't sleep. I was too excited. I tossed and turned till half past three in the morning. I could hear the newsboys calling the morning papers, but I didn't dare send out for them, I was so afraid of what they might say. Even when, after I had tried to rest and had finally risen for an early breakfast, my maid brought me the papers, I was still afraid to look at them.

"I went over to the theatre soon after breakfast, and when I entered Mr. Frohman's office and he took my hand and said, 'I am very proud of you,' I broke down again and cried. Then he read to me what the papers said, and my feelings quite overcame me. I suppose the strain had been greater than I realized.

"Afterward I went down stairs and watched a rehearsal that was going on till Mr. Frohman came down and suggested that I ought to go home and get some rest before the evening performance. I took his advice—and how I did sleep!"

An Illegible Letter.

Mr. Thomas Bailey Aldrich once received a letter from his friend. Prof. E. S. Morse, and finding the handwriting absolutely illegible, he sent the following reply: "My dear Mr. Morse: It was very pleasant to receive a letter from you the other day. Perhaps I should have found it pleasanter if I had been able to decipher it. I don't think I mastered anything beyond the date, which I know, and the signature, which I guessed at. There is a singular and perpetual charm in a letter of yours—it never grows old, it never loses its novelty. One can say to one's self every morning: 'Here's a letter of Morse's; I haven't read it yet; I think I shall take another shy at it to-day, and maybe I'll be able, in the course of a few years to make out what he means by those t's that look like w's, and those i's that haven't any eyebrows.' Other letters are read and thrown away and forgotten, but yours are kept forever—unread. One of them will last a reasonable man a lifetime. Admiringly yours, Thomas Bailey Aldrich."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Vincent B. Miner, of East Sixth street, has a new wheel.

A. C. LaBoyteaux, of Fairview avenue, is riding a new Eldridge wheel.

P. B. Matthews, of Grove street, has thus far ridden over 500 miles on his new Apollo wheel.

All cycle riders should watch the sign displayed at the salesrooms of the Eldridge Co. It tells when to have your lamps lighted. The card is changed every day.

The wheelmen were out in force Saturday afternoon. Many of the cyclists of this city had new wheels that they wished to try and the principal wheeling thoroughfares were the scene of a continual procession of wheels all the afternoon.

The appointment of the L. A. W. hotel for Plainfield has been announced. The appointment went to McVey, whose hotel and restaurant is located on North avenue. Mr. McVey held the appointment for several years but owing to a dispute over the question of rates, the appointment was given to another for a year. This year Mr. McVey was the only applicant and received it without any contest. The L. A. W. repair shop has not yet been appointed.

BASKET BALL.

After several attempts a game has now been arranged between the girls of the Junior and Third classes of the Plainfield High School. It will be played Friday afternoon at the Whittier building.

The Business Men's team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. has lost one of its best players in Rev. H. J. Johnston, pastor of Grace M. E. church, who soon leaves for Staten Island, where he takes a new charge. Mr. Johnston was one of the best individual players in the Plainfield association. He had the requisite quickness combined with an untiring energy and alertness that made him an expert at the game. He understood team play and believed in it in preference to individual work. While he always played a sharp, quick game, he never lost his temper and understood how to be a gentleman in the game as well as out of it.

patient suffering with toothache, a bicycle race in which chairs were used for wheels, a quartette who labored under the delusion that they were comic opera singers, and two who impersonated a gallant young man and his best girl out sleighriding.

The parts were gone through so earnestly and correctly in movement and manner that a description of its humorous features would be impossible. It is enough to say that the audience could not control its risibilities.

One of the best features of the entertainment were the hypnotic tableaux, in which three subjects were chosen and robed in Grecian gowns. They were posed in an alcove of black drapery, thrown in a cataleptic stete and the lime light turned on. Their bodies were perfectly rigid for several minutes, or until Prof. Sage broke the spell. The posing represented the works of various artists, and were beautiful, dramatic and an innovation.

AN AUDIENCE OF THREE.

How Artemus Ward Escaped from an Awkward Situation.

Before Artemus Ward went to London, where the English fell in love with him only to mourn his premature death among them, he had conquered the respect and affection of his own countrymen by his quaint and kindly humor. The itinerary of one of his tours led him to a town in central Pennsylvania. It was about the middle of January. The day of the lecture came, and with it early came Artemus. Before noon a tremendous snowstorm broke over that part of Pennsylvania and raged furiously all day and night.

When the lecturer appeared on the stage that night and looked about him, in all the large theater he saw only three men, each in the seat his coupon called for; all three, as it happened being far to the rear.

The three men looked lonely and uncomfortable. Keeping that solemn face of his at its solemnest, Artemus advanced to the footlights and beckoning to the three men, said: "Come up closer, gentlemen. I want to speak to you." He had to repeat this invitation before his auditors understood that he meant what he said and mustered courage to go forward. When they had taken seats together in the front row, Artemus said: "There, now, that's more sociable." He paused a moment and went on:

"Gentlemen, you are entitled to see my show and hear my lecture, if you are so disposed. But I understand that underneath this hall there is an excellent cafe, and I suggest that we spend the evening there, you as my guests.

Though reluctant to forego the show and lecture, as they saw Artemus had no mind for them, the three agreed to his proposition, the lights were turned out, and the little party descended to the cafe, where for hours they made merry, and whence one of them at least was most reluctant to start for home. He says he never had a more enjoyable time in his life, and that if Artemus Ward was not at his best then his best must have been "past all whooping." For the stories he told and the way he told them made them forget time and circumstances and completely banished any lingering regret for what they had not received upstairs.—New York Times.

deducted. The liquor dealers of the city asked the Council to amend the liquor ordinance so that the saloon could be kept open until 12 instead of 11 o'clock in the evening, that a transfer could be made from one person to another on the payment of a small fee, and that it not be necessary for an applicant to secure the signatures of freeholders, unless they have been convicted of violations. The matter was referred to the police committee. The Board of Health asked for an appropriation of $681.45, and later President Newhall of the Board asked that an additional $318.55, making $1,000, be granted. This was also referred to the finance committee.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, in a communication, asked the Council for the privilege of opening certain streets and laying their wires under ground in accordance with an ordinance adopted sometime ago. The same was granted.

Mr. VanHerwerden offered several resolutions, all of which were adopted. One was that the dog license fee for the coming year be $2 Another one was that the $12,000 for streets be certified by the clerk and sent to the Mayor so that it could be included in the tax ordinance. Other resolutions were that E. H. Bird be appointed delinquent tax collector and that the city judge be empowered to execute warrants for the collection of the taxes from the sale of property. The resolution appropriating $12,000 for lights was referred to Assessor Hubbard before it was included in the tax ordinance. The following appropriations were then made: General fund, $37,000; lights, $12,000; sewer bonds, $4,000; interest on sewer bonds and extension of system, $5,000; public library, $3,800; poor fund, $4,000; fire department, $16,000; police department, $14,500. Of the $16,000 for fire department work it is only just to state that $4,000 comes out of that amount for hydrants. For street work $18,000 was appropriated and $2,000 was appropriated for storm sewer work. The opinion of Corporation Counsel Marsh was that $20,000 could not be appropriated for street work, and the above method was adopted to overcome the technical point.

Mr. Barrows offered an ordinance providing for the construction of separate sewers for the drainage of surface water, and the date of April 4th at 8 o'clock in the evening was set as the time for adopting the ordinance.

Mr. Barrows also spoke regarding an old bill of Michael Powers for laying crosswalks, etc., which contract had not been properly carried out. He said that the corporation counsel had advised the committee to settle the bill of some $300 for $125, if possible, and the committee was now able to do so. Mr. Barrows moved that the matter be referred with power to the finance committee for that purpose. This being done it concluded the business of the evening and the meeting adjourned.

Opening the Doors to More Business for Plainfield.

A WEALTH OF SUGGESTIONS.

PLAN ADVANCED TO ACQUIRE OWNERSHIP OF WATER WORKS.

It is Claimed That the City Can Purchase the Water Plant and System and Make it a Paying Investment, Besides Giving Lower Rates—Question of Passenger and Freight Rates Thoroughly Discussed—Central Will be Asked for a Cheap Ten-Trip Ticket—Building Ordinance Severely Criticised.

A deluge of all sorts and kinds of suggestions fairly flooded the adjourned meeting of the new Board of Trade last evening. Fifteen of Plainfield's enterprising business men were present, and their combined efforts produced ideas startling enough to satisfy the most radical of them all. There were some things about the city that did not satisfy the members, and they were perfectly free to express their criticism. Altogether the meeting was an exceedingly lively one.

The opening was quiet enough. President F. C. Lounsbury was in the chair. The resignation of VanBuren Brothers from the Board was received and accepted.

A communication was received from the Boston Chamber of Commerce, asking that a petition be sent to President McKinley asking for a reciprocal treaty with Canada. J. C. Pope offered a set of resolutions setting forth the advantages of such an act to the United States. The secretary was instructed to forward the resolutions, which were immediately passed.

Former Mayor Hegeman was not present to report for the committee on transportation but Elston M. French read his report. He stated that the committee had been at work securing the freight rates on other railroads tor a distance equal to that of from New York to Plainfield and comparing them with the rates on the Jersey Central Railroad. Replies had been received from the New York Central, the Erie, the D. L. and W., the Lehigh Valley and the New York, Susquehanna and Western. The Lehigh Valley was the only one in which the freight rates were lower than the Jersey Central. The Lehigh Valley was about 10 per cent. lower. The report continued that the Lehigh Valley people wanted the trade of Plainfield, but for certain reasons they could not build a spur over to this city. Mr. French said that he thought, however, that some adjustment might be reached about the cartage to South Plainfield whereby a rate stilll lower than that on the Central could be secured.

Here somebody suggested that the committee look into the fact that the New York and Elizabeth Dispatch Company would deliver goods in Plainfield for 25 cents a hundred weight while the United States Express Company charged 40 cents a hundred weight.

Mr. French then gave some comparisons of the passenger rates of the same railroads. The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western sold a ten-trip ticket for $4 15, for a place the same distance from New York as Plainfield. They also sold a fifty-trip ticket for $16.25. The regular round trip ticket was the same as on the Central but the single trip ticket was slightly higher. The rates on the other roads were all higher. The committee made the recommendation that the Board petition the Jersey Central Railroad to put a ten-trip ticket on the market and sell it for $3.75, making the cost of a trip to New York 75 cents. The report was accepted and it was decided to petition the Central as suggested.

The question of water works, which was the burden of the report of the committee on municipal improvements, was not an unlooked-for subject. J. Fred MacDonald made the report of the committee. The report stated that it was to the interest of the city and borough to own their own water supply. They recommended that the city purchase the pipe lines of the present Plainfield Water Supply Company if at a reasonable figure. If not, they recommend the investigation of the cost of the construction of a new water supply station. They suggested that a committee of three from the Board of Trade confer with similar committees from the Common Council and Borough Council to look into the matter.

The report opened a discussion of the subject. President Lounsbury gave some figures going to show that the city would really save money to own its own water works and that it now paid out enough to the present company to pay the interest on the bonds to pay for a new system. The receipts from the consumers would soon establish a sinking fund that would pay off the bonded indebtedness in eighteen years according to the figures of Mayor Fisk.

It was stated that the present water works could only be purchased by mutual agreement of both parties. It was thought that the company ought to be given a chance to sell and would sell if it were sure that the city and borough were going to own their own water supply. It was explained that the city now paid $15 each a year for its fire hydrants and that that was the smallest amount paid by any city for their hydrants. The contract will run out in three years and then the company will probably raise the rates.

After a lengthy discussion the recommendation about the committee was adopted, and the members of the committee on municipal improvements, J. Fred MacDonald, Wm. A. Westphal and Wm. C. Smith, were appointed a committee to confer with committees from the Councils.

Robert A. Meeker, chairman of the committee on streets, roads and bridges, was not present to report, but President Lounsbury told of his visit to the street committee of the Common Council regarding a storm sewer for Plainfield avenue. John D. Runyon suggested the need of a similar sewer to carry off the water beneath the railroad bridges over Watchung and Park avenues.

There were no reports from the committees on sanitation and education.

President Lounsbury read the report that the committee on manufactures had presented to the board of management and the suggestions contained there were discussed. The first suggestion was that the Board advertise in the New York Herald, World and Brooklyn Eagle. Then that a prospectus of the city and borough be issued. G. Q. Packer suggested that the merchants of the city have a uniform statement issued by the Board printed on the back of their envelopes. He told how such a plan was largely used in western cities. J. D. Runyon remarked how the people of Buffalo advertised on the back of their letter heads. It was thought that the plan of utilizing the back of the envelopes might be successfully tried in Plainfield, and the matter was referred to the committee on statistics and publication.

It was recommended that the board start a subscription paper to secure funds for the board. Another suggestion was that three large signs advertising Plainfield be placed along the line of the Jersey Central railroad.

A lively discussion was provoked by the suggestion that the board ask the Jersey Central railroad to change the name of the station from Netherwood to Belvidere avenue, so that people would get the idea that it belonged to Plainfield. Elston M. French and others thought it would be be better to call it Netherwood avenue station. The matter was referred to the committee on railroads.

A suggestion in this report was that the board should start a monthly paper to be called The Board of Trade Review. The scheme was to have some local editor print it gratis and have it circulated among the large cities. It was thought the Jersey Central Railroad would generously support it. The report suggested Harry H. Webb as a good man to take charge of it. The question of the paper was referred to the committee on statistics and publication.

FEARS FOR HER LIFE

MRS. LOUIS SPRAGUE HAS HER HUSBAND ARRESTED.

Claims That He Threated to Kill Her—Sprague Told Chief Marshal Wilson That He Intended to Kill Himself if He Could.

Louis Sprague, of Howard street, was arrested this morning on the complaint of his wife, who charges that her husband has repeatedly threatened to kill her. She claims that she and her family are unable to live home owing to his actions. They think that his mind is affected and are desirous that the authorities take some steps to have the man taken care of.

Sprague was placed in the borough lockup and he will be examined as to his sanity. This morning Sprague told Chief Marshal Wilson that he was going to kill himself if he had an opportunity. During the past few years, it is said, Sprague has acted queerly and his family on more than one occasion been obliged to leave him. He becomes violent and makes all sorts of threats. The case will be acted upon today and it is likely that Sprague will be taken to Trenton.

THE OLD CRESCENTS TO BE RIVALED NOW.

A Strong Baseball Team To Be Put in the Field.

CRACK PLAYERS SELECTED.

GAMES WILL BE PLAYED ON THE CRESCENT OVAL.

Manager Mumford Full of Vim and Enthusiasm Over the Prospects of a Season of the Best Article That the Cranks Long For—Season to be Opened May 7th With Seventh Regiment Team—Best Semi-Profesional Players Have Been Signed For the Season—John McLarty to be in the Box.

The prospects for a lively baseball season for 1898 are very bright at present. The unusual interest in scholastic baseball can be looked upon as a good sign. Now Benjamin A. Mumford, who so successfully managed the Plainfield Crescents last year, announces that the Crescents will reappear on the diamond during the coming season. The team will be strengthened and will give Plainfield a good game of baseball.

The question of a suitable ground has been an important one. Now Manager Mumford has completed negotiations with the present lessees of the Crescent Oval and that enclosed field will be converted into one of the best diamonds in the State. A fast diamond will be made enabling the infield to play a deep field. The outfield will also be put in perfect condition. The present grandstand and bleechers, which are capable of caring for several thousand people, will be overhauled and made comfortable.

Every attention will be paid to the convenience and comfort of patrons of the game. The grounds will be policed by the city force, ensuring the best of order. Stages will run to and from the grounds at frequent intervals, connecting the grounds with the central portion of the city. The fare will be small.

The season will open Saturday, May 7th, with the real Seventh Regiment team from New York city, composed entirely of members of the Seventh Regiment. It is a very strong aggregation, with the famous Disosway in the box, that has met the West Point Cadets, the Orange Athletic Club and other strong teams successfully. Among other well known teams that have been scheduled for the season are the Riverdale Field Club, Williamsburgh Field Club and Murray Hill Athletic Club. Arrangements are also being made with the Orange Athletic Club. Games will be scheduled for every Saturday afternoon and two games for all legal holidays, excepting Labor Day, in the afternoon of which day the police and letter carriers will play their annual game for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

The personal of the Crescent team has been settled upon, subject of course to minor changes. Michael Cavanah will be a surety at first base, Clarence Vroom, of the Staten Island Athletic Club, who pitched for the Crescents on one occasion, last year, will cover the second bag. He is a particularly strong batsman. John Kuhn, who played third base so successfully last year and was such a favorite with the audience, will be seen at his old place. At short, Manager Mumford has signed William Steinmetz, who is considered one of the best semi-professional short stops in this part of the country. In the field, Arthur Lederer, captain of the Plainfield High School and a member of last year's Crescents, will play at right. Collins, of the Fordham College team, will play centre and Hollister, of the Newark Athletic Club, leftfield.

John MacLarty will be found in the pitcher's box again. To alternate with him there will be a celebrated pitcher from the Princeton 'varsity team. Vroom will fill his old position behind the bat. Edward Eriksen, who gave such general satisfaction as an umpire last year, will officiate in that capacity during the coming season. As last year, the official score of the games will be published in The Daily Press.

Manager Mumford will soon begin a canvass of the city for the sale of season tickets which will entitle the holders to a reserved seat at all the games of the season. With a generous support from the townsfolk, Mr. Mumford will be able to give the people of Plainfield a good quality of baseball. It is his aim to rival the famous season of 1892, when the old Crescents made their memorable showing.

DOOM OF TRADING STAMPS IS SOUNDED.

Bill Prohibiting Them Favorably Acted Upon By Senate.

REED KEEPS HIS PLEDGE.

THE SOMERSET'S SENATOR'S REPORT WAS ADOPTED.

Majority of the Judiciary Committee Made an Adverse Report on the Bill, But it Was Rejected—More Trouble Over the Game Laws—Measure Changed Again So That Farmers Can Trap Rabbits—Senator Reed Thought That the Farmers in this State Were Getting But Scant Courtesy—Senator Johnson Presented the Report.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 23.—Senator Reed, true to his promise made to the Plainfield Board of Trade, that he would do all in his power to suppress the trading stamp business by legislative enactment, yesterday carried the anti-trading stamp cohorts to victory in the upper house.

Senator Johnson presented an adverse report from the majority of the judiciary committee on the anti-trading stamp bill, which was immediately followed by Senator Reed, a member of the committee, presenting a favorable report from the minority.

Senator Francis, introducer of the bill, moved that the minority report be substituted for the majority report. He said the measure was demanded by ninety-eight per cent. of all the people in the State who have any interest in the matter. The giving of gifts, he said, was a pernicious practice to which the retail storekeepers, almost to a man, were opposed.

Senator Johnson said he did not desire to be understood as favoring the practice aimed at in this bill, but it did not seem to be a lottery or to come within the range of the law. The bill appeared to the committee to be unconstitutional.

Senator Francis's motion to substitute prevailed by a viva voice vote, Senator Johnson being late in calling for the yeas and nays. The bill then passed the second reading. Senator Francis presented a petition favorable to the bill.

Senator Martin had Senate No. 41, the Game bill, returned to second reading, and then moved for a reconsideration of the amendment prohibiting the trapping of rabbits by farmers. He did so because, since the adoption of that amendment, the Assembly had killed the bill providing for compensation to the farmers for injury to trees sustained from rabbits. Senator Reed supported the motion. Senator Stokes said he understood that the Assembly defeated the Compensation bill joccosely, and he hoped to have it revived. It was his bill.

Senators Martin and Reed thought they detected a purpose on the part of the Game Commission to give the farmers scant courtesy or consideration in the matter. The amendment was reconsidered and defeated.

Senate No. 56, prohibiting trespassing by gunners or fishermen on any lands owned or leased without the consent of the owner or lessee, was ordered to a third reading after being amended to require a stated public notice.

Senator Reed had Senate No. 178 brought back to second reading. This bill provides for the employment of a clerk by the State Hospital Board at a salary not to exceed $500 a year. Senator Reed moved to amend by making the amount $250, on the ground that the clerk's only duty was to keep the minutes of the board's twelve meetings annually. It has reference to the hospital at Trenton. Senator Vreeland and Senator Skirm thought the board ought to fix the amount. The amendment was carried, and then, on motion of Senator Vreeland, the bill was recommitted.

HUGE MASTIFF DOGS THREW A HORSE DOWN

Fanwood Startled Over the Ferocity of the Canines.

ATTACKED IN PUBLIC STREET

THE EQUINE GRABBED BY THE NOSE WITH BAD EFFECT.

The Dogs Owned by Charles Apros, a New York Business Man, Who Lives on Park Avenue—The Animals Swagger About the Village, Crowding People Off the Sidewalks—Other Dogs Take a Back Seat When the Newcomers Appear in Their Midst—Mrs. Cole's Pet Felt the Power of Mastiffs.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Fanwood, March 23.—Two huge mastiff dogs owned by Charles Epros, of this place, made a fierce attack yesterday afternoon upon a horse owned by A. D. Beeken. The horse was being driven along Park avenue, the principal street of the borough, when the dogs rushed forth to the attack. One of the huge beasts sized the horse by the nose and brought it to the earth. The shafts of the wagon were broken and the horse was considerably injured. The colored coachman drove the dogs off after a hard fight.

The inhabitants of Fanwood are excited over the occurrence, which they claim is but one of a series of similar escapades in which the dogs of Mr. Epros have figured of late. The family moved to Fanwood last fall and took up their residence in a house on Park avenue owned by Augustus D Shepard. The huge canines which they brought with them commenced at once to swagger about the village to the terror of all the inhabitants, who were often forced to give up the sidewalk to the animals.

The other dogs of the place were all made to take a backseat by the newcomers, and one rash canine, the property of Mrs. John Coles, was eaten up when he refused to recognize the rule of the mastiffs.

The dogs also developed a weakness for chickens. Their latest exploit in this line was at the house of Mrs. Daniell Allen where, it is said, they invaded the chicken yard and ate several of the choicest fowls.

DECISION FOR BOTH.

But One of the Litigants Had His Claim Reduced from $90.50 to $47 50.

One week ago today the contract cases of Johnson vs. Nanson and Nanson vs. Johnson were tried before Justice Mosher. Irving L. Brady represented Johnson, and W. K. McClure was Hanson's attorney. Chas. Johnson had sued Jas. Hanson for $26.50, and Hanson brought suit against Johnson for $90.50, and the cases being of a similar nature they were tried together. The Justice's decision, rendered this morning, allows the full amount of Johnson's claim, but reduces Nanson's claim to $47.50. The case will probably be appealed.

Ludwig Conde, of this city. A silver offering will be received during the evening.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, March 23.—A birthday surprise was given to Mrs. J. S. Braker, wife of the pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, yesterday afternoon, in the parlor of the church by the members of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society. Miss Cora Miller was appointed as a committee to escort Mrs. Braker from her home to the parlor, where all the members joined in a circle and Miss Louise Bettman, president of the society, read the following speech:

"My dear Mrs. Braker: It devolves upon me, as the president of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, to make the speech of this happy occasion. First of all, we wish you very many happy birthdays, and hope that the sunshine of God's love will grow brighter with each coming year of your life. RIDING CLUB EXPLAINED.

Horseback Enthusiasts Hear an Interesting Talk by Mr. McKeever.

He related his experience in starting clubs and told of the many pleasant features of such an organization. Nothing definite was done at the meeting, but another meeting will be held soon when it is expected that an organization will be effected. There were about fifteen men present including many prominent persons

SPEED OF THE ENGINE BEAT PIQUETTE'S LEAP

Death Overtook Him While He Was at Work.

AN OLD CENTRAL EMPLOYE.

HORRIBLE FATALITY AT DUNELLEN LAST NIGHT.

While Engineer John R. McCall Was Switching Cars the Faithful Old Car Cleaner Got in the Way of the Steel Steed and Was Run Down and Instantly Killed—He Was a Spaniard by Birth and Was Well Known and Popular in Dunellen—Burial Permit Granted by County Physician Long

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 23.—After fourteen years of faithful service as an employe of the Central Railroad, Fidelle Piquette, aged 45 years, car-cleaner at this place, met his death yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock in a terrrible manner.

The train of which John R McCall is the engineer had pulled into the station, and after the passengers had alighted the engineer backed his cars on another track. Piquette was on the car next to the engine and when the cars reached the tool-house he jumped off. By this time the engine was backing up on another track, for the purpose of going to the round-house. Engineer McCall saw Piquette crossing the tracks, but had no idea that he intended crossing in front of the engine. He blew the whistle to warn Piquette. It was too late. Just as the man was about to leap across the track on which the engine was coming, the tender struck him and before the brakes could be applied the engine had run over Piquette and cut his body in half. It was a ghastly sight that met Engineer McCall's eyes and it almost unnerved him.

The shrill shriek of the engine whistle brought several employes to the scene of the fatal accident, where they saw their dead comrade. Undertaker Walter G. Runyon was notified and he removed the body to his establishment, after which County Physician Long, of New Brunswick, was informed. The latter came to Dunellen early in the evening and gave a burial permit.

Piquette, as stated above, had served the Central Railroad Company for fourteen years. He was a Spaniard and had served so well that he was liked by all who knew him. He was accommodating to all and was a well-known character about this place. He leaves a widow and five children. The oldest of the children is about fourteen years. Just previous to the time Piquette was killed he went on duty for the night. Announcement of the funeral will be made later.

BLOWN UP BY A MINE

The Disaster to the Maine Was Not an Accident.

FORECAST OF THE REPORT

The Battleship Maine Was Destroyed in the Harbor of Havana by a Submarine Mine Laid by Parties Unknown—Report Will Reach Washington To-Morrow.

Key West, Fla., March 23.—From information from a source which admits of no possible question it can be stated positively that the Court of Inquiry will report that the battleship Maine was destroyed in the harbor of Havana on the night of February 15 by a submarine mine, previously laid by parties unknown.

The report, which left for Washington at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, should reach there some time to-morrow.

Testimony of the survivors, particularly officers, all of whom were awake at the time, proved conclusively at the beginning of the sessions of the court that an accident could not have caused the disaster. This conclusion was reached, for the following reasons:

The situation of the ship's boiler was so far aft that it was impossible it could communicate with the forward magazine, either by heat or explosion. The explosion was all forward. The condition of the ship shows that the dynamo boiler could not explode, because steam for dymos was supplies from the main boilers. Spontaneous combustion of the coal in the bunkers was impossible, because they were thoroughly inspected, as is customary, on that day.

The gasses arising from the wreck immediately after the explosion, and which overcame several officers and men, were not due, in the judgment of the court, to the coal in the bunkers, but to high explosives which always throw out a bad odor and gasses.

The gun cotton could not have exploded, because it was regularly inspected that day and found to be thoroughly wet, which was necessary, and besides, said gun cotton was mostly situated aft under the ward room, and not in the forward magazine as supposed by the reporters all along.

Lastly, had the explosion been internal and in communication with any of the four magazines, all would have gone off, in which event not an atom of the ship would have been left and the greater portion of Havana would have been destroyed.

One officer will always be on the watch while the report is en route to Washington. The same precautions are maintained as on shipboard one always remaining awake. All are armed.

Admiral Sicard says that the "report will be most peculiar." This is taken to indicate that evidence of a most startling nature will be disclosed.

The survivors could prove nothing. They could only give their personal experience without opinions. The divers, however, explained everything through soundings.

The report, leaving here at the above time on the steamboat City of Key West, will reach Jacksonville this evening and Washington probably to-morrow evening.

President McKinley has already been informed by a cipher cable of the findings of the court.

Unlike an ordinary inquiry, the findings in this report will not go to the Judge-Advocate General, but direct to Secretary Long, who will hand it to the President.

BIG BANK FRAUDS.

It Is Said $300,000 Has Been Secured Through Bogus Time Checks.

Washington, March 23.—Information has reached the Government through a number of banks at St. Paul, Minn., that during the past year and more these and other nearby banks have been made the victims of colossal frauds through the suspected collusion of Government clerks connected with the commission having in charge the improvements on the upper Mississippi River. Full details of the affair have not yet reached the Government, but the statements submitted by the bank's syndicate say that $300,000 or more has been procured from them through the fraudulent time checks for services never performed.

Copies of some of these time checks are said to be signed by J. H. Southall, chief clerk of the United States Engineers' office at St. Paul, and are dated at different times during the year 1897. Others, it is understood, are dated in 1896. How the banks came to be imposed upon to the extent indicated and why the checks have been withheld until this time cannot be even conejctured. It is understood that the banks will make a claim for reimbursement, but the law is said here to be clearly against this contention. The Government will begin a searching investigation at once into the whole matter.

Spanish Minister Makes a Denial.

Madrid, March 23.—The Spanish Government has received a dispatch from its Minister at Washington, Senor Polo y Bernabe, saying that the report of the United States Naval Court appointed to inquire into the loss of the battle ship Maine holds that the explosion was of external origin.

Washington, March 23.—Senor Polo, the Spanish Minister, said yesterday that the report from Madrid that he had notified his Government that the American Naval Court of Inquiry's report was that the explosion was of external origin was an error. He added that he had not notified his Government what the report would be for the reason that he did not know, and did not send cablegrams to his Government except when he knew what were the facts, and in this case he was not in possession of the facts.

Wire Combination Effected.

Pittsburg, March 23.—The rod, wire and nail combination has been chartered in Illinois with a capital stock of $24,000,000, fourteen plants in the company. One-half of the stock is preferred and one-half common. The aggregate output of the companies interested is estimated at 750,000 tons annually. Active work commences on April 1. Neither the Olivers nor the Pittsburg Wire Company are interested in the combination.

LAUNCHING NEW WARSHIPS.

The Kearsarge and the Kentucky Are Ready to Slide Off their Stays.

Newport News, Va., March 23.—The delegations who are to attend the chirstening of the new battleships, the Kentucky and the Kearsarge, are arriving here to-day. Everything has been made ready and the christening is expected to occur without a hitch. Work on the big boats has been rushed week days and Sundays, so as to get the boats ready for their first ride into the waters. The launching of these two battleships at the same time will be the first double launching of warships that ever took place in the world.

MISS CHRISTINE BRADLEY.

Miss Christine Bradley will chirsten the Kentucky with a bottle of water taken from the spring from which Abraham Lincoln drank when a boy; while Mrs. Wnislow, wife of Lieutenant Winslow, U. S. N., will break a bottle of champagne over the bow of the Kearsarge. Governor Bradley, of Kentucky, and staff will be present, as well as many prominent Government officials, who will represent President McKinley. Neither of the vessels will be finished and ready for service for at least two years yet, so that they are not regarded as factors to be counted on in the event of an outbreak of hostilities in the immediate future.

SPAIN'S TORPEDO FLEET.

Delay Due to an Injury to the Ariete—Press Aroused by Events.

Madrid, Spain, March 23.—The papers here publish full reports of the movements of the United States war ships and of the defensive preparations being made by the United States.

It is reported that the Spanish war ship selected to convoy the torpedo flotilla has sailed from Cartagena for the Canary Islands. It appears that the delay in the voyage of the torpedo boats is due to the fact that the Ariete, one of the Spanish torpedo boats, sustained some slight damage while on her way from Cadiz to the Canaries.

The Spanish newspapers advocate further strengthening of the naval squadron in Cuba, so as not to be caught at a disadvantage in the event of war.

The Heraldo thinks that in view of the "ostentatious preparations" of the United States Spain has full liberty to make similar preparations.

The Globe insists that injury has been done to Spain by the United States squadron remaining close to the seat of war. It gladly notes, however, that the "verbal suggestions of Senor Polo to Secretary Sherman have led to the withdrawal of a portion of the squadron, thus demonstrating the cordiality existing between the two countries."

The Imparcial expresses the opinion that the action of the United States has completely checked the advantages which Spain might have derived from granting autonomy to Cuba, and alleges that the United States has "practically strangled autonomy at its birth."

The Imparcial also thinks Spain failed diplomatically in not having obtained the removal of Consul-General Lee, "nor the withdrawal of the ship from Cuba," and expresses fear that, "although military action will be keener than ever," it will not suffice to pacify Cuba, "owing to circumstances created by the United States."

The Correo (Carlist) does not expect help from Europe, but hopes the Latin nations of America will support Spain.

SAYS WAR IS INEVITABLE.

Opinion of Speaker Sleeper, of the Ohio House, the President's Friend.

Cripple Creek, Col., March 23.—In an interview here Hon. D. S. Sleeper, Speaker of the lower house of the Ohio Legislature and a personal friend of President McKinley, said:

"I consider war with Spain inevitable. The matter has gone so far that diplomacy cannot avert a combat. The struggle will probably be very short. Cuba will be freed, the United States will get whatever indemnity she has demanded, and that will end the matter.

"As to the President being on the verge of mental breakdown, I do not believe it. I was in Washington and had a long talk with Mr. McKinley less than two weeks ago, and there was no signs of any weakness on his part. He will not break down."

A "Public Credit" Bill.

Washington, March 23.—Senator Cullom, of Illinois, introduced in the Senate yesterday afternoon a bill designed to strengthen the public credit. It is essentially a war measure and is so regarded. It provides, among other things, that 50 per cent. of import duties shall be paid in gold. The remmaining 50 per cent. is to be paid in any other currency of the United States that the Secretary of the Treasury may delegate. Prominent bankers throughout the country petition for the passage of the bill.

Havana Will be a Dangerous Place.

Key West, Fla., March 23.—W. S. Quigley, correspondent of a New York paper, has sent word to his paper of a very significant warning given to him by Judge Advocate Marix, of the Maine Court of Inquiry. Quickley says he told the Judge Advocate that he intended going back to Havana. "Don't do it, Quigley," was the reply. "Havana will be a hot place when the findings of the court are known. It is as much as your life is worth to go there!"

Coal Miners Strike.

Hazleton, Pa., March 23.—Six hundred men yesterday struck at the Yorktown colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company. Both sides seem determined and the company is now preparing for an indefinite period of idleness.

40 MAY HAVE PERISHED

The Bark Helen W. Almy, From San Francisco, Wrecked.

NO SIGNS OF SURVIVORS

She Left the Golden Gate on Sunday and Is Thought to Have Capsized in a Squal Ten Miles Off Shore—Steamer Finds the Wreck.

San Francisco, March 23.—Upon the arrival of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company's steamer Santa Rosa from San Diego yesterday news was received of the probable loss of another gold ship with forty passengers and sailors.

Captain Alexander of the Santa Rosa reported that early yesterday morning, while nine miles off Point Bonita, at the mouth of the Golden Gate, he sighted a derelict bottom up. The tug Sea Witch was dispatched immediately to the point and found the derelict to be the bark Helen W. Almy, Captain Hogan, which sailed hence for Copper River points with twenty-seven passengers and a crew of thirteen on Sunday. The bark lay upon her starboard side, with her stern low in the water, her deck hamper badly wrecked and several planks of her hull washed loose by the seas which broke over her.

While there were no signs of boats among the wreckage, it is not believed that her passengers and crew escaped by putting off from the vessel in them, as there have been heavy seas for several days. Furthermore, no word has been received from the survivors, if any exist although the derelict was sighted within ten miles of the shore and fully forty-eight hours have passed since the wreck occurred.

According to the tugboat men there was a pretty stiff breeze when the Almy sailed out of Golden Gate on Sunday, and by noon it was blowing a gale. She left here under topsails, and when last seen was standing out for an offing. There was a heavy sea running, and it is supposed that some time in the night she was struck by a squall and capsized.

The Henry W. Almy was once a South Sea trader, and was quite famous for her many adventures among the reefs. Her commander was then Captain Tuttrell, and he operated her in the interest of John Wightman, who retained an interest in her when she entered the Alaskan trade.

The vessel was in good condition for an old vessel, and perfectly seaworthy. She was on the drydocks some days before being put on the berth, and her owners spent $3,000 in repairing her. She had a temporary house on deck.

When the Almy left port she had twenty-five tons of ballast in her, besides the provisions of the passengers and their outfits. She was a vessel of only 250 tons, and was thereafter ballasted sufficiently to make her "stiff."

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Reported to the House by Chairman Boutelle—Carries $36,000,000.

Washington, March 23.—Chairman Boutelle, of the Committee on Naval Affairs, has reported the Naval Appropriation bill to the House. It is estimated that the bill carries an aggregate of $36,000,000. It provides for an increase of the number of enlisted men of the navy by 1,750, for 250 additional apprentices and for an expenditure in this direction amounting to nearly $1,000,000.

The sum of $1,000,000 is appropriated for dry docks. For the completion of vessels under construction and purchase of materials and stores, the sum of $2,500,000 is appropriated.

Three battle ships are provided for. Chairman Boutelle says he intends to call the bill up for passage at the first opportunity.

Total of Maine's Dead, 259.

Havana, March 23.—Chaplain Chidwick has finished his mortuary report, which shows that 251 men and two officers perished by the Maine catastrophe; six succumbed to their injuries while lying in the San Ambrosio Hospital here; one died on the Spanish transport Colon; 171 bodies have been recovered from the wreck, of which 61 have been identified; 161 have been buried in Colon Cemetery and 11 at Key West. This is the official report made public, after careful correction, for the first time. It is probable that many more identifications will be established when the enlistment records are compared with the notes in Chaplain Chidwick's possession of marks on the corpses.

Admiral Sicard Will Soon Retire.

Washington, March 23.—Owing to the continued ill-health of Rear-Admiral Montgomery Sicard, commanding the North Atlantic Squadron, arrangements are making for his detachment from that duty as soon as it becomes apparent that such a step is necessary. Several weeks ago Admiral Sicard asked for a short leave of absence in consequence of a severe attack of malarial fever. His request was granted, and he spent a short time on shore. He is again ill, and it is now feared that it will be necessary to give him a shore consignment or else a leave of absence.

Pennsylvania Directors Re-elected.

Philadelphia, March 23.—At the annual lection of the Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday the old Board of Directors was re-elected. It consists of Frank Thomson, Alexander M. Fox, Alexander Biddle, N. Parker Shortridge, William A. Elkins, A. J. Cassatt, Clement A. Griscom, Benjamin B. Comegys, Amos R. Little, William H. Barnes, George Wood, C. Stuart Patterson and Effingham B. Morris. The total number of shores voted was 1,147,740.

Libel Suit Decision.

St. Louis, Mo., March 23.—Judge Spencer has handed down a decision on the rights of newspapers to plead in justification in libel suits that the articles sued for were true. Judge Spencer said in part: "If the substance of the publication in its full and fair meaning is alleged and proved to be true that justification is complete."

5,000 Bayonets Ordered.

Chicopee, Mass., March 23.—The Ames Sword Company has received from the United States Government a rush order for 5,000 bayonets and scabbards.

A POPULAR MISTAKE.

Regarding Remedies for Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

The national disease of Americans is indigestion or in its chronic form, dyspepsia, and for the very reason that it is so common many people neglect taking proper treatment for what they consider trifling stomach trouble, when, as a matter of fact, indigestion lays the foundation of many incurable diseases. No person with a vigorous, healthy stomach will fall a victim to consumption. Many kidney diseases and heart troubles date their beginning from poor digestion; thin, nervous people are really so because their stomachs are out of gear; weary, languid, faded out woman owe their condition to imperfect digestion.

When nearly every person you meet is afflicted with weak digestion it is not surprising that nearly every secret patent medicine on the market claims to be a cure for dyspepsia, as well as a score of other troubles, when in fact, as Dr. Werthier says, there is but one genuine dyspepsia cure which is perfectly safe and reliable, and moreover, this remedy is not a patent medicine, but it is a scientific combination of pure pepsin (free from animal matter) vegetable essences, fruits salts and bismuth. It is sold by druggists under name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. No extravagant claims are made for them, but for indegestion or any stomach trouble, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are far ahead of any remedy yet discovered. They act on the food eaten, no dieting is necessary, simply eat all the wholesome food you want and these tablets will digest it. A cure results, because all the stomach needs is a rest, which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give by doing the work of digestion.

Druggists sell these tablets at 50 cents per package. Little book on stomach diseases and testimonials sent free by addressing Stuart Co., chemists, Marshall, Mich. 3 21 23 25

PRESIDENT'S COURSE

The Report Will Not Be Given to Congress Before Monday.

CABINET TO SEE IT FRIDAY

The President Must Have Time for Consideration of the Report After Its Receipt—A Feeling in Washington That the Country is Drifting Toward War.

Washington, March 23.—The report of the court of inquiry on the Maine explosion will be here some time to-morrowrow and the President will have had a chance to read it before he lays it before the Cabinet on Friday. But even then according to an authoritative statement, the President will take a day or two longer to consider it and prepare it for Congress. It is, therefore, not likely that it will be made public before the meeting of Congress on Monday.

The recent conference between the President and Speaker Reed smoothed matters as to the course of Congress, and there is a perfect understanding between the President and the Speaker as to what will be done. As stated authoritatively and exhaustively in these dispatches yesterday the President will notify Spain of the verdict and ask for an explanation, but before any demand is made upon that country the report will be laid before Congress and the policy to be pursued will be one agreed upon by legislative, as well as the executive branch of the Government.

The report will be sent in duplicate to the Senate and the House, and already there is an immense amount of excitement among members of both branches in anticipation of coming events. In view of the approach of the time when the report is to be made public it is but natural that there should be a more acute feeling in official circles as to the result.

War More Probably.

Within the last twenty-four hours there has undoubtedly been an increase in the feeling that there will be open hostilities between the two countries, and even a Cabinet officer, who has had much to do with the developments, remarked to his friends that it looked as if we were drifting toward war.

The attitude of Congress in refusing to listen to anything like arbitration of the Maine explosion or further trial of autonomy for Cuba has caused the administration to consider the subject of intervention, a policy the President has always had in mind, and which was so ably stated by him in the closing paragraph on the Cuban situation in his annual message. This policy has never been changed, and it may be well at this time to repeat the President's words in his message:

"The near future will demonstrate whether the indispensable condition of a righteous peace, just alike to the Cubans and to Spain, as well as equitable to all our interests so intimately involved in the welfare of Cuba, is likely to be attained. If not, the exigency of further and other action by the United States will remain to be taken. When that time comes, that action will be determined in the line of indisputable right and duty. It will be faced without misgiving or hesitancy in the light of the obligation this Government owes to itself, to the people who have confided to it the protection of their interests and honor, and to humanity. Sure of the right, keeping free from all offense ourselves, actuated only by upright and patriotic considerations, moved neither by passion nor selfishness, the Government will contine its watchful care over the rights and property of American citizens, and will abate none of its efforts to bring about by peaceful agencies a peace which shall be honorable and endurable. If it shall hereafter appear to be a duty imposed by our obligations to ourselves, to civilization and humanity to intervene with force, it shall be without fault on our part, and only because the necessity for such action will be so clear as to command the support and approval of the civilized world."

If, when the report arrives, the President and Congress see that it is their duty to intervene, the President will do so. There is a feeling among many of the members of Congress that when the report is sent to that body there will be a stampede for hasty action. Against this the administration and the leaders on both sides are trying to guard. It is the one desire of the President that Congress shall act deliberately and slowly in this matter, and for this reason he has been preparing the leaders for devolopments to come.

While there is some talk of trying to force immediate action in the Senate, it is felt to-day that a calm and conservative course may be expected from that branch, and in the House the conferences between the President and the Speaker and the leaders there have been productive of an assurance that nothing precipitate may be feared. In all probability the Senate will adjourn from Friday until Monday, and as only one branch of Congress will be in session when the report is received it cannot be sent to Congress until Monday.

It is expected that no matter what the nature of the report may be, when it is received in the lower branch of Congress there will be a disposition to discuss it, but it is the present intention of the Speaker to let it pursue the regular course of such documents and refer to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The Democratic Programme.

Mr. Bailey, in speaking about the position of the Democrats on this question, said:

"If the Speaker should refuse to entertain a repeal from his decision, the Democrats will see to it that no journal is approved thereafter except upon a roll call. We will emphasize our position by every right that is accorded to the minority until the Committee on Foreign Affairs brings in some resolution. We are afraid that as soon as the documents are sent to the committee they will be pigeon-holed there and the House will not be given an opportunity for their consideration."

The question of Spain's action in the matter will not come before Congress at the time the report is submitted because the President will not wait for Spain's answer before he makes the report public, and therefore there will be no question as to arbitration or settlement to be decided at once. While it is true that Congress may therefore not have occasion to deal with the question of the destruction of the Maine, it is more than probable that the greater question of the independence of Cuba will come up for a discussion and excitement over this greater proposition the Maine explosion will become but a mere incident.

THE CABINET MEETING.

The Members Informed That the Report Will Arrive To-Morrow.

Washington, March 23.—The President informed the Cabinet at the meeting yesterday that the report of the Court of Inquiry would arrive here tomorrow. He stated that he did not expect to send it to Congress until the first of next week, perhaps on Monday, maybe not until a day or so later. It all depended upon the character of the report, and the effect it would have upon his future policy.

The Cabinet was in session for an hour and a quarter, and when the Cabinet members left the White House they stated that there was nothing new except the fact of the announcement of the arrival of the report to-morrow.

The general Cuban question was discusssed, as well as the feeling in Congress, and the disposition of the report after it was received. The expenditure of the $50,000,000 appropriation made so far were gone over, but the question of purchasing new ships was not discussed.

The President is determined to take two or three days to consider the report after it reaches his hands, prepare his note to Spain and his message, which will accompany the report to Congress. In this message the President will state the facts as to the sending of the Maine to Havana, the explosion, the ordering of the Court of Inquiry, its meetings, its testimony and final report. He will also mention his having informed Spain of the verdict and having asked for an explanation. He will lay the facts before Congress and await its action. As a Cabinet member said if there is to be intervention, Congress will be the one to decide how to outline the course to be taken.

An Official Statement.

Washington, March 23.—After the Cabinet meeting yesterday the following Statement was given out from an official source:

"It was understood at the Cabinet meeting to-day that the report of the Court of Inquiry probably would be here Thursday or Friday; that it is a very voluminous document; that probably it will not be given to the press and to Congress before Monday; that the President will require that much time for its proper consideration."

ARMY TO MOVE AT SHORT NOTICE.

Orders All Ready for Transmission for the Mobilization of Troops.

Washington, March 23.—From all over the country come indications of the quiet preparations for war which are making by the War and Navy Departments, and of their evident intention to be found ready, however quickly the call may come.

Orders have been prepared for transmission from the headquarters of the Major-General commanding the army, providing for the movement of all infantry and cavalry troops in the country to stations on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

The heads of military departments were instructed, about ten days ago, to make all necessary preparations to move troops to the Atlantic seaboard on the receipt of orders to that effect.

This was almost simultaneous with the reorganization of the military departments of the country, making two divisions of the original Department of the East, and giving much importance to the Southern division, the new Department of the Gulf.

It is not unlikely that these orders for the general movement of the troops may be transmitted very soon. It is expected that the greater part of the country's force will be ordered to the Department of the Gulf.

Headquarters have opened in Atlanta, and Gen. Graham, the Department Commander, is getting his staff together.

A fact which points to the determination of the Government to be prepared for immediate war, if it comes, is the collection by the Bureau of Military Information of the most complete information regarding the geography of Cuba and the outlying islands and of the Philippines.

This information is obtained from every source possible, whether public or private, and is at once put into form for transmission to heads of military departments.

THE DOLPHIN READY FOR SEA.

Dispatch Boat to Go Into Commission at the Navy Yard.

Brooklyn, March 23.—The work on the dispatch boat Dolphin has been going on for the past two weeks and she is now ready to go into commission. The Dolphin has been thoroughly overhauled, and is as spick and span as a brand new boat. One hundred and fifty men have been at work on fitting her up. Commodore Lyons will tomorrow hoist his flag, placing her in commission. She has been refitted with new engines, boilers, deck and spars.

The Dolphin will carry her old guns. She has a displacement of 1,486 tons and is able to make 15.5 knots per hour. She will likely leave here for Washington after she has been placed in commission, where she will be held subject to the Secretary's orders.

JACKSON KNOCKED OUT.

Colored Pugilist Whipped by Jeffries in San Francisco.

San Francisco, March 23.—In one of the fastest and fiercest battles witnessed in this city in years, Jim Jeffries, of California young and brawny, last night knocked out Peter Jackson, colored, of Australia. The knockout blow was delivered in the third round.

That the end did not come earlier was surprising to the wildly excited and enthusiastic spectators of the battle. From the opening of the first round until the instant the decisive blow was delivered the men fought with the energy of despair, each battling as fast, as fiercely and as well as he knew how.

The men met in Woodward's pavilion. The immense building was crowded to the doors, fully 8,000 persons being present when the men advanced to the centre of the ring and shook hands.

Jeffries, young, tall, brawny, was the favorite in the betting, his admirers laying odds of 10 to 8 and 10 to 6 that he would win, but if popularity might be measured by the cheers which greeted the men, Jackson was the more popular of the two. It was his first appearance in this city since his battle with Corbett, and the sporting men, who crowded the pavilion, gave him a royal welcome.

Jeffries' advantages were manifest when the men came together in the centre of the ring to receive the referee's instructions, and his clear, white body was thrown out in strong contrast to that of the ebony-skinned Australian. Jeffries stood 6 feet 1 1-2 inches, or an inch and a half taller than his opponent, and his weight of 215 pounds gave him an advantage of fifteen pounds in this regard.

Confidence was written in every line of his face, while Jackson wore the air of a man who has a hard job ahead of him, and wonders how he is going to get through with it.

That confidence never deserted Jeffries. The burly black tried to keep him at a distance and make it a boxing match rather than a fight, but Jeffries would not have it. He bored right in and, punishing his man unmercifully about the body in the first two rounds, had him at his mercy in the third, when he put him out.

Jeffries was the first to enter the ring. He was followed by his seconds, Billy Delaney, DeWitt Vancourt and "Spider" Kelly. His appearance was cheered, but three minutes later, when Peter Jackson stepped into the ring, followed by Patsy Corrigan, Vincent White and Young Mitchell, the house went wild. At 9.09 Referee Jim McDonald, the National League baseball umpire, summoned the men to the centre of the ring and gave them the usual instructions.

At 9.10 the gong sounded and the men came up quickly with Jackson on the aggressive. Jeffries led with left, but fell short. Then he rushed and again led with a left, which Peter ducked. Jeffries landed lightly on the body, with his right, receiving a similar blow in return. Jeffries missed a left swing for the body, but landed lightly on Jackson's head. Peter put a straight left on Jeffries' body, following rapidly with a right on the body, a left on the face and a right near the heart. Then Jackson jabbed Jeffries hard in the face, receiving a hard left on the body in return, but concluded the round with two good rights on Jeffries' body.

In the second round Jeffries missed a hard swing and was jabbed in the face with the left. Jeffries then put a good left on Jackson's head and clinched, Peter coming in close put in a short right over Jeffries' heart and jabbed him hard on the mouth with his left drawing blood. Jeffries then rushed, but Peter cleverly evaded his swings. Jeffries swung his left on Jackson's jaw, knocking Peter down. Jackson clambered to his feet, but went down again from a left swing just as the gong sounded.

In the third round Peter came up fresh, considering the conclusion of the preceding round. Jeffries landed left and right on the head, and followed the blows with a right on Jackson's jaw. Peter went groggy. Jeffries knocked Peter against the ropes, swinging his left on the jaw, and Peter fell helplessly against the ropes.

Jeffries stepped back awaiting the recovery of his opponent, but as Peter plainly was out the referee stepped between them and declared Jeffries the winner.

Pugilist Brown Dead.

Trenton, N. J., March 23.—Henry Brown, the local pugilist, who was injured in a boxing bout with Jack Smith at the Passaic Sporting Club Monday night, died yesterday at St. Francis Hospital. The post mortem examination yesterday afternoon showed that death resulted from a hemorrhage of the brain. County Physician Rogers, who conducted the examinatiin, said that death might have been produced either by a blow or a fall. A formal charge of manslaughter has been made against Smith. The hearing of Smith and of Skelly and Austin, which was to have been held last night, was postponed until Thursday night. Senator Daly has been engaged to defend the men.

Smith is beside himself with grief, and swears that he was so weak from his hard fighting in the first few rounds that he could not have killed Brown.

The Ministerial Union of Trenton, which has tried unsuccessfully for a year to have boxing matches stopped, will prosecute the prisoners vigorously. It is the general opinion in Trenton that Brown's death has killed public boxing.

Brown is the thirty-seventh man to die from the effects of a prize fight.

EMPTY HOUSE QUESTION.

We are convinced that no town in the metropolitan district possesses the advantages as a residential place that Plainfield does. It has all the things that nature and the artifices of man can contribute to make it healthy, pleasant and advantageous as a city of homes; and, in fact, it is such. But here is a blunt fact that we cannot exactly understand, considering these things.

Plainfield now has between two hundred and three hundred empty houses!

What is the cause? And more important, what is the remedy? There is something the matter somewhere. We love always to sing the song of praise of Plainfield's advantages, but with the sweet must come the bitter, and these empty abodes is the latter. We are told, and moreover convinced, that a great deal of building and enterprise is dominant in the community, but the empty house question looms up ominously.

How shall every house in Plainfield be filled with a family?

The Daily Press will be glad to print short, crisp communications from Plainfielders who think they know the reason therefor, and can offer a remedy.

RIGHT SORT OF TALK.

If only one of the many subjects agitated by the Board of Trade last night is attained, then the organization is a success. Healthy discussion is a good thing, and when it is attended with an aggressive spirit such as exhibited last night by those who made suggestions for the advancement of Plainfield commercially and industrially it is better still—a forerunner of benefits to come.

A silly theater manager in New York city who wished to advertise his house put a Spanish flag across the threshold, so that the audience would have to step upon it as they passed in. It had the desired effect and drew a great, roaring crowd around the door, a crowd that could only be dispersed by the police. The manager degraded himself and his country when he did such a senseless thing. No good end could possibly be served by it, only bitter animosities aroused. A deed of that kind is almost sufficient cause for Spain to demand of this nation a disavowal and an apology. The cowards who would insult another nation's flag are as a rule the last ones to fight for their own if it is in danger.

That truly original genius Governor Pingree has no mercy on the impecunious state legislator. The governor called the legislature together to devise means of increasing taxes on railroads in the state and thus getting more revenue out of them. Then he was harsh enough to turn around and issue a proclamation to the representatives and senators that they must under no consideration accept free passes to the state capital from the roads they were expected to levy increased taxes on. Cruel Governor Pingree!

The delay in the annexation of Hawaii is owing to the opposition of the Sugar trust of America. If it should fail altogether and the United States should eventually have an enemy instead of a possession of its own in the south seas, let not the American people forget that it is still owing to the influence of sugar at Washington.

It would be easy enough for the United States to recruit an army of 1,000,000 men in one month, but land soldiers are not what we need. The present crisis has developed the situation clearly and revealed to us that what we need most of all are coast defenses, a navy and naval militia.

PASSING COMMENT.

In connection with the spring millinery opening at Boehm's store a unique hat has been placed on exhibition in one of the windows. It is a lady's leghorn hat, and was purchased in New York city in 1838 by Freeman Cole, a milliner of this city. A leading society woman of this place purchased the hat, and it has remained in the family of the original purchaser until the present time. The hat is of so large a size that it would cause consternation among modern belles. It still has the original trimmings and is an artistic sample of millinery.

The exploits of some of the commuters in their hurry to catch the morning trains take a ludicious turn at times. The other morning a stout gentleman arrived on the platform just as the 8:35 train for New York was pulling away. He ran along the platform looking at the moving train. He approached nearer. Then stopped, then he made a dive at the train. The speed of the train was rapidly increasing and it was too formidable to attempt a jump. So he pulled himself up suddenly and watched the train pass away, while the spectators of the little scene howled with delight.

A lawyer of this city has discovered a successful method of dealing with book agents. When an individual with a persuasive voice enters the lawyer's office with the newest volume on "Torts" or a treatise on "The Law of Undisclosed Agents" under his arm, and asks to be permitted to take "up just a few minutes of your time," he usually delivers himself as follows: "My dear fellow, I am not going to buy a book today, consequently I have no desire to listen to what you have to say. There is one condition, however, on which I will listen to you and allow you to explain the merits of your book at length. My time is worth five dollars an hour, and my proposition is that you retain me for an hour or two, pay me in advance. You can then command my whole attention, and need not fear being interrupted.

"I have told you my terms, and if you decide not to accept, please do not keep me from my work any longer."

The effect of this speech is generally to unsettle the nerve of the most calloused agent, and it is rarely that the vendor of knowledge at so much a volume stands upon the order of his going.

THEATRICAL.

Just think of being able to witness such plays as, the "Lost Paradise," "The Charity Ball," "Men and Women," "A Social Highwayman," "The Wife," "The Veteran," "Mask of Life" and plays of this class at 10, 20 and 30 cents for a seat at Music Hall. You will have that privilege on next Monday evening and during the week, and we hope our people will take advantage of it early. Waite's largest and best company will appear in the above plays, the same company which appeared at the Murray Hill Theatre in New York last spring for a month. There are over thirty people in the company, including the finest band and concert orchestra ever placed on the road. Scenery the like of which has never been seen in Plainfield by even a high priced company, specialties by the score wherever the plays allow of such to be introduced, and late pictures on the Cenegraph, including several local moving scenes. The "Lost Paradise," the great labor drama, will be the opening bill, Monday evening next, and "A Cheerful Liar" Tuesday afternoon. No play will be repeated during the week.

The Sages—Premier hypnotists—make their last appearance at Music Hall tonight. A splendid programme will be offered, and none should fail to witness it.

On Monday next, the Waite Comedy Company make their first appearance.

KIND WORDS FOR THE PRESS.

Comment of New Jersey Papers on the Improvements Made.

The Plainfield Daily Press comes to us with eight columns added to its eight sprightly pages—a permanent improvement made necessary by the increased patronage which its enterprise has won. With the enlargement comes the promise of the publishers that the news service will be improved. If the people of Plainfield appreciate The Press as much as they ought, and as much as its contempories do, it ought to soon outgrow its new proportions.—Paterson Press.

Gas Company Got Judgment.

The case of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company against Collis T. Pond, on contract, was tried in Justice Smalley's court, Monday afternoon. The Justice rendered decision for the plaintiff for the full amount and costs. Wm. Sweeney, of Counselor McClure's office, appeared for the plaintiff, and Lawyer J. P. D. Kirch represented the defendant.

Mayor Wilson, of the borough, is detained at home by a slight indisposition.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, March 23.—The members of Wm. G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., expect to change their quarters soon. For some time past they have been meeting in the Lincoln School Hall, but they now have arranged to meet in the building owned by Mr. Apgar and located on North avenue. The place is now being fitted for a meeting room.

Last evening a very successful musicale was given in the chapel of the Presbyterian church. The programme was published in these columns a few days ago and was presented in its entirety. The attendance was excellent considering the weather, and every number on the programme was fully enjoyed.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. H. C. Gaskill were held this afternoon at 2:30 from the Seventh-Day Baptist church. Rev. F. E. Peterson, the pastor, officiated. Mrs. Gaskill was a member of the Daughters of Liberty, and that organization attended in a body.

There seems to be considerable activity in real estate matters in the borough, and the prospects are that this spring and summer will be a lively one.

Fred Huff, of Plainfield, who has been running the "wheelmen's rest" at the end of the trolley line, expects to purchase the place from Neil Ackerman.

There are no signs that the coal war will come to an end. The local dealers say that they can stand it as long as the Plainfield dealers.

Manager Sebring, of the Watchung Water Company, expects to start the work of laying pipes through the borough at an early date.

Miss Virgie Tunison, of Washington avenue, returned today from Glen Gardner, where she has been visiting her parents.

Tomorrow evening the Building and Loan Association will hold a regular monthly business meeting.

Mrs. T. C. Bodine has returned from a visit with her daughter Mrs. W. H. Hamilton, of Westfield.

The next meeting of the Borough Council will be held Monday evening, April 4th.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Westfield, March 23.—The building activity in Westfield this spring is very marked, and the demand for houses is said to more than keep pace with the increase. There are at present about thirty new dwellings either in course of construction or about to be built, which will mean an increase of between $75,000 and $100,000 in the property valuation of the town.

A farewell reception will be tendered to Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Ruth in the Methodist church Friday evening. Mr. Ruth's pastorate has been one of the most successful in the church's history, and he will take with him the well wishes of the entire community into his new field of labor.

The Westfield Fresh Air Camp Association is already laying plans for the coming summer's work. The first meeting of the season was held here Monday evening at which delegates were present from all the surrounding towns and cities.

The Presbyterian Thimble Club will hold a meeting at the residence of Mrs. C. B. Peddie, on Broad street, Friday evening, to dress a number of dolls for its sale, to be held at the parsonage Easter Monday.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh Day Baptist church will give a musicale in the church parlors tomorrow evening. An unusually fine programme has been prepared.

—It is expected that in a short time Patterson & Corwin, expert accountants, will have a report of the financial standing of the borough up to the close of last year. They are now at work on the books.

—Good eyesight is priceless. Cheap and inferior glasses are positively injurious. Leech, Stiles & Co. make only the best. If you are in need of glasses call on their specialist, who will be at 107 East Front street, Thursday, from 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

—Doane & Edsall advertise in today's Press that they are selling the best bicycle boots in the world for the money. They are just as "snappy" and stylish as they can be made. They say their new spring shoes, now coming in every day, are the finest and most taking up-to-date styles they have ever shown.

PYROGRAPHY THE FAD.

It Succeeds China Painting With the Ladies.

The revival of Pyrography or poker work, has caused this pretty art to find its way into almost every fashionable home. It has certainly much to recommend it to the homeworker who likes to employ her time in beautifying her rooms. In the first place the tools and materials for working upon are not expensive; secondly, the work is not difficult, and, finally, the results are speedily obtained and are highly satisfactory from an artistic point of view.

When first starting, all that the novice will need are the materials that are supplied in the box in which the etching machine is sold. The student should begin with any bold simple designs, and practice straight lines and "touches" upon spare pieces of wood.

As the worker improves, it will be found that a finer "point" than that provided is required for the more delicate outlines. The most useful for all round work is the simple cylindrical-shaped point, which will be found essential for etching clean straight lines—one of the difficulties of poker work. For chairs, tables, brackets and other drawing-room decorations, the ordinary white wood answers all purposes.

If a table be selected, a good choice would be a three-legged one, with an upper and lower shelf, shaped in around. This kind of table, besides being cheap, is strongly made and has the advantage of taking to pieces, so that each round can be worked upon with perfect ease. Such a table specially lends itself to armorial designs, which can be made exceedingly effective by the use of oil paints. A narrow circle of white should be left at the end of the round, and a neat free-hand design on a dark surface background should be etched inside. In the centre of the table, supported by the design, the coat of arms must be emblazoned. On the lower shelf the same scheme can be carried out, though it is advisable to have a different design, and the coat of arms may be substituted for a monogram, a regimental crest, college arms, and so on.

The actual painting presents no difficulty, and only requires neat and careful work. Ordinary oil paints, used with pale drying oil, answer the purpose admirably.

Then as to finishing off a piece of poker work. First, all pencil marks and outlines must be taken out with indiarubber and bread-crumbs, and the whole work thoroughly well cleaned. Any mistake in burning should then be taken out as far as possible with glasspaper (No. 0 or 1), and a badly-bitten error remedied with the aid of a fine etching tool. On no account should a knife be used, as it roughens and splinters the wood.

Then comes the "toning." One method of producing a rich soft tone is by scorching the wood through the escape hole in the platinum point. This should be held near to the surface of the work, carefully avoiding touching it with the point, when, by blowing the bellows, the heat rushes out and scorches the wood. A much easier way, however, is merely to rub a small quantity of linseed oil into the wood, which takes away the very white look from it.

Lastly, a word must be said on compound burning. This is used when any portion of the wood appears too dense when finished. A cool point should then be traced over the ground producing a lighter and more delicate tone.

When the touching up has been done the next and final work is polishing. The best effects can easily be obtained by the simple method of wax polishing. This is inferior to French polishing only in its inability to withstand wet. The ingredients are ordinary beeswax and turpentine. When these have been melted and stirred up to the consistency of a thick oil a small quantity is rubbed into the wood with a painter's brush, and then another about twice the size of a nail-brush, is used for polishing. The secret of success is "elbow grease," and if this be duly remembered and acted upon failure will be found impossible, and very artistic and effective results will be obtained.

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

A Little Chat About Things too Small to Interest the Lords.

That women age—that is, become old in appearance—more quickly that the members of the sterner sex, is a matter of everyday observation; it is matter of such common knowledge, that very few of us stop to ask why it is so. Yet it is surely a question which deserves more general attention, seeing that it touches us all very nearly. The son regrets to see his mother, who has lavished such care upon him, looking "old before her time"; and the husband naturally likes his wife to preserve the freshness of youth as long as possible.

What, then, are the causes of this rapid ageing, and can they be removed?

The most important factor in this fading of the bloom of youth among women is worry. Woman is more delicately constructed that man, her nerves are more highly strung; hence the effect of worry upon her organization is always greater than upon the man. And woman has far greater opportunities for worry than the lord of creation.

Speaking generally, a woman has to depend upon a man for her living. A man, if he be worried, has to throw it off and turn his attention to current business duties; the wife's duties are confined to the household, and are chiefly mechanical, thus leaving her mind free to occupy itself with any subject of uneasiness that may arise.

For instance, the wife at home—confined within the four walls of her dwelling—worries over the fact that her husband's business is not prospering; whereas he, although just as much interested, has his mind occupied with the transaction of current affairs and has not the same opportunity to indulge in disquieting reflection. Moreover, the worry acts more disastrously on her finer nerves than upon his. It is women, rather than men, who "go round the corner to meet trouble," as someone has expressed it. Everybody knows that worry kills more people than work does.

Another reason why women fade more quickly than men is that they develop more speedily. Take a boy and a girl of the same age and watch them; you will find at the end of a given period that the girl has learnt more and is developed to a greater extent that the boy. The natural result of this rapid development is a correspondingly earlies loss of freshness.

Physical inferiority is another cause of early decay; the wear and tear of existence tells upon her sooner than upon a man.

Of these three causes, it is possible to do something to counteract two at least. It is possible to increase their physical strength and to find mental occupation which will prevent them from worrying so much. Both objects may be attained to a great extent by the same means.

If a woman is to protect herself from the ravages of worry, and so retain her youth for a longer period, she must come into more frequent contact with other people—as her husband does—and read good books; she must relieve the monotony of her duties and the limiting influence of confinement within four walls by taking outdoor exercise—a walk every day or a spin on a bicycle; in short, she must exercise the body and mind in a healthful manner, and she will find the bloom of youth and health remain with her for years after it has faded in other women of the same age.

"The ordinary woman," says a celebrated physician, "leads such a monotonous existence that her mind has no occupation but worry; she is almost made up of worry upon worry. What she needs is to come out of herself much more than she does. She must have intercourse with more people and take more exercise. This can be done without neglecting the home, and every right-minded man will do his best to secure for his mother, or his sister, or his wife these aids to the retention of youthfulness of body and mind."

Confirmed the Unspoken Verdict.

As women grow manly, men accordingly take on the airs of femininity. Ten years ago one never saw a man calmly stop to survey himself in any mirrow the way all men do now without a trace of a blush.

Men have been seen to adjust their ties in the reflection of a plate-glass shop window, or to brush specks of dust off their collars as they pretended to be looking at the contents of a showcase, when, in reality, they were looking into the glass itself; and if there is not a large glass in the men's dressing-room at a dance or reception there is a growl.

A man pretty far advanced in the downward path of vanity got on an elevator the other day that was certainly intended for a big store instead of a business office, inasmuch as it was mirror-lined on three sides. There was a young woman also in it, but he did not pay very much attention to her.

He stood and looked at himself interestedly, critically, anxiously. He smoothed one eyebrow, twisted his moustache, and wiped the dust off his forehead; then he turned his head to one side and examined his face; a frown appeared between his eyes, and he started nearer the glass. He had forgotten there was anyone else on earth.

"Yes," spoke up a sweet, small voice at his elbow, "it is really too bad, but you are right in your surmise—your nose is set on a little crookedly!"

THE ROCK-A-BYE SHIP.

The Rock-a-bye ship sails every night
To the haven the Port of Dreams,
While at the mast-head shines the glowing light
Of love's far reaching cheerful beams.

The Rock-a-bye ship meets never a Storm
On its way to the Port of Dreams;
The heart of the captain with love is warm—
There never was warmer, it seems.

The Rock-a-bye ship makes several trips
To the fair Port of Dreams each night;
The first at six, when a fond mother's lips
Kiss two eyes that are big and bright.

The Rock-a-bye ship next sails about eight,
When a youngster clambers aboard;
Then the good ship starts with its precious freight,
By the captain fondly adored.

I own an interest in that good ship,
And I love to witness it start;
So I watch it make each separate trip,
Guided on by a loving heart.

For the Rock-a-bye ship is mother's arms,
The passengers our babies dear;
They stop not to think of nocturnal harms,
Nor the bogie man do they fear.

May time pass lightly over that good ship,
And the years on its softly lie,
And kind heaven grant, as it makes each trip
May I always be watching nigh.

—William Sidney Hillyer.

A Brave Soldier Girl.

"Oh, if I were only a man!" exclaimed Bebecca Bates, a girl of fourteen, as she looked from the window of a lighthouse at Scituate, Mass., during the war of 1812, and saw a British warship anchor in the harbor.

"What could you do?" asked Sarah Winsor, a young visitor. "See what a lot of them the boats contain, and look at their guns!" and she pointed to five large boats, filled with soldiers in scarlet uniforms, who were coming to burn the vessels in the harbor and destroy the town.

"I don't care; I'd fight," said Rebecca. "I'd use father's old shotgun—anything. How still it is in the town! There is not a man to be seen."

"O, they are hiding till the soldiers get nearer, then we'll hears the shots and the drum."

"The drum!" exclaimed Rebecca, "how can they use it? It is here. Father brought it home last night to mend. See! they are going to burn father's sloop! Where is that drum? I've a mind to go down and beat it."

As flames began to rise from the sloop, the ardor of the girl increased. They found the drum and an old fife, and, slipping out of doors unnoticed by Mrs. Bates, soon stood behind a row of sand hills.

"Rub-a-dub-dub, rub-a-dub-dub," went the drum, and "squeak, squeak, squeak," went the fife.

The Americans in the town thought that help had come from Boston, and rushed into boats to attack the redcoats. The British paused in their work of destruction; and, when the fife began to play "Yankee Doodle," they scrambled into their boats and rowed in haste to the warship, which sailed swiftly away—Architects of Fate.

The Strange Lighthouse Tree.

Among the world's curiously formed trees the Asiatic star tree is not conspicuous, but among nature's freaks in the tree class it stands alone. Its properties are entirely peculiar to itself. Its history is clouded, its attributes unlike anything seen in other trees.

Enormously tall, a man of ordinary height is dwarfted into nothingness beside its trunk. Bare from the ground up to a distance of about forty feet, it puts forth at that place a hundred tangled limbs. From the latter there shoot out great clusters of long pointed leaves, which, bunching themselves together, exude a kind of phosporescent light at night, giving a strange spectral appearance to the big tree. Travelers on the desert, descrying this tree at night, frequently mistake the giant-leaved thing for the illuminated window of a house or some lonely tower. The light is not brilliant; it is subdued, but voluminous, and lasts until daybreak.—New York Journal.

Why She Wanted a Pint.

Ethel is small, but extremely sober-minded, and, therefore, to be trusted to run on household errands.

The other day her mother called her from her play and said: "Ethel, I want you to run over to the grocer's and get me a quart of vinegar."

Ethel looked thoughtful and hesitated. "I'd rather get a pint, mamma," she answered.

"Why, Ethel, dear?" exclaimed her astonished parent. "I need a quart which you must get."

Again the little girl paused. "No," she said, "I'll get you a pint."

"I'm surprised at you! Why should you buy a pint, when I wish a quart?" insisted the mother.

"Because," answered Ethel, the tears beginning to come, "I can say pint, and I can't say a krort!"

Delights of Growing Up.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And stil what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

Two Ounces of Blood Daily

Are added to your veins by taking one of Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids with each meal three times daily. This is the only natural iron medicine known. It is the natural iron extracted from fresh bullocks' blood.

We do no miracles; all we do is to cure people and give them two ounces of new blood daily when they take Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids. By enriching the blood they restore its natural iron or Hæmoglobin to it; it cures all the chronic blood diseases, among which may be mentioned anæmia, or paleness; chlorosis, or green sickness; palpitation, rickets, scrofula, consumption or tuberculosis, indigestion, amennorhœa, pains in the head or back, and all monthly irregularities. Physicians will tell you that this is the only medicine in the world that can do this, and if they are up-to-date they prescribe them in all such cases.

TO BANISH WORRY.

SOCIETIES FORMED ALONG THE LINES OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

A Cousin of Lincoln's Secretary of State Promulgates the Rules Upon the Principle That Worry Never Has Done and Never Can Do Aught but Harm.

A cousin of Lincoln's Secretary of State promulates the rules upon the principle that worry never has done and never can do aught but harm.

Drive dull care to the winds! Away with worry! America is to be transformed into a perfect Utopia, in which every person will pursue the even tenor of his way, and in which there shall be neither worry nor the fruits of worriment. All you have to do is to buy a copy of Mr. Seward's little book, "Don't Worry; the Scientific Law of Happiness," join one of the circles and spend the remainder of your existence without a thought of the morrow, what you shall eat or what you shall drink, or wherewithal you shall be clothed. The secret of happiness shall be yours. If you are a tailor, and your patrons forget to pay their bills, and you will learn to get along without worrying about it. And if, as a consequence of the forgetfulness of your patrons, you are unable to meet your own obligations, you must get your creditors to join a "Don't Worry" circle, and then you will be all right.

The founder of this crusade against brain exhaustion and nervous prostration is a cousin of former Secretary of State William H. Seward. He is a musician by profession, and until recently taught music in the Teacher's College. He has long devoted his attention to Christian science, and in 1891 organized the Brotherhood of Christian Unity.

Mr. Seward claims that Americans Mr. Seward claims that Americans, above all others, are slaves to the worrying habit—that it is a national vice, a disease which he calls Americantis. If worry can be conquered nearly all the passions that destroy our happiness will disappear.

"The habit of worrying cannot be overcome," says Mr. Seward in his book, "without resolute and persevering effort. But with such effort the habit certainly can be mastered. If the following suggestions are intelligently observed the habit will lose its power, and quietness and peace will take the place of the feverish anxiety, the undercurrent of restless feeling which robs the human heart of its natural happiness and raises the question so often heard, whether life is really worth the living."

1. Consider what must be involved in the truth that God is infinite and that you are a part of His plan.
2. Memorize some of the Scripture promises and recall them when the temptation to worry returns.
3. Cultivate a spirit of gratitude for daily mercies.
4. Realize worrying as an enemy which destroys your happiness.
5. Realize that it can be cured by persistent effort.
6. Attack it definitely as something to be overcome.
7. Realize that it never has done and never can do the least good. It wastes vitality and impairs the mental faculties.
8. Help and comfort your neighbor.
9. Forgive your enemies and conquer your aversions.
10. Induce others to join the Don't Worry movement.

Mr. Seward's earnestness is shown in a later work on the subject, which has not yet appeared. "A don't worry circle," he says, "may be large or small. Any family may agree to resolve itself into a don't worry circle, and many are doing so. On the other hand, members need not even live in the same place. There is one circle of three members, two of whom live in New York and the third in Michigan. They study the scientific principles of the subject and help each other by correspondence. Usually members live in the same town and have regular meetings."

It has been suggested that school teachers form circles and that the principle be applied to their work in the schoolroom.

Slightly Personal.

Mrs. Wallace—Did you read about that poor man who stole a loaf of bread and made the defense that he was starving?

Mr. Wallace—Was it homemade bread?

"What has that to do with it?"

"Because, if it was, he was lying. A starving man would not have the strength to run away with a loaf of homemade bread.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Theatrical Note.

"The stage," said the sallow minister, "should be exterminated, root and branch."

"You can do away with 'em root and branch if you want," said the florid landlord, "but I propose to hold on to their trunks."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

CYCLING COMMENT.

There is a prospect after all of Plainfield seeing bicycle racing this year. Negotiations are under way which, if successful, will result in three race meets on the Crescent Oval. While the Oval has been taken by the Crescent Baseball Club, arrangements have been made so the attractions will not conflict.

CACK MEDITATES IN A CELL.

New Bully Threw His Rival in Love Out of a Window.

"Cack" Carter is now meditating in one of the cells in the city jail. Patrolman McCue locked him up this morning on a warrant. The trouble which led to this sudden restraining of the liberty of "Cack" occurred Monday night at the home of Mrs. Lucy Peterson, way down West Third street.

Charlie DuBois is a little colored fellow. He admired Lulu Upshaw and so did "Cack" There was a big time down at Peterson's Monday night. "Cack" and Charlie were there. So was the dusky belle in question. The beer flowed freely and everybody got excited. Then, it is said, "Cack" went for his hated rival and succeeded in throwing him through the window, taking sash and all with him. Somebody complained against "Cack" and so he was arrested.

LETTER FROM SECRETARY LONG.

Navy Department Thank the Patriotic Veterans of Plainfield.

A meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., was held last evening, at which time an interesting letter was received from Secretary Long, of the United States Navy, in which he thanked the members of the Post for the expressed sympathy in a recent letter sent to President McKinley, regarding the accident to the battleship Maine, and offering the services of the members to the country in case of war. The letter will be framed with the other letters received from President McKinley and Governor Voorhees.

Commander Morse appointed W. W. Coriell, I L. McVoy and W. C. Smith a committee to arrange for an excursion to Long Branch, June 22d, the occasion of the annual Department of the G. A. R. The other business transacted was of a routine nature.

Councilman Liefke's Improvement.

Councilman Henry Liefke is preparing to open a bakery in his store on West Front street, corner of Exchange alley. The store is now being thoroughly overhauled by the carpenters, masons and painters, and prepared for an up-to-date bakery. A new brick oven has been erected in the rear. Mr. Liefke expects to open the establishment the latter part of next week.

Accepted the Call.

Rev. Mr. McKane has accepted the call to the pastorate of the church of the deciples of Christ on Grove street. Heretofore Mr. McKane was not acting officially as pastor, but was temporarily filling the pulpit. Now that he has accepted the call, an effort will be made to build the church up.

Seven Days Ahead.

Will A. Haas, the general agent of Waite's Comedy Companies, is in Plainfield. The western comedy company appears at Music Hall next week Mr. Haas has been in city seven times in as many years ahead of theatrical companies.

—H. Kohn has rented one of Stillman's new stores and will move next week. He will keep a fine line of millinery and dress goods.

No Prearranged Plan to Adjourn.

Washington, March 23.—If the Senate and House adjourn over until Monday from Friday, as has been suggested, it will be only because the status of business warrants it, and not because of any prearranged programme. The Senate has adjourned frequently of late because there was no pressing business on its calendars.

French Troops Defeated.

Paris, March 23.—The Siecle says a French expedition sent against Bossiriers, in the Island of Madagascar, has met with a serious reverse, six officers and one hundred men being killed. The insurgents, it is stated, also captured a number of rifles and 125,000 cartridges.

BOARD OF TRADE.

The last suggestion was to the effect that the Board make an active plea for the new east-bound station in this city. A special committee, composed of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and H. G. Runkle, was appointed to wait on the railroad officials and hurry up the building of the new station as soon as possible.

The committee on membership reported favorably on twelve applications and the applicants were all elected to membership. Two new applications were received and were referred to the committee. G. Q. Packer made a report for the special committee on insurance. They had investigated the question of rates and had been ready to meet representatives of the Middle Department, but the latter were not ready to confer. They reported that the rates had been changed very decidedly of late and were now so unsettled that the committee could not yet decide what was to be done.

An amendment to the constitution setting the third Wednesday in January as the date of the annual meeting, was passed.

Harry C. Runyon introduced the subject of the proposed opening of Madison avenue and stated it was W. M. Stillman's wish that the Board of Trade take a hand in the matter to keep it moving. A lively discussion followed in which L. B. Woolston explained the situation that $4,000 was needed to purchase the property in the borough. Mr. Stillman had given $1,000, Mr. Vetterlein had collected another $1,000 in the borough. He thought the borough would give something, possibly another thousand. The matter was referred to the committee on streets, roads and bridges to look into the subject and take a hand in making the movement a united one by all interested parties.

President Lounsbury opened a discussion by a very severe criticism of the present building ordinance and the recent Board of Health of Plainfield. He pronounced them oppresive and declared it his belief that they they were seriously hurting Plainfield He compared them to two big load-stones that were dragging the city down. The building ordinance, he said, was a hundred and fifty years ahead of the times. That opened a general campain against the building ordinance and the Board of Health in which most all of the members took a hand.

The building ordinance was criticised for various things but it seemed to be the opinion of a majority that the Common Council would be only too glad to make such corrections as were needed. The members by no means agreed as to what needed correcting and the discussion took a lively turn. The principal objection to it was in regard to the extent of the fire limits. Some wanted things left more to the discretion of the inspector. The matter was finally left to a special committee of three to confer with the Common Council.

Then the Board of Health was unmercifully pulled to pieces and its methods criticised. It seemed the general opinion that the Board had too much power and was over zealous in its work. The committee on sanitation was instructed to inquire into its work.

There was a lull and Charles H. Hand remarked:

"Well, when we get everything right, we'll be pretty smart people."

There was a general laugh and the meeting adjourned.

For the Church Fund.

A successful cake sale was held last Saturday afternoon at the residence of Mayor John F. Wilson, on Greenbrook road. The affair was gotten up by a number of the ladies of the Church of the Redeemer. Among those who were in charge of the sale were Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. Wm. Barlow, Miss Barlow and Miss Wilson. The proceeds of the sale amounted to $60.

—The funeral of Miss Carrie Lusardi, who died at the home of her parents, on North avenue, yesterday morning, will be held tomorrow from St. Mary's R. C. church.

THE MEN WHO MAY COMMAND.

THOMAS A. EDISON, JR.

True Disciple of His Father, Inheriting Much of His Ability.

A new personal power is risen in the world of invention. He is none other than Thomas A. Edison, jr., son of the world-renowned electrician and inventor, Wizard Edison.

Young Mr. Edison is only twenty-one years of age, but he is already in business for himself on a large scale and has proved that in his case at least genius is hereditary.

Thomas A. Edison, jr., inherits not only the genius but the features of his father. They are classical features. His complexion is very dark, his face is smooth-shaven, and he wears his thick, black hair unusually long, falling in a wave over his ears and down nearly to his shoulders. He looks like a genius. His eyes are piercing, and on his brow is the deep scowl of the intense student. He is almost exactly the same height as his father, and inherits even his sire's deafness, being quite hard of hearing in his left ear, though he is not nearly so deaf as the elder Edison.

Young Edison, heretofore almost unheard of, has suddenly sprung into prominence in a business way by his production of a wonderfully improved incandescent lamp, the quality of which, experts have announced, far exceeds that of any other lamp ever made.—New York World.

Geometrical.

"I seem to have a very unfortunate manner of saying things," remarked Willie Wishington."

"What has happened now?" inquired his friend.

"I remarked to Miss Cayenne that there was one point upon which I had made up my mind."

"And was she interested?"

"Not greatly. She said she thought that a point was quite large enough for the purpose."—Washington Star.

Lavigne Wants Another Fight With Daly.

Cleveland, O., March 23.—In view of the statements which are being published regarding the match between Kid Lavigne and Jack Daly in this city last Thursday night, Lavigne's manager has announced that he is willing to put up any sum from $5,000 to $10,000 in Cleveland or New York for a fight to a finish between the two, Daly to be allowed his weight of last Thursday night, which was four pounds more than that of Lavigne.

Explosion in a Coal Mine.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 23.—An explosion occurred at Manown Coal Mine, near Monongahela City, yesterday. Two persons were killed, five injured, and from fifteen to twenty-five were entombed in the mine, but were rescued uninjured.

Stone for Indian Pipes.

In Southwestern Minnesota is a celebrated quarry where for centuries the Indians have obtained a soft red stone out of which they carve pipes. This is the only place in America, and probably in the world, where this particular kind of stone is found. Many tribes of red men formerly resorted to the quarry, and the pipestone seems to have been an article of commerce among them, for it has been found in Indian graves scattered all the way from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. It has also been found as far West as the Rocky Mountains and in British America.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Peacock Throne.

A recent writer thus describes the famous Persian "peacock throne." It is entirely of silver; a great camp-bed structure, but modeled in lovely designs. It is encrusted from end to end and from top to bottom with diamonds. At the back is a star of brilliants that make you blink. The rug on which the Shah sits is edged with precious stones, and the pillow on which he reclines is covered with pearls. Some persons have valued it at £5,000,000. Its real value is between £2,000,000 and £3,000,000.

ONE WAY PROPOSED TO FILL EMPTY HOUSES

A Correspondent Who Says Cost of Living Is Too High.

HOW HE WOULD REMEDY IT.

ONE OF IMPORTANT THINGS IS TO REDUCE RENTS.

The Writer Says That Landlords Try to Get Ten Per Cent. on Their Investments and the Houseless People Cannot Afford to Pay It—He Also Argues that the Cost of Necessities are Too High Compared to New York Houses and that Codfish Aristocracy Are to Blame for the Condition of Affairs

The editorial in yesterday's Press concerning the number of empty houses in the city attracted great attention from all people who are interested in the welfare of the city, and to many was a startling revelation of the conditions of affairs prevailing. A number of letters have already been received from people who believe they know the reason therefor, as well as a method by which every house in Plainfield can be filled with a family. The first is published today as follows:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—May I occupy a little of your "valuable space" in answering your question, "How shall every house in Plainfield be filled with a family?" The answer is easy. Put down the rents and the cost of living. Of course, this answer will raise a howl from the landlord and the home merchant; but let us reason together, we will consider the cases separately although they are interdependent.

Concerning the houses. It is not a question as to whether they shall be built. They are already here, and some of that rash class of folk who seem always ready to "rush in where angels fear to tread," are building more. After they are finished, this class of folk and other fortunate owners will try to get ten per cent on their investments. The houseless cannot afford to pay it. Then it will be left for each owner to decide for himself whether a half or three-quarter loaf is not better than none. When he concludes that it is, some progress will be made towards filling empty houses.

Perhaps you think I am treating the landlords rather dogmatically, and that I do not appreciate the situation. Unfortunate for me, I do appreciate it. I know whereof I speak. I have been a landlord myself; and my daily prayer is that a merciful Providence will save me from a repetition! If any friend intends to remember me in his will, he will please make it cash.

Concerning the cost of living. This matter is much involved. A large number of Plainfielders go to New York for their supplies of dry goods and grooceries, (and even meats,) because, they say, the home prices are so high. The home merchant says he is compelled to ask high prices, (if he will admit it,) because so many people buy in New York. Now, I have a really heavenly plan whereby this evil can be overcome: let the buyer and the seller "get together" and make a compact for six months wherein the buyer agrees to buy all that he needs, in Plainfield and the seller agrees to sell as cheap as he can. Just see if that plan does not bring a happy issue out of one infliction.

I am told that there is a sad and serious reason why the home merchant is compelled to be rather stiff in his prices. (Please note that, "I am told," for I do not wish to lay myself open to a suit for libel because I am going to tell what I am told!) You know, Mr. Editor, that there are a great many nice people in Plainfield. Now, I am told, Mr. Editor, and I write it with a shudder while the lights burn blue, that some of these nice people do not pay their bills! Of course, the real nice people pay; but those who are not real nice, but only just "nice," don't pay; and there have been so many of them that a home merchant who continues in business several years is likely to be confronted by a deficit and not a surplus. These nice people remind one of the old distich recording an incident in the life of one Owen Moore.

Owen Moore has run away,
Owin' more than he can pay.

But, unfortunately for the home merchant, all of Owen Moore has not run away from Plainfield. Some of him is here still. And herein lies a good reason for a cash basis, which would mean lower prices for paying paying people; and paying people would fill the houses.

I have written this letter from the stand-point though there are enough people in Plainfield to occupy the

A DANDY PRESS FROM SCOTT'S.

SMOOTH, EVEN AND SPEEDY.

The Machine Proves by Actual and Practical Test All That Was Claimed For It.

In taking a step forward in the world of journalism by the installation of a new press to meet the increased and growing demands made on the advertising columns and in the circulation of The Daily Press, it was especially gratifying to the proprietor to be able to patronize a home industry with the positive view that the machine which was purchased would fulfill every requisite to be made upon it.

The new two-revolution press which Walter Scott & Company built in their factory in this city—an active and important force in the local business world—and which was established in the press room Wednesday of last week, has by actual test proved itself fully capable of all that was claimed for it.

The ponderous machine, with innumerable intricate parts, fitting together simply and delicately—the disarrangement of any one of which would of necessity impair the service of the press—is as obedient to its designer's ideas as the exacting needs of a daily paper such as The Press demands it to be.

The press runs smooth, even and speedy. It has all the modern appliances of a machine of its class, and in the lore of the printing house, it is "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

While congratulating ourselves upon this improved equipment in mechanichal facilities, it is but just and fair to concede to Mr. Scott and his faithful and expert mechanics our most profound appreciation of their abilities in press building and installation for practical, everyday work.

Attached to the press is a Dexter folder, though a view of it is not obtained in the picture printed today. It is quite as wonderful a piece of mechanism as the press itself. It folds, cuts and pastes the pages of The Press, as delivered into the hands of subscribers, as rapidly as delivered from the type forms, and supplants the work of a half-dozen people that would be a necessity without it—or, at least, without a folder of any kind—and besides does the work much cleaner and more accurately than human hands could do it.

A BLACK TEA.

The men of Trinity Reformed church will give a "Black Tea" in the parlors of the church a week from tomorrow evening, and the proceeds will be used to help pay for the furnishings of the church. H. W. Marshall is chairman of the affair and he is assisted by several committees as follows: Reception, F. K. Willett, W. C. Startup, Edward VanWinkle; entertainment, E. H. Bird, T. R. VanZandt. Those who will be in charge of the tables consists of P. A. Emmons, P. M. Demarest, G. L. VanEmburgh, O. W. Dunham, J. Laire and A. L. Force. E. H. Bird is treasurer of the general committee.

The plan thus far arranged is to give a musicale after which light refreshments will be served. An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged.

Home Missionary Day.

Home missionary day will be observed at the congregational church Sunday. The field secretary of the Congregational Board of Home Missions will be present at the morning service and preach on the work of the Board. He will address the Sunday-school in the afternoon and give a short talk to the Christian Endeavor society in the evening.

To Enlarge His Restaurant.

J. H. McVey, of North avenue, has leased from D. I. Roberts, the store adjoining his restaurant recently occupied by Gee Wah, the Chinese laundryman, and will use the place in connection with his restaurant. The store has been leased for five years and is now being made suitable for the purpose for which it was leased.

Still Another Lodge.

In Red Men's Hall, West Front street, Thursday evening, March 31st, Mrs. Eva Wyckoff, of Trenton, Supreme Commander of the Order of Shepherds of Bethlehem, will organize a branch of the lodge in this city. There are now fifty charter members to start with. The objects of the order are to unite men and women of good moral character, regardless of political convictions, nationality or birth in social and fraternal bonds.

ANXIOUS FOR TROLLEY.

LINCOLN AND GREENBROOK PEOPLE FIGHT FOR THE IMPROVEMENT.

An Ordinance to Extend Brunswick Traction Company's Line from Bound Brook to Dunellen is Now Pending.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, March 24—Trolley agitation has again begun in Piscataway township. A meeting of the Township Committee was held in this place yesterday afternoon, when the representatives applied for a franchise to lay their tracks from the Bound Brook borough line to the Dunellen borough line, to connect the systems already planned for those places. The matter was ordered advertised and a public meeting was called for April 8th, at New Market, to hear all objectors against the trolley.

There promises to be some excitement over the route of the trolley. The proposed route as introduced yesterday was to go from Bound Brook to the Harris Lane schoolhouse and thence up Harris Lane to Lincoln. At Lincoln the line is to pass to the left and connect with the main road. The property owners along that line, it is understood, are in favor of that route and will make no objection to it. The only objection will come from the people living along the main road near Green brook and Manning's roadhouse. They want the trolley to come that way instead of passing through Lincoln. Of course the promoters of Lincoln are very anxious to have the trolley go their way.

DECORATION DAY OBSERVATION.

G. A. R. Committee Arranging Details of Celebration.

Chairman I. L. McVoy, secretary C. B. Stephens, Captain Hubbard, Mason W. Tyler, E. D. Moffett and Wm. Day, composing the G. A. R. memorial detail, met last evening in the office of Justice Moffett on North avenue and made further arrangements to celebrate Decoration Day. The committee on hall reported that Music Hall could be secured for the exercises, and it was decided to take that hall if satisfactory arrangements can be made. The committee on music reported concerning a band of music for that day, and it was decided to hire the Queen City Band of twenty-two pieces. A communication was sent to the Sons of Veterans asking them to co-operate with the detail in making arrangements for Decoration Day.

It is quite sure that the line of march for the parade will be the same as last year; also that I. L. McVoy will act as marshal of the parade. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested at the meeting, and another meeting will be held next week Wednesday evening, when still further progress will be made in the matter of arrangements.

Arrangements for Graduation.

The arrangements for the graduation exercises at the Plainfield High School are already being made. The speaker for the occasion has now been settled upon. Dr. Hamilton W. Mabie, associate editor of the Outlook, will deliver the address of the evening. Dr. Mabie is considered a very strong speaker.

A Lecture on Birds.

The Audubon Society has engaged Prof. Witmer Stone, of Philadelphia, for an evening lecture on "Our Native Birds and How to Know Them," April 19th. Prof. Stone is a popular lecturer in Pennsylvania and illustrates his lecture with many lantern slides of birds and their nests.

Theodore Smith, head bar clerk at Alex. Findlay's cafe, is detained at his home by illness, and during his absence his place is being filled by Fred S. Moore, late of "The Maples, on the Hill," Fanwood.

PROGRESS OF WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE REVIEWED

State and County Association Met Here Yesterday.

COUNTY OFFICERS CHOSEN.

INTERESTING REPORTS OF NATIONAL CONVENTION HEARD.

Three Western States Have Already Granted the Petition of Women for Equal Power at the Ballot Box—A Fair to be Held in New Jersey to Raise Money for the Cause—Proposition to Merge State and County Association Under Consideration—The Officers Chosen for Another Year.

The New Jersey State Woman's Suffrage Association held a special meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building yesterday afternoon to hear the reports of delegates who attended the National Woman's Suffrage convention, held at Washington, February 14th, 15th and 16th. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall presided. Interesting reports were given by Mrs. Jennie DeWitt, president of the Essex County Woman's Suffrage Association, by Mrs Phœbe Wright, of Manasquan, and by Mrs. Minola Graham Sexton, of Orange.

The reports included descriptions of the hearing which was given by the Congressional Committee to the women suffragists, headed by Miss Susan B. Anthony. The reports from the different States to the delegates assembled in Washington was encouraging, showing three States—Utah, Colorado and Idaho—already in the column of States granting equal ballot rights to men and women. A number of women senators and legislators were present from those States and addressed the convention. Through the national press agency, weekly letters advocating woman suffrage are sent to all the States, and then circulated to the newspapers through State press secretaries.

The meeting voted to hold a fair somewhere in the State in the near future to raise money for the expenses of the association. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions of sympathy on the death of Miss Frances E. Willard, who was an ardent advocate of the suffrage movement. The members of this committee are: Mrs. Irving Angell, of Passaic, and Mrs. S. R. Krom and Mrs. Aaron Powell, of this city.

The Union County Equal Suffrage Association also held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. building. After the usual routine business the question of reorganization was brought up and discussed. Some of the members were in favor of having the county association merged with the State organization. The matter was finally placed in the hands of a committee, who will render a report at the next meeting of the association.

Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: Mrs. Aaron M. Powell, of this city, president; Mrs. Adelaide Childs, of Elizabeth, vice-president; Mrs. Maria H. Eaton, of this city, treasurer; Mrs. Everett Kimball, of this city, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, of this city, recording secretary. The first three officers were appointed to succeed themselves.

The association claims to have secured the erection of a handsome new brick schoolhouse at Cranford, through its work in inducing the women voters to attend the school meetings and vote for the appropriation.

TO CUBA WITH AIR GUNS

A YOUTHFUL FILLIBUSTERING EXPEDITION IN HANDS OF POLICE.

Fillibusterers are Two Hoboken Youngsters—To Save Their Nine Cents They Slept in a Barn and Were Caught by Owner.

In the shelter of a barn out at Dog Corners, a small fillibustiug expedition bound for Cuba, halted to spend last evening. Douglass Darby, the milkman, and the owner of the barn, captured the entire exhibition, armament and all, and this morning turned it over to the charge of Chief Grant of this city. Now the Chief is waiting to turn them over to the proper authorities.

The expedition started from Hoboken, yesterday morning, at 6 o'clock. It consisted of James Butler, fourteen years old, and John Cahill, fourteen years old. James Butler is the son of Captain Frank Butler, of the tug-boat "Valentine," who resides at 711 Bloomfield street, Hoboken. Cahill is the son of Edward Cahill, an insurance broker in Hoboken who lives at 158 Eighth street.

The armament consisted of two air guns, pneumatic guns perhaps they might be called, of the calibre that project BB shot. Butler's gun was a Christmas present and Cahill bought his. The little bullets would not stay in it very well but he didn't mind that. They believed in light marching order and so had dispensed with overcoats, haversacks or any extra appurtenances.

The expedition made its way to Jersey City where it invested all its capital, except nine cents, to purchase tickets on the Pennsylvania Railroad to Rahway. The party landed there without accident and started across country in the rain. Footsore and weary, the fillibusters reached Dog Corners after nightfall. They selected the stable of Douglass Darby and went supperless to rest.

During the evening Darby came out to feed his horse and discovered the invaders. As he showed no signs of belonging to the hated Spanish race, they surrendered unconditionally and were put to bed after a supper in the good hearted milkman's home.

This morning Darby conveyed the expedition to Plainfield in his milk wagon. Here it was turned over to the custody of Chief Grant who placed the fillibusterers in a cell for safe keeping. They explained that they had started for Cuba, where they were going to help the Cubans fight for their independence. The situation seemed to them to call all good men to duty and they had decided to respond.

The Chief notified the police of Hoboken, who were searching for the missing lads, and they will take them home this afternoon.

Gavel for Good Work.

A meeting of Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., will be held this evening. Several propositions will be received. The representatives to the Grand Loge, W. G. Gray and C. G. Rogers, will make their report of the business transacted at the Grand Lodge and present the gavel received for the largest increase in membership in the State. This is the second gavel that has been received for a like award. A collation will follow in the good of the order.

Borough Residence Sold.

Stephen B. Joseph, of Manning avenue, has just sold his residence to George Hughes, of the borough. Mr. Hughes and family will take possession about April 1st. Mr. Joseph and family have not yet decided just where they will locate, but there are possibilities that they may take up their residence in New York.

Miss Belle VanWinkle, of Central avenue, is slowly improving from a tedious illness.

REED FOUGHT FOR BEET SUGAR BOUNTY

Farmers' Cause Espoused by Somerset Senator.

ANSWERED HIS OPPONENTS.

THE BILL WAS PASSED BY A VOTE OF 12 TO 7.

Senators Johnson and Foster Heard in Opposition to the Measure—They Claimed That the Experiment of Giving Bounties Ought Not to be Tried—Senator Reed Insisted on the Good Merits of the Measure and the Fact that the Farmers Were Very Anxious to Have Bill Pass in Senate.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 24.—Senator Reed showed his versatility as a Legislator, bound to recognize and advance the interests of all his constituents, by espousing the cause of the farmers yesterday.

At the afternoon session of the Senate a lengthy debate ensued when Senator Reed called up on third reading House 22, the beet sugar bounty bill. The Senator said the amount paid for the importation of sugar annually exceeds the value of the entire wheat crop of this country, and hence the importance of promoting an industry promising a vast home production of sugar. The bill proposed to set aside $50,000 a year to be paid in bounties of $1 ton for the growing of sugar beets.

Senator W. W. Johnson opposed because he saw no justice in offering a bounty for sugar production any more than for any other industry. Why not subsidize the shoemaker or the mechanic or the farmer who raises other crops than beets.

Senator Foster, of Hunterdon, endorsed this view and said that his acquaintance with farmers, which extends to almost every county, led him to believe that the bill was not wanted by the farmers.

Senator Reed replied to Senator Foster by saying that he (Foster) hadn't heard from all the farmers. Besides, no money was to go toward the erection of factories. It was all for bounties. Large sections of the State were adapted to beet raising; in fact, soil suitable for potatoes suited beets usually. Perhaps Hunterdon county wasn't in it on that score. As to Senator Johnson's objection, it was strange how constitutional and legal defects were always discoverable in bills intended for the farmers' benefit but there was apparently no flaws in bills voting $10,000 for plans for a sewage plan in Passaic county. If this experiment was not successful, no money would be taken from the treasury.

The bill passed, 12 to 7.

After a lively fight the anti-trading stamp bill passed the Senate. It was warmly advocated by Senator Francis, who introduced it. He said the trading stamp concerns have extorted $140,000 from the people of the State without giving anything in return.

Rev. Mr. Johnston's New Pastorate.

Rev. H. J. Johnston, now pastor of the Grace M. E. church, will preach his first sermon at the Summerfield M. E. church, Mariner's Harbor, Easter Sunday. Mr. Johnston will be transferred from this city to the above place by the M. E. church conference.

A Trip Through Nova Scotia.

Rev. C. E. Herring will tell something of his trip through Nova Scotia in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church this evening. The talk will be illustrated with views of the country. Mrs. Waldorf will read "Evangeline," which will also be illustrated with views.

Candidate For Organist.

Mr. Schiller, of New York, a candidate for the position of organist at the First Presbyterian church, played at the church last evening at the prayer meeting service which was held in the main part of the church. Everyone seemed to be pleased with his playing.

Farewell Reception to Pastor.

The members of the Grace M. E. church will give Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Johnston a farewell reception at the church this evening. Mr. Johnston will not preach a farewell sermon for the reason that he does not believe in them.

Methodist Church Meeting.

Next Monday evening there will be a church meeting at the First M. E. church, at which time three trustees will be selected to take the places of G. R. Cornwell, P. M. French and G. M. Rittenhouse, whose terms expire.

Say it is Disorderly.

Complaints are being made concerning an establishment on Greenbrook road, where there is said to be much disorder. A disturbance occurred at the place yesterday afternoon.

Annual Meetings of First and Park Avenue Societies.

BOTH SHOW PROSPERITY.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS ON CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE AND FINANCES.

First Baptist Society's Deliberations Presided Over by Deacon L. W. Serrell and the Park Avenue Society Presided Over by Its Pastor—East Third Street Mission Chapel Will Cost $7,000—Sunday-Schools in Both Churches are Very Prosperous, as Well as All Other of the Auxiliary Societies—Some Other Interesting Items.

The members of the First Baptist church held their annual church business meeting last evening and listened to the reports of the various societies and departments of the church. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, Deacon L. W. Serrell, presided, and Clerk O. B. Leonard filled his position.

The first order of business was the reception of three persons to membership. They were Miss Margaret McCutchen, Miss Ethel B. Crane and Miss Florence Maud Crane.

Deacon J. B. Probasco presented the report of the deacons, showing the receipts to be $331.45, disbursements $253.53, leaving a balance of $127.52.

The Ladies' Aid Society reported through the president, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, that $125 had been paid out for relief. O. B. Leonard reported for the beneficience committee, which showed the receipts to be $2,826 82 including a balance of $702. The disbursements were about the same, leaving a balance of $753. Mr. Leonard also reported for the Baptist Home for the Aged. This report showed that $4,000 had been received for the Home during the year. Mrs. O. B. Leonard, Mrs. Mary Thickstun and Mrs. White represent the church on the board of managers, and the term of Mrs. Mary Thickstun having expired she was re-elected for three years.

Superintendent E. K. Case reported at present 421 scholars in the Sunday-school, with an average attendance of 277; 13 officers, 41 teachers, with a gain of 29 during the year.

The receipts from the school for the year were $2,389.94 and there is a balance of $256.19. At the Mt. Olive Baptist church Sunday-school the average attendance is 116.

President L. H. Biglow, Jr., reported for the Christian Endeavor Society that twelve new members had been added during the year, with an average attendance of 75. In the Junior Society there are 43 members with an average attendance of 25.

L. W. Randolph, superintendent of the East Third Street mission, gave a report of the work at that place. He stated that the entire cost of the new chapel would be $7,000. The lot cost $2,150 and the cost of the building about $4,551. Subscriptions to the amount of the cost had almost been received.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society reported that $608 had been received during the year. The home society received and expended during the year about $479.75. Frank Jones, for the Young Ladies' Missionary Society, reported the receipts to be $331.42 and expenditures $221.42. Mrs. Walter McGee, for Miss Ella Harold Serrell, presented a report for the Gold Dust Band.

This report showed that $25 had been received. For the Temple Builders, Frank Jones reported a balance of $12.50.

The beneficience committee suggested that there be a change in the schedule for the collections for stated objects, and the following schedule was adopted: Third Sunday in January, Sunday-school; third Sunday in March, Foreign Missions; third Sunday in May, State Convention; third Sunday in September, Baptist Publication Society; third Sunday in October, Ministerial education; third Sunday in December, Home Missions.

Park Avenue Church.

The annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held in the church parlors last evening. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, presided, and Thomas A. Cuming acted as secretary.

The annual reports were received. The treasurer's report of the benevolences was made by the treasurer, E. Fenton Haynes. The benevolences amounted to $308.78, which was distributed among the home and foreign missions. About $20 was given to the Plainfield Relief Association.

The Sunday-school report was made

FLOODS CAUSE HAVOC

Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana Suffer Heavy Losses.

MANY REPORTED DROWNED

Farming Lands Under Water, Railroads Washed Out and Traffic Paralyzed, and Thousands of People Flooded Out of Their Homes.

Chicago, March 24.—Five States are suffering from severe floods—Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. Railroad bridges have been washed out in every direction, miles and miles of railroad track and farming lands are under water, and many people are in danger of their lives.

The usual Spring thaws, augmented by unusually heavy rains which have been falling for two and three days almost incessantly in some places, caused the disaster.

Several railroads accidents have resulted, but only one resulting in loss of life is reported so far. A work train on the Pennsylvania Railroad last night went through a trestle weakened by the floods near Columbus, Ind., and several lives were lost. The reports at present are conflicting, the number of dead being placed at from eight to thirty, and the number of injured at from fifteen to twenty.

At Greensburg, Ind., Will Shane and Clara Miller, who were to have been married to-day, were swept away while crossing a stream and were drowned. The property loss in and about Greensburg will reach $200,000. At Shelbyville the loss will be equally as large, the residence part of the town being flooded. Among the other Indiana towns affected are Lebanon, Rushville, Richmond, Westport, St. Paul, Manchester, Wabash, Terre Haute and Indianapolis. It is thought the total loss in Indiana will reach fully $1,000,000.

Ohio has suffered almost as badly as Indiana. At Dayton fully three-fourths of the city is inundated, and the prospects are that the entire city will be under water unless cool and clear weather prevails. Early yesterday morning the levee of the Great Miami broke north of the city, and within an hour the lower portions of North Dayton were submerged. Shortly after the entire suburb was under water, and over 1,000 householders were compelled to abandon their homes.

Thousands were rescued, though as many were compelled to remain. The City Lighting Department is disabled, and the entire city was in darkness last night. The loss will run up into the hundreds of thousands. At Columbus three square miles of the city is under water, including many manufacturing concerns, and technical houses—a total of over 600 buildings. Many families had to be rescued in boats.

Among the other Ohio cities less seriously affected are Cincinnati, Urbana, Upper Sandusky, Springfield Piqua, Canton, Newark and Canal Dover. At Pittsburg several iron mills are submerged and the damage already wrought is about $150,000.

While the floods in Illinois are not so heavy as in the adjoining States, the loss to farmers and the railroads will be extensive. The towns most seriously affected are Cobden, Mascaulah, Lonesville, Virginia, Charleston, Ottawa and Nashville. Rain is still falling in many of the places, so that much greater damage is feared throughout the Mississippi Valley.

EIGHT REPORTED DROWNED.

Work Train on the Panhandle Railroad Plunges Into White River.

Seymour, Ind., March 24.—At 6 o'clock last night a special work train on the an engine, tool car and a passenger coach, which contained a large number of men, left Columbus for the purpose of distributing the men along the various water courses on the line on account of the floods.

While crossing the trestle near Columbus it gave way, precipitating the entire train into the White River. Eight are reported killed or drowned.

All trains have been abandoned between this city and Columbus, and the river covers all the roads leading to the scene of the wreck.

"Tom" Watson Has Retired.

Atlanta, Ga., March 24.—Thomas E. Watson, who was last week nominated for Governor of Georgia by the Populists, to-day in his paper, the People's Party Paper, announces his declination of the nomination, and further announes over a signed card that his life in the future will be devoted absolutely to the practice of law and literature, and that he will not under any consideration enter politics again in any capacity. The statement will create a sensation in political circles, as it will add also that he can see no hope of the Populist party bringing about the reforms contemplated so long as the present fusion plan prevails and the party is managed as it is now.

Talk of Salisbury's Retirement.

London, March 24.—The Daily Chronicle says: "We learn that the long Cabinet council on Monday was to consider an intimation from the Marquis of Salisbury of his desire, acting under medical advice, to resign both the Premiership and the Foreign Secretaryship. Our news is obtained from a source usually trustworthy, but the crisis may take a few weeks to develop, the Queen being abroad. Lord Salisbury's successors are almost certain to be the Duke of Devonshire as Premier and Mr. Arthur J. Balfour as Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs."

Big Insurance Failure.

Harrisburg, March 24.—Deputy Attorney General Reeder, at the instance of Insurance Commissioner Lambert, made application in the Dauphin County Court Tuesday for a receiver for the Guarantors' Finance Company of Philadelphia, of which Thomas V. Cooper is President. The court granted an order returnable Monday, April 4. The liabilities, including the capital stock, amount to $1,047,500, while the admitted assets are $582,967.03, which shows an impairment of $464,532.97.

No Special Session in Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb., Marcvh 24.—There is little likelihood of a special session of the Legislature for the purpose of passing a new Freight Rate bill.

COLLEGE BASEBALL SEASON OPENS.

Yale and Pennsylvania Are Said to Have the Strongest Teams.

New York, March 24.—The college championship baseball games will begin the season to-morrow at Princeton, when Princeton meets Rutgers. Both these teams have settled down to hard work and expect to put up a good game. There is much conjecture among college athletes as to which of the universities have the strongest team this year. Yale and the University of Pennsylvania have undoubtedly the best chance of winning the greatest number of games this season from the present outlook. Although these two teams are not yet announced to meet on the diamond this season, a line on them can be obtained when they play the same teams on different days during the Spring.

CAPT. GREENWAY, OF YALE.

Captain Greenway will have a fine lot of men to hold up the honors of Yale. Among them are Camp, Hazen, Atkins, Williams, Clarke, Crawford, Noyes, Dunn, Winter, Shattuck, Burrell, Dashiel, Russell, Lyons, McBride, Bronson, Ferguson, Bronson, Bartlett, Wallace, Wadsworth and Weer. These men have been training constantly for the past five weeks, and when "play ball" is called early in April, they will no doubt be in good shape to put up an elegant game.

Yale and Princeton meet first on June 4 at New Haven, then again on June 11 at Princeton and in case of a tie the game will be played in New York on June 18th. Harvard meets Yale at Cambridge on June 23, and then at New Haven on the 28th. In case of a tie the game will be played in New York on July 2.

PITCHER THATCHER. CATCHER SCHWARTZ, of University of Pennsylvania.

The University of Pennsylvania will begin the season on April 2 with the Indians at Franklin Field. On the 7th they will start on a Southern tour, going as far South as Atlanta, when they will meet the University of Georgia. They will travel in a private car and expect to bring back a long list of victories to their credit.

Harvard has been unfortunate in this year's make-up of her team. At the practice games on Holmes' Field the men have been spirited in their work, but the material is very poor, as most of them are new men. The outlook for that university is very bad. They have been put through a thorough training, however, and may turn out better than expected.

FRANCE REFUSES.

Italy's Suggestion of Arbitration to Help Spain.

London, March 24.—A dispatch from Paris brings the positive information that a movement, engineered on Spain's behalf, to avert a Spanish-American war, has received a serious rebuff. Spain secured the aid of Italy to propose joint action by the Powers to at least delay action by the United States.

The Italian Ambassador at Paris proposed to the French Government that the Powers jointly urge the United States and Spain to refer the questions growing out of the Maine disaster to an international conference of experts. Such a policy would be regarded as taking direct sides with Spain, to enable her to delay the crisis, and Italy's suggestion has, therefore, been curtly refused by the French Cabinet.

Spain Sounding France.

London, March 24.—The Vienna correspondent of the Standard says:

"I am credibly informed that Spain has informally inquired at Paris whether France, as her largest creditor and traditional friend, would, either alone or in conjunction with other powers, mediate at Washington, and also whether it is possible to place a Spanish loan in France."

Gladstone Is Very Ill.

London, March 24.—Sir Thomas Smith, surgeon extraordinary to the Queen and senior surgeon of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, who was called in consultation upon the case of Mr. Gladstone, in an interview said yesterday that after the examination Mr. Gladstone begged him not to say a word about his condition, unless the Queen asked for information on the subject. The surgeon confirmed the report that Mr. Gladstone was suffering intense pain and was very ill. He added that Mr. Gladstone would regard it as the greatest kindness if the newspapers and the public would not discuss the details of his sickness.

Horses for Cavalry Service.

Kansas City, Mo., March 24.—The Government of the United States has increased its orders for cavalry horses. To quote a horse buyer who talked about it, "The Government is buying cavalry horses night and day." The insurgent government of Cuba is also buying horses and plenty of them, and Kansas City is furnishing most of the animals for both governments.

Rapid-Fire Guns from Abroad.

Washington, March 24.—Information has been received by the Bureau of Ordnance of the War Department that the rapid-fire seacoast defense guns bought by the Government last week from the Vicar Works and the Maxims, in England, have been shipped to this country. These guns are thirty-two in number and cost about $370,000.

THE CRIME OF SPAIN

Mr. Gallinger Tells the Senate What He Saw in Cuba.

THE SCENES OF SUFFERING

Speaking of the Maine, He Says That if the Explosion Was Premeditated No Money Indemnity Could Atone for It Reason for Rebellion.

Washington, March 24.—Mr. Gallagher, of New Hampshire, addressed the Senate yesterday afternoon on the condition of affairs in Cuba, having recently returned from a visit to the island. It was a stirring speech, and attracted a large audience to the galleries, notice having been given yesterday that it would be delivered.

After telling of his call upon General Blanco, at the Palace, and paying the highest compliments to Consul-General Lee, the Senator declared that Weyler, because of his cruelties, was driven from Cuba by the force of American just public opinion. In answer to those who had said war did not exist in Cuba he would tell them that a desolated and stricken people proved the contrary. It was a peculiar kind of war—not the kind this country became acquainted with at Shiloh and Vicksburg, at Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, and which General Sherman summed up in the three laconic words, "War is hell." It was not the kind of war that Grant and Lee, Sherman and Jackson, Sheridan, Longstreet and Logan participated in from 1861 to 1865. In Cuba it was a war of starvation and extermination—a war more cruel than any the world has ever known. It was worse even than that of the Kurds against the Armenians.

The scenes in the streets of Havana are harrowing beyond description. People in want and suffering are everywhere seen and walking skeletons meet one on every hand. Naked children, emaciated and ragged women and diseased and starving men throng the streets, the hotel lobbies and every sort. It is a terrible sight—one that sickens the heart and quickens every impulse of human sympathy and love.

Under the very shadow of cathedrals and churches, where Spain's authority is absolutely unquestioned, the most horrible conditions are conceded to exist. Many have refused to believe that a great government was waging a war of extermination instead of a war of honor, yet such is an absolute fact. A visit was paid to the orphanage, which is now under the care of Miss Clara Barton. It contains about fifty children, almost every one of whom is a victim of starvation. Dr. Lesser, one of Miss Barton's assistants, has had experience in the Armenian and Indian famines, but he declares that the famine in Cuba is worse than that in Armenia, and the pictures he drew of the terrible suffering and starvation in the island more than confirm all that has been written upon the subject.

A detailed story of a visit to Los Fusos, the place where the reconcentrados daily assemble to get food, was also given. A few weeks ago when Miss Barton discovered the place there were 645 people lying on the floors, many of them entirely nude and all suffering the pangs of starvation. Much has been done by the Red Cross Society to alleviate the condition of those who still remain, but scores of men, women and children are yet there, gaunt and bony almost as a skeleton, many of them covered with sores directly traceable to insufficient food. "What a chapter of horrors and death is that! And still the tragedy goes on. How much longer it shall continue largely depends upon the forbearance of a great people, who through suffering and sorrow achieved their own independence and whose sympathies have always gone out to the oppressed of all nations of the world."

A vivid picture was then drawn by Mr. Gallagher of a trip to the city of Matanzas. He said: "Matanzas is literally a place of beggary and death. Never before did my eyes behold such suffering, and never again do I expect to see such havoc wrought through a cruel and inhuman decree.

"The number of people who have starved in Cuba will never be definitely known. It is estimated that 800,000 were driven from their homes into the cities and towns. I had it from Spanish authority that, according to their figures, 225,000 already have perished, but it is said that the Red Cross Society is in possession of figures showing that 425,000 Cubans have died as a result of Spanish cruelty from starvation, and that $200,000 more must inevitably die.

"I have been asked many times what of the Manle. I do not know. This, however, I do know. A government that will deliberately starve 400,000 of its own people will do pretty much anything. If the ship was blown up from the outside, what should our Government do? Perhaps I should forbear to discuss that question now, but this I will venture to say: Human life, purposely taken, cannot be paid for in gold or silver. Mark my words, 'purposely taken,' and if ti shall appear that such was the fate of 250 brave American sailors, then heaven pity the guilty parties. It will not be a question of arbitration, but a question involving the dignity and honor of this great republic."

Mr. Gallagher said there was little real loyalty to Spain in Cuba, as would be demonstrated when the hour of trial should come. He did not believe that Spain could subdue the insurgents. The Cubans had been oppressed so long that they preferred death to continued Spanish rule.

"No people on the face of the earth have been so oppressed," continued the Senator. "The treasury of Spain is literally supplied from the revenues extorted from Cuba and the Philippine Islands. Our forefathers went to war because the mother country put a tax on tea. Cuba has 10,000 more reasons than we had for rebellion and she deserves the sympathy and help of every true American.

"Fortunately the people of this great republic are thoroughly aroused to the situation and the great heart of the American populace is in full sympathy with Cuba. Religion and humanity alike demand that the unholy war shall cease, and cease it should, even though the glitter and glamor of military rule shall end and a decaying and dissolute throne shall pass away, never to return."

SITUATION IS GRAVE

Looks as if a Conflict With Spain Is Inevitable.

PRESIDENT WILL BE FIRM

A Cabinet Officer Outlines the Course of the Administration—The Maine and the Cuban Questions to Be Treated Separately to Prevent Hasty Action.

Washington, March 24.—No one denies that the situation is extremely critical. To the majority it looks as if a conflict between this country and Spain is inevitable. The President and the Cabinet are in accord and the stories of differences between them are absolutely false. The Cabinet are supporting the President as one man, and are outspoken in their confidence in his judgment and wisdom. As one of the Cabinet members said:

"The President has a firm and absolute grasp on the situation and the country need have no fear as to his ability to meet all emergencies. The situation to-day is grave, but there is still hope that peace may be secured in Cuba without dishonor or conflict."

It is denied at the White House that the President is thinking of asking Congress to immediately appropriate $500,000 or any moneys to purchase and send supplies to Cuba.

The President has had consultations with a number of Democratic Senators on the line he has followed with Speaker Reed, Senators Cockrell, of the Appropriations Committee, and Turpie and Mills, of the Foreign Relations Committee. Of all of these, he asked that Congress pursue the conservative course on the Maine report, and wait for action until the Cuban message is presented.

The President's Course.

There is a suprise in store for those who think that the President is not going to be firm in his course in regard to the Maine and Cuban question, for, when he acts, he will act in such a manner that his meaning cannot be doubted, nor his purpose obscured. The President and his Cabinet fully realize the present acute situation, and are not halting or hesitating as to the policy to be pursued.

Such conservative members of the Cabinet as Secretaries Gage and Bliss and Postmaster-General Gary do not hesitate to say that the situation is graver now than it has been so far, but they, with the rest of the Cabinet, are confident as ever as to the ability of the President to meet the emergency.

It is the President's intention at this time to treat the Maine explosion and the general Cuban question separately. He intends to let Congress have the Maine report first and then follow it with a message on the general Cuban question, and at that time submitting the Cuban correspondence. For this reason the administration is using every effort to restrain Congress from acting hastily on the Maine report, and thus risking hostilities before it is called upon to act on the general Cuban question.

The conferences at the White House within the last few days have all been held with this idea in view. The President has been frank and open with the members of Congress and told them plainly his plans. At the same time, he has tried to secure from them assurances that Congress will proceed in a quiet and orderly manner to the consideration of the report on the Maine explosion and not make this subject the cause of a conflict before it is advised as to the President's policy in regard to Cuba.

To Prevent Haste.

It is the general belief that if Congress were to act this week it would overwhelmingly declare for intervention and the independence of Cuba. The President knows this, and for this reason has decided to attempt to prevent action before the whole situation is laid before the legislative branch of the Government.

As already stated, Speaker Reed has given assurances that the House will act calmly and slowly, and as he expresses it, "There will no internal explosion there, even if there is an external one." At the conference between Senators Allison and Gorman and the President, the Senators coincide with the President's plans and promised to do all in their power to hold the Senate in check until the whole question was laid before it. It is therefore expected that when the report is sent to Congress next week it will be referred to the Foreign Affairs Committee and take its regular course under the rules.

As soon as this is done and Congress has had a chance to know the facts in regard to the explosion the President will inform it in regard to the general Cuban question, then it is expected Congress will act.

The President has not given up all hope that he may secure peace on the island without hostilities, but at the same time he realizes the temper of Congress and the situation ahead of him. He is going to act with Congress in all he does and Congress is going to share with him the responsibility of the outcome.

Intervention Expected.

The prevailing opinion still is that the action taken in the Cuban question will be intervention, which will lead ultimately to freedom of the island. The exact form of this intervention is still a question. The President has been considering for some time plans for a larger system of relief for the starving Cubans than the one now in operation. The new plan includes the immediate shipment of large supplies of food and wholesale measures of relief for the island.

If Spain should object to this and call it intervention, she will be the one responsible for provoking war. The President still hopes that in the meantime something may occur to diminish the likelihood of opposition. But, if war comes from this reason, it will be a war for the sake of humanity and on this ground will receive the approbation not only of this country but the rest of the world. How this relief is to be sent is another question to be settled, and the President, if he decides to make it Government relief, will ask Congress for an appropriation and also for means to transport the supplies. By the time Congress is called upon to act on the Cuban question Spain's attitude in regard to this relief will be known, and the administration can act intelligently.

Doctors now agree that consumption is curable.

Three things, if taken together, will cure nearly every case in the first stages; the majority of cases more advanced; and a few of those far advanced.

The first is, fresh air; the second, proper food; the third, Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites.

To be cured, you must not lose in weight, and, if thin, you must gain. Nothing equals Scott's Emulsion to keep you in good flesh.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.
SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York.

The general feeling in Washington in both Legislative and Executive circles is that some action will be taken within the next week. The strain cannot be kept up much longer, and to keep Congress ready and on hand word has been passed around among the members that every Congressman must remain in Washington to be on guard.

On Tuesday a Western member asked for leave of absence to go home on important business, and he was told that it was not advisable for him to leave Washington at this time, and that the leaders were desirous for all members to remain here ready for any emergency. He was told that if he left Washington now he might miss the opportunity of casting the most important vote of his Congressional career.

TO USE OLD MONITORS.

Secretary Long Orders War-Time Vessels Into Service.

Washington, March 24.—Two significant moves were made yesterday at the War and Navy Departments which show that the situation is considered grave, and that preparations for any emergency are being made without loss of time. The orders issued were important because it has always been said nothing would be done in these matters until the last moment, when it was absolutely necessary to issue them.

In the Navy Department, the Secretary, through the Bureau of Navigation, issued orders to thoroughly repair and equip the eight old monitors now at League Island. Two of these will be sent to Boston, two to New York and the four remaining will be left where they are. In view of the decision of the Board of Inspectors, sent last week to look over these vessels, that extensive repairs would be necessary to put a number of them into any condition for use, the order to send four to Boston and New York means that these repairs are to be made and the vessels thoroughly improved and equipped. Work will begin at once at League Island on the others and by dividing the fleet the repairs can be hastened and completed in a short time.

It is understood that the monitors ordered north will be used to defend the harbors of New York and Boston, and it is expected that two will remain at Philadelphia, and the others may be sent to other coast ports.

The big coast defense vessels, or monitors, the Terror and Puritan, have been ordered to Key West, and will join Admiral Sicard's fleet.

It is now announced officially that the report is expected here to-night, and no doubt as soon as it is placed in Secretary Long's hands he will take it to the White House, where it will remain until it is sent to Congress next week.

In connection with the announcement of the significant and warlike preparation made by the Navy Department, it is stated that the Puritan, now at Hampton Roads, will in all probability also be ordered to Key West. So it will be seen that instead of the fleet at Key West being weakened it will in reality be strengthened, for in the opinion of nine-tenths of the officers of the United States Navy, the monitors Puritan and Terror are the most formidable war crafts in the world.

The orders for the Terror and the intention of the Department to order the Puritan to Key West does away with the report that a fleet of monitors is to be formed with headquarters at Port Royal, S. C.

"SITUATION UNCHANGED."

Long Says It Is Impossible to Predict What May Next Develop.

Washington, March 24.—Secretary Long last night made the following statement to a correspondent:

"We are still making preparations for the defense of the country against any possible emergency. We are working practically day and night and are leaving nothing undone which might possibly add to the strength of the national defense.

"We are still making every effort to buy ships abroad, but it now seems doubtful whether we can secure any more war vessels—at least, those that are in any way near completion. Ships that can be put into immediate commission are the ones we want.

"We are endeavoring to purchase torpedo boats and torpedo-boat destroyers, and while we have not made any definite purchases the outlook appears bright for the acquisition of several of these.

"While we are in a waiting attitude—and nothing is expected to be done before the arrival of the report of the Maine Court of Inquiry—the situation is uncertain, and it is impossible to predict to any degree of accuracy what may next develop."

Maine Report Moves Swiftly.

Savannah, Ga., March 24.—Lieutenant Marix, with the report of the Court of Inquiry, passed through here at a late hour last night. He was sleeping soundly, and the doors to his coach were locked and strongly guarded. The report of the court rested under Mr. Marix's head. Without mishaps, he will hand the finding of the board to the Navy Department to-night.

LOYAL TO NETHERWOOD.

The movement of the Board of Trade looking toward changing of the name of Netherwood station to Belvidere Avenue station is meeting with decided opposition on the part of some of the wealthy residents of that portion of Plainfield. They have always been very particular that they live in Netherwood, which they prefer to characterize as a suburb of Plainfield rather than a part of it. While they have taken no action as yet, it is probable that they will start a petition asking the officials of the Jersey Central Railroad to allow the name to remain as it is.

A NAVAL HONOR.

Though a few citizens of New Jersey have been honored by the appropriation of their names for the titles of vessels used in the Government service, Plainfield has never been distinguished in this respect until now. Yesterday upon the recommendation of the Board on Auxiliary Cruisers, now in session in New York, the Navy Department purchased the steel seagoing tug "DeWitt C. Ivins." The vessel was named after the well-known Plainfield business man of that name.

Clara Barton and Senator Redfield Proctor have no object in telling anything but the truth in regard to Cuba. When Clara Barton herself calls on Blanco in Havana and protests indignantly because supplies sent by Americans to starving reconcentrados are used to feed Spanish soldiers, when Senator Proctor recites from a written document in the United States senate the statement that Spain in Cuba has possession of only so much ground as her army sits on and that outside of the one city of Havana, desolation and misery reign, the American people know the exact situation in a few words.

Is any American republic inclined to be unfriendly to the United States? Yes, there is one—Chile. When the Balmaceda revolution was on in Chile, during the administration of Benjamin Harrison, a Chilean mob in the port of Valparaiso made an attack on sailors of the United States cruiser Baltimore, killing some of them. For this the United States made Chile apologize and pay an indemnity of $75,000, and Chile has not loved us much from that day to this. Still, she seems not to hate us enough to make her willing to sell her big armorclad, the O'Higgins, to Spain for any price.

In one respect Spain has the advantage over us in naval equipment—she is much better supplied with torpedo boats, which are considered as a first requisite to modern sea fighting. It will be necessary for our naval department to construct such a fleet as quickly as possible.

Because of the careless wording of resolutions passed by the Texas legislature there will this year be necessary two state elections in the Lone Star State, one on the first Tuesday of November, the second on the second Tuesday. Oh, Texas!

With the loss of the Maine and the 255 brave men destroyed with her, also with the knowledge of the terror, disease and starvation reigning in Cuba, the American people can talk or think of little else than the Spanish-American situation.

"The flag of Spain will wave forever in Cuba," says Blanco. That has a ring of the dying in the last ditch talk which always comes before utter collapse of a cause.

One hundred additional torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers will about bring our navy up to the average modern requirement in this respect.

"The Spanish flag represents liberty and civilization," says Blanco. This is the most monstrous lie ever uttered even by a Spaniard.

A torpedo boat and a torpedo boat destroyer are one and the same thing.

UNITY'S FIFTEENTH YEAR

A NOTABLE PYTHIAN CELEBRATION LAST EVENING.

The Event Observed in an Auspicious Manner With a Programme That was Instructive and Entertaining to All.

The members, wives, sweethearts and friends of Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, thoroughly enjoyed the celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the lodge which was held last evening in the rooms in the Babcock building. The presence of Queen City Band enlivened the occasion and put everyone in the best of humor, while Councilman W. N. Runyon added not a little to the pleasure of the event.

Past Grand Chancellor Hitchcock, of Newark, was introduced by Chairman George Radford. He gave an excellent talk on Knighthood. Another notable and interesting speaker was Past Grand Chancellor D. S. Rockafellow, of Somerville, who spoke more especially concerning the local lodge. He stated that during the past fifteen years the lodge had paid out for relief nearly $4,000.

After the rendition of the programme all were invited to adjourn to the Camera Club rooms, where a repast was served under the direction of the committee consisting of George Radford, Frank Putnam, Newton Wyckoff, Bateman Thatcher and Frank Humpston. After the inner man had been suppled the guests returned to the lodge rooms where dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

PASSING COMMENT.

Now that the Plainfield Water Company has had the hydrants in the borough repainted, it would be well for the Council to follow the lead and have the fire-alarm boxes given a coat of paint as they are sadly in need of it.

* * * * *

The agitation in Trenton over the passing of the Bergen county trolley bill has naturally been reflected in all the cities and towns along the line of the proposed boulevard. There has been much talk over the effects the plan would have on Plainfield. Everybody is quite anxious to learn all the details of the plan, how it is proposed to surmount the various difficulties that appear on the surface and many other facts.

* * * * *

Mordecai T. Endicott, a brother of Dr. Endicott, of this city, has been appointed chief of the bureau of yards and docks and the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The appointee is an expert civil engineer and has been in the Government service for several years, where he has a creditable and honorable record—that which won him the present responsible position with Uncle Sam. Mr. Endicott is well-known by many Plainfielders who will be pleased to hear of his advancement in the service.

THEATRICAL.

Ed. D. Mortaunt and an assistant are in this city making views of local street scenes for the moving picture outfit carried by Waite's Company which appear here next week at Music Hall.

Several years ago "The Lost Paradise" was produced in our city by a Frohman company, and was the hit of the season, being played to the largest and most fashionable audience of that year. Monday evening this play will be given, with more scenery, finer scenery, better effects, and the best stock company now traveling, at prices of 10, 20 and 30 cents. Waite's comedy company and grand orchestra, is the company, and is too well known in Plainfield to need further comment.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Westfield, March 24.—Burglars forced an entrance to the residence of Mr. Webb, on Dudley avenue, last Sunday morning. Mrs. Webb was awakened by the sound of falling glass in the cellar and aroused the other members of the family. The intruders made a hasty escape before an attempt could be made to effect their capture. An investigation showed that the lattice work about the bottom of the piazza had been torn away and the burglars had entered through a cellar window. The hinges of the window had broken and the sash had fallen to the cellar floor, causing the noise which awoke the family. The intruders made their escape through the cellar door, unlocking it from the inside. They carried away a box of imported cigars which Mr. Webb had brought home the night before and placed upon a swinging shelf in the cellar.

Bishop Scarborough was present at St. Paul's church last evening and administered the confirmation rites to a classs of 18 communicants. WORK OF BAPTISTS.

by its secretary, T. A. Cuming. It showed the Sunday-school to be in a prosperous condition, with a membership of 172, a net gain of 11 over last year. The financial condition was good, nearly $200 having been devoted to benevolences. The rest of the expenses amounted to about $200 and a small balance was left.

The work of the Christian Endeavor Society, especially in sending flowers to the slum missions in New York, was described in the report from the society presented by the secretary, Miss Myra Bunyon.

Excellent reports were made from the other auxilliary societies of the church, telling of the work accomplished and that each had devoted a goodly amount to the work. These reports were as follows: Women's Home Mission Circle by Miss Emma V. Fish, Women's Foreign Mission Circle by Mrs. A. W. Rand, Whatsoever Circle King's Daughters by Miss Margaret Rand, and Ladies' Aid Society by Mrs. C. A. Haynes.

The report of the visiting committee was made by Mrs. W. A. Freeman, chairman, and the report of the social committee by its chairman, Mrs. J. W. Johnson. The report of the deacon's fellowship fund was made by T. I. Bunyon, who also gave a report of the state of the church register. The membership of the church is now 278, a net increase of the year of 12.

The election of officers was held and resulted as follows: Clerk, T. A. Cuming; treasurer, E. Fenton Haynes; deacons, for two years, C. A. Haynes and W. M. Tallman. The committees for the year were appointed by the pastor.

INSTRUCTIONS IN TAXIDERMY.

Preparing Wings and Feathers and the Skins of Birds.

Now that feathers and wings are used to such an extent for the decoration of hats and bonnets, and as these articles are quite expensive, it would be a great boon to many women to prepare their own wings, which can be easily done with the exercise of a little skill. The outfit necessary for the handling of wings, tails and parts of the skins of birds is very simple. A rather sharp ordinary pocket-knife, a little arsenic, as sold by druggists; some cotton batting; a piece of silk or muslin and a strong needle and thread. When using arsenic care must be taken that there are no cuts or hangnails on the hand, and that it is out of reach of the children.

Quite a number of our common birds have exquisite coloring in their plumage. The blue tint can be found in the indigo finch, the blue jay, the blue bird, and the blue-winged teal. Then there are birds with the green and purple coloring, which are quite rare, however, the black bird being the most common. Then we have the white wings of the domestic poultry and pigeons, a number of the latter having a blue garb which is often used. The goldfinch, the yellow warbler and meadow lark furnish us with yellow. The plumage of water fowl stand the weather much better than those of the land.

To prepare the wings and tail of a pigeon for further use it is necessary to chop off the wings close to the body, and cut off the tail, taking with it the candle-vertebrae. After spreading out a wing it will be seen that a few small feathers are directly over the muscle. These should be plucked out above the muscle, and then with a sharp knife the skin should be cut from the end of the muscles to where the wing was chopped off. Cut out as much flesh as possible, taking care not to injure the other side of the wing. Then put the arsenic into every corner under the skin until the exposed surface is completely covered. Put a piece of batting into the excavation made and cover this neatly with a bit of silk and sew the patch to the skin. To dry these wings all that is necessary is a large book between which they should be placed, under a heavy weight, for two or three weeks.

The breasts of ducks, gulls and many water fowls are beautiful. A sharp knife is necessary for this work. Begin at the neck just above the portion you desire to save, and carefully cut the skin. Do not cut any deeper than just through the skin, and keep the feathers parted by use of the left hand. Cut straight along the bird's side until near the lower end of the breast bone. Be careful not to go beyond the breast bone. Now slit across the neck and repeat the operation on the other side of the bird, and the skin is then ready to peel off. The skin should be slightly pushed, but not pulled as that is apt to stretch it. After the skin is free slit across from the inner side and the worst of the work is over.

Trim off any ragged pieces you do not want on the fleshy side of the breast and apply a quantity of arsenic, rubbing it in until the skin becomes dry. As there is a quantity of oil in all water fowls it is a good plan to apply a piece of blotting paper to the fleshy side over the arsenic, then the batting and lastly sew on the covering of silk neatly and to the proper size.

It is well to dry the breast in its natural shape, therefore the book would not do. A piece of heavy pasteboard, covered with wadding would serve the purpose and on this the breast should be placed feather side up. Cover this with a clean piece of linen and fasten securely with a few pins. After a week or so the breast will be ready for use and will last an indefinable time.

To Make Good Coffee.

It is a little curious that the most expert authorities, almost without exception, fell back upon the old-fashioned coffee-pot as the one which, properly looked after, produces the best coffee. The reason this is not true in the average kitchen is because the qualification mentioned is not carefully observed. One mistress insists not only that the inside of the coffee-pot shall be clean, but that it shall be polished—this not because she cares for the polish, but because in this way the absolute cleanliness of the interior is insured. The deposit of sediment from many coffee-makings finally effects the flavor of all brews made in the pot. Care, too, should be taken to keep the inside of the tea-kettle free from deposit, and with pure, freshly boiled water, a good grade of coffee, the fourth of a whole egg—shell and all—with five-minute boiling, and prompt service at the table, the old-fashioned pot, be it of tin, copper, britannia, agate, or what not, is still the peer of any in the long list of special coffee-pots to be found in any housefurnishing shop.

The Russian Stove.

The stove is the principal furniture of a Russian cottage, it fills a third of the interior of the principal room, being built of blick and plaster, flat on the top. During the day it is used for cooking and drying clothes, and at night it is the family bed, on which all the inmates sleep in a heap, pell mell.

Ourselves and Others.

Every girl is ready to give in a long catalogue of those virtues and good qualities she expects to find in the person of a friend; but very few of us are careful to cultivate them in ourselves.

FUR GALORE ON ALL MATERIALS.

The Soft, Clinging, Graceful Effect in Skirts Very Evident.

(By special arrangement with the N. Y. Sun)

Fur is worn on every kind of material this season, and is no small item on the list of fashion's favorites. It is more fashionable even than it was last year, and the woman who does not possess some kind of fur-trimmed or all-fur garment this season is the exception. Coats, capes, and hats are trimmed with fur, and in gowns it does not seem to matter how rich and heavy or how gauzy and sheer the material may be, fur is an equally suitable decoration from fashion's standpoint. Sable, fox, Persian lamb, chinchilla and broadtail are the most popular furs for trimming, the last being very prettily used in wide bands cut out in some odd-pointed design on either edge and outlined with a fine silk cord or braid. Two bands of this description, fully seven inches wide from point to point, arranged around the hips, pointing down in front, apron fashion, are very stylish on a green cloth gown. This fur is so thin and pliable that it can be used as a substitute for velvet and silk, and entire blouse waists are made of it.

The close Eton jackets of fur worn last year are brought quite up to date by using the sleeves for a blouse front, and putting in velvet or cloth sleeves to match the skirt. Velvet jackets of this sort, with fur revers, are very stylish, and one of the latest novelties is the little collarette of light-colored velvet, with a bow at the back and front, which is worn with the fur capes.

Nothing is more evident in the fashions than the soft, clinging, graceful effects, and the really fashionable woman is chiefly known by the cut of her skirt and the trimming thereon. Just which model leads in favor is difficult to determine, but the up-to-date dressmaker usually settles that question by considering the material and the figure she has to fit.

Black satin finely tucked makes very pretty belts to wear with separate waists. Fasted them with a fancy buckle or a knot of satin.

A flowered silk gown can be brought up to date with a velvet blouse waist of some dark color in the silk. The sleeves may be of silk, and with a gulmpe neck of lace the effect is very pretty. If the velvet bodice is black rows of velvet ribbon on the skirt are an improvement

A LITTLE BOY'S LAMENT

I'm going back down to grandpa's,
I won't come back no more
To hear the remarks about my feet
A-muddyin' up the floor.
They's too much said about my clothes,
The scoldin's never done—
I'm goin' back down to grandpa's,
Where a boy kin hev some fun.

I dug up half his garden
A-gittin' worms fer bait;
He said he used to like it
When I laid abed so late;
He said that pie was good fer boys,
An' candy made 'em grow.
Ef I can't go to grandpa's
I'll turn pirate first you know.

He let me take his shotgun,
An' loaded it fer me
The cats they hid out in the barn,
The hens flew up a tree.
I had a circus in the yard
With twenty other boys—
I'm goin back to grandpa's
Where they ain't afraid of noise.

He didn't make me comb my hair
But once or twice a week;
He wasn't watchin' out fer words
I didn't orter speak;
He told me stories 'bout the war
And Injuns shoot out West.
Oh, I'm goin' down to grandpa's
Fer he knows wot boys like best.

He even run a race with me,
But had to stop an' cough;
He rode my bicycle and laughed
Bec'us' he tumbled off;
He knew the early apple trees
Around within a mile.
Oh, grandpa was a dandy,
An' was "in it" all the while.

I bet you grandpa's lonesome,
I don't care what you say;
I seen him kinder cryin'
When you took me away.
When you talk to me of heaven,
Where all the good folks go,
I guess I'll go to grandpa's,
An' we'll have good times, I know.

The Peacock at Home.

The ears of insects are found in very peculiar places. We are so accustomed to think of the ear as an organ of the head that to find it is sometimes located in hind legs or behind wings is decidedly queer.

In the majority of insects the ear is found in their antennae or feelers, but in some of the most common insects it is found in more surprising places.

In grasshoppers and crickets the ears are situated in the anterior pair of legs. If the hind legs of a grasshopper be examined, two (one before and one behind) shining, oval, membranous disks, surrounded by a marginal ridge, will be at once observed. These are the tympana or ear-drums of the ear of that leg. Where the trachea or air tube enters the leg it becomes enlarged and divides into two channels; these two channels unite again lower down in the shaft of the tibia.

The trachae of silent grasshoppers are much smaller than those of sound-producing grasshoppers. In grasshoppers and crickets the ear drums lie bathed in air on both sides—the open air on the external side and the air of the air tube or trachae on the inside.

The ears of common horse flies, and of most of other flies, are situated behind the wings. This peculiarity is most easily studied in the horsefly.

Immediately behind the wings of flies two curious knobbed organs are to be observed. These are now recognized to be organs of hearing.

They are also organs of balancing or equilibration, and in this respect serve a similar purpose to the ears of man. Any derangement or disease of these canals interferes with equilibration.

If the balancers of a horsefly be removed, the insect at once loses its equilibrium; it cannot direct its flight, but plunges headlong to the ground.—New York Journal.

Queer Places for Ears of Insects.

The real home of the peacock or peafowl is in India. There they were and are hunted, and their flesh is used for food. As these birds live in the same region as the tiger, peacock hunting is a very dangerous sport.

The long train of the peacock is not its tail, as many suppose, but is composed of feathers which grow out just above the tail, and are called the tail coverts.

Peacocks have been known for many hundred years. They are mentioned in the Bible: Job mentions them, and they are mentioned, too, in I Kings, x. Hundreds of years ago, in Rome, many thousand peacocks were killed for the great feasts which the emperor made. The brains of the peacock were considered a great treat, and many had to be killed for a single feast.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And stil what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

THE COLORED NUNS.

THE ONLY ORDER IN AMERICA IS AT NEW ORLEANS.

Founded Over Half a Century Ago—The Special Object of Its Institution—The Convent's Orphan Asylum—Over a Hundred Children Are Sheltered There.

In the old French quarter of New Orleans, with is narrow streets, latticed windows and jealously guarded courts, where the fig and orange trees grow, is a square of rather miscellaneous architecture. Its central building, 717 Orleans street, is several hundred years old. It has a stately entrance, with great pillars and old fashioned, ornately carved doors. It was once the old Creole Opera House and ballroom of the early days. Now it is the home of the colored nuns.

The powdered and ringleted damsels with hoop distended skirts who stepped daintily across that threshold to scenes of gayety in bygone years have given place to dark robed figures whose white ruffled caps only bring into stronger relief the bronze and ebony of their skins. The very names of the streets here are rich in history and romance. There are Orleans and Bourbon, Chartres and—him of the iron hand and gentle heart—Tonty. Shades of the past are jostling one another, though in a gentle, shadelike way, at every street corner, and at nothing do they seem to be more astonished than at the sight of the colored nuns.

Yet the order is not such a very modern one after all, for it was founded in New Orleans over half a century ago. Its members are now well known figures on the streets of the Crescent City. The special object of its institution was the education and moral training of young colored girls and the care of orphans and aged infirm people of the race. It has had the cordial support of such eminent churchmen as Archbishops Blane, Odin, Perche, Leroy and Janssens, who successively filled the archepiscopal see of New Orleans. It was also a novitiate where young colored girls are trained for the work of the order with the view of extending that work to every parish in Louisiana and if possible into every southern state.

One of the most interesting parts of the convent is the orphan asylum, where children ranging in age from the wee tots just beginning to walk to girls of 13 and 14 years are cared for. One of the sisters in charge of the babies was an ex-slave. She is a real "mammy" still.

"But, reverend mother, you seem to have some white children here," said the northern visitor, commenting on the fair white skin of some of the children.

"Oh, no!" said the nun, smiling a bit wistfully at the ignorance of her visitor. "They all have colored blood in their veins. Maybe they are only quadroons, octoroons. Some of them, indeed, have only one-tenth colored blood, but that one-tenth black counts more than the nine-tenths white and makes them belong forever to the colored people."

One is reminded of some of Cable's stories, the pathos and the tragedy thereof.

In the orphan asylum 135 children are sheltered who would otherwise be thrown upon the state. These as well as the 60 poor old colored men and women and many of the children in the school are dependent upon the sisters for their daily bread. Formerly the sisters obtained a fair revenue by going through the streets of New Orleans, from door to door and into business houses and railroad offices, soliciting alms for their charges. So quietly did they labor that few outside the city were even aware of the existence of the order, the only colored sisterhood in the United States. But the yellow fever which broke out in the south in August caused that section to be hemmed in by quarantine, and the wheels of commerce were stopped. As a pathetic letter recently received from one of the sisters says: "Our friends have always been among the poor laboring classes, who seem to feel most for us, and since this class has suffered particularly through lack of employment for three months and their distress at present is almost as great as ours, we cannot in conscience apply to them for aid. Even if we did, it would not be forthcoming, as they have not the means."—St. Louis Republic.

A Church For "Rest and Meditation."

The Church of the Ascension, which stands in Hyde park, a little west of the Marble arch, in London, is said to be one of the most beautiful sights in that great city. This church will never be used for service, but for "rest and meditation," as a notice inviting wayfarers to enter announces. The floor is tesselated and the walls covered with paintings, no plain stone being visible. The panels which are painted contain representations of Scriptural characters, saints and emblematical sketches. The north end is raised, and here, as in many Roman Catholic churches—unlike Anglican—will be the chancel, the marble steps to which will afford a kneeling place for worshipers. This church, not yet finished, is being built by Mrs. Russell Gurney, wife of the late recorder of London.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Baneful Reading.

Never were books so cheap, magazines and newspapers so plentiful. The age of print is surely in its zenith. There must be readers for all the vast output of reading matter, and since an education or a pretense of one is the current idea of civic virtue the "literary" demand is equal to the supply. Every callow rustic and urbanite is forced to cultivate an appetite for printed words. Such a poor training as the average youngster can get does not help him to appreciate higher literature. There is plenty of matter easier for the human animal's comprehension.—Catholic Standard and Times.

LETTERS TO THE POPE.

Rigid Forms of Etiquette to Be Observed in Writing to Him.

The Roman correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt informs his readers of the proper way of writing to the pope and the etiquette to be observed. In the first place, the paper used for the communication should be of a special kind—made for the purpose in Fabriano—the "carta palomba." The text should be written in the best Latin, and the form of address should be "Beatissime Pater" (Most Blessed Father). The usual address—that is, that put on the outside of letters not intended for the pope to read personally—should be, "Sanctitati Suæ Leoni Papæ XIII feliciter regnanti" (His Holiness Pope Leo XIII, reigning happily). The certain methods of sending the letter to its address, however, are two in number. The first, absolutely trustworthy, is to hand the letter to a diplomat accredited from some foreign country to the papal court, who will hand it himself to the pope, or the writer can give it to some person belonging to the pope's household, a gentleman of the chamber or a monsignore. Easier, but less trustworthy, is it if one addresses the outer envelope to go through the mail as previously directed.

It is to be observed that in Italy letters for the pope require no postage. On a second envelope, to go inside, these words may be written, which will act like a charm, "A Sua Santita il Papa, Prefetto della Santa Inquisizione Romana e Universale" (to His Holiness the Pope, Prefect of the Holy Roman and General Inquisition). The pope since the time of Paul IV has been the special head of the Inquisition tribunal. Letters so addressed must be delivered to the pope himself immediately on pain of excommunication. To be sure, the pope only opens the envelope and hands the letter to his secretary of state to read.

A NOTABLE VISITOR.

Johann Baptiste, Mandarin of China and Roman Catholic Bishop of Shangtung.

An interesting personage who visited Philadelphia recently was Johann Baptiste, Baron von Auzer, mandarin of China, Roman Catholic bishop of South Shangtung and superior of the two missionaries Henlen and Nice, who were murdered in that province by the heathen some years ago. Bishop Baptiste was the guest of Archbishop Ryan in the morning, visited the priests' house of St. Bonaventure's church, 2831 Hutchinson street, in the afternoon and attended service at St. Bonaventure's in evening.

Bishop Baptiste was born in Bavaria 46 years ago. He is a typical German baron and speaks English with difficulty, but there is nothing in his appearance to suggest his life and work in the Chinese empire. He wears a small chin beard and mustache and has long hair and a florid complexion. A private secretary accompanies him on his travels.

The bishop began his work in China in 1879 and was engaged near Peking for four years. In 1883 he became an assistant to the bishop of Shangtung, and two years later took charge of a new diocese established for him under the name of South Shangtung. The population has been a very disorderly one, as was shown by the massacre of the Roman Catholic priests there, for which outrage Emperor William of Germany sent warships to China and demanded satisfaction. The result was that China agreed to the terms, paying an indemnity of $200,000 and agreeing to the erection of six new Catholic churches and homes for priests in China.—Philadelphia Press.

GENEROUS FATHER SALTER.

He Declined a Purse and Gave His Salary to the Church.

The Rev. J. B. Salter, rector of the Roman Catholic church of the Immaculate Conception in Tuckahoe, N. Y., has sacrificed his salary of $1,000 and applied it to the church in order that the burden should not fall on members of his congregation impoverished by the continued suspension of work in the marble quarries.

This is Father Salter's silver jubilee year, and, learning recently that some of his admirers were securing funds to give him a purse, he spoke from the altar after mass and told his hearers that in view of the hardships many of them had been enforced to undergo he would absolutely decline to accept any gift of money drawn from their scanty means. He thanked the congregation for their generosity, and in closing announced that he would give his salary for the year to pay the mortgage on the church.—New York Sun.

Orders Obeyed Quickly.

An illustration of the generalship of the Jesuit order was shown in Omaha recently. It is known that the members of the Society of Jesus are bound by oath to go to the ends of the earth, if need be, at the command of the general of the order, but just how quickly and implicitly these commands are obeyed is not so well understood. There was an exemplification of this at the house in Omaha a few weeks ago. Father Meuffels, the pastor of St. John's church, has been quite a favorite with the congregation, and especially with the children. One day he unexpectedly received notice to hand over the church to his successor and proceed to Honduras. Within 24 hours of the time the order was received he had left Omaha and was on his way to his new field of work.—Omaha World-Herald.

A Scrubbing Service.

The vicar of St. Lawrence's church, Birmingham, recently announced a "scrubbing service" and invited the congregation to assist in the work. Soap, water and scrubbers were provided. The service lasted from 3 o'clock until 9:30, by which time the interior of the church presented a glossy and shining appearance.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Roll-call showed all members present except Freeholders King and Ogden.

The clerk read the following call for the meeting:

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 10, 1898.

S. Rusling Ryno, Esq., Clerk of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, Union County, N. J.:

Sir—You are hereby directed to call a special meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders Thursday February 17, 1898, at 2:30 p. m., to consider a bill that has been introduced in the Legislature that affects the interests of Union county.

J. F. Hubbard, Director.

The clerk then read in full a bill recently introduced in the Legislature, entitled "Assembly, No. 125—An act to authorize Boards of Chosen Freeholders to widen, straighten, grade and otherwise improve highways under their control, and to provide for the construction of street railroads thereon."

By request. Frank Bergen, Esq., addressed the Board in explanation of the provisions of the bill, after which considerable discussion ensued.

Freeholders Roll and Robison objected to the approval of said bill, expressing their belief that the interest of townships and property owners were not sufficiently protected.

Freeholder Farrell spoke in support of the bill.

Freeholder Miller moved that this Board do approve the bill as read and that the Legislature be requested to pass it.

The motion was adopted by the following vote, viz.:

Ayes—Director Hubbard, Freeholders Brucklacher, Burnett, Clark, Ehrlich, Farrell, Hulskamper, Krouse, Littell, Miller, Roll, Swain, Tier, Wahl—14.

Nays—Freeholder Robison—1.

Absent—Freeholders King, Ogden—2.

On motion the clerk was directed to notify the members of the Legislature from this county of the action taken by this Board.

Freeholder Miller moved to adjourn, which was carried, and the Director thereupon declared the Board adjourned. S. RUSLING RYNO, Clerk.

The minutes of special meeting of Feb. 17th were on motion approved as read.

By the Committee on Legal Questions:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen: Your committee to settle with the county collector respectfully report that they have examined his books, showing his receipts and disbursements, together with his vouchers, bonds and coupons paid, and bank books, and we find the same agree and are correct in every particular.

His total receipts from the beginning of the fiscal year to February 18, 1898, were $562,143.46; disbursements, $430,676.51; balance in banks, $71,466.95.

George W. Littell, Henry Krouse, Benjamin King, Committee.

Feb. 18, 1898.

On motion of Freeholder Clark received and placed on file.

NEW BUSINESS.

By Freeholder Clark:

Resolved, That the bill of Wm. T. Kirk, amount $198, balance for iron work on Willow Grove bridge, at Westfield, be paid when approved by the committee.

Freeholder Miller moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Freeholder Farrell the clerk was directed to communicate with Mr. John Behill, the contractor who macadamized St. George's avenue, at Rahway, from Hazlewood avenue to the Middlesex county line, and call his attention to the present unsatisfactory condition of said road, requesting also that he give the matter his immediate attention:

The following bill was read:

February 28, 1898.

County of Union
To Lawrence Flood, Dr.

Nov. 11, 1897. To carraige and harness destroyed in ditch left unprotected on above night on corner of Morris and Passaic avenues, Summit, $35.

Freeholder Swain explained that on the night mentioned, by reason of heavy rains, a bridge located on Morris and Passaic avenues had been partly undermined, and had caved in.

Mr. Flood, in attempting to drive over said bridge on the night in question, had been damaged as charged in his bill.

Freeholder Swain thought that the bill was a just one.

After some discussion, on motion of Freeholder Littell, the matter was referred to the Committee on Legal Questions and county attorney, they to make an examination of the locality mentioned.

The following bills, audited and approved, were read, and on roll-call ordered paid, viz.:

SPORTS

CYCLING COMMENT.

A meeting will be held at Orange, this evening, when the representatives of the different Y. M. C. A.'s of this district will reorganize the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League, of Northern New Jersey. The league has been kept up for the last three years and has proved very successful. There promises to be a lively time at the meeting this evening. Plainfield does not want Paterson and Passaic in the league as the are too far away to be reached from this city in an evening without riding all night. Orange is anxious that they should remain and the fight may result in a split and the formation of two leagues.

Last Saturday the Eldridge Cycle Co. broke the record for this year thus far. Between the hours of 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 9:30 in the evening, 23 Eldridge wheels were sold and delivered. Among the purchasers was Dr. Bedford, of Lafayette place.

The last few days of rainy weather put a sudden stop to the big trade in bicycles that so overwhelmed most of the local dealers. There were several wheels sold in the last two days, but few felt like buying when such a rainstorm was in progress.

Edward Martin, the colored porter at the North Aaenue station, is quite a scorcher when he ventures out on the road on a wheel. Mounted on his new Eldridge he is now quite a speedy rider.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., of West End Park, has received his new Spalding wheel, which he purchased from W. H. Rogers.

AROUND THE BASES.

It seems probable that the New Jersey Military Academy will not place a baseball team in the field this spring after all. The team was entered in the league of the New Jersey Interscholastic Association, but will now probably be withdrawn. The reason for the change is that there is not sufficient material to support a baseball team and a track team also, and the boys favor the latter.

At a meeting of the candidates for the nine of the Plainfield High School, Arthur Lederer was chosen captain.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The candidates for the track team of the New Jersey Military Academy are now out practising under the charge of George Proctor Smith, captain of the track team. There is considerable untried material that it is thought will develop into excellent athletes. They will be entered in some of the indoor meets in New York to try their ability.

The athletic and gymnastic contest at the Y. M. C. A. will be continued tonight. There will be two more Thursday evening after tonight in which the contest will be held. The medals for it are very handsome.

BASKET BALL.

There will be a basket ball game tomorrow afternoon between the girls of the Junior and Third classes of the Plainfield High School. The game will be played in the Whittier building.

THE NEW BATTLESHIPS.

The Kearsage Sent into the Water at 10:02 This Morning—The Kentucky.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newport News, Va., March 24.—The new battleship Kearsage was successfully launched at 10:02 o'clock this morning. The battleship Kentucky was to be launched immediately afterward.

Spends Too Much Money for Drinks.

Hans Schuetz, a German matmaker living in this city, partook too freely of the wine while it was red, last evening, and Patrolman McCarty landed him in a cell in the city jail. This morning, Schultz was arraigned before the City Judge and was given fifteen days in the county jail. He has a wife and several children. He is said to spend all the money he earns by making mats in buying rum.

Warning to Shipping.

Washington, March 24.—It is understood that the Treasury Department has sent to numerous firms and persons interested in shipping warnings of the gravity of the situation, so that they may be prepared for any outbreak or interference with their vessels and American commerce generally.

Sagasta Shows Spain's Policy.

Madrid, March 24.—Senor Sagasta, the Premier, is quoted in an interview as saying: "The government entirely approves of Captain-General Blanco's conduct in denying that the Maine's magazines were blown up with dynamite as the Americans have alleged."

Trying to Avert War.

London, March 24.—The Washington correspondent of the Daily News says that President McKinley declared to a recent visitor at the White House: "I believe that there will be no war, and I am determined to prevent it, if possible, by all the means in my power."

Dogs for the Klondike.

New York, March 24.—The British Queen, which arrived yesterday from Antwerp, brought thirteen Belgian dogs intended for service in the Klondike.

GALBRAITH & WALSH DISSOLVE.

Plumbing Business Will Go Into Former's Hands After April 1st.

The firm of Galbraith & Walsh, conducting a plumbing, heating and ventilating business at 193 North avenue, will be dissolved April 1st. Mr. Walsh will retire from the business, and Mr. Galbraith will continue the business at the above place.

This firm have executed some of the best work in their line ever done in Plainfield and surrounding towns, including the Mountain Park Inn, the new Lincoln School, the plumbing and ventilating of which has been so highly commented upon by the plumbing and ventilating trade periodicals; also the Washington and Irving schools, besides a great many handsome residences. They have just completed the country house, "Lockwood," of Judge H. P. Steele, of New York, situated on Park avenue.

Mr. Galbraith will continue the business at the present place, 193 North avenue.

Mr. Galbraith is one of Plainfield's most enterprising, rising young business men, and is considered one of the best practical men in the plumbing and heating business, and patentee of several articles used extensively by the trade.

Funeral of the Late Elijah A. Stites.

The funeral services of the late Elijah A. Stites were held yesterday afternoon from the house on Chatham street. There was a large attendance of friends, including the members of the Carpenters and Joiners' Union, of which Mr. Stites was a member. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated and spoke kindly words concerning the departed. The floral tributes were beautiful and impressive. During the service Elmer E. Runyon sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul." Interment was at Hillside cemetery, and those from the Carpenters' Union, who acted as bearers, were A. Vail, S. Smalley, F. Pasch, W. Lunger, P. VanFleet and D. A. Mills.

Told of a Great Convention.

W. D. Murray and Councilman F. H. Andrews, who spoke last evening in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church about the great atudent volunteer convention, recently held at Cleveland, O., commanded the closest attention of their hearers, and all present were spiritually refreshed by their earnest words for the cause of Christ and the spread of the Gospel in foreign lands. An offering was made at the close of the meeting and the amount received was given to the treasurer of the student volunteer movement for foreign missions.

Resolutions.

Whereas, The Almighty Father has called to Himself our esteemed brother, Elijah Stites by death, be it,

Resolved, That we as brother members of Local Union, No. 155, Carpenters and Joiners, of Plainfield, extend to his grief stricken family in their deep sorrow our heartfelt sympathy, and that a copy of this preamble and resolutions be forwarded to the family.

A. R. Vail,
S. S. Smalley,
W. W. Harris,
Committee.

Taken to the Asylum.

Louis Sprague, of Howard street, mention of whom was made yesterday, was taken to the insane asylum at Trenton this afternoon by Chief Marshal Wilson. The latter went to Somerville this morning and secured the necessary papers for the transfer. Mr. Sprague has been declared to be of an unsound mind, hence the above action.

Dr. Yerkes Taken With a Fainting Spell.

Yesterday afternoon while Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes was officiating at the funeral services of the late Elijah Stites, he was taken suddenly ill with a fainting spell and was obliged to leave the house. He was taken home and Dr. Probasco called. The illness was nothing serious and today Dr. Yerkes is much better.

A Serious Charge.

Michael Wolff, of this city, was arrested this morning by Detectives Moffett and Jones of the Newark police department, on a serious charge. The warrant was indorsed by Justice Moffett. Wolff was taken to Newark, this noon, to answer to the charge.

Cack at Liberty.

"Cack" Carter breathed the free air once more last evening. He was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza late yesterday afternoon and released after giving $500 for his appearance at trial Monday morning.

A New Sexton.

Peter Young, sexton of Trinity Reformed church, has resigned his position, to take effect April 1st. The wardens have engaged Henry Seader, on trial.

—Sebring, the clothier, is receiving a large assortment of trouserings and suitings for the Easter trade.

—Scheuer says there is a reason for everything and, therefore, he tells you how it is that he can sell groceries and meats so cheap, and besides he quotes the prices.

—A cake and candy sale will be held at the free reading rooms of the Young Women's Club, 434 Watchung avenue, corner of Fifth street, Saturday afternoon and evening.

ROOSTERS HAVE TOO MUCH SWAY HERE.

That is How One Man Accounts for Empty Houses.

SLAP AT COMMUTER POWER.

ANOTHER WRITER THINKS THAT LANDLORDS ARE TOO HARD.

"A Tax Payer" Attributes Hard Luck to Stringent Health and Building Ordinances and Not Adapted to a Place Like Plainfield—A Man Who Believes That the Town's Advantages Are Not Advertised Enough to the Outside World—Plainfield is Ahead of Many Other Towns.

The empty house question is a vital matter for Plainfield, and the interest that Press readers are showing in the matter is remarkable. Yesterday's mail brought a number of letters to the editor, telling how the condition could be remedied. Here are some of them:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The problem why we have so many empty houses is in my judgment easily explained. Our Board of Health and building ordinance are driving people away from our beautiful city, as the restrictions are too severe. We are supposed to live in the country, not in New York, and any ordinance that New York adopts Plainfield follows suit. We will have more empty houses. The quicker these "roosters" go back to New York and let Plainfield manage its own affairs the better off we will be and houses will rent and we will prosper. A Taxpayer.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—While Plainfield possesses great advantages as a residential place and has all that nature and the artifices of man can contribute to make it healthy, pleasant and advantageous as a city of homes, how can we expect others to know it unless we let them know of all these advantages. It is like a man with an established article, which if not kept before the public in this progressive age, will sooner or later lose its hold and be surplanted by something new. No one can appreciate this fact more than by looking over the advertising columns of the metropolitan press, when they will see the various suburban towns (new and old) being brought before the people, outside of their respective localities, through this means. Plainfield is surely far ahead of most suburban towns if not all.

An Interested Observer.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Perceiving in your issue of tonight's Press the question why are so many houses empty in Plainfield I could not help but to answer: In the first place, rents are exorbitant; second, landlords demand that the tenant does all the repairing at their own expense. Of course, it being very hard times and wages low families have to crowd themselves like sardines into a few rooms and cannot enjoy the comforts of life. It is no wonder on the other hand if rent were lower they could utilize more room.

One Who Had Experience.

PROMISED CHEAPER GAS.

Somerville Will Have a New Gas Plant With Greater Capacity.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, March 25th.—The controlling interest of the Somerset Lighting Company has been bought by the vice-president of the company, A. M. Young. Charles K. Knapp, who controlled $55,000 worth of the $100,000 of the capital stock, has sold out to the party named, and about $20,000 worth of other stock has been obtained. It is understood that Mr. Young represents the big corporation which now controls the lighting of Newark and many other cities.

What interests Somerville, Raritan and Bound Brook people most is that radical improvements are contemplated at once. A new plant for making gas by a much better and cheaper process is to be constructed. The company is negotiating for a site on the Central Railroad Company's land south of the freight station.

To Confer Order of the Temple.

This evening, at Easton, Hugh de Payne Commandery, Knights Templar, of that place, will confer the order of the temple in full costume. A large delegation from Plainfield will be in attendance to witness the conferring of that beautiful degree.

This purpose will stimulate trade among our contractors and material men in these towns.

SOCIETY AT PARK CLUB.

A PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY LOCAL TALENT.

Mrs. Frank J. Smith Reads Both Serious and Humorous Readings With Great Effect—The Other Entertainers.

One of the most successful entertainments of the season was held at the Park Club last evening. It was for the edification of the members and their friends and was largely attended by them. The little hall at the clubhouse was packed to its limit by an appreciative audience.

Mrs. Frank J. Smith, the well-known reader, was one of the entertainers. She had a complete list of new selections that proved very effective. Several of her selections were dialect pieces. Her manner of giving her humorous selections was irresistably funny and provoked much mirth among the audience. She gave the serious readings with equal success.

Mrs. William L. Saunders gave several soprano solos that were well received. Her choice of selections were very good. She was accompanied by Frank J. Smith.

Very enthusiastic was the reception of Fletcher Hallock. Always a favorite at the Park Club, he appeared at his best last evening. He gave banjo and mouthophone solos and played some of the latest pieces. He also sang a popular selection. He was accompanied by Mrs. E. T. Douglass. Through a misunderstanding, it was not understood that she was to accompany him until the last moment. Although she had had no practice, her accompaniments were all that could be wished.

Contracts for Street Work.

A meeting of the street committee was held last evening. Bids for supplying the city with crushed stone were received and opened. The bid of Smalley Brothers was the lowest and will be submitted to the Council for approval. A. Kane was the lowest bidder for the building of culverts and crosswalks. His bid will also be acted upon at the next meeting of the Common Council.

Denny's Head Did Not Break It.

Dennis Kane wants The Daily Press to state that the News showed its utter disregard for the truth when it stated that he broke the glass fronts to a door at the Stillman building by striking his head against it. The truth of the matter was that Kane happened to be in the room when the door was blown to by the wind with such force as to shatter the glass in it.

New Organist Engaged.

At a meeting of the music committee of the First Presbyterian church, held last night, it was decided to secure the services of the well-known composer and organist, Frederick Schilling, for the coming year.

W. D. Murray to Speak.

The monthly missionary meeting will be held at Warren chapel this evening. W. D. Murray will speak on the recent convention of the student volunteers at Cleveland, Ohio. All are welcome.

Councilman Wm. N. Runyon, of East Ninth street, fell a few days ago and sprained his ankle to such an extent that it causes him to limb considerable.

TRADING STAMPS NOT HONORED AT PRESENT

Both Companies Close Their Stores in Plainfield.

DUE TO THE LEGISLATURE.

STAMP PEOPLE ADVISE ALL TO HOLD THEIR COUPONS.

Those Who Called at the Local Branches To Secure the Premiums for Their Books Found the Doors Shut—Coupon Holders are Distrustful of the Future—If the Bill Becomes a Law the Stamp People Will Carry the Question Into the Supreme Court for Decision as to its Constitutionality.

The fact that the anti-trading stamp bill was passed by the Assembly at Trenton yesterday, and is now awaiting the signature of Governor Voorhees, was the reason why the local store of the Newark Trading Stamp Company closed its doors this morning and posted a notice that they would remain so temporarily.

A representative of the company was interviewed by a Press reporter this morning, and he said that he would advise all people holding their stamps to keep them, for there is no doubt but what the stamps will be redeemed.

Many people called at their place of business this morning and of course showed signs of distrust. The company does not, however, desire to show any hostility against the law and will await further developments.

If the bill stands as a law the company will at once take their case into the Supreme Court and they are now ready to do so.

The Merchants Exchange store was closed today noon and that company will also await further developments. So far as is generally known the merchants about town are still giving stamps to their customers.

Many stamp holders are prone to criticise the companies for closing their stores until the Governor signs the bill, if he does. They claim that the companies have a perfect right to honor all books presented until that time as much so as they have heretofore. The more emphatic insist that the companies are duty and legally bound to do so until the law actually prevents them, which is not the case now.

HOW IS THIS FOR HIGH?

A Matrimonial Climax That Shows the Ways of Cupid.

The Westfield correspondent of the Elizabeth Journal says:

Miss Maggie Loughlin, the young lady who for a long time past has had charge of Voehl's bakery, has left her position and will shortly be married.

Her position at the bakery has been secured by Miss Ella McVay, also of Plainfield.

The story of Cupid's prank in this instance is peculiar. Anthony Martel, a machinist in the employ of the Pond Tool Works at Plainfield, at one time was engaged to Miss McVay, who was then a cashier in a Plainfield grocery store. For some reason the engagement was broken.

Anthony Martel still worked at his trade at Plainfield, but Miss McVay lost her position, after which she stayed at home and took care of her mother.

Anthony Martel met Miss Loughlin, and they became engaged, greatly to the surprise of their many friends, who have just become acquainted with the fact.

According to the above arrangement, Miss Loughlin secures the husband, while Miss McVay occupies the position of her former lover's intended wife at the bakery.

The wedding of Anthony Martel and Miss Loughlin will take place Easter Sunday at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church at Plainfield.

Republican Delegates.

Former Assemblyman W. R. Codington, chairman of the city executive committee of the G. O. P., has appointed the committee to represent Plainfield at the gathering of the Republican league clubs at Trenton Thursday. The committee is composed of J. B. Coward from the First ward, W. H. Drayton from the Second ward, E. R. Ackerman from the Third ward and W. A. Westphal and Wm. Newcorn from the Fourth ward, and also the chairman.

Councilman Frost to Go to Europe.

George H. Frost, former councilman, has rented his house on Watchung avenue, through the agency of Mulford & Son., to J. M. Dryden, of West Seventh street, for two years. Mr. Frost and his family will take up their residence in London. They will also travel considerably.

LEGISLATIVE WHEELS TURN OUT NEW LAWS

Bergen County Trolley Plan Will Go to the Governor.

END OF TRADING STAMPS.

APPOINTMENTS MADE BY THE GOVERNOR LAST NIGHT.

The Bill Prohibiting Trading Stamps was Passed in a Hurry by the Assembly—One Union County Assemblyman Voted Against It—John K. Large, of Plainfield, Failed to Get an Appointment on the State Board of Arbitration—Senate Bill No. 200, One of Senator Reed's Bills, was Passed.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 25.—The wheels of legislation have been fairly humming in making laws for the last two days in preparation of adjournment today, and in the grist ground out yesterday a number of measures were definitely acted upon which are of especial interest to Plainfield and Union county.

The most important measure passed by the Senate was the Bergen county trolley scheme, which empowers boards of freeholders to sell street railway franchises to the highest bidders. It will probably be signed by Governor Voorhees, though it is a well-known fact that the Governor before he was such acted as counsel for private interests to secure franchises in defiance of the Bergen project.

In the Assembly the trading stamp people were woefully chagrined when the bill prohibiting the traffic in stamps was passed on second reading without reference.

Mr. McKee attempted to amend the anti-trading-stamp bill on second reading, but all the amendments submitted were voted down. The bill was at once advanced to third reading, when it was opposed by Messrs. McKee and Huston. Mr. McKee said he opposed it because he believed it to be unconstitutional. The bill passed, 49 to 1—Mr. Huston—and a motion to reconsider was tabled.

Senate bill No. 200, one of Mr. Reed's health regulation bills, was passed.

Governor Voorhees sent to the Senate last night the following appointments:

Chief of Bureau of Labor Statistics, Wm. Stainsby, of Newark.

For members of the State Board of Arbitration, James Martin, of Hudson county; John W. Dent, of Somerset; James O. Smith, of Camden; William M. Doughty, of Cumberland, and Jacob VanHook, of Bergen.

It will be noticed that John K. Large, of Plainfield, chief detective of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, who was a candicate for a member on the State Board of Arbitration, failed to get the plum.

THE COUNTENANCE.

Mrs. Draper's Lecture on Practical Physiognomy.

Mrs. Clemence M. Draper's course of lectures on practical physiognomy, which have been delivered in the parlors of the Revere House, came to a close yesterday morning. This lecture was the most interesting of the four, as in it Mrs. Draper gave a complete description of the human countenance, its features, wrinkles, dimples, teeth, hair and skin, and the physical, mental and moral signs the scientific physiognomist reads in each. She also gave a description of the naturally thoroughbred person, the harmoniousness and high quality of whose make-up proclaims a healthy and refined ancestry. Many questions were asked at the close of the lecture by women who have become interested in the subject, and the usual personal readings were given. As a lecturer, Mrs. Draper is pleasant and easy in manner, and clear, logical and practical in presenting her subject.

Many Floral Tributes.

The funeral services of the late Carrie Lusardi, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lusardi, of North avenue, were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 from the house and at 3 o'clock from St. Mary's church. Rev. Father Smyth, pastor of the church, officiated. There was a very large attendance of friends of the departed who had learned to love her for her many pleasant ways. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, again evidencing the esteem held by her friends. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, and six girl friends of the departed acted as pallbearers. They were all attired in white dresses. The sight was very impressive.

—The annual meeting of the Congregational church will be held about the middle of April.

FAREWELL TO PASTOR IN JOY AND SADNESS.

Reception Given to Rev. H. J. Johnston Last Night.

HELD IN GRACE M.E.CHURCH

THE RETIRING MINISTER PRESENTED WITH A HANDSOME GIFT.

The Church Handsomely Decorated With Flowers and Permeated With an Air of Sociability—Early Part of the Evening Taken Up With a Musical and Literary Programme—Dr. Carroll Made the Presentation Speech—Committee Who Were In Charge of the Affair—He Will Not Preach a Farewell Sermon.

The farewell reception tendered to Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Johnston at Grace M. E. church, last evening, by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society and Epworth League, was a complete success. Next Sunday will be Mr. Johnston's last Sunday in Plainfield as pastor of Grace church, and the farewell reception was mingled with joy and sadness. Joy because of the glorious work accomplished by Mr. Johnston during his stay, and sadness because of his departure.

The pastor has been faithful and worked hard to build up the cause of Christ in his field of labor. The gathering last evening brought to the minds of many the numerous deeds of kindness and goodness of the spiritual leader. The pastor will not preach a farewell sermon, and what he had to say was said in person to each one.

The church was decorated with palms and choice flowers and presented an attractive appearance. There was an air of sociability prevalent and everyone joined heartily in extending to Pastor Johnston and his wife their best wishes for their success.

The fore part of the evening was devoted to a short programme given under the direction of the literary committee of the Epworth League, of which Miss Steiner is chairman. Several recitations were given in an excellent manner by Miss Aimee Emmons, while Clarence Mills delighted the audience with a number of violin solos, accompanied by Miss Carroll on the piano. Miss Grace Carroll rendered vocal solos in her usual pleasing manner. Each number received cordial support from all.

During the evening there were two surprises in store for Pastor Johnston and his wife in the shape of presentations. The members of the Epworth League and Ladies' Aid Society presented through Dr. Carroll, who made the presentation speech, an elegant banquet lamp. The members of the Queen Esther Band presented a handsome medallion picture entitled "Interrupted." Dr. Carroll also presented this gift in the name of the band. The doctor, in presenting the gifts, expressed the good-will and fellowship of all and wished the recipients Godspeed in their new field of labor. Mr. Johnston for himself and on behalf of his wife accepted the gifts with heartfelt expressions of appreciation, and he also wished the members of the church success.

After the rendition of the programme and presentations, refreshments were served by the social committee consisting of Miss Marguerite Schuck, assisted by the Misses Carroll, Miss Tingley, Mrs. Most, Mrs. Winckler and Mrs. Charles Hummer. The whole affair was in charge of Mrs. Valiant, assisted by members of both the Ladies' Aid and Epworth League. The decorations were in charge of Mrs. Vermeule.

READING AND LECTURE.

Entertaining Affair Given in First Presbyterian Church.

Last evening at the First Presbyterian church a large and delighted audience listened attentively to an illustrated lecture on "Evangeline." The story was illustrated with pictures shown on the canvas by Rev. C. E. Herring, and the story was read by Mrs. E. V. Waldorf, of LaGrande avenue. The pictures were very fine and the reading of the story was admirable. Following this part of the programme Mr. Herring gave a large number of views of Nova Scotia, also of local places. Mr. Herring's explanation of the pictures as they were shown was much enjoyed and frequent applause was accorded. Mr. Searing manipulated the stereopticon and gave entire satisfaction.

The programme was opened with a soprano solo by Miss Bessie Blair and there was also a piano selection by Miss Mabelle Force. Both numbers were greatly enjoyed and added to the pleasure of the occasion.

—A Junior dance will be held at the Park Club Tuesday, April 12th.

SUMMER HOME FOR GIRLS.

A WORTHY ENDEAVOR MOVEMENT.

Poor City Girls, Twelve at a Time, To be Given a Chance to Breathe Country Air.

The executive committee of the Christian Endeavor Local Union met last evening at the home of Miss Florence Hawkins, of LaGrande avenue. Among the important items discussed was the advisability of establishing in Plainfield a summer home for city girls. It is the intention of the union to lease a suitable house just on the outskirts of the city and there establish such a home. It will be in charge of a matron, to be secured later. The idea is to select about twelve girls at a time and give them a brief outing at the home. In this way a number of girls can be helped. In connection with this movement it is expected that sewing and cooking will be taught and frequently religious meetings will be held.

It was decided at the meeting to add a social committee to the list of union committees. Miss Hawkins will appoint a superintendent for this committee. The rest of the evening was devoted to routine business, after which a social time was enjoyed.

MAYOR CHANGED MIND.

APPOINTMENT OF OVERSEER OF THE POOR EXPLAINED.

How it Came About That Councilmen Hetfield and Liefke Voted to Have Hansen's Nomination Laid on Table.

Facts have now come to light regarding the appointment of the overseer of the poor of Plainfield that explain the actions of certain Councilmen of this city that seemed rather strange at the time. It will be remembered that the Mayor's appointment of Christian Hansen to that coveted position was backed by Mr. Andrews, chairman of the alms committee, under whose special control the overseer comes. The other two members of the committee, Councilmen Liefke and Hetfield, wanted the appointment laid on the table.

Several days before the meeting of the Council, there was a conference between Mayor Fisk and the members of the committee. The appointment was considered at that time. It was then deemed advisible that the Mayor should appoint one of the candidates at a nominal salary to the position of overseer of the poor. Then the committee was to meet and make a contract with the same man to become manager of the Industrial Home and take charge of it with sufficient salary to make up for the salary that it was originally to pay the overseer. The advantage of this arrangement was that, while the overseer holds his position for three years, the committee could terminate his connection with the Industrial Home should he prove unfitted for the position and the committee wish him to resign for any other reason. Appointed as the overseer alone, he will hold the office for three years whether satisfactory or not.

This was the course that the other members of the committee supposed was to be pursued. When the Mayor made his appointment and named Hansen, who had not been considered by the entire committee, the members were surprised. They then wanted the matter laid on the table until they could understand what the reason was for giving up the old plan.

A NEW DRUG STORE.

John Powers to Go Into Business for Himself Next Month.

Another popular and enterprising Plainfield young man is to go into business for himself in the person of John Powers, who will open a drug business in the store now occupied by Frank Rowley at the corner of Somerset street and Craig place. Mr. Powers has been engaged in the pharmacy of H. P. Reynolds and T. S. Armstrong for five years where his accommodating manner and pleasant disposition have made him many friends, and he has altogether twelve years' experience in the drug business. He is a graduate of the New York College of Pharmacy, class of '93, and passed a creditable examination before the State Board of Pharmacists.

The store will be opened April 5th, with an entire new stock of drugs and modern fixtures. Mr. Powers will make a speciality of the prescription department, and we predict for him all the success that he so well deserves.

Both Horses Dead Now.

I. A. Connett, of 203 Watchung avenue, who runs a meat route in the suburbs of Plainfield and who was so unfortunate as to lose one of his horses by death about a month ago, has just met with another loss in the death of his other horse, Wednesday night. Mr. Connett's second loss is a very severe blow to him.

SUNDAY RAID HEARD TODAY IN CITY COURT.

Joe Carbone's Case Was the First One Called.

JURY OF PROMINENT MEN.

OFFENDER SAID HE WAS A SEVENTH-DAY OBSERVER.

He Proved to Be a Lively Witness and Evaded Many Direct Questions Propounded by Corporation Counsel Marsh—Councilman Hetfield Said the Case Would be Fought to the Bitter End—Sergeant Kiely Told of the Things He Bought on Sunday—Jury Went Out at 12:45 and is Still Debating a Verdict.

The crusade against the Sunday sellers in Plainfield was continued today by a sensational trial of one of the offenders in the city court. The crusade began last Sunday, when eleven of the stores were closed and their proprietors arrested and brought before the City Judge. Three pleaded guilty and were sentenced to pay $5 each. The trial of the others was set for this morning.

Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, as attorney for a majority of the alleged offenders, announced that the matter would be fought to a finish. He asked that he be notified which case was to come up first. Corporation Counsel Marsh selected the case of Jose Carbone, whose little store is located at 128 North avenue.

The case of Carbone was held in the Council Chambers this morning before a large crowd. Within the rail were a number of the local lawyers and Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and Rev. A. I. Main, of the Seventh-day Baptist denomination. County Court Stenographer Herbert W. Knight was present to record the testimony. A jury was called as follows: John D. Runyon, foreman; J. P. Laire, Julian Scott, John Keeley, Michael Coyne, Leonard Spangenberg, U. B. Crane, H. W. Marshall, W. W. Coriell, John Ross, John MacIntyre and Peter Weaver.

Miss MacMurray, as representing the city clerk's office, was first sworn and testified as to the authenticity of the ordinance regarding Sunday selling. Sergeant Kiely was then put on the stand and told of his visit to the place and his purchase of two cigars, one package of chewing tobacco and two packages of chewing gum. His testimony was to the effect that the store was open and the goods prominently displayed. The testimony of Boundsman Frederickson was practically the same. He accompanied the Sergeant. That closed the city's case.

Carbone made a decidedly lively witness. His lawyer stated that they admitted that the store was open Sunday, but claimed that Carbone habitually observed Saturday as the Sabbath. It was evident when Corporation Counsel Marsh began his cross-examination that he was trying to prove that Carbone's observation of the day was for business reasons only. Carbone refused to answer a number of questions, while his lawyer was almost constantly on his feet objecting to them. Mr. Marsh tried to extract some information as to how Carbone kept the Sabbath and as to whether he belonged to any religious denomination that observed that day. At the start Carbone said that he had kept the store for four years and during that length of time observed Saturday as the Sabbath; he afterwards thought he had observed the day longer. He made the remarkable statement when asked why he observed Saturday, "Because I prefer it. Today I'm a Republican, tomorrow a Democrat."

Dan Roberts, Mrs. Henry Drake, Mrs. Jennie Bush, Prof. O'Reilly and Tony Lusardi were all sworn for the defendant and testified as to the good character of the establishment and its proprietor. L. Warren Randolph, Herbert Littell and Irving L. Brady were summoned by the city in rebuttal.

The lawyers then summed up and the Judge charged the jury. The jury retired at 12:45 o'clock.

As the paper goes to press the jury is still out. It is understood that there is a disagreement, and both sides are determined to hold out to the end.

An Interesting Talk.

The Parliamentary Club met yesterday morning at the Y. M. C. A. and listened to a talk by Mrs. Wm. Taylor, of Philadelphia, on the work of Ramabai, which has been so remarkable among the widows in India. Ramabai took the methods for work in her schools from the Plainfield public schools. Among the visitors at the meeting were Mrs. Burdick, of Ashaway, R. I.; Mrs. Price and Miss Hiscox, of Westerly, R. I.

"As a result of my own experience for the past seven years, I advise my pupils to eat a large bowl of H-O every morning for breakfast."

HORNBY'S STEAM-COOKED OATMEAL.

THE PRESIDENT'S PLAN

It Will Be Intervention on the Ground of Humanity.

ONLY THING LEFT NOW

Amounts to a Military Occupation by the United States—Nothing Else is Practicable—The President Realizes That Americans Must Furnish the Relief.

Washington, March 25.—"Humanitarian intervention" is the President's idea for the settlement of the Cuban question at once.

In his talk with Senators regarding the policy, he has stated to them that he would relieve the suffering of the people in Cuba before he sent his message upon the question to Congress. He intends to relieve the Cubans, no matter what the Spaniards will do.

In fact, his policy goes almost so far as a military occupation of the island, for in his talk with Senators it is said that he would send the supplies in war vessels if necessary, and accompanied by a military escort to see that they were properly distributed. In other words this is actual intervention, but it is on the ground of humanity, and therefore his policy is described as "humanitarian intervention."

The President knows that he cannot have the supplies distributed by the Spaniards, nor can the Cubans do it, and as he is determined to afford the relief, the only effectual way he sees in doing this is to send it with military escort, and as Senator Morgan described it, after his interview with the President. "Make a military occupation of the island and thus relieve the suffering and command peace."

The President will hold the report of the Maine Court of Inquiry until Monday, when he will send it to Congress with a simple message of transmission. He expects, unless the verdict is one directly implicating Spain in the disaster, that both houses will refer the report to committees and wait until he has had time to prepare a message on the general Cuban question.

The President will notify Spain officially of the findings of the court and ask for an explanation, but will make no demand for an indemnity or reparation until Spain has had time to answer the first note, or Congress acts.

Important Interviews.

There have been a number of interesting conferences at the White House lately, and the President has freely given his views to members of Congress, and asked their opinions as to the course to be pursued. He has especially tried to find out what would be considered a reasonable time to wait after the Maine report is in to send in his second message.

He has told each and every one of his visitors that the message to go to Congress on Monday is merely a message of transmission, and will contain no expression of opinion or recommendation. At first, the President asked the Senators and members if they thought Congress would wait until about the 15th of April for his message on Cuba.

Senators Allison, Gorman, Morgan, Cockrell and several others have given their promise to wait until that time, but three or four Senators have stated most plainly to the President that they did not think Congress could be held in restraint that long, and to these the President suggested that the 8th of April might be long enough. One Senator distinctly told the President that he doubted if Congress could be held in restraint one week after the Maine report was in, and said that he was certain if the President did not send a message to Congress by that time a resolution for armed intervention and recognition of the independence of Cuba would be introduced, and, in his opinion passed. It seems, however, that the overruling sentiment in the Senate is to wait until the President is ready to act, but the difficulty is to impress upon the House the same feeling.

Support from Congress.

Beyond doubt there are a number of excitable men in the lower branch who declare that if the report shows an external explosion by a submarine mine that nothing will satisfy them except action at once. The conservative Senators who have talked with him agree to let the President take his time in regard to the Cuban message. They are certain that Congress will stand by President McKinley in all he asks. They go so far as to say that Congress cannot force the President to take any hasty step, nor will there be any attempt to do so.

Senator Platt, of Connecticut, who has been in consultation with the President, and represents undoubtedly the conservative sentiment in the Senate, said:

"Congress cannot and will not override the President. It has the same confidence in the President's honesty and integrity as the people have, and will let him carry out his policy as he sees fit and in his own good time. They cannot drive him."

Hopes for Peace.

While the President is determined to secure peace in Cuba, and a stoppage of the present war, he still has hopes that this can be secured without direct conflict. He is of the opinion that if this country immediately sends wholesale relief to the suffering Cubans, and this is done with or without Spain's consent, that the condition of the island will so improve that one of the great reasons now urged for war, that of starvation and suffering, will be eliminated.

If Spain considered this action intervention, she would be the one provoking hostilities, and the responsibility for the war would be off American shoulders. The President is anxious to try this mode of intervention, if it may be called such, and this is one of the reasons for delaying his Cuban message to Congress over a couple of weeks, so as to try this plan. If there is no immediate explosion in Congress over the Maine report when it is transmitted, this sending of relief will in all probability be at once begun.

The President will not ask for a separate appropriation, but the Senate Appropriations Committee inserted a provision for $500,000 in the Sundry Appropriation bill to carry out the plan if the President thinks it is necessary. The money will be at his disposal and he can carry out his plan.

In his talk with Senators as to the exact method of intervention, the President has been particular to inquire whether a declaration of the independence of Cuba could be coupled with the recommandation for intervention. He has intimated that there was serious objection from a legal standpoint to recognizing independence, and feared that the effect would not be the desired one, and that if would be stronger to simply intervene and let that be followed by a declaration of independence, for intervention would ultimately mean the freedom of the island.

It is for this reason that the President is so strongly impressed with the idea that the sending of relief to Cuba would be the most effective way of intervening and would force Spain's hand. In fact, to-day the situation has narrowed down to what Spain will do. It still seems evident to the majority that until Spain makes some concessions or completely backs down, hostilities are inevitable.

CAPTAIN SAMPSON IN COMMAND.

Ordered to Relief Rear Admiral Sicard at Key West.

Washington, March 25.—Captain Sampson, of the Iowa, and president of the Maine Court of Inquiry, has been ordered to command the North Atlantic fleet, relieving Admiral Sicard, who is ill.

Commodore W. S. Schley in all probability will be placed in command of the squadron at Hampton Roads.

Captain Robley D. Evans, better known as "Fighting Bob" Evans, has been ordered to take command of the Iowa.

Captain Sampson is regarded as one of the best equipped officers in the navy. He is a high authority on naval ordnance, and before taking command of the Iowa was chief of the Bureau of Ordnance of the Navy Department. He is about 50 years of age.

REAR ADMIRAL SICARD.
Who has been relieved of command of the North Atlantic Squadron on account of poor health.

The retirement of Admiral Sicard raises Captain Sampson to the rank of Commodore. He is a native of New York, entered the service in September, 1857, and has been over forty years in active service, nearly fourteen of which were spent on the sea.

Rear Admiral Sicard has been found incapacitated for active service and leave of absence has been granted to him.

Robbers May Have Stolen $50,000.

Fresno, Cal., March 25—It is believed here that the two men who robbed the train near Goshen stole not less than $50,000. The statement is made that there was $35,000 in gold dust from Randsburg in the wrecked express car and that nearly $25,000 was contained in the closed mail pouch which the robbers rifled.

SPAIN HAS DEFIED US

Her Torpedo Flotilla Has Left the Canaries for Cuba.

GOVERNMENT TO PROTEST

The Action is Regarded as a Hostile Demonstration Against Us—Believed That Preparations for Trouble Will Be Hastened More Than Ever.

Washington, March 25.—The news that the Spanish torpedo flottilla had started from the Canary Islands for Cuba created the greatest excitement in the Navy Department since the arrival of the first information that the Maine had been blown up. While Secretary Long or Assistant Secretary Day would not discuss the matter, the naval officers and others about the department were free in expressing the opinion that this move on the part of Spain clearly indicated her intention of being prepared for war, if not actually making a declaration.

Spain Was Warned.

Although Spain denied that she had halted her torpedo fleet at the Canaries at the warning of the United States, it was said to-day that Spain had concluded when the United States protested against the vessels coming to Cuba to hold them at the Canaries to await developments. The United States, through its Minister at Madried, informed the Spanish Government that if the fleet came across the ocean to Cuba it would be considered an act of war.

Certainly, the torpedo vessels could not be used against the insurgents, nor could they be used against the Spanish war vessels in the Havana harbor. Therefore, they were only intended to be used against the United States fleet, and, if they came to Cuban waters, this Government would consider it a menace, and treat it as such.

In view of this protest, Spain halted her fleet at the Canaries, saying that they would wait there for a convoy to accompany them across the ocean.

The United States then ordered the Massachusetts and Texas north from Key West, and things were quiet. It is not thought that the President will protest at once in regard to the Spanish move, but will follow it by active preparation for the arrivel of the fleet.

Renewed Activity.

In view of the fact that the Terror and the Puritan, the big monitors, have been ordered to Key West, and other vessels sent to increase Admiral Sicard's fleet, the United States could not well protest against the sailing of the torpedo fleet, but it can, and will, treat it as an indication that Spain is on the aggressive, and that this may be in some sense considered as a step toward the open declaration of war. Undoubtedly, this is the feeling at the Navy Department, and it has caused renewed activity in all the bureaus. The greatest effort is being made to hasten the building of torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers.

The Secretary of the Navy has sent summons to all builders of torpedo boats with whom it has had dealings and is making inquiries as to their ability to build torpedo boat destroyers, to be finished in six months or less. No experiments will be tried in this matter, and negotiations are being carried on only with builders who have done work for the government before and can be relied on.

The War Department is hastening the work on ordnance and ammunition, and Secretary Alger has had numerous conferences in regard to this matter. It is likely that within the next twenty-four hours there will be many developments in both the Navy and War Departments, and these will be made openly to show Spain exactly how the United States considers the sailing of the torpedo fleet, and that she is preparing in every way to meet any aggression.

Regarded as a Significant Step.

The action of President McKinley in transferring to the Navy the vessels of the revenue cutter service is regarded among naval officers as probably the most important and significant step yet taken to prepare for war. It has brought them to a sharp realization of the fact that the Administration is taking the most extreme measures to prepare for a sudden conflict.

Every vessel, both in and out of the Navy, that can be secured for immediate service is being prepared for active duty.

All the preparations, however, are being made with a view to an early use of the ships and arms that are being hurried. No orders have yet been issued in regard to work on vessels which cannot be completed within the next few months.

The Department has taken no action in regard to the Chicago and Atlanta at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, which will not be ready for service for a year yet, and offers for the purchase of warships now on the stocks have been refused.

Alleged Pension Frauds.

Providence, R. I., March 25.—Pension frauds said by the investigating agent of the Pension Department to be on an extensive scale have been discovered in this city. Two arrests were made Monday, and many warrants have been sworn out against claim agents of this city and vicinity, and others charged with perjury and uttering forged checks or pension vouchers. Still other cases will be brought, and the prosecution will be rigid. The amounts fraudulently secured will reach in the aggregate many thousands of dollars.

Lieut. Jenkins Body Recovered.

Havana, March 25.—The body of Lieut. Friend W. Jenkins, of the Maine, was found yesterday near the torpedo tube aft. It was much decomposed, though not so bad as many others found previously, and was recognizable aside from the clothing. On his finger was found a gold clasp ring with a bloodstone seal, with his monogram, and inside the inscription, "F. W. Jenkins, Class '86, U. S. N. A." Private papers were in his pockets. The body will be prepared for burial, put in a metallic casket and sent to Key West Saturday, to be subject to the directions of relatives.

MAINE REPORT ARRIVES

It Was Received at the Capitol Without Demonstration.

VERDICT STILL A SECRET

The Document Submitted to President McKinley, Upon Whose Decision Its Future Migration Will Depend—Read at the Cabinet Meeting To-Day.

Washington, March 25.—The report of the Court of Inquiry, appointed to ascertain the cause of the disaster to the battle ship Maine, is in Washington.

At 9 o'clock this morning the document was in the hands of Secretary Long, and ten minutes later the Secretary of the Navy broke the seals which bound it in the presence of President McKinley. As soon as the President learned what the finding of the court was he entered the Cabinet room and informed his official family of what he had learned.

The scenes attending the arrival of the report were typical of the splendid capacity of the nation for containing its feeling. There was not a member of Congress, not an officer in either branch of the military service, not a public official of any character, or a private citizen of any station, that did not feel that with the report culminated a crisis second in importance to that which came in the fateful days which immediately preceded the War of the Rebellion.

At the station when engine No. 310 of the Southern Railway rolled in last night at 9.35, exactly on time, there was no one on hand but a corps of newspaper men and Senor Quesada, the Washington representative of the Cuban Republic. The corps were not few, however. There were nearly 300 of them, and they had drafted into use practically all the serviceable cabs in the city. In anticipation of the crowd the station master, at the request of the Secretary of the Navy, had issued instructions that no one would be allowed on the platform except Ensign Ward, who had been designated by Mr. Long to welcome the bearers of the report and inform them that quarters had been reserved for them in the Ebbitt House. The order was rigidly enforced.

The four naval officers who had guarded it since its departure from Key West were hustled at once into a carriage by an attache of the Navy Department and driven to the Ebbitt House. The party consisted of Lieut. Commander Marix, Lieut. John Hood, Lieut. Carl Jungen, Passed Assistant Engineer Bowers, A. T. Marix, a nephew of the Judge Advocate, and Ship Carpenter Helms, of the Maine's crew.

Lieut. Hood, as the most muscular member of the party, carried the bulky document in a white canvas bag slung under his arm. It must have weighed ten or twenty pounds without its case, and portended endless reams of complicated testimony to be digested by the administration before the next step in the progress of the Maine incident can be taken. That the whole party carrying the report was armed was demonstrated in a rather theatrical way just as they were about to get into the carriage. The crowd closed around the party and jostled them considerably. Some one ran against the end of the mysterious canvas bag in which the report was concealed. Quick as a flash Lieut. Hood's hand went back to his hip, and Lieut. Jungen laid his hand on the butt of a revolver that was sticking from his side pocket. The movements were sufficient to prevent further jostling.

Last night the report, upon whose contents is directed the attention of the entire nation was in the Ebbitt House. The four men honored with its custody kept their last vigil over it.

The watches on the historic trip were kept with the regularity and after the manner of watches on shipboard. From 6 o'clock last night until 10 Lieutenant Hood was its special guardian. At 10 he was relieved by Lieutenant Commander Adolph Marix, who remained on duty until 2 o'clock this morning. At that hour Past Assistant Engineer I. C. Bowers went on duty until 6. Ship's Carpenter Helm's watch began at that hour, and on his watch came the hour when, in the company of Lieutenant Commander Marix, he delivered the document, so pregnant with awful possibilities, to Secretary Long.

THURSTON SAYS WAR.

Vigorous Speech in the Senate for Cuban Liberty—Time for Action.

Washington, March 25.—Mr. Thurston, of Nebraska, addressed the Senate yesterday on the Cuban situation. Like Messrs. Proctor and Gallinger, he recently visitel the island.

Mr. Thurston is for war, and did not mince his words in declaring that Congress should immediately take the necessary steps to free Cuba. He went for what he called money changers, without gloves, his reference to that class being couched in the following language:

"Mr. President, against the intervention of the United States in this holy cause, there is but one voice of dissent. that voice is the voice of the money changers. They fear war. Not because of any Christian or ennobling sentiment against war, and in favor of peace, but because they fear that a declaration of war, or the intervention which might result in war, would have a depressing effect upon the stock market. I do not read my duty from the ticker; I do not accept my lessons in patriotism from Wall street. I deprecate war."

Then the Senator went on at length to explain that war would not depreciate a single American security; but if it did, he added, that what one gambler lost would be won by another; and he did not care what stock manipulators might say, the United States had a duty to perform in this emergency.

Mr. Thurston laid stress upon the fact that Congress alone could declare war. He was in favor of doing everything to uphold the President, and paid a glowing tribute to his courage and sterling patriotism.

Referring to what he saw in Cuba, Mr. Thurston remarked that before he visited the unfortunate island, he was inclined to think that the reports of suffering and beggary had been overdrawn. "Not a bit," he said. "The American newspapers had presented accurate pictures of the terrible situation."

His speech was, he said, by command of silent lips. It will be remembered that during his trip to Cuba, the Senator had the misfortune to lose his wife. For twenty or more minutes Mr. Thurston told of the awful condition of the people of Cuba. He was positive the Government of Spain was doing nothing to relieve the suffering, as not a dollar had been appropriated by the Spaniards. The relief extended was almost entirely from the Government and citizens of the United States.

"I say," he exclaimed, "that the time has come when muskets ought to go with the food."

He next gave Spain a dig by stating that she professed to be a Christian nation; she set up crosses, and under them butchered more people than all the other nations of the earth combined.

Mr. Thurston demanded that the United States should take action on the Cuban situation, outside of the Maine case. That was but a secondary matter, compared with the other question. If it was shown that the ship was blown up by Spanish agencies swift and terrible punishment would be adjudged later on.

The Senator hopes and believed that Cuba would be free before the dawn of another Christmas morning.

"There is only one action possible," he continued; "that is intervention for the independence of the island; intervention that means the landing of an American army on Cuban soil, the deploying of an American fleet off the harbor of Havana; intervention which says to Spain: 'Leave the island, withdraw your soldiers; leave the Cubans, these brothers of ours in the new world, to form and carry on government for themselves.'

"Such intervention on our part would not of itself, be war. It would undoubtedly lead to war. But if war came, it would come by act of Spain in resistance of the liberty and the independence of the Cuban people."

Mr. Thurston scouted the idea advanced by many that Cubans are not capabel of self-government. He had talked with Cubans in all walks of life. They are intelligent, patriotic and full of the fire of liberty. He believed that if they were given a chance to establish a government of their own and made entirely independent of Spanish influence, they would, in a short time, found a republic creditable to the Western Hemisphere.

The Senator read the plank in the St. Louis platform of 1896, which committed unequivocally the party and its leaders to take early steps for the liberation of the people of Cuba. That sentiment, he asserted, had grown steadily, and the 7,000,000 voters who made it possible for this Administration to be in power knew at that time what the carefully-drawn plank meant. The Senator distinctly disclaimed any intention of criticising the Administration. He did not wish in any way to hamper the President, and was strongly of the opinion that Mr. McKinley had acted for the best interests of the country, so far as his judgment directed. Mr. Thurston was willing also to give him credit for good intentions when the President waited upon Spain for a reasonable period in which to demonstrate whether or not peace could be brought about on the island. But the time had come for action. The American people were tired of delay.

One of the most significant statements in the speech was a brief reply to an interview published on Tuesday, with Senator Hale, of Maine, who, until recently has been regarded as a warm friend of Spain, and who only within a few days has admitted there was any possibility of war with that country. Mr. Thurston specifically referred to the utterance of Mr. Hale that the President "had been carried off his feet by being crowded too rapidly."

Mr. Thurston said he was not aware of the fact that the President had been crowded. He held that Congress, in view of its power to legislate and to intervene, as well as to declare war, had been quite slow. It had been too slow to suit him. He did not think there was any warrant whatever for the statement of the Maine Senator.

There must be a cause!

There must be a reason for our unique position in New Jersey. With countless competitors in the field, you would expect that the business of one or two of them would nearly approach in size the business of the largest, but the truth is that ours is many times larger than any other single one.

One of the causes is that we sell Pianos that we know are the seven best, in their different grades, that America produces—CHICKERINGS, GABLERS, HARDMANS, VOSES, STERLINGS, STANDARDS and HUNTINGTONS. These names are a cause unto themselves.

A JOURNALISTIC PHENOMENA.

From over the hills and dales of Piscataway township comes a rumble from New Brunswick way that sounds like a peaceful trumpet. The rumbling echoes that from time immemorial the editor of the New Brunswick Home News and the editor of the New Brunswick Times have fought each other hitterly—been at dagger points, in fact—but today the white emblem of peace and goodwill waves triumphantly over the scene of the aged and acrid journalistic strife. And it all came about this way: The Times took upon itself the patriotic resolution of raising sufficient funds to erect some memorial mark for the brave New Brunswick boys who met their fate when the battleship Maine blew up in the Havana harbor. To the credit of New Brunswick people let it be said that they responded nobly and liberally to the appeal for funds, and today the amount raised for the purpose reaches almost a thousand dollars. It appears now that the Home News editor has some patriotic blood in his veins—always had, no doubt—and yesterday The Times editor received a letter from his rival, donating $25 to the fund, one of the largest personal subscriptions received. The action of Editor Boyd is commendable under the circumstances, and in a way must "heap coals of fire" upon the conscience of The Times editor.

WOMEN AND TRADING STAMPS.

If the housewives had a vote at State elections, the legislators who voted to crush out the trading stamp traffic would doubtless be crushed out of public life themselves. The accumulation of stamps with which a premium may be procured has become an established industry in the majority of homes in Plainfield, and the women cannot reconcile themselves to the abolition of the practice, which will probably come when the Governor attaches his signature to the measure, which has passed both houses in the Legislature. In connection with this, the following editorial from the Camden Courier—the only one of its kind that has caught our eye—will act somewhat as a balm to their incensed feelings:

The anti-trading stamp bill is as gross an interference with the competitive rights of business men as the abominable trusts, and it is surprising that intelligent legislators should vote for it. A man has a right to give away what is his own in any manner he sees proper to attract trade, and the bill before the Legislature to abridge that right should have been promptly thrown out. It is clearly unconstitutional.

WORTH READING.

Of the numerous clubs and societies in Plainfield, there is probably none more notable and historical than the Abestos Club. Those who do not dwell in the charmed circle of this young old men's club are unable to appreciate its versatile character—its capacity for the transaction of business or tomfoolery to any degree, as well as all the other characteristics that go to make up the Yankee, but if they read tomorrow's Press all these interesting things will be held in an article to be published. A fine group picture of the present members will also be printed.

POOR STREET WORK.

The people living on Somerset street in the borough are much displeased with the condition the street has been left in by Street Commissioner Conover. The surplus mud on the street has been scraped in the gutter and left there to be carried back to the street and also into the stores of the merchants. The plan is a poor one and should be remedied at once.

COLLEGE MORALS.

It is an interesting question whether the morals of college students in our day are growing better or worse. Certainly college students are more athletic and better trained physically than they were 40 years ago. There are those who claim that with this superior physical development have come a rowdyism and brutality among students that did not characterize them when the ideal college youth was pale, long haired and caved in at the stomach.

President Charles F. Thwing of Western Reserve university and Adelbert college contradicts emphatically the notion that students are worse morally than they were in the old time. He says the report of college deviltries and escapades in the newspapers are apt to be exaggerated, and in any case the college boys are better morally as a class than the same number of young men outside the college. That much he considers certain. He says: "The college man is none too good, but he is growing better with each passing generation. He now represents the highest type of young manhood. He will continue to grow better with each passing generation. He will embody a yet finer and nobler type of manhood."

The tendency—a correct one, too—is to give college students more personal freedom and make use of less "bossing" and spying among them. The old way was to make rules for them to observe and then let them alone, only punishing them when they broke the rules. The new way is to let them be as free as possible and have their teachers and professors more closely associated with them and exercise a friendly personal influence over them as from man to man. But the best means for training morality into the college youth is to make him work and work hard, says Dr. Thwing, and right he is.

The best method of guiding the personal morals of a student is through making constant and severe intellectual demands upon him. Hard work is an enemy to easy morals. Professional schools attempt only indirectly to influence the personal character of their students, but the officers of such schools hold that the most effective method of aiding students to maintain uprightness in conduct is by maintaining high scholastic standards. Such a method should control in the undergraduate college. The man who works hard in college, who is required to devote eight or ten hours a day to the performance of his academic tasks, has usually little time for evil indulgence, or, if he has time, has little strength, or, if he has strength, has little inclination, and the man who lacks time, strength and inclination for base indulgence is quite sure of being free from it.

A count of the national guard in all the states and territories shows that the United States has of organized militia only 120,561. If war should be suddenly declared, our little regular army of 25,000 men and these national guardsmen would be all the president could summon at a day's notice. It is true we have ten or a dozen millions of men that could be called on, but they are undrilled and in every way unprepared for fighting. The national guard ought to be increased and every effort made to drill the members and make soldiers of them. Every state ought to have five trained militiamen where now it has one. It should be made an honorable distinction to a young man to have himself drilled and ready to go when his country calls at any moment. The tendency to extravagance among national guardsmen ought to be sat upon and crushed, so that poor young men could join the regiments and feel themselves as good as anybody. Snobbery among private soldiers is as bad as snobbery among officers.

It is not worth while to belittle the seriousness of a war with Spain. Two or three Spanish cruisers could batter down half the cities along our Atlantic coast in a week and we could not get our naval vessels on the scene in time to prevent it. We have the largest coast line to defend of any country on earth. In the long run of course we would triumph over Spain, but she could do a lot of damage on our coasts first.

Some men are for counsel, others for war. One of the latter is Commander Bob Evans of the United States navy. The most picturesque war remark in the present crisis is attributed to him. He declared that if he once got a chance at the Spaniards there would not be anything but Spanish spoken in the infernal regions for many months.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

PASSING COMMENT.

R. M. Dawson, formerly superintendent of the Plainfield agency of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, now one of its general agents, sends to The Press the Prudential's latest advertising product, which shows the company to be thoroughly up-to date in all its details. It is a neat little book entitled "Our Navy." In the first two pages is a statement of the company and a list of officers, while all the other pages are covered with fine views of the battleships of the United States, with a brief description of each. It is interesting and instructive.

Although there were very few who knew about it, it is nevertheless a fact that the price of coal in Plainfield rose to $5 a ton last Friday night. The rise only lasted over night, however, so nobody was the wiser. The way in which this sudden rise came about was like this. A meeting of several of the leading coal dealers was held last Friday night. After a long conference they agreed to stand together and raise the price of the standard grades of coal from $4.25 to $5 a ton. One of the members of the alliance sent word to the others next morning that his partner did not agree to the rise and he therefore would have to withdraw from the compact. That, of course, brought the price down where it was before.

* * * * *

The remarkable fall in the price of coal has been the means of greatly increasing the trade throughout the city. Not only are the consumers purchasing what they need for the present time, but they are looking out for the future and laying in a store of fuel for future use. One Plainfielder has just had fifteen tons of coal placed in his cellar, completely filling all the bins, and is now having eight tons more put in the barn, giving the coachman the unpleasant prospect of carrying it to the house next winter. J. H. McVey, proprietor of McVey's Hotel, is also preparing for the time to come. He has given an order to Boice, Bunyon & Company for seventy-five tons of coal to be placed in the cellar of his new addition on North avenue. The work of delivery begins to day.

THEATRICAL.

It is really wonderful how Waite's Comedy Company is able to produce such plays as are found in their repertoire this season. Mr. Waite has always had the credit of giving the most artistic and biggest show for the money ever put on the road, and as he is always on the alert to give his millions of patrons only the best that money can secure, he is deserving of all the success to be had. We predict the largest week's business in the history of Music Hall next week.

No ladies' free tickets are given by Waite's company for their opening Monday evening at Music Hall. We are glad to see one man in popular priced theatricals who has nerve enough to drop their use, as we could never see where any benefit was derived from their use by the local mangement or the traveling company. Waite's repertoire this season should pack the house to the doors at every performance.

KIND WORDS FOR THE PRESS.

An additional column added to each page of The Daily Press of Plainfield enables its editor to give considerable more news, and he proposes to so classify the news and matters of interest as to take to the various associations together with a department for the Germans. We congratulate The Press on this sign of its deserved prosperity.—Dunellen Call.

The Plainfield Daily Press has added another column to its already newsy pages, and with several new departments to interest its readers, and with a new press that can print more copies in a shorter time, this bright sheet will doubtless become more popular than ever in Plainfield homes. A German feature has been added which ought to reach the many readers from the Fatherland.—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

—Alex. Lusardi, of 211 West Front street, the wholesale and retail dealer in choice fruits of all kinds, both foreign and domestic, now has on sale a large stock of oranges, nuts, bananas and cigars for which his prices are right.

—Send a postal right along and you will get your laundry back in 48 hours. The new "domestic finish" of the city steam and hand laundry, of 19 Somerset street, is the most comfortable and stylish for gentlemen's linen. Prevents shirts from bulging, saves the muslin.

Dunn; corresponding secretary, Miss Emma Clark; recording secretary, Miss Hannah Hayes; treasurer, John Biddulph; pianist, Miss Aimee Cook. The Italian mission which has been in operation for two week will have a phonographic exhibition at the old schoolhouse Saturday evening. It was through the generous offer of Dr. Coles and Miss Emily Coles that the renovated building is now doing an excellent service, for the work being done there now is perpetuating the memories of former days when the present building was the meeting house of the Baptist congregation. Alphonso Tartariello, the missionary, is much encouraged by the work. He comes without compensation from Hightstown, where he is pursuing a course of studies.

WITH MUSICAL TALENT.

A MUSICALE OF UNUSUAL MERIT GIVEN LAST NIGHT.

Arranged by the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Christian Endeavorers—Those Who Took Part in the Programme.

A musicale of unusual merit was given in the Seventh-Day Baptist church last evening by the Christian Endeavor Society of that church. It was attended by a large audience that more than filled the auditorium and overflowed into the chapel.

The programme opened with the overture to "William Tell," by Mrs. W. C. Hubbard and Mrs. F. J. Hubbard at the piano and A. L. Titsworth at the organ. A ladies' chorus, composed of Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Mrs. F. T. Clawson, Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, Miss H. Elizabeth Allis, Miss Maude I. Mosher, Miss Mabel A. Maxson, Miss L. Ethel Williams, and Miss Nan Randolph, next rendered Strong's "Now is the Month of Maying."

While all the selections were well received, the tenor solos of Walter H. MacIlroy, of New York, were received with marks of special favor. His two selections, "The Violet" and "I Love Thee," were excellent. An alto solo, "A Message From Heaven," was sung by Miss Nan Randolph. Fred Berthoud, of Brooklyn, gave a mandolin solo. He was prevented from completing his encore by the breaking of one of the bass strings on the instrument.

Miss Alice Fish, of New York, soprano solist, had a sweet voice which she used with effect. Her selections were well received. An instrumental trio by P. Ludwig Conde and J. L. Petrie, violins, and Miss Jessie Utter, piano, concluded the first part. A silver offering was then taken by the ushers while A. L. Titsworth rendered an offertory on the organ.

The ladies' chorus next gave E. J. Fitzhugh's lullaby, "The Sandman." Two more selections by Mr. MacIlroy followed, "The Night has a Thousand Eyes," and "I'm Wearing Awa'." A vocal trio, "Ye Fields of Light," was sung by Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Miss Nan Randolph and D. E. Titsworth. Then followed a violin solo by P. Ludwig Conde, a soprano solo by Miss Alice Fish and a mandolin solo by Mr. Berthoud. A selection, "The Wave Sweeps My Breast," by the ladies' churus, closed the programme.

After the musicale, an informal reception in the church parlors followed when light refreshments were served.

The musicale was arranged by the following committee: Miss Jessie Utter, chairman, Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, Miss Maude Mosher, Miss Ernestine C. Smith, LaRue Bliss and Frank Maxson. The ushers were LaRue Bliss, Frank Maxson, Clarence Rogers, J. Stanley Mosher and Asa Randolph.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God.—Matt. xvi: 16. March 27, 1898.

Lesson I.—Jesus and John (Math. iii, 7-17). Golden Text, Math. iii, 17, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." The first and last lessons of the quarter concern Jesus and John. In this first lesson John points Him out as the One who baptizeth with the Holy Ghost and will one day thoroughly separate between the chaff and the wheat. As He is baptized, the Spirit as a dove abides upon Him, and the Father testifies from heaven in the words of the golden text.

Lesson II.—Jesus Tempted (Math. iv, 1-11). Golden Text, Heb. ii, 18, "For in that He Himself hath suffered being tempted, He is able to succor them that are tempted." From the third chapter of the beginning of the Bible to the third chapter from the end of it there is the record of a great enemy of God and man, that old serpent, the devil, who like a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he may devour. If he can conquer the Captain of our Salvation, then our cause is lost, but if our David can vanquish this Goliath, victory is sure. As our blessed Lord by the sword of the Spirit defeated the enemy, so may we, and there is no other way. Satan's first attack in Eden was upon the word of God. We must receive it meekly and hold it fast.

Lesson III.—Beginning of the Ministry of Jesus (Math. iv, 17-25). Golden Text, Matth. iv, 16, "The people which sat in darkness saw great light." As He dwelt at Capernaum they saw the light of His life and wherever His people dwell the light of His life of love and compassion, of meekness and lowliness should be made manifest." He called Peter and Andrew and James and John that He might make them fishers of men by having them to follow Him. One of His last words to Peter was, "Follow thou Me" (John xxi, 22).

Lesson IV.—The Beatitudes (Math. v, 1-12). Golden Text, Math. v, 14), "Ye are the light of the world." As He begins His discourse, His first word is "blessed," for He came to bless and save and restore, not, like the great enemy, to curse and to destroy. And who are the blessed in His sight? Not the proud, the mighty, the wise and the rich, but the poor in spirit. This is the key to all true blessedness, and without it there is none. It is at the foundation of all blessing. He became poor for our sakes.

Lesson V.—How to Pray (Math. vi, 5-15). Golden Text, Math. vi, 6, "Pray to thy Father, which is in secret." All life is lived either before God or men, either to please God or man, unto God or unto self. How very few live the former, how very many the latter. Even Christians are tempted to do good, pray, fast, etc., with reference to the opinion of their fellows rather than as in the sight if God. Our Lord Jesus had but one aim—to glorify the Father.

Lesson VI.—Our Father's Care (Math. vi, 24-34). Golden Text, I Pet. v, 7, "He careth for you." Three times in this lesson we are told to "take no thought," or "be not anxious," and the reason given for this precept is "for your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of these things." Children of an earthly father would only grieve their fathr by anxiety about their food and raiment. It is his affair to see to those. It is theirs to be good and obedient children, a credit and a comfort to him.

Lesson VII.—The call of Matthew (Matt. ix., 9-13). Golden Text, Math. ix, 9, "Follow Me." In chapters viii and ix we see Him preaching, teaching, healing, going about doing good. Matthew haw been a receiver for those who kept for themselves and cared not how much they oppressed the poor, but now he is to receive in order to give to the poor. He is to be a channel of blessing between the Great Fountain and the perishing all about him. He begins by making a feast for our Lord, and that in the presence of His enemies? Are we ready and glad to honor our Lord before His enmies? Do we not care what men think or say of us if only we can glorify Him? If so, it is well.

Lesson VIII.—The Twelve Sent Forth (Math. x, 2-15). Golden Text, Math. x, 8, "Freely ye have received, freely give." Let us not forget the three great prayers which we should ever pray—that He would sent forth laborers; that He would make Jerusalem a praise in the earth, and that He would come quickly (Math. ix, 38; Isa. lxii, 6, 7; Rev. xxii, 20).

Lesson IX.—Warning and Invitation Matthew xi, 20-30). Golden Text, Math. xi, 28, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." It is well to remember that privilege increases responsibility, to whom much is given of him much shall be required. If He has caused us to be specially taught in His word, it is that through He may teach others also.

Lesson X.—Jesus and the Sabbath Math. xii 1-13).—Jesus and the Sabbath (Math. xii, 1-13). Golden Text, Math., xii, 8, "The Son of Man is Lord, even of the Sabbath day." Not days, however holy, nor ordinances nor institutions, however ancient and honorable, must be exalted above Him. These Pharisees would honor the Sabbath above the Lord of the Sabbath because they knew Him not. If we honor anything above Him, it is because we know Him not. Our motto must be "The Lord alone shall be exalted. Isa. ii, 11, 17).

Lesson XI.—The Wheat and the Tares (Math. xiii, 24-30, 36-43). Golden Text, Math. xiii, 37, "He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man." He sows nothing but good seed, the incorruptible seed of the word, which, when received into our hearts, makes us the good seed of this parable, to be planted in the soil by constant death to self that the seed may multiply, for except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit (John xii).

Lesson XII.—John the Baptist Beheaded (Math. xiv, 1-12). Golden Text, Prov. iv, 23, "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." The application of this golden text to the lesson is a little difficult, for John's heart was all right, but there was no use telling Herod or Herodias to keep their hearts, for they could not do it.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 27. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—God's unfailing promises.—Ps. xci, 1-16.

The Ninety-first Psalm has no inscription and has been very naturally ascribed to David. It most beautifully describes God's loving and watchful care and the peace of those who trust in Him. It is supposed to be dramatic in character and to be distributed among three voices. The first voice utters, in place, verses 1, 3-8, last clause of 9 to 13; the second voice, verse 2 and the first clause of verse 9, and the third voice, speaking for God, verses 14-16. This makes an intensely interesting arrangement of the psalm, adds to its beauty and variety, and it was probably sung in this way.

There are many precious promises of God contained in this psalm. The first two voices speak of God as a refuge and fortress, as one who shall deliver His people from the snare of the fowler and the devouring pestilence, from terror by night and the arrow that flieth by day, from sickness, from evil, from plague, by giving His angels charge over them, to keep them in all their ways. All these blessings were founded upon the precious promises of God, and the psalmist, having learned from experience that God never failed spoke, with assurance when he declared practically that he would not fail. God's people in all ages have learned that God never failed in the keping of His promises. This is the most precious thing about the promises of God—they are unfailing.

God Himself is represented in the third voice of this psalm, and He makes a number of promises and gives His reasons for making them.

1. God promises deliverance because of love. "Because he has set his love upon Me I will deliver him." If we love God as a kind and loving Father, He will watch over us and deliver us from many things, but particularly from sin and the consequences of sin.

2. God promises position because of knowledge of His name. "I will set him on high because he knoweth My name." If we recognize God and exalt Him, He will honor and exalt us.

3. God promises to answer prayer. "When he calleth upon Me, I will answer him." The promise to answer prayer is one of the most precious and most often repeated of the promises of God's word. "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you."

4. God promises long life. "With long life will I satisfy him and show him My salvation." There is not only in God's promise of life a promise of length of days in this life, but eternal life beyond the grave.

Let us believe in God's promises. Let us live upon them, trusting Him and looking to Him for all things.

Bible Readings.—Num. xxiii, 19, 20; Deut. vii, 9; Joshua xxiii, 14; I Kings viii, 56; Ps. lxxxix, 1-4; cv, 39-45; Isa. xliii, 26; Rom. i, 1-3; II Cor. i, 20; Eph. iii, 6; II Tim. i, 1; Titus i, 1, 2; Heb. vi, 13-20; x, 23; II Pet. ii, 1-4.

"Blessed Are the Unsuccessful."

A little story poem tells of an eager throng of youth setting out in a race. One among them excelled all the others in courage, strength and grace and gave early promise of winning. The way was long and hard, and the goal far away, but still this favorite held his place in the lead.

> But, ah, what folly! See, he stops
> To raise a fallen child,
> To place it out of danger's way,
> With kiss and warning mild.
> A fainting comrade claims his care.
> Once more he turns aside,
> Then stays his strong young steps to be
> A feeble woman's guide.
> And so, wherever duty calls
> Or sorrow or distress,
> He leaves his chosen path to aid,
> To comfort and to bless.

So at last, when the race is over and the victors are crowned, some with fame's laurels, some with love's flowers, some with gold circlets on their brows, all unknown, unheeded, with empty hands and uncrowned head stands this, the real winner of the race. Earth had no crown for him, but on his face shines heaven's serene and holy light.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

An Able Preacher.

Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Metropolitan Temple, New York, is considered by Hugh Price Hughes as the ablest preacher in America. Mr. Cadman reports over 1,000 communicants in his church, when three years ago there were not 200—920 having been received into membership in two years and eight months.

Far More Important.

Life is too short to wait until some great thing can be done. Little deeds of kindness, little acts of charity done day by day as we go along through life, are far more important than one single deed, however great.—Reformed Church Messenger.

Religious Notes.

It is stated that the Mormon church has 1,400 missionaries who receive no salary, but travel and work for the mere payment of their expenses.

The agents and correspondents of the American Bible society employed last year 382 men, each working on an average of more than eight months.

It is stated that Rev. Dr. Hugh Johnson of Washington is a lineal descendant of John Tetzel, Luther's goad, who was said to have sold indulgences by authority of Rome.

It is quoted of Rev. Hugh Price Hughes that he said the best definition of a revival was once given by an idiot, who said it meant "a time when God makes new Methodists and mends old ones."

Abbe Bourrier, for 20 years a priest in the Roman Catholic church, of good standing and unimpeachable morality, was recently ordained as a Protestant minister in connection with the Established Presbyterian church in France.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning March 27. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, Missionary Leadings.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Acts xvi, 6-14.

No real Christian can be indifferent to the spiritual needs of other men. It is of the very essence of salvation that it make each one interested in the salvation of all others. Christ "tasted death for every man" and sends all His followers into the world to call men to God by announcing the glad tidings of forgiveness of sins and reconciliation.

The success of this work depends on two agencies. First the spirit of God and second the co-operation of men. Neither can be spared. Men must do the evangelizing. The gospel must be preached. Converts must be organized into churches and taught and shepherded as the fold of Christ. All needful human agencies and appliances must be used. But all these human means are powerless and valueless unless the Holy Spirit energize them and give them efficiency. His guidance is promised and may be, indeed must be, relied upon at all times or the workers will go astray.

Paul is directed by providential circumstances from one field of effort to another. His reason would often lead him to attempt to go in a certain direction, but at times the way would be closed and indications would point out a path before unthought of or rejected.

It is the same at the present time with us as individuals, as societies and as a church. God still guides the work. His Spirit supervises all operations, inspires all right plans, sustains the worker and makes effective all efforts which bring success.

India, China, Africa and every field of missionary activity are as truly under the immediate care of God now as in the ancient days were Macedonia and Galatia, Achaia and Asia. The history of modern missions is the romance of divine leadings in most unexpected ways.

No more fascinating task can be assumed than the watching the providential progress and development of the kingdom of God among the nations of the earth called heathen. During the present century the most marvelous advancement has been seen. Fiji in 1840 was cannibal. Today it has the most thoroughly Christianized community on the globe. The story of missionary enterprise is intensely thrilling and gives abundant assurance that heroism is still a present quality in the race and that the divine presence is still with the faithful as truly as when He abode in the shekinah in the tabernacle in the wilderness or inspired Paul to preach the gospel to the gentiles.

Ecumenical Conference.

In July, 1901, the next ecumenical conference of Methodism is to be held in City Road chapel, London. Without doubt this will be the most notable gathering of Methodists ever held. Much history has been made since the last meeting. The League and guild have been organized and grown to large proportions and developed unexpected resources. The missionary work has expanded and progressed with steady pace. Hospital, educational and relief interests have made great advances. The world has moved forward and upward. It is well that this meeting should be held in the world's metropolis. Nowhere else can mission work among the masses be so well studied as there. The darkest spot on earth is in London. The best efforts of Christianity in reform and relief agencies are there in operation. The problem and attempts at its solution can there be studied.

Much attention should also be given to historic Methodism. Localities in London, Bristol, Oxford and Epworth connected with early Methodist history should be visited and studied.

Many Leagues should prepare to attend this great conference.

Positive Goodness.

This is not necessarily offensive or unduly aggressive. It may be gentleness itself and of rare refinement. To be effective goodness must not be merely negative. To do nothing specially wrong or harmful is not a high condition of moral life. One must be actively and positively good to be of value to himself or any one else. It is well not to push any one down in the struggle of life. It is far better to help some one up. "Do not steal" is good as far as it goes. "Give to the needy" is better and reaches much further. Speak no evil is a difficult rule to follow. Speak lovingly and helpfully is better and easier. Repression is ever painful. Get into the right track, then take off the brakes and open the throttle valve of your soul. There is less danger and more joy and profit in running at good speed than with brakes set and steam down.

Indianapolis, 1899.

The next international Epworth League convention will be held in the beautiful city of Indianapolis. It is anticipated that 40,000 delegates will be in attendance. The city is capable of taking care of that number comfortably. The halls, hotels and churches to be used are all located near together. The lot for the great tent is across the street from Tomlinson hall. The city is emphatically one of elegant homes. The business section is modern and imposing. The principal streets are paved with asphalt. It is none too early to talk and plan for this meeting. It will be grander than anything before.

The First Sunday School.

It is probable that the first Sunday school in America was that organized by Bishop Asbury in 1786 at Thomas Crenshaw's, Hanover county, Ga. In 1790 provision was made by conference for Sunday schools and books. John Wesley was the first man in England to publicly approve of the plan of Robert Raikes. From the first Methodism has had her eyes open to the needs of the young people and has amply provided to meet those needs.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And stil what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

A POPULAR MISTAKE.

Regarding Remedies for Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

The national disease of Americans is indigestion or in its chronic form, dyspepsia, and for the very reason that it is so common many people neglect taking proper treatment for what they consider trifling stomach trouble, when, as a matter of fact, indigestion lays the foundation of many incurable diseases. No person with a vigorous, healthy stomach will fall a victim to consumption. Many kidney diseases and heart troubles date their beginning from poor digestion; thin, nervous people are really so because their stomachs are out of gear; weary, languid, faded out woman owe their condition to imperfect digestion.

When nearly every person you meet is afflicted with weak digestion it is not surprising that nearly every secret patent medicine on the market claims to be a cure for dyspepsia, as well as a score of other troubles, when in fact, as Dr. Werthier says, there is but one genuine dyspepsia cure which is perfectly safe and reliable, and moreover, this remedy is not a patent medicine, but it is a scientific combination of pure pepsin (free from animal matter) vegetable essences, fruits salts and bismuth. It is sold by druggists under name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. No extravagant claims are made for them, but for indegestion or any stomach trouble, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are far ahead of any remedy yet discovered. They act on the food eaten, no dieting is necessary, simply eat all the wholesome food you want and these tablets will digest it. A cure results, because all the stomach needs is a rest, which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give by doing the work of digestion.

Druggists sell these tablets at 50 cents per package. Little book on stomach diseases and testimonials sent free by addressing Stuart Co., chemists, Marshall, Mich. 3 21 23 25

Gorgeous Patterns That Produce Brilliant Effects.

By special arrangement with the N. Y. Sun)

Thin Summer materials have begun to appear in shop windows. Last season's patterns are tame in comparison with the brilliant combinations spread out for inspection. Large, gorgeous tulips are scattered over a black and white irregular striped ground, and wide stripes in flowered designs are divided by narrow bands of plain color on a white ground. Many of the new organdies are striped or checked in close white stripes for a foundation, and the flounces are scattered over these regardless. Every thing is to be bayadere this coming season, if the salesman has been correctly informed, and whether your material is striped up and down or across it must be made up with the stripes running around, providing your height will admit of the shortened effect.

Shaded effects are quite conspicious among the early importations of new materials, and these are shaded moires in gorgeous greens, blues, and purples, with waved stripes of satin, or large moons spotting them all over.

For calling, the young lady's gown is of cloth in some light color, chiefly gray, or of velvet. Braid and bands of velvet trim the cloth dresses, and they are decidedly more dressy than the conventional tailor gown. The perfectly plain tailor gown is not a feature of afternoon dress this season, except as purely a street costume, and it is not worn for calling by the up-to-date young woman. A very smart tailor-made gown shown in the illustration is of mordore cloth, trimmed elaborately with narrow black braid. The blouse bodice has a belt of cream satin and violet velvet fastened with a jewelled buckle, a revers of embroidered cream satin, and an edging of chinchilla on the basque, epaulettes, collar and cuffs. Another cloth gown in fawn color is embroidered with brown silk, ruches of brown chiffon edge the white silk revers, and the necktie is of accordion plaited white chiffon striped with gold.

One of the latest models in coats is carried out in blue cloth, with one row of narrow black silk braid outlining the edges. The small yoke and collar are of violet velvet striped round with gold, and the ruche is of kilted black chiffon.

TRIMMING ON DRESSY GOWNS.

Cording Used in Every Possible Way on Blouse Waists.

The Pacquin skirt, with the circular flounce from the knee and the apron effect with flounce below, seems to lead in the organdie gowns, and narrow ruffles, ruches, and insertions of lace are the prevailing modes of trimming. Narrow satin ribbon, both gathered and plain, is also very much in evidence.

All the indications of coming fashions tend to show that dressy gowns of every sort will have trimmed skirts, but many of the tailor gowns are made with plain skirts. Of course there are exceptions, where rows of stitching, cloth bands, or braid are used, but the skirt which is nearly if not quite plain is recommended by the most fashionable tailors as the only means of giving a distinctive, ladylike elegance to your gown, since the shops are so filled with tucked, corded, and lavishly braided models.

Skirts with all their diversity and various modes of decoration cannot claim the palm, for the blouse waist certainly takes the lead as a means of producing variety of every sort. Cording is employed in every possible way on the latest blouse waist, and is covered with velvet in some contrasting color, and sewn in curved or straight lines across or up and down the bodice. The material is not always gathered over the cords, as it is one of the new fancies to cover them plain.

Tucks are still and will continue to be a conspicuous feature of the silk blouse waists, being made by the thousand for spring and summer wear, but the latest fancy is the fine tucks, no wider than the tiny lines in an infant's gown. It is evidently the quality of the handiwork which is to distinguish the elegance of our gowns this season, and it cannot be too well done for the approval of fashion. The tucks can be arranged in horizontal or perpendicular groups, in squares or diagonal clusters, but they must be daintily fine. Rumor says that one of the fads in dress for the coming summer will be the silk waist of some dainty plain color, worn with a white pique skirt or one of white mohair prettily tucked or stitched in tiny cords.

Pan of Grease Was Ablaze.

At 8 o'clock this morning the fire department was called to Mr. Sline's house on West Third street, near Plainfield avenue, in response to a call sent in from Box 45, at the corner of Muhlenberg place and South Second street. A pan of grease had been left standing in the oven of the kitchen stove and becoming overheated began to blaze. This frightened Mrs. Sline, who gave the alarm. By the time the department arrived the fire was nearly out and the use of an extinguisher finished it. The damage was very slight.

THE ASBESTOS CLUB.

By Cornelius A. Leveridge.

It is but a few years that this association of well-known residents of our city have been known as the Asbestos Club. Prior to such limited organization its membership represented individually, varied and substantial interests in this growing city.

When we contemplate the geneology of the four generations of early settlers that are numbered with the dead, and the original natives who roamed through these forests, who either disposed of their lands by purchase or forfeited them by sequestration and the fifth generation that lingers in neighborhood distances on the miles of highway, who find only here and there a few companions of their youth, while thousands have passed to the unknown, since this place was originally a settled community, we are circumscribing in brevity a vast amount of local and individual history. Of these early settlers we are just to say of them—that they were gentlemen of stalwart presence, courtly and dignified in their demeanor, and affable in social intercourse. Many possessed with superior executive ability, and in all business relations manifesting sound judgment which made their opinion widely respected.

It was in the fall of the year of 1848 when the writer of this article became acquainted with this locality. Having been for a time in the capacity of a medical student on an island where yellow fever was prevalent—but without personal fear—yet he was forced to leave and directed to the mountains, but finally returning made the hostelry of old Abram Laing his stopping place—where now stands the magnificent monument of the enterprising and philanthropic merchant and inventor—the late Geo. H. Babcock. He found the little hamlet then contained about 1800 inhabitants, and surrounded by well kept farms with fine orchards and stocked with abundance of cattle. The roads were kept in good order, and in the pleasant seasons, equestrian and lovers of fine horses resorted from the cities to the many routes through this pleasant valley.

It was a frequent and familiar drive to the well known hostelry, and the landlord being manorborn, knew the finest drives and was versed with many local incidents and peculiar habits of the people. Upon one occasion, while on a visit to these pleasant surroundings, the writer was surprised by being accosted by an unusual shrill voice and a one-eyed squinted face, whose possessor proved to be the sole and only real estate agent of the locality. Having in remembrance the farms that were advertised in the city papers by this enterprising gentleman, and the blunt way he introduced his business, saying: "Young man would you like some acres herebouts," it dawned upon him at once that this was the enterprising advertiser of farms, and the well known real estate agent, Steven Vail, with his well known buggy and cream colored horse, ready to show up the whole country.

The offer could not be resisted, and the first offer was sixty acres for $8.5 0 on very "easy terms," belonging to the late Benjamin Stelle, upon part of which now stands the First Baptist church. At this time few lots were selling, but the New York market was having its influence upon adjacent New Jersey and small parcels were increasing into lot prices, and in my visits to the office of the then only lawyer, late Cornelius Boice, I found much of the transfers of both farm and lot property fell into his hands. This well-known and highly-respected lawyer died September 16, 1864. About the year 1863 there was an unfortunate railroad accident near the adjacent town of Westfield. Among the injured was the late Martin M. Thorn, who then made daily trips to New York city. This occurrence compelled him to give up his business in New Yerk, and he subsequently opened a small office near the corner of Park avenue and West Front street for the transaction of real estate and money loans on mortgage. His desk stood in the centre of the office, and two long slab benches each side were the daily resting places for the many local investors, and those interested in real estate and the loaning of money. The mention of this incident raises at once to the minds of the frequenters of the now well known Asbestos Club, the incipient stages of the blade, the ear, and corn in the ear of the present organization. As they did then, so they do now—buying, selling, loaning, and borrowing on bond and mortgage. The daily habits are not confined to mere social assembly, but in their rooms on East Front street, over the Dime Savings Bank, brokers, lawyers, business men and occasionally a clergyman can be seen as frequent recipients of the club's hospitalities.

A transition of farms into lots and a hamlet into a city found a population of 7,000 people in 1869, the year of incorporation, and now estimated about 19,000 souls, including the borough. Such is the representation in a few years of the life and enterprise of a few denizens of a land office, and the dignity of a well-founded necessity—the Asbestos Club.

In 1873 a fire burnt the building occupied by Mr. Thorn and for a few days he occupied an office on Park avenue, and again being burned out he moved to North avenue opposite the railroad depot. He was very popular at large and quite so with his friends, who were daily with him in his office. If it was an inquiry for old John Simpson for instance—"You'll find him at Thorns." It was this well remembered and much loved of our number, who, in 1882 suggested we share the rent with Mr. Thorn. Then it was the back room was fitted for our express use. And daily could be found there Martin M. Thorn, Jasper G. Gadmus, Theodore A. Gillies, Levi Hetfield, H. P. Bronk, Ran F. Harriott, C. S. A. Davis, John Simpson, Jeremiah Manning, Daniel Marshall J. B. Clever, G. W. Rockafellow, William Hagg Jr., W. F. Markley, P. O. Button, James Brand, George H. Burgess, John Jones, Stebbins Martin, Capt. B. T. DePue, Lewis F. Wadsworth, Andrew Vanderbeek.

After the death of Mr. Thorn in California Mr. Markley occupied the rooms for some time, and the club continued to hire the rear, but subsequently moved to Love's building on Watchung and North avenues, and in about three years took the hall recently vacated by the Y. M. C. A. over the Dime Savings Bank, East Front street, which are neatly fitted expressly for their use. Daily the rooms are opened from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. and now number some of the oldest and respected representative residents of this city.

The following are the present members: James Merritt, Isaac Brown, A. B. Dunlap, C. A. Leveridge, Andrew Love, Wm. C. Ayers, Wm. Campbell, F. R. Stevens, John Ross, Col. John Johnson, Wm. H Brower, Noah W. Pike, Wm. H. Stanbery, Major Gen. W. E. Long, R. H. Cook, W. R. Cosgrove, Asa Collier, W. W. Coriell, B. Cosgrove, Harvey Moore, Frank M. Bacon, Henry D. Paul and others.

Hastily comprehending in a few facts the brevity this article is intended to convey, it will be readily seen that it has been condensed, and no effort put forth to make it in any sense more than a skeleton of history mention in connection with the names of both living and dead, and a pleasant reminder and memory of those former friends whom so many now past threescore must soon follow to the great unknown.

SPREADING THE GOSPEL.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF A BAPTIST SOCIETY.

Record of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society Shows it to Have Accomplished Much for Christian Cause.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church was celebrated in a fitting manner yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church. The rooms and platform were very prettily decorated with flowers, while an excellent likenness of the late Mrs. W. C. Butler, who, for twenty-one years, was president of the society, was given a prominent place over the platform.

Miss Linda Butler, president of the society, presided and at the opening made a few remarks concerning the society and its growth. However, the historical sketch of the society was presented by five different members who gave five years each. The society was organized in April, 1873, and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, who has always held the office of first vice-president, gave the report for the first five years. The officers of the society at that time were: President, Mrs. W. C. Butler; vice-presidents, Mrs. T. R. Howlett, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Theodore French; recording secretary, Mrs. B. J. Shreve; treasurer, Mrs. E. W. Runyon. Of these officers it has been said that they had great staying power. As stated above, Mrs. Butler held the office of president for twenty-one years, which was up to the time of her death. For two years afterward Mrs. D. J. Yerkes acted as president until Miss Linda Butler was selected for the position which she now holds. Mrs. B. J. Shreve has always held the position of secretary, and Mrs. Daniel Boice that of a position as a member of the board of managers. Mrs. Alex. Thorn, Miss Anna White, Mrs. Charles Smith have always held the positions of collectors for the society.

The second five years was reported by Mrs. S. T. Wilson. During this period the contributions reached the high-water mark. In each year nearly $1,000 was received. Among other large gifts was one of $100 given by Charles K. Francis in memory of his mother, Mrs. Hannah C. Francis, one of the founders of the first Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies in New York. He still continues to give $100 each year. In the third period, which was presented by Mrs. Bleeker, of Orange, there were many deaths. Among them were Mrs. Peter Balen, Mrs. French, Mrs. Manning Stelle and Mrs. Elston Marsh. During this period many annual gifts were started and are continued until this day. At this time the women of the Park Avenue Baptist church formed a foreign missionary society and withdrew from the above church society. Mrs. Geo. H. Batchelor presented the report for the fourth period, during which the Gold Dust Band was formed. The most notable work of the society occurred at this time when it decided to support Miss Ida Fay as a medical missionary in India. Mrs. Alfred Berry, Mrs. Isabella Sleight, Mrs. L. W. Serrell and Mrs. J. W. Vail died during this period. Mrs. B. J. Shreve presented the report for the last five years and her paper showed a decided progress in the work of the society. At present there are 80 life members and 61 collectors. There have been 75 visits from missionaries and 300 letters received.

Mrs. Reuben Knox, treasurer, presented her report, showing the whole amount received during the past twenty-five years to be $18,560.97, and $1,225 has been received as memorial funds. On the side of disbursements $200 was appropriated for missions. Of this amount $75 supported two native girls in Japan. Two Bible women have also been supported, one in China and another in Burmah.

During the afternoon Mrs. Pettit, of Elizabeth, made a few remarks, and congratulations were extended by Mrs. Milliken from the Crescent Avenue church, and Mrs. Scribner from the Park Avenue Baptist church; also Mrs. Morgan Taylor, a member of the society in Colorado.

Interspersing the above there were recitations by Beulah VanWinkle, Jerry Manning, Jessie Clawson and Wallace Pierce, and a vocal solo by Miss Bessie Blair, accompanied by Mrs. H. E. Rider.

After the meeting tea and wafers were served by members of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society. Mrs. G. A. Chapman, Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., and Mrs. Lowry poured tea.

The officers of the society for the ensuing term are, President, Miss Linda Butler; vice-presidents, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Mrs. S. T. Wilson, Mrs. Wm. White; secretary, Mrs. B. J. Shreve; treasurer, Mrs. Reuben Knox. The society starts another year with exceedingly bright prospects for success.

ATHLETIC GIRLS IN LIVELY BASKET BALL.

Nearly Two Hundred People Witness the Game.

CHANCE FOR ROUGH PLAY.

BUT THE FAIR PARTICIPANTS ACTED WITH DUE MODESTY.

The Game Played Without Dividing Lines, Which was a New Departure for the Third Class Team and They Found the Game Harder to Play That Way—Juniors Played a Snappy Game and Did Some Accurate Passing—Game was Close—Juniors Won by One Point—Players and the Score.

Basket ball, as played by the girls of the Plainfield High School, was again demonstrated to be a decidely popular game. The teams from the Junior and Third classes met in the gymnasium of the Girls' Athletic Association of the High School in the Whittier building yesterday afternoon, and played a very interesting game. Nearly 200 people witnessed the game from the side lines. The play was close throughout and the Juniors won only by one point, the score being 10 to 9.

The game was played without the dividing lines. While the Juniors have always played that way, it was a new departure for the Third class team, and they found the game harder to play. While there was nothing immodest or rough in that way of playing the game, it did not appeal to the spectators as much as the game with dividing lines. It also opened the way for harder and rougher play.

It was, nevertheless, a very interesting contest. The Junior girls played a snappy game and did some accurate passing. They had been taught by their coach to play a more offensive game than the other teams and used their arms as well as their bodies in interfering with the progress of their opponents. The change in the manner of playing the game rather handicapped the Third class girls.

The score at the end of the first half was 3 to 6 in favor of the Juniors. Twelve minute halves were played.

the teams lines up as follows:

JUNIORS.		THIRD CLASS.
M. Stirling	right forward	B. Miner
S. Krom	left forward	P. Denton
J. Pruden	centre	E. Moore
A. Conant	right guard	A. Morgan
E. Demarest	left guard	E. Maxson

George Procter Smith acted as referee. The umpires were Walter Long and Charles Burdette Morse. C. E. A. Heywood acted as timer.

UNION COUNTY WILL GET THE BOULEVARD

And It Will Be Paid For By Trolley Capitalists.

SQUIRE BILL MADE A LAW.

SIGNED BY GOVERNOR VOORHEES YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

It is Designed to Enable the Board of Freeholders to Sell the Franchise Between Plainfield and Elizabeth—The Measure was Bitterly Attacked, but Assemblyman Squire Found a Way to Bring Hudson County Opponents into Line in Favor of the Measure—Union Co. Well Represented.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 26.—The Bergen county trolley plan is a reality—made so by the signature of Gov. Voorhees to the bill introduced by Assemblyman Squire. The Governor signed the law yesterday. The law, as is well known, is designed to enable the Board of Freeholders of Union county to sell outright the trolley franchise from Elizabeth to Plainfield for a term of seventy-five years. The bill will also enable the Freeholders of Union to build a beautiful boulevard from Elizabeth to Plainfield.

Probably no measure of the 302 introduced in the House was so bitterly attacked as was that introduced by Mr. Squire. A less influential member than Mr. Squire would have found it difficult to place the bill on the statute books. The story of the troubles of No. 125 is illustrative of the work of a vigorous legislator when he fathers important measures or bills establishing a new method.

The people of Union county turned out in large numbers and impressed members that the measure was a just one. But Hudson county still continued to fight the bill. Then Mr. Squire made a critical examination of the pending measures, and he found that House bill No. 178, introduced by Mr. Cristien, was of the greatest importance to the electric light interests of North Jersey. Instantly he proceeded to hold up No. 178. Then the Hudson delegation lost its interest in the horror of No. 125. The score or less of frivolous amendments offered with a view of killing the Squire bill were withdrawn, and in due time the bill passed the House, with the aid of the Hudson county members.

Then No. 178 passed the House, and at the eleventh hour the Senate permitted the measure to go through. And thus it happens that Union county will get her boulevard and her trolley and enough money to pay for the boulevard out of the trolley corporation.

Originally the county was offered by John Kean the sum of $100,000 for the franchise, but since the passage of the bill $300,000, it is is said, has been offered.

Hull resigned from the secretaryship after a long period of faithful service and his assistant was elected to fill his place.

The missionary society of the Sunday-school held its election, which resulted as follows: President, S. A. Bingaman; vice-president, J. B. Joy; secretary and treasurer, Arthur E. Crone.

Pastor Johnston Remembered.

The members of the Junior Epworth League of Grace Methodist Episcopal church met in the church yesterday afternoon and enjoyed themselves with an excellent programme of songs and recitations. The affair was arranged for the benefit of Pastor Johnston and his wife, who will soon leave the church. The little folks acquitted themselves with credit under the direction of Mrs. A. A. Taft, superintendent of the league. After the rendition of the programme Pastor Johnston was agreeably surprised by a present from the league of a valuable and handsome book. Mr. Johnston thanked the donors for the expression of kindness and good will shown.

W. R. Jennings, of the borough, will lead the East Third Street mission meeting tomorrow evening.

JURY DISAGREED ON SUNDAY SELLING CASE.

Stood Six to Six for the Eight Hours They Were Out.

DISCHARGED AT 8 O'CLOCK.

MAYOR FISK ORDERS THAT OFFENDERS BE ARRESTED TOMORROW.

Trial of Jose Carbone Will Have to be Held Again Before a New Jury—Mayor Fisk Orders That All Except Seventh-day Baptists and Hebrews Close Their Stores Tomorrow, and the Former Can Only Do Business by Pulling Down Their Curtains—A Lively Time is Expected Tomorrow.

The first Sunday seller to come to trial in the City Court was not convicted of violating the law, neither was he acquitted. After being out from 11:45 o'clock in the the afternoon to 8 o'clock at night, the jury failed to agree and was discharged.

The story of the trial was published in yesterday's Press. The alleged offender was Jose Carbone, whose little candy and fruit store is located at 128 North avenue. He was represented by Councilman Walter L. Hetfield and the city by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh. Carbone's defence was that he was a habitual observer of the Sabbath Saturday and was therefore entitled to keep his place open Sunday. The city tried to prove that it was a pecuniary measure.

The jury of twelve men was locked up in the ante-room of the Council Chamber at 12:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon without any dinner. Patrolman McCue was put in charge. All through the afternoon the case was argued over and over again among the twelve men. When the pangs of hunger became too strong, H. W. Marshall, one of the jurors, signalled to the engineer in his laundry in the rear of the Council Chambers. A cord was lowered and while the officer was kept at the other side of the room, refreshments were hoisted up to the hungry jurymen.

The jury was evenly divided on the question, six voting for conviction and six for acquittal. Each side was firmly determined to stand out for their opinion to the end. It was thought that the jury would be locked up for the night, but City Judge DeMeza finally decided to let them off at 8 o'clock as both sides announced that they would not change their minds under any circumstances. They were then allowed to get their dinner and depart homeward.

While the disagreement of the jury leaves the question of Sunday closing just where it stood before, Mayor Fisk has determined to go forward in the matter and enforce the ordinance according to his interpretation of it. He has announced that the Seventh-Day Baptist and Hebrews, who observe the Sabbath on Saturday, may keep their stores open on Sunday if they keep their curtains down and their doors closed and make no pretensions to doing business. All others, he declares, must close their shops on Sunday or else suffer the penalty. He is determined to close up the traffic and says there is a way to stop it.

The trial of Fortuntio Mergentino, of 128 Park avenue, for selling cider on Sunday, was adjourned this morning in the City Court until next Friday morning.

OUR FLEET IS MENACED

Naval Officer's Opinion of Spanish Torpedo Flotilla's Movement.

WARSHIPS AT THEIR MERCY

Officer Says the Flotilla Bound for Porto Rico Could Destroy the Big Battle Ships Now in the Vicinity of Key West.

Key West, Fla., March 26.—It was not until yesterday that the news of the departure of the Spanish torpedo flotilla from the Canary Islands became known among the naval officers here. The feeling created was of a hostile character, especially among the officers of the torpedo boats which are in this harbor. One of the most prominent of these officers said:

"If the United States allows the Spanish boats to get to Porto Rico it would be the biggest mistake ever made. They are a greater menace to the safety of our fleet than if the entire Spanish navy was brought to these waters. At Porto Rico they will be nearer to Key West than Havana. Only two torpedo boats in our navy would have any chance of getting away from the Spanish torpedo destroyers. The Iowa, New York and Indiana, being six miles off land, would practically be at the mercy of, say, a dozen Spanish torpedo boats which could run from Porto Rico in short time should war be declared. We have no protected harbors here and we have not a single torpedo destroyer, and unless a fleet powerful enough to be proof against these torpedo boats is quickly concentrated in these waters, or unless the Spanish flotilla is warned to keep further away, I should judge that it would be better to take every United States warship as far away as possible from this menacing force which Spain intends to concentrate within such a convenient distance as Porto Rico.

"It is all very well to talk of peace and no probability of war, but at the same time, while international relations are strained, and, as a torpedo boat expert, I must say that if every ship in the United States Navy was brought into these waters it would be none too formidable a display when the strength of the Spanish flotilla is considered."

FLOTILLA MUST STOP.

If Spanish Torpedo Boats Do Not Halt at Porto Rico War Will Begin.

Washington, March 26.—Although the President considers the invasion by the Spanish torpedo flotilla as very serious, it is claimed that he does not view it with the same degree of apprehension as naval officers, who desire to intercept the Spaniards before they reach their destination.

He considers that when the flotilla reaches Porto Rico it will still be 1,200 miles from our nearest cities, and if it leaves that island it will be time to exhibit alarm. The flotilla can hardly cross the Atlantic in less than ten days or two weeks, and by that time a clearer insight into the Spanish motive will have been obtained by the most positive diplomatic instructions, if necessary.

The right of Spain to send troops or war vessels to her colonies is recognized by the State Department, but if her preparations pass the limits of mere defense, this country will present the signal for immediate action of a forceful character.

In many quarters there have been suggestions that the fleet should be intercepted in mid-ocean, but they will be disregarded. There will be no suggestion to Spain that we are aware of the only possible purpose that Government can have in sending such a squadron to these shores or to the Antilles, but when the flotilla reaches Porto Rico there it will stop or war begin.

No one here is in a mood to sit complacently by and, out of a desire to comply with the equivocations of diplomacy, permit another danger to place in jeopardy the lives of American sailors. The navy particularly is not. It is ready and willing for action, and much rather would go upon the ocean and intercept this flotilla than await the hour when another external and malicious agency would claim the crew of some other of our ships. It is not believed that the temper of the nation will justify any action which would permit the Spanish fleet to leave Porto Rico.

The subject, however, is sufficiently remote to give time for thought as to the best way of meeting the danger. Assuming good weather and fair progress, the flotilla need not be expected to reach Porto Rico within twelve days. Before that time events probably will have shaped policies into something like definite form, but, whether or not prudence will dictate some course of action with reference to this fleet which is crossing the ocean on no mission other than hostile, the navy means to be ready to strike, and to strike effectively.

AN OUTSIDE EXPLOSION

The Responsibility for the Maine Disaster Not Fixed by Court.

PREPARING FOR THE CRISIS

Direct Statement by a Cabinet Officer After Hearing the Report—The President's Plans Remain Unchanged He Says—Warlike Preparations.

Washington, March 26.—The Board of Inquiry into the loss of the Maine finds that the explosion which destroyed the Maine was from the outside and does not fix the responsibility for the disaster.

It does not express an opinion as to the character of the explosive, but the testimony goes to show that it was a powerful submarine mine, the exact character of which is not determined by the testimony, though the belief was expressed that it was what is known as a floating submarine mine.

There were two explosions, the Board finds. The first was from the outside and that set off one of the smaller magazines.

Senator Thurston states positively that the report of the Board of Inquiry shows that the destruction of the Maine was caused by an outside explosion.

A copy of the report of the Board of Inquiry on the Maine disaster is now in the hands of the Spanish minister. It was sent to the embassy immediately after the meeting of the Cabinet was concluded yesterday afternoon.

"It is absolutely impossible to make public anything in regard to the meeting or the report," a Cabinet officer said. "We have gone over part of it, discussed and commented upon it, but cussed and commented upon it, but what our action has been we cannot and will not say. The report so far has not been of a nature to change the President's plans. It will go to Congress on Monday, and my opinion is that it will effect no change in the programme the President has mapped out, either in regard to the report or to the Cuban question."

"The crisis has come. We expected that it would when the President received the report. It was an explosion from the outside. We are preparing to meet this crisis, and all I can say now is that the President's plans for sending it to Congress and making it public on Monday have not been changed. Congress and the public will know all. Now the President is preparing for the crisis and the Cabinet must and will keep silent as what was done yesterday.

FEELING IS QUIETER.

Assurances From Congress Arouse Hopes of Averting the Crisis.

Washington, March 26.—There is a quieter feeling in this city since the arrival of the report of the Maine Court of Inquiry. The assurances received from members of Congress, irrespective of party, that every effort would be made to keep Congress from taking hasty action when the report is sent to that body Monday has added to the peaceful feeling, or, to speak more correctly, has given rise to the impression that the crisis has been postponed and hope that it may after all be averted.

Beyond doubt the relief caused by the safe arrival of the report and the quiet and statesmanlike demeanor of the President and his Cabinet during the last few exciting days is responsible for this feeling. It is, nevertheless, apparent at the same time that the crucial week is not over and that developments within the next six days may revive the uneasiness and anxiety of the past week. The President knows this, and so do his advisers. The President has, therefore, not relaxed his preparations to meet any emergency, nor has he ceased his efforts to restrain Congress.

A Spaniard Implicated.

The President and the Cabinet now know the findings of the Court of Inquiry, and therefore he is better prepared to know what effect it will have upon Congress. The report of the court has found that the Maine was blown up by external agencies, and while it does not implicate the Spanish Government, the circumstantial evidence points to the connivance of a Spaniard and totally exonerates the Cubans from any connection with the terrible affair. With this verdict it is still the question, "Can Congress be kept quiet and await the President's policy in regard to the entire Cuban question?"

The sensation caused by the sailing of Spain's torpedo flotilla has not subsided at the Navy Department, and it is still a matter of discussion generally. The officials realize that the United States cannot officially protest against Spain sending her fleet of vessels to any of her possessions, but, nevertheless, the Administration is acting on the subject as a hostile demonstration and is preparing, if not to meet the fleet, to be ready to minimize the dangers its arrival entails upon our own vessels.

The action of the Secretary of the Navy in purchasing the large fleet of yachts and sea-going tugs and equipping them for service and dispatch to Florida waters is but the first step toward a temporary torpedo and picket fleet. This was followed yesterday by the official announcement of the formation of a flying squadron and the placing of Commodore W. S. Schley in command of this fleet. Ever since the order was given to assemble a squadron at Hampton Roads, it has been designated by the newspapers as the flying squadron, and the Navy Department, in detailing Commodore Schley, officially designates the fleet as the flying squadron, and makes the Brooklyn his flagship. The official order naming the fleet the flying squadron also officially indicates the use it is to be put to—to protect the northern coast and to do service on the high seas.

Second Spanish Flotilla.

News has been received at the Navy Department that the Spaniards are preparing a second torpedo flotilla at Cadiz, and that the sailing of the two torpedo boat destroyers from England for Spain, means that these are to join the new fleet. The department is therefore watching most closely every move taken by the Spanish in this direction, and will be kept thoroughly posted in regard to them.

Unless the reading of the report completely changes the President's mind, he will adhere to his plan, fully outlined in these dispatches yesterday, of sending the report to Congress on Monday, with a simple message of transmission. He hopes and expects Congress to quietly and calmly receive the report and refer it to the committees. He will then begin his work relieving the suffering in Cuba, thus eliminating one of the great arguments now used for immediate action. A Cabinet officer says: "It may take some days to collect the supplies needed and put them on vessels to send to Cuba. Unless Congress gets beyond the control of the leaders and precipitates action, the President will wait a reasonable time to give his plan of 'humanitarian intervention' a full trial before he sends his message on the Cuban question to Congress. No one can, however, predict what effect the Maine report will have upon Congress, and what will be the developments in that quarter next week."

WARLIKE PREPARATIONS.

Orders Looking to an Eastward Movement of the Army—Buying Vessels.

Washington, March 26.—That the Government of this country expects pretty soon to need its troops on the Atlantic seaboard is shown by an order which was issued late yesterday to commanders of military departments and posts. This order calls for the immediate shipment to the East of all siege, field and rapid-fire guns in use at all infantry stations east of Denver.

This is a preliminary step in the eastward movement of all the cavalry, artillery and infantry troops of the country, except those on the Pacific coast. The orders for carrying out the rest of this movement only await the signatures of the proper officers to become effective.

Concerns which are making tents, camp equipages and clothing for the Government have been authorized to furnish such articles in unlimited quantities for the use of the army until further notice.

Provision has been made for the transportation of soldiers by special trains. Contracts have been made with traffic managers of all railroads which would be employed. That the final orders for mobilization may be expected soon is shown by these facts: The plans of the War Department contemplate the arrival of troops at their eastern destinations within forty-eight hours of their receipt of orders to start; since the heavy ordnance must go by freight, it has to be sent to the East slightly in advance of the men in order that it may be there when they arrive; the order for the shipment of ordnance has been issued. The Department's plan contemplates the mobilization of troops at various stations, established or projected, in the South Atlantic and Gulf States, from North Carolina to Texas.

The Navy Department is no less active than the War Department, and its preparations for war are no less sweeping. The departure of Spain's torpedo fleet for American waters has spurred this Government to the immediate purchase of about a dozen fast yachts and tugs. The orders for their procurement were issued yesterday, but the department's officers declined to give the names of any of them. As fast as they are transferred to the Government they are to be taken to the Brooklyn Navy Yard and converted into vessels of war. Each will have a battery of quick-firing guns. It is planned to rush the work of arming them so that they can be assigned to duty with the Hampton Roads and Key West squadrons before the Spanish torpedo fleet gets too near.

Most of them will go to Key West; all of them may be sent there. They will be equipped with searchlights, and used to guard the big battle ships and cruisers from night attack by torpedo boats. With their searchlights constantly in use and their rapid-fire guns ready for action, they could detect and stop any attempt on the part of a hostile torpedo boat to get near enough to a battleship or other big vessel to send a torpedo into it.

NOW A FLYING SQUADRON.

Commodore Schley Ordered to Assume Command—Fleet to Be Increased.

Washington, March 26.—Commodore Winfield Scott Schley, at present connected with the Lighthouse Board, has been ordered to command the flying squadron at Hampton Roads, with the Brooklyn as his flagship. His command at present comprises three vessels—the Brooklyn, Columbia and Minneapolis—all ocean greyhounds, but in a short time the squadron probably will be swelled to about a dozen ships.

Commodore Schley has a fine record for discretion, good judgment and fighting qualities. He was in command of the Baltimore during the Chilian trouble that threatened to end in war, and that it had a peaceful termination was due largely to his tact and discretion.

The three vessels at present under his command are all swift cruisers, and among the others which probably will be added to his command are the St. Paul and the St. Louis of the American Line, which were built so that they could be turned into efficient fighting machines at a few days 'notice. These vessels have not been impressed as yet, but arrangements have been perfected between the Government and President Griscom so that no delay will result as soon as the decision is reached that the outlook justifies the large expenditure of money necessary for their transfer to the Navy Department.

The Texas and the Massachusetts are expected to reach Hampton Roads today, and will greatly add to the fighting strength of the flying squadron. The Massachusetts is a first-class battleship of 10,288 tons displacement, while the Tevxas is a second-class battle ship of 6,315 tons. They are less speedy than the cruisers, which naturally would be on the brunt of the hot work of battle.

in which you can get a Piano from us:

ONE.—You can pay cash for it, and thus save the slight additional charge for time payments. The house that says: "No extra charge for instalments" is insincere; it has a lower price for cash, or else it doesn't want to sell except on time.

TWO.—Easy time payments; in most instances a first payment of TEN DOLLARS will secure a Piano at once. Later payments according to your ability.

THREE.—You can rent a new Upright of your own choosing at as low as $4. per month, and if you decide to purchase within a reasonable time we'll allow all the rent you have paid.

PHILADELPHIA'S SENSATION.

Sudden Death of a Bank Cashier and the Closing of the Bank Causes Agitation.

Philadelphia, March 26.—The sudden death of Cashier Hopkins of the People's Bank, the official statement that the bank would remain closed pending an examination of its affairs and the assignment made by the Guarantors' Finance Company has again caused considerable agitation in financial circles, which had about recovered from the effects of the sensational failure of the Chestnut Street Bank and Trust Companies.

The Coroner's investigation yesterday afternoon developed the fact hitherto concealed by the family that Hopkins had committed suicide by shooting himself, and an investigation of the affairs of the People's Bank by its officers resulted in the revelation that Hopkins had in the last two years loaned the bank's funds in large amounts to Richard F. Loper, general manager of the Guarantors' Finance Company. These loans, which remain unpaid and aggregate, it is said, more than $600,000, were made wholly without the knowledge of the officers and directors of the bank. The securities given by Loper as collateral for the loans were found, according to the assertion of one of the bank's officials, to have little or no value.

The State Insurance Commissioner on Wednesday asked the court to appoint a receiver for the Guarantors' company, which did an insurance business, and, it is believed that Hopkins, on learning that the company could not make good its indebtedness to the bank, and knowing that exposure would follow an investigation of Guarantors' affairs, decided to end his troubles by taking his life.

President James McManes, of the People's Bank, said yesterday that he had the utmost confidence in Hopkins and that his deception in the extensive transactions with Loper was an unpleasant surprise.

It is the general belief in financial circles that the bank will pay dollar for dollar to its creditors. President McManes is reputed to be worth at least $10,000,000, and he is credited with the assertion that he would see that no creditor of the bank lost a cent.

State's Money Involved.

Harrisburg, March 26.—The State had on deposit in the People's Bank of Philadelphia $505,000. This is the second time within a few months that the State funds have been tied up by the failure of a bank, the first being in the case of the Chestnut Street National Bank of Philadelphia, where $215,000 was on deposit. The State, however, will not lose a cent, as both it and the State Treasurer are protected amply by bonds. Deputy Attorney General Reeder and Bank Commissioner Gilkeson were summoned to Philadelphia yesterday for the purpose of protecting the State's interest.

CHINESE QUITTING PORT ARTHUR.

Mandarins and Soldiers Ordered to Leave by Russia.

London, March 26.—The Russians, according to a special dispatch from Shanghai, having ordered the Chinese to leave Port Arthur, the mandarins and soldiers are bolting pell-mell, with their baggage, to Chee-Foo, Niu-Chwang and Ta-Ku.

Russian Battleships for the East.

London, March 26.—Three of Russia's largest battle ships, says a special dispatch from St. Petersburg, will shortly proceed through the Bosphorus for Chinese waters.

College Boys Ready for War.

Easton, Pa., March 26.—Three hundred and fifty Lafayette students made an anti-Spanish demonstration in Easton last night, headed by a flag bearer and the college band. They marched to the telegraph office and offered President McKinley their services in case of war. In Centre Square they burned red fire, made speechs, and on the point of a sword burned a flag supposed to represent the standard of Spain. The Stars and Stripes were nailed to the top limb of the tallest tree in the square. The crowd serenaded the Mayor and other municipal officers and returned to the Hill, followed by a great throng of townfolk.

Spain Buys Our Mules.

Atlanta, March 26.—One hundred mules, involving an expenditure of between $7,000 and $8,000, have been purchased in Atlanta by W. B. Leonard, who has a contract with agents of the Spanish Government to furnish them with 1,000 mules. Leonard visited both St. Louis and Kansas City before coming to Atlanta, and has already obtained enough mules to fill his contract. They will be sent to Cuba in two ships, one ship containing 600, sailing April 10, and another containing 400, sailing April 20.

Turk Tackles German To-night.

New York, March 26.—All signs point to a big crowd in Madison Square Garden to-night, when Yousouf, the "Terrible Turk," and Ernest Roeber will try conclusions, best two falls in three, at Graeco-Roman wrestling. Neither man ever has suffered defeat at this game. The Turk has overcome the mightiest men of muscle in all Europe. Roeber's victories date back to 1882, when he defeated Herrman Weisner. Roeber will be seconded by Bob Fitzsimmons.

Receipts of the Jeffries-Jackson Fight.

San Francisco, Cal., March 26.—The National Club announces that the receipts of the Jeffries-Jackson fight were $10,434, which is more than was ever taken in before at a fight at Woodward's Pavilion. Of the amount Jeffries will receive $4,382 and Jackson $1,878. The club's share amounts to $4,174.

Pugilist Smith Out on Bail.

Trenton, N. J., March 26.—Judge Woodruff yesterday afternoon released Jack Smith, the pugilist, in $1,000 bail. Smith is charged with administering the blows which killed Henry Braun, with whom he fought in the Palace Sporting Club's arena last Monday night.

Japan Wont Object.

Shanghai, March 26.—It is authoritatively stated that Japan will not oppose the cession by China of the Liao-Tung ports to Russia, upon the definite assurance that Russia will not interfere in the finances of Corea or the political direction of Corean affairs.

SPANISH REPORT IN

Said to Be "Confused" and Explanations Have Been Asked.

A REQUEST TO WASHINGTON

Want the President to Hold Back the American Verdict Until Both Governments Can Consider Both Reports—Explosion Was of Internal Origin.

Madrid, March 26.—The Spanish Government has received the Spanish report on the loss of the Maine, which, however, is said to be "confused," and explanations are said to have been requested. In any case, it is added, it will not be published until after the report of the United States Naval Court of Inquiry has been made public.

The Correspondencia says the Spanish Government will dispatch a note to Washington requesting that the report on the loss of the Maine be not sent to Congress until both reports are presented and considered by both governments.

Parties cognizant of the affair unanimously declare the Spaniards report that the explosion which wrecked the battle ship was of internal origin.

Spain Provoking War.

Washington, March 26.—The Spanish Government has wired officially to Washington that the Spanish Naval Commission holds the disaster to the Maine to be of internal origin. The Government of Spain, it can be said positively, is not disposed to turn back the torpedo flotilla now proceeding from the Canaries, and would be disinclined to consider a suggestion from this Government tending to interfere with the disposition by Spain of her own naval forces.

SPANIARDS FEEL INSULTED.

Provoked at Suggestions of Treachery Regarding the Maine.

London, March 26.—The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"The tenor of the comment of the Spanish press is that the American Commission of Inquiry into the Maine disaster is afraid of an international investigation. It was first reported that the United States would not accede to Captain Sigsbee's request, but later information alleges that the Washington Government is discussing the advisability of blowing up the remains of the Maine.

"The general belief in Madrid is that America does not consider the Maine question a sound basis for conflict, and is seeking to provoke Spain by sending help, nominally to the reconcentrados, but really to the rebels. The Spanish press is unanimous in treating as an insult America's suspicion that Spain is guilty of having blown up the Maine."

PROVISIONAL WAR BILL.

A Measure Authorizing Defense After Congress Shall Have Adjourned.

Washington, March 26.—Gen. Wheeler, of Alabama, yesterday introduced in the House a bill providing "that in the event of an act of war being committed by Spain or any other foreign nation prior to the meeting of the next session of Congress, the President of the United States is hereby authorized to accept tenders of volunteer troops, to purchase arms and munition of war, to equip such troops for active service, organize such troops into brigades, divisions and armies for active service, appoint necessary general, staff and other officers, except such field and company officers as may have already been selected or may hereafter be selected by proper authority, and to do any other act necessary to the safety of the country, or any part thereof, and to protect its honor and prestige."

The second section appropriates the necessary money to carry out the provisions of the act.

Black for Our Warships.

Washington, March 26.—Orders were issued yesterday to have all the warships painted black, a color that is better adapted to hostilities.

Late yesterday the Navy Department gave out the following list of vessels as showing the exact character of each fleet as it stands to-day:

"The following vessels compose the North Atlantic squadron: New York, Iowa, Indiana, Miantonomah, Fern, Puritan, Terror, Marblehead, Montgomery, Delaware, Castine, Nashville, Helena, Wilmington, Vesuvius, torpedo boats Foote, Dupont, Ericsson, Cushing, Porter, Winslow, tugs Leyden and Samoset.

"The following vessels compose the flying squadron: The Brooklyn, Massachusetts, Texas, Minneapolis and Columbia."

Spain Hears from Washington.

London, March 26.—The Madrid correspondent of the Standard says:

"The Ministerialists are making no secret that important communications have already passed between Washington and Madrid acquainting the Spanish Government with the drift of the policy President McKinley is about to adopt, which has been met with conciliatory, but firm, protest and representations on the part of Spain."

Will Earn Praise of Mankind.

London, March 26.—The Daily Mail, which regards war between the United States and Spain as inevitable, the only uncertainty being the time Spain will choose for beginning hostilities, says: "America will naturally triumph and earn the world's praise for ridding Cuba of ruthles styranny; but she will fight at a disadvantage if compelled to fight immediately."

A CONSCIENTIOUS GOVERNOR.

Governor Voorhees has proved that whatever his ideas might have been before he was inducted into the office of chief executive of this commonwealth, those sentiments do not influence his official action in determining a matter upon which public sentiment is pretty well defined. The instance under observation is his signing the Squire bill embodying the ideas of county trolley as projected by Frank Bergen. In this particular section it is a well-known fact that while practicing law Governor Voorhees was closely identified as counsel with the company who are bending every energy to outwit the Bergen proposition, and his legal talent was devoted to the private capitalists' interest. Mr. Voorhees even went so far at one time in Westfield as to state that he considered that the Bergen proposition would never become a law, but now through the irony of political advancement and a conscientious mind Mr. Voorhees' own act brands his former sentiment as ill-timed and poorly said.

THE COLORED POLITICIANS.

The colored voters of the city are preparing to continue the movement they started last fall to make themselves independent of the Bepublican party. Then the Southern League was organized for the purpose of advancing the interests of the colored men. A meeting is now to be held in the Colored Masonic Hall on West Front street Wednesday evening. Delegates will be elected to a convention soon to be held in this State by representatives of similar organizations in other parts of the State. The question of the endorsement of a candidate for the postmastership will also be considered. Spencer Conway, one of the leaders in the movement looking toward lower taxes and better city government, is and has been doing all that he could to further the chances of J. Fred MacDonald for the position. It seems probable that the Southern League will name Mr. MacDonald as their choice for the place.

RIGHTS OF THE CREED.

That pungent writer on Jersey themes, "Freeholder," in the New York Press, has this to say of the attempt to enforce Sunday observance in Plainfield:

It may be that the closing of all the stores in Plainfield Sunday is a restraint on religious liberty. There are several hundred Seventh-Day Baptists in the northern section of Union county, and while they may have a wholesome veneration for other folk's Sunday, they are not required to go without the necessaries of life on the day when a majority of their neighbors abstain from the pursuits of business.

KIND WORDS FOR THE PRESS.

The Plainfield Daily Press has made another stride forward by adding another column to each of its eight pages, which it was forced (no pun) to do to accommodate its increasing advertising patronage, and to give space for the mass of local news daily collated. We congratulate friend Force, the editor and proprietor, on this evidence of prosperity, and conclude Plainfield is a good place for newspapers.—Rahway Democrat.

—Next Friday evening the Borough Council will meet in the new quarters, corner of Somerset street and Craig place.

—A very important meeting of the Sons of Veterans will be held next Tuesday evening. All members are urged to attend.

—One week from next Monday evening the City Council will meet in regular session, when much important business will be considered.

PASSING COMMENT.

Sportsmen who travel on the Central Railroad are very apt to cast their eyes over the salt meadows and conjure up visions of what those meadows were before the railroads built their lines over the swampy spots. It requires but a little stretch of the imagination to fancy flocks of ducks and wisps of snipe feeding undisturbed on the meadows. Even now snipe are to be found by those who know where to look for them, and many a business man of this city now takes advantage of the open season, that is, the spring shooting of English snipe. It happens not infrequently that he returns from his trudge over the meadows with his pocket the heavier for a couple or so of snipe and with a muddy dog following him with a look of contentment on its face, something very few "bird dogs" ever display unless there's a gun and bird in happy conjunction. During the next two weeks there will also be some good sport to be had at Barnegat with the geese and brant, as both kinds of wild-fowl are now making their way northward to their summer quarters. Of course, much depends on the kind of weather during those two weeks, such weather as that of good bags of any kind of wild-fowl. Good weather for goose or duck shooting is not usually good weather for sitting in blinds or lying in the batteries; as a rule, the rougher the weather the better the shooting. Hence the sport of wild-fowl shooting is scarcely a sport that recommends itself to dudes or drawing-room hunters.

THEATRICAL.

Monday evening, at Music Hall, "The Lost Paradise," the greatest of all plays for the workingman or the capitalist, is to be produced at popular prices by Waite's Comedy Company and grand orchestra. The company this season numbers nearly forty people, including an acting company of sixteen, under the personal stage management of Mr. Frederic L. Power, late of the Margaret Mather Company. A band of sixteen soloists, an orchestra of ten men, and a number of specialty artists. A full carload of scenery is carried especially for "The Lost Paradise." "The Charity Ball," "Men and Women," "A Social Highwayman," "The Wife," and other high-priced successes to be given by this company. Manager Dave Woods, of this company, assures us that there will be a number of surprises for Plainfield theatre-goers when they witness the first performance of the Waite show this season. Seats are now on sale for Monday evening, but none to give away, as has been done in past years by popular-priced managers. "The Lost Paradise," at thirty cents for the best seat in Music Hall, (except box seats) will be found to be the greatest thing ever seen in Music Hall at anything near these prices.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, March 26—The Westfield Township Committee held a meeting last night and continued the consideration of the trolley ordinance. Col. E. W. Hine and A. A. Gaddis were present as representatives of the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company, and it was the opinion of the Township Committee that the roads upon which the company should lay its tracks should be macadamized from curb to curb at the company's expense. The trolley men would not agree to the insertion in the franchise, and the conference ended without an understanding between the Committee and the railway representatives. Bids were received by the Committee for the renting of the town rooms, and the offer of W. H. Grogan of his rooms on North avenue for $240 a year was accepted. The contract for the extension of Lawrence avenue was awarded to Thomas Eustice, on condition that the work be finished within thirty days.

BEN HEGEMAN'S COWS ESCAPED THE FLAMES

And the Borough's Former Mayor is Happy.

BARN BURNED TO GROUND.

A LIVELY BLAZE WHICH FIREMEN COULD NOT STOP.

The Blaze Discovered by Marshal Bagley—Mr. Hegeman's Family Was Awakened by Neighbors—Pride Milk Producers Saved and the Former Mayor is Happy as a Consequence—One Cow Tried to Rush Into the Flames—A Quantity of Park Club Property Burned—Loss Amounts to $3,000

It was about 1:20 o'clock this morning when Marshal Bagley discovered a fire in the barn owned by former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and located just back of the Park Club. He immediately pulled Box 151 on Washington avenue, and soon afterward the fire department was on the scene. The fire by this time had made considerable headway.

Mr. Hegeman and his family were awakened by Mrs. C. A. Reed, who resides next door. In the barn there was considerable of value. There was a landeau and sleigh owned by W. J. Boome, a quantity of material owned by the Park Club, and two valuable cows and a calf owned by Mr. Hegeman. Everything was lost except the cows and calf, for which the owner is very thankful, as he devoted a part of his suburban life to nurturing the animals and took great pride in their fine pedigree. They were rescued by Marshal Bagley. The neighbors were soon on the spot and they assisted in extinguishing the flames. There is a question as to which company secured first water. Both claim the honor.

Mr. Hegeman feels sure that the barn was set on fire from the second story. The barn was an exceptionally strong built one and the frame was standing this morning. The firemen performed excellent work in saving the adjoining property close by. This is the first time that Box 151 has been pulled. There was considerable anxiety felt concerning the safety of Mr. Hegeman's cow and calf, and after they were saved from the flames they rushed back again and were again rescued.

Mr. Hegeman claims the loss to be about $3,000. The barn and contents were not fully insured. Elston M. French & Co., insurance agents, held what insurance there was on the building and contents.

WILD FLIGHT OF A TEAM

A CRASH NEAR WASHINGTONVILLE RESULTS IN A LAW SUIT.

Two Farmers Mixed Up on Their Way to and From Plainfield—Farmer Rebman Claimed Moffett was to Blame.

It was never intended that the public roads belonged to any one person. That is what Will Rebman, a young farmer from Mt. Bethel, contends and is determined to support in a court of law.

The trouble that brought about this stand on the part of Farmer Rebman occurred Thursday afternoon, on the road to Washingtonville. David Moffett was the principle character in the little occurance and is now the defendent in the law-suit that Rebman had started.

Last Thursday, Moffett left his home near Basking Ridge in his heavy spring wagon, drawn by his frisky team of bays. They came to Plainfield and here Moffett made a number of purchases. It is said that he purchased and made way with more strong drink than was good for him. At any rate, something went to his head and rather befogged his brain.

Moffett's team went galloping down the road through the Gap to Washingtonville without regard to the passing vehicles. The horses soon got beyond control of Moffett, who was driving and made their own way through mud and over rocks. Now Will Rebman had harnessed his grey mare to his light spring wagon and started to drive his wife and sister to Plainfield. They reached Washingtonville without misadventure. Then they spied Moffett's bays coming down the road on the run. Rebman claims that he did his best to avoid the approaching team. Moffett is not of that opinion.

At any rate, there was a crash, Moffett's heavy vehicle struck the side of the Mt. Bethel farmer's wagon and upset it, throwing the occupants out. The shafts and wheels were wrecked and the light wagon generally demoralized. The women were badly frightened by their sudden plunge into the mud of the roadside, but escaped without serious injury.

Now, according to the story that Rebman tells, Moffett behaved in a very disorderly manner. He is said to have sworn at the young farmer and his wrecked wagon, and to have insulted the other occupants of the disabled rig.

Rebman was very indignant and appealed at once to Justice Speer for redress. He wanted to have Moffett arrested on the charge of using profane language and for insulting Rebman and his party. The Justice advised the more moderate course of bringing suit for the damage done to the harness and wagon. Rebman decided at length, to follow the Justice's advice and suit was immediately started against Moffett for $50, the amount to which the wagon was supposed to have been damaged. The case will come to trial in about a week.

—B. W. Hand will preach this evening at the service to be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—The annual meeting of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association will be held Monday evening.

—William Totten, of the borough, expects to go south in a short time to accept a position as an engineer.

—Chas. Schantz will entertain his friends tonight with lunch and Ballentine's bock-beer at Casper's, East Front street.

—The box office of Music Hall will be open this evening for the sale of tickets for the opening performance of Waite's Comedy Company.

—The millinery and fur store of H. Kohn will be removed to the Stillman building the first of April, where a pretentious display of a fine stock will be made.

ONLY FIVE DAYS MORE

In Which to be Cured by the Famous Boy Phenomenon.

No New Cases Will be Received After April 2d, Although He Will Remain Two Weeks More to Cure Those Now Under Treatment.

The time is growing near when no new cases will be taken for treatment by the Boy Phenomenon. As previously announced, no new cases will be taken for treatment after April 2. Therefore, all who desire to avail themselves of his services must call on or before that time to secure their time of appointment for treatment, as his time is being rapidly filled. Those holding yellow slips or envelopes, who have not already secured an appointment must also present the same at once, as their cases will not be taken for treatment after April 2d. This is made necessary from the fact that the ensuing two weeks will be required in which to cure those who are already under treatment, and also those who obtain appointments next week.

Theories which have stood for centuries have been drilled into us a part of our education and accepted by the general public as facts. When one of these is exploded is it any wonder that the people are slow to accept the truth until proof positive obliges them to do so? That tumors are a growth of flesh has been demonstrated often and that they could not be removed except by the knife has been asserted since medicine and surgery have been practiced, and many are the women who have surrendered their lives by an operation for this disease, and the physician consoled himself with the thought that he had done all that lay in his power. That was true with the light he had, but the Boy Phenomenon has proved time and time again that these tumors can be removed without danger, pain or inconvenience to the patient. A dozen times or more in the past seven weeks he published cures of many chronic cases with name and address for reference. He now adds another to the list.

Mrs. A. Wooden, of 424 Orchard place, this city, has had an unsightly tumor on her forearm, near the wrist, which for years had caused her great annoyance. It was quite large and still growing. At her second treatment yesterday the tumor and sack were both entirely removed in less than 10 minutes. She left the office and walked to her home a well woman.

The following letter of gratitude was received by the Boy Phenomenon yesterday, which explains itself: "I have lived in Dunellen 33 years, I am in the real estate and lumber business. Have had a very severe chronic rheumatic affection of the limbs which left me in partially paralyzed condition, so that it was with great difficulty I could walk. The treatment you have given me has made a new man out of me and I now feel as if I could walk all the way home to Dunellen. Words cannot express the gratitude and great joy I feel at my sudden recovery. Gratefully yours, W. S. STEVENS.

SHE MAY BE PRESIDENT.

Practical Politics Will Enter Into Next Election of the Woman's Club.

Mrs. Sarah S. Platt, president of the Denver Woman's Club, is the one whom the women of the West propose to boom for the presidency of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs. The biennial meeting of this great organization of club women is to be held in Denver, at which time the present president, Mrs. Ellen Henrotin, of Chicago, will retire aftter four years' splendid service. The Eastern women have already made up a little slate, naming Mrs. Alice Ives Breed, of Boston, as their chosen candidate for that high office. So a wire-pulling bout according to parliamentary tactics is one of the chief features promised for this meeting of the women of the East and the women of the West in the shadow of Pike's Peak.

As an active participant in great gathering of the fair sex, Mrs. Platt is beginning to be wel lknown far beyoung the borders of Colorado. She is beginning to be well known far beparliamentarian, of magnetic personality, and gifted with what her friends call "sanctified common sense." Her remarkable tact as president of the Denver Woman's Club since its organization has made her absolute sovereign of her 800 fair followers. No woman in the country, it is safe to say, has more influence as leader solely through the sincere affection of her subjects. One of the secrets of this success may be found in a book of wise sayings which this woman always carries to the president's chair for consultation in times of trouble. One of the favorite quotations therein contained is: "The woman whose convictions are so strong as never to be changed is not born to be a leader."

Mrs. Platt is a jolly-looking woman who wears striking clothes. She always makes a witty remark in club crises, which has the effect of turning the tides in her favor. Not only are the women of Denver solidly for Mrs. Platt, but her friends claim the entire energetic West as her supporters, and it is certain the Eastern club sisters will have a hard time to dethrone her.

THE BEECHER ABSENT-MINDEDNESS

Mrs. Stowe Considered Her Own Case a Physical Infirmity.

In her early married life Mrs. Stowe wrote to her husband, "The absence of mind and forgetfulness that so often vexes you is a physical infirmity with me." These words are very pathetic, illustrating, as they do, the stress of those years when mind and body were so sadly overtaxed. This absent-mindedness was one of her traits all through life, and recalls an anecdote of Mrs. Stowe that has never before found its way into print. One day, long after she had written "Uncle Tom's Cabin," she passed through a ferry-gate, and was going on her way, apparently unconscious of her surroundings, when a gentle voice said to her: "You have forgotten to pay your fare, madam." She looked around to meet a kindly face, as the gentleman uncovered his head before her, while his reverence for the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and his chivalry toward all women illumined his face. She looked at him a moment and smiled radiantly as she laid down the fare. "I am a Beecher!" she said, and with that transfiguring smile still upon her face, she passed on and was lost in the crowd. What thoughts came to her as she spoke those words we may never know, but she spoke them with a simplicity that was absolutely sublime, and seemed to compress in its hidden meanings the history of a mighty race. She lived many years after that, but something of the eternal calm of this absent-mindedness seemed to be always about her and a part of her existence long before she passed into the other life.—New York Tribune.

How Chinamen Catch Fish.

The drug used by the Chinese in catching fish is Coculus indicus, which is powdered and mixed with dough and scattered broadcast over the water after the manner of sowing seed. The fish seize and devour it with avidity and instantly become intoxicated and turn up by hundreds on the top of the water. They are then gathered up and placed in vessels containing clear water.

Useless.

"What do you think of that bill I have prepared to introduce?" inquired one member of the Legislature.

"It is a sheer waste of time," replied the other. "It isn't practical enough to become a law, nor foolish enough to get your name into the newspapers."

He—What an ugly man! I never saw anybody so ugly!

She—Hush, dear! You forget yourself!—Tit-Bits.

NEW PORTRAITURE.

Fashionable New York Women Take Up an Interesting Fad.

Portraiture has become a gentle rage in the millionaire feminine bosom. Full length paintings in oils by the most eminent Parisian artists and miniatures on ivory are among the methods of picture making that the rich women are beginning to tire of, and as necessity is the mother of invention, a whole new series of schemes for limning attractive faces has been obediently brought forth, by the prevailing condition. It was Mrs. Fred Gebhard, the owner of one of the most perfect profiles in America, who first took the pains to hunt out a little old genius hidden away in a back street of Richmond, Va., and request him to cut a big and beautiful cameo of her face. He made a very effective likeness, in white on a background of sapphire blue stone, and when Mrs. Gebhard had this set about with large diamonds and wore it as one would a miniature brooch, every woman who saw it and could afford the expense went and did likewise.

Not all women, however, can afford to have their features chipped out in agate stone, and a great many of them are going to the photographers to have cameo photographs taken. This is a process brought over from Paris, where they are just now making, as well, very exquisite vignette photographs, the figures in brown or gray thrown on a polished white surface. The cameo process is nothing more or less than a face in clear profile, photographed in strong white lights, against a block of prepared and polished black wood.

A new industry, first put forward under the patronage of Mrs. John Jacob Astor, has blossomed forth. This rich young woman, one of the most prominent and beautiful of New York's fashionable matrons, has had her own sweet face painted with most exquisite art on six very choice Sevres plates, that are only used for her smallest and most select luncheon parties. The plates show Mrs. Astor in evening dress, tailor dress, reception gown, skating furs, in a delicate summer muslin, and in her bridal gown. It is no secret that the plates cost $150 apiece, and were made in France.

Mrs. Potter Palmer has given to an American girl the valuable order of decorating half a dozen plates, much like those of Mrs. Astor, while Mrs. Sloane of New York is having her likeness transferred to six plates for use at small breakfasts. These plates are all of fine American china, and the feminine artist who is decorating them is going to show Mrs. Sloane in skating, bicycling, golfing, driving, riding, fishing and yachting dress.

It has remained, however, for Mrs. Oliver Belmont to lead all the rest in portraiture of an original, beautiful, and the most expensive sort known on this side of the water. Only the beautiful but extravagant Queen of Italy has anything to show like the huge window of stained glass that fits into the space at the head of the stairs in Mrs. Belmont's New York house. This window, fourteen feet high by eight broad, looks toward the west, and every one who enters the hall of the house cannot fail to look up at this window through the many colors of which all the light for the hall comes. In a framework of marvellous glass roses the mistress of the mansion stands, arrayed in the most gorgeous yellow brocaded satin, wearing her famous turquoise tiara, necklace, and brooches. The window was designed and the glasswork done by American artists, and the crystal pieces of glowing color and many degrees of thickness are put together in a framework of silver instead of lead. It required nearly two years to complete the work and no one, save the present owner and the maker of the window, knows the price that was paid for it. At some points in the decoration genuine jewels are set with the glass, and at night a heavy iron door closes at the back of the window, which, by cunningly arranged electric lights, is softly illuminated.—New York Sun.

The Deadly Upas Tree.

Most people have at least heard the story of the deadly upas tree of Java, of which it was at one time said that to merely approach it was certain death. This story was treated as an absolute fable, but now it seems as if there was actually some basis of real fact for it.

The upas tree is a real tree and a very big one. In the old trees the bark is over an inch thick and full of a thick, milky juice, the merest touch of which upon the skin produces a most painful and irritating rash.

What is more, a gas arises from this juice, which has a most poisonous effect upon any one near it. It is sometimes used by the natives for satisfying private revenge, for a cup of it hidden in the room of a sleeper produces stupor and eventually death.—Golden Days.

Fine Point.

"Here is one for you," said the managing editor.

"For me?" responded the society editor.

"Strictly. A young woman wants to know who should keep up the payments on the ring when the engagement is broken."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Modern Invention.

Horrified Old Lady—Oh, kind sir, think of your mother! Think of your mother.

Burglar (sternly)—No use, lady—I wuz brought up in an incubator.

"I should not be surprised if this Klondike craze wouldn't be the means of building up Jinkles' fortune." "Is he going to dig gold?" "No. He saved up enough money to make the trip, and then changed his mind and opened a grocery."—Washington Star.

NEW YORK TERMINALS—Foot of Cortlandt Desbrosses and West 23d streets.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And stil what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

BRAVE TARS OF 1843

HOW JACK CAPTURED MEXICO AND LET IT GO AGAIN.

Uncle Sam in Those Days Went Around with a Chip on His Shoulder, and Inquiry Boards Rendered Verdicts Before They Slept.

One day, in the year 1842, Captain Thomas Catesby Jones, then at Callao in command of a strong squadron, which had been sent to the Pacific coast by the United States to prevent the seizure of California by the British, picked up a newspaper and read therein an article which declared that Mexico had just ceded California to England. Before the close of the day a British frigate came into view, and, stopping only long enough to take a brief look at the Yankee squadron, sailed northward. The appearance of the English warship and her apparent haste to move northward, seemed to Captain Jones to substantiate the newspaper story he had just read. If the British were taking possession of California he had work to do. Up went his anchors and the prows of his ships were headed Californiaward. He reached Monterey harbor, and at once landed and took possession of the town. The next day, very much to his chagrin, he learned that the newspaper story was a fake, and that he had taken forcible possession of a town belonging to a nation with which the United States was at peace. He promptly surrendered the town and made what amends he could.

This is an interesting fact because it shows that the first warlike act on the part of the United States against Mexico was made by a naval officer some four years previous to actual hostilities, and illustrates the distrust with which England was regarded by the United States at this period.

The official declaration of war was made four years later, on May 13, 1846; but it was not until the 8th day of the following June that Captain John Drake Sloat, commander of the Pacific squadron, then stationed at Mazatlan, Mexico, learned that war had been declared. He at once headed his ship, the frigate Savannah, for Monterey, California. When he reached this place he found the United States ships, the Warren Cyane, and Levant at anchor in the harbor. Two hundred and fifty men were ordered to land and take possession of the town, which was accomplished without opposition on the part of the Mexicans.

Captain Sloat resigned on July 23, and the more active Captain Robert Field Stockton was ordered to take his place.

Stockton proved to be the right man in the right place. He at once moved against Los Angeles, with three hundred and fifty men, and, on August 13, 1846, he entered the city without opposition. Here he organized a state government with John C. Freemont at the head. The Mexicans rallied and fought fiercely for their homes. Los Angeles and Monterey were retaken and Santa Barbara threatened. The Mexicans in the country far outnumbered the Americans; but the superior courage and skill of the Yankees eventually carried all before them. Brigadier-General Stephen W. Kearney came from Sante Fe, New Mexico, with one hundred men, and, reinforced by two hundred and fifty men, marched to San Diego. An army of seven hundred men was raised for another attack, on Los Angeles, and that city was re-captured on January 15, 1847.

Captain Stockton now returned to the east, and Commodore William Bradford Shubrick, with the liner Independence, and the brig Preble, and Commodore Briddle came to the coast. In a short time every Mexican port north of Acapulco was blockaded. The custom-house at Mazatlan was administered by the Americans and nearly $300,000 collected on imports.

An incident will illustrate the character of the naval warfare along the Pacific coast. During the blockade at Mazatlan, Lieutenant G. W. Harrison was out with three small boats on the watch for blockade runners. In his zeal he wandered far from the protection of the guns of his ship. The Mexicans, observing this, determined to capture him and his men; and, manning four big barges with at least three times as many men as Harrison had, started after him. Harrison's men could easily outrow the Mexicans; but flying from such an enemy did not suit the bold Yankee officer, and he headed the boats straight for the Mexicans. The Mexicans' courage evaporated, and they turned about and fled for their lives the moment the American rifle balls began whistling in their ears, and this, too, when they were supported by field guns on the beach. No wonder the Yankee sailors felt themselves vastly the superior of the timid Mexicans.

The first work of the navy in the Gulf of Mexico was at the battle of Palo Alto, when Commodore David Connor, commander of the Gulf squadron, landed five hundred men to help protect the garrison left by General Taylor at Point Isabel. An attack was made on Alvarado, an important port south of Vera Cruz, also on Tuspan, and a second attack on Alvarado; but these all failed. Captain Calibraith Perry, brother of Oliver Hagard Perry, commanding the Mississippi, was sent against Fontera. This is the same Perry who afterwards won distinction for opening the ports of Japan to American commerce. He had with him two steamers, the Vixen and Spitfire, and four schooners, with two hundred marines and ample crews for all the vessels. A short distance above the mouth of the river, which empties into the Gulf at Fontera, was a considerable fleet of Mexican merchant vessels. Captain Perry dashed over the river-bar, with the steamer Vixen and two schooners; and surprised and captured the shipping. The forts and town surrendered; and Perry ascended the river seventy-two miles and took the City of Tabasco.

But the most important work of the navy in the Gulf was the assistance it rendered in the capture of Vera Cruz. In March, 1847, there were seventy ships and transports before Vera Cruz, with General Winfield Scott's army of 12,000 men on board. A combined naval and army attack was planned. The contest began on March 9, 1847, with the landing of General Scott's army. On March 22 the land forces opened fire on the city; and the next day an attack was made on the Castle, the main fortification of the city, by the navy. At 8 o'clock on the morning of the 25th the Mexicans requested that the bombardment of the city be stopped, and on March 28, 1847, the city of Vera Cruz was surrendered.

No further work of importance was done by the navy in the Gulf during this war.

The war with Mexico gave the navy few opportunities — Mexico had no navy and there was no real naval battles; but, in accomplishing the little work it was called upon to do, it showed that the same energy and courage which had made it famous in 1812 still animated its officers and men.

SHADOWGRAPH.

A New Name Given to an Old Time Amusement which All Enjoy.

Shadowgraphs, a new and coined name for our old friends, Shadows on the Wall, with which our grandfathers and great-grandfathers used to delight their grandchildren when the day was closing, and the candles were alight. These shadows, indeed, have lived through centuries, but in late years have been very much improved upon, so that now they form a most fascinating amusement for both old and young, at entertainments, at home, at schools, bazaars, etc.

Now, if my readers wish to appear as entertainers with this most innocent and mirthful amusement, and they follow out the instructions here given, taking a careful survey of the drawings illustrating this article, I can assure them, as a professional entertainer, that they will succeed; but practice they must, for without it nothing can be accomplished.

First and most important is the light. The stronger the illuminant the better. For ordinary use the magic lantern comes first, as it gives a strong and steady light, and leaves the apartment in darkness. Then, we can recommend the bull's-eye lantern; and lastly, even a good candle will answer the purpose very well.

Whatever light is used, it must be placed at the back, and nearly opposite the centre of the screen. The distance therefrom you must determine for yourself, as it will depend on the size of the screen and the space you wish to cover with light.

By referring to Fig. 1, you will see the performer at work. For a screen or sheet to project the shadows on to, here is shown a wooden hoop, such as young ladies use for mild exercise at a certain season of the year, and which can be purchased cheaply in various sizes from most toy-shops.

Having got your wooden hoop, next procure a piece of calico sufficient to cover it and turn over at the edges of the hoop, and then, as you stretch it carefully, knock in small tacks to fasten it on. You may support it in any manner that pleases you; but here is illustrated a single support, which explains itself. The performer is casting the shadow of an elephant's head upon the sheet.

Meaning of Thumb-Prints.

It is curious to notice that while a great deal has been written in a scientific spirit of the value of thumb-prints as a means of identification, no one has yet found out what these lines in the thumb mean, or what they may indicate in determining character. The variations have been traced, and the fact has been noticed that no two thumbs show precisely the same lines.

The lines in the palm of the hand have been studied, too, for centuries, and the believers in the possibility of reading character from the lines in palm are numerous, even among the educated. But the gifted scientists and the palmists stop here. The thumb, they know, contains lines as remarkable and as varying as the palm. But what it all means no one knows, nor has any one attempted to guess.

When we hark back to the mystical knowledge of the ancients, it is marvellous that they, too, in many ways wiser than we, should have been baffled in reading the thumb. And at the same time they used thumb-prints as seals.

The American Girl.

American girls in good social positions are allowed more freedom than the girls of any other nation. The Europeans are shocked at the way unmarried women in America are permitted to go out alone with young men, or receive them alone at their homes, but it is not recorded that the morals of American women are any the worse for the liberty allowed them. In the European countries a young lady must be under the wing of a chaperone at every turn. Ultra fashionable society in this country is taking up the chaperone idea more and more every year—but the mass of American girls are still free to go and come as they please, and nowhere on earth are the girls so self-reliant or more virtuous.

An eminent astronomer says that for communication with the inhabitants of Mars we should require a flag as large as Ireland, and a pole 500 miles long.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The disaster to the Maine in the harbor of Havana resulted in as great a loss to the crew of that vessel as ever occurred in the most serious sea fights in which the navy of the United States has been engaged in the past. It may, however, prove to be only a forerunner of what is to be expected of naval engagements in the future, for the modern hull, constructed of steel plates, when they come in contact with modern projectile capable of such terrific damage as that which can be hurled from a thirteen-inch gun, have nothing like the resisting qualities of the old wooden frigate and three-decker man-of-war. Still, officers of the navy take pride in talking of what was accomplished by their predecessors in the old days, and do not hesitate to say that in a square fight, when they know what they have to meet, they can maintain the reputation of the navy in the past.

The greatest of all naval victories during the war of 1812 were not won on the high seas but on the fresh water lakes of Erie and Champlain. In the former battle for the first time in English history a British naval squadron struck its flag and surrendered to the enemy at discretion. The two fleets were as nearly equal as it was possible to get them. Both had been built on the lakes after great difficulty during the year 1813. The American fleet, commanded by Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry, then twenty-seven years old, was composed of nine vessels of 1,671 tons, with fifty-four guns, capable of throwing a broadside of 938 pounds of metal, of which 288 pounds could be fired at long range. The Lawrence named after the unfortunate commander of the Chesapeake, was the flagship. It and the Niagara were of 500 tons burden. The other seven vessels were of slight construction, without bulwarks, but armed with heavy long guns.

The British commander was Captain Barclay, one of Nelson's veterans, and he was perfectly confident of victory. Perry moved out of Put-in Bay on the morning of September 15, 1813, with his entire squadron. The fleets approached each other at about 11 o'clock. The bugle sounded from the British flagship and the men of the British line gave three cheers. The long guns of the Detriot opened on the Lawrence at a distance of a mile and a half. By noon the battle was on in earnest. In the duel which ensued between the Detriot and the Lawrence the latter was reduced to a hulk. Perry took his flag, which bore as a motto Captain Lawrence's dying words, "Don't give up the ship," manned a boat and was rowed through the smoke and the volleys of the enemy to the Niagara, and, hoisting his flag on that ship, renewed the combat.

Fortune now favored the American commander. The Queen Charlotte, damaged in her sail gear, fell foul of the Detroit. The Niagara poured volley after volley into the entagled vessels, which the Kentucky riflemen in the rigging picked off every Britisher visible in either vessel. At 3 o'clock the British fleet surrendered. Perry sent a short account of the victory to the Secretary of the Navy, and then sent to General W. H. H. Harrison, commanding the land forces, the famous lines: "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

Commander McDonough's victory on Lake Champlain, won the following year, was almost as complete as Perry's. A British army advanced along the shores of the lake, accompanied by a squadron of sixteen vessels carrying ninety-five guns and about 1,000 men. It was commanded by Captain George Downie. Commodore McDonough was anchored in Plattsburgh Bay with a squadron consisting of fourteen vessels, carrying eighty-four guns and about 850 men. At sunrise on September 11, 1814, the British fleet came in sight, and by 8 o'clock the battle was on. Firing was begun by the Americans, who remained at anchor. The two principal vessels, the Confiance, Captain Downie's flagship, and the Saratoga, McDonough's fought a duel, lying about 300 yards apart. The first fire of the Confiance killed or wounded about forty men on the Saratoga, nearly a fifth of her entire force. The engagement became general. In an hour the whole starboard battery of the Saratoga was silenced. But McDonough had taken the precaution to lay kedges from her bows so that she could be winded. This being effected, she was able to fight her other battery. The Confiance had suffered severely and Captain Downie had been killed. After an attempt to perform the volution successfully carried out by the Saratoga, the Confiance, at the end of two hours and a half of hard fighting, struck her flag. The remainder of the fleet was either taken or put to flight. The British loss was 200, exclusive of prisoners. The American lost 112 in killed and wounded. The British lost seventy-five of the ninety-five guns they brought into action McDonough replied to an English officer, who asked him how he had won the fight, by saying: "By hard fighting, sir."

YALE WINS IN DEBATE.

Eli's Men Contended That Municipal Affairs Were Without Politics.

Princeton, N. J., March 26.—Princeton and Yale met in their fifth annual debate last night in Alexander Hall, and Yale won. Of the four previous debates Princeton has won two and lost one, no decision being made in the first contest, which was held at Princeton in 1893.

Intercollegiate debating has since that time made great strides, and from bold flights of oratory and impassioned rhetoric, have become battles of logic and evidence with the cold, concise reasoning of barristers rather than the flowery speech of the orator.

Alexander Hall was filled to its utmost capacity, the undergraduates filling the gallery and singing songs and cheering while the judges were out arriving at their decision.

Ex-President Cleveland, on whom Princeton conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws, at her commencement in June last, presided at the debate and introduced the speakers.

The question was: "Resolved, That national party lines should be disregarded in choice of councils and administrative offices in American cities."

The question was chosen by Princeton.

Yale took the affirmative. Her representatives were Nathan A. Smyth of New Haven, John M. Clark of Brooklyn and Charles H. Studinski of Pueblo, Col.

Princeton's representatives were Howard H. Yocum of Columbia, Pa.; William M. Schults, of Danville, Pa., and Matthew Dowrie, of Warrior's Mark, Pa.

Henry Euler's Father Persuaded Himself and Wife to Find Them Work in His Perambulations, But Yesterday Morning He Left Them Penniless at Benner's Roadhouse—Chief Grant Raised Enough Money to Send the Girl Wife Home—Young Husband Will Try to Sell His Horse and Wagon.

Deserted by an unnatural father, Henry Euler and his young wife wandered about the streets of Plainfield in the rain, tearful and disconsolate, yesterday. Without funds or friends they had abandoned all hope and helplessly awaited the course of events But Plainfield has a kind-hearted Chief of Police. He gave them lodging in the city jail and then raised sufficient funds to send the young wife back to her home in Philadelphia.

Henry Euler was formerly employed as a clerk in a store in Philadelphia. He was twenty-one years of age. Last June he married a young German girl of the same city who was two years his junior. Euler's father is a traveling vender of fancy baskets. He travels about the country with his stock in trade in a little wagon. Several months ago, young Euler lost his position through illness. He recovered but was unable to find work. When his father started out several days ago, he persuaded the young couple to come along in a little one-horse gig, promising to find work for Henry.

Saturday night the little party put up at Benner's roadhouse on South avenue. Early Sunday morning the elder Euler departed with his wagon, leaving the couple behind. When the young people discovered his departure they were heartbroken. They came to Plainfield where they were found by Chief Grant and allowed lodging in the jail. They spent the night there while the Chief raised sufficient money to send the girl-wife home. She went on the 8:44 train this morning. Euler will sell his horse and cart if possible. If not, he will drive home.

The Misses Manning Received an Unexpected Visit From Playmates.

A pleasant surprise was given to the Misses Bertha and Florence Manning, of Elm place, Friday evening, by their schoolmates, as a farewell visit before moving to LaGrande avenue. There were about thirty present, and a good time was spent in playing games, singing, etc. Refreshments were served.

The committee in charge were Master Vincent Meany and Miss Jennie Addis.

GIVEN BY HOME TALENT.

A Pleasing Musicale Held in Monroe Avenue M. E. Church.

A very pleasing musicale was given in the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Saturday evening before an appreciative audience. The church was well filled. While the different selections that composed the programme were given by home talent, they were well rendered and heartily enjoyed. Those taking part in the musicale were Miss Margaret Meredith, soprano; Miss Julia Jermain Ketcham, contralto; Augustus Rose, baritone; Joseph Sattels and Arthur Mosher, violinists; Miss Clyde B. Burnett, pianist. Stephen Haff acted as accompanist.

The programme consisted of two parts of five numbers each, which were all received with loud applause.

A Hot Time Expected.

A real old-fashioned time is being planned for Members' Night at the Park Club tomorrow evening. There is to be a real candy pull, a bean-bag party and a corn-popping bee, all combined. The house committee has sent out a special request that all the ladies bring two aprons with them, one for themselves and one for somebody else, whoever he happens to be.

AN AGED FRIEND DEAD.

JUSTUS C. HAVILAND PASSES AWAY AFTER FOUR SCORE OF YEARS.

He was an Influential Elder in the Society of Friends—Had Resided Here for Nine Years Where He was Respected.

In the death of Justus C. Haviland, aged eighty years, of Sandford avenue, the Society of Friends loses a valuable member and Plainfield a citizen of rare worth Mr. Haviland resided in this city for nine years. He moved here from Poughkeepsie, where he was a prosperous farmer. He was born at Bethlehem, Orange county, N. Y., and was the son of Prince Haviland, of that place.

Mr. Haviland's death was due to chronic gastritis from which he suffered intensely for several years past. He held the position of elder in the Society of Friends and was active in a quiet way in all branches of the society. A wife, two sons and two daughters survive him. One son is postmaster at Bellefontaine, O., while the other son has charge of the Homer Ramsdell Transportation Company at Newburgh-on-the-Hudson. Miss Haviland and Mrs. Justus H. Cooley, daughters, reside in this city.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 from the house. Interment will be at Hillside cemetery.

GREAT SOPRANO HEARD.

MME. CATHERIN HILKE THE STAR ATTRACTION IN A CONCERT.

She Has a Powerful Voice of Great Compass and Sweetness—Other Participants Pleased the Audience Present.

Mme. Catherin Hilke, the well-known soprano from New York, was the star attraction at the entertainment given by the Athletic Club of the New Jersey Military Academy in the Y. M. C. A. Hall Saturday evening. There were other attractions on the programme, however, that made the entertainment altogether a very delightful one. The threatening weather kept many away, but the hall was comfortably filled. The Stars and Stripes were largely used in the decoration of the hall, giving it a very patriotic appearance.

Mme. Hilke appeared three times and was well received on each occasion. Her selections were the waltz song, "Romeo and Juliet," and "Blue Bell" and "Spring's Awakening." The last was particularly adapted to her powerful voice and showed its reach and sweetness.

The opening instrumental trio by Lindley M. Hillman, violin, Walter Serrell, flute, and W. E. MacClymont, piano, was of particular excellence. The banjo duet, "Berkeley March," by Fred G. Smith and Fred VanEps, was well received and the audience demanded an encore. Two encores were demanded to the banjo solo by VanEps.

The reader of the evening, Miss Annie D. Cooper, of Westfield, found favor with the audience at once. "Behind the Curtain," her first selection, was delightfully funny. "Nell" was of a more sober character but was well given.

The second part of the entertainment consisted of a lecture by L. Jay Tompkins, of the University of New York, on "The Early Essayists." Mr. Tompkins was thoroughly conversant with his subject. Although he had no time to go deeply into the subject, he enlarged on such parts as seemed the most important and told all with a clearness and ease that made him an interesting speaker.

The "Black Tea" Postponed.

The men of Trinity Reformed church who intended giving an entertainment in the lecture room of the church Friday evening, April 1st, have decided to postpone the affair to a later date, when more time will be given to secure talent and make it the success they intended it to be, socially and financially.

HOME MISSIONS MAKE A GLORIOUS NATION

What They Are Doing to Build Up the Country.

HEARD BY CHURCH PEOPLE

CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED TO BUY A MISSIONARY WAGON.

Rev. Charles W. Shelton, a Field Secretary, Told of the Work That is Being Done by the Missionaries in the Western States—Home Missions Do Much Toward Solving the Problems of Ignorance and Immigration—Western Missionaries are Recruited From the Flower of the Clergy in the Eastern States.

The Congregational church observed yesterday as home missionary day, and in spite of the exceedingly damp atmosphere, the three services held were very pleasant and interesting ones. At the morning service, the desk was draped with a handsome American flag, and the stirring and eloquent address delivered by Rev. Charles W. Shelton, field secretary of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, was of especial fitness at this day of interest in National affairs. "What have home missions done for our country, and what are they doing now?" might be taken as the subject of his talk, which considered the problems lying before our Nation, such as the problem of ignorance, the problem of immigration, and the problem of the city, and told what home mission work was doing to solve them. Mr. Shelton was a clear, logical, and forceful speaker, and fully informed upon his subjects. At the conclusion of his address a generous offering was made for the work of home missions.

In the afternoon the Sunday-school held its annual missionary session. The school contributes regularly to both home and foreign missions, and reports from the various stations to which contributions had been sent were read. The offering was for the purchase of a wagon for a home missionary in Dakota, and more than the required sum was raised.

Mr. Shelton was present and told something of the uses to which such a wagon would probably be put. Collecting wheels, for the support of the missionary navy used by the American Board in the work among the Micronesian Islands, were distributed among the children of the school, who were each directed to obtain from their relatives and friends the coins, amounting to $1, which would fill the wheel.

In the evening, instead of the usual Christian Endeavor meeting, Mr. Shelton gave an informal talk on "A Home Missionary at Home." He described life in a missionary home and the varied work that falls to the share of the missionary and his wife. Mr. Shelton dwelt on the fact that our home missionaries are not men whose ability is so small that they cannot find positions elsewhere, but that they are usually recruited from the flower of the eastern clergy. Neither do they consider themselves objects for pity, but think their position one of the highest privilege.

Graduated to Main School.

A graduation service was held in the Sabbath-school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church in connection with the review, last Saturday. A class of ten was graduated from the primary department into the main school. Mrs. J. P. Mosher, superintendent of the department, conducted the services. Mrs. Mosher presented each member of the class with a diploma, and bade them God-speed as they left the primary department for association with the older scholars; she likened them to the buds that had been carefully nurtured and had now reached the time of blossoming and fruit bearing. D. E. Titsworth, superintendent of the Sabbath-school gave them the hand of welcome for the school.

Talked About Patents.

Charles Buell, of Craig place, who has had considerable to do with all sorts of patents, gave an instructive talk this morning at the Borough High School. He told the scholars about things that are patentable, and commenced with the primitive hammer. From that he traced the line of improvement up to the modern hammer. He illustrated the use of powder and gave several exhibitions of the various kinds in use.

Baptisms.

Yesterday morning at the First Baptist church Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor, baptized Miss Margaret McCutchen and Miss Crane. A sister of the latter who was to have been baptized was ill and unable to appear.

SUB-MARINE MINE WAS TO BLAME

Responsibility Is Not Fixed.

REPORT IN CONGRESS

Two Magazines on the Ship Were Exploded by the Sub Marine Mine.

(SPECIAL TO THE DAILY PRESS.)

Washington, March 28.—The report of the Board of Inquiry which investigated the destruction of the battleship Maine in the Havana Harbor was sent to Congress this noon. The largest crowd in the history of the National Legislature was present.

The abstract of the report presented by the Associated press in the morning papers is substantially correct as far as it goes. (The report will be found on page 2 of today's Press.)

The other important part of the report first made public when read before Congress is as follows:

"That portion of the port side and the protected deck, which extends from about frame 30 to about frame 41 was blown up. The main deck, from about frame 30 to about frame 41, was blown up aft and slightly over to starboard, folding the forward part of the middle superstructure over and on top of the after part.

"This was, in the opinion of the court, caused by the partial explosion of two or more of the forward magazines of the "Maine." At frame 17, the outer shell of the ship from a point 11½ feet from the middle of the ship and 6 feet above the keel, when in its normal position, has been forced up so as to break about 4 feet above the surface of the water.

"Therefore, about 34 feet above where it would be had the ship sunk uninjured. The inside bottom plating is bent into a reverse shape, the after wing of which is about 15 feet broad and 32 feet in length. From frame 17 to frame 25 is doubled back upon itself against the continuation of the same plating, extending forward.

"In the opinion of the court, this effect could have been produced only by the explosion of a mine situated under the bottom of the ship at about frame 18, and somewhat at the port side of the ship.

"At frame 18, the vertical keel is broken into and the front keel bent. The break is about six feet below the surface of the water.

"The court finds that the explosion was not due to the carelessness of any member of the crew. The discipline on the ship was perfect.

The court is of the opinion that a submarine mine caused the first explosion and that that explosion caused the subsequent explosion of the ship's magazines.

They are unable to fix the responsibility for the explosion of the submarine mine upon any person or persons.

The full report of the Maine Board of Inquiry was transmitted to Congress today, and under McKinley's rule was committed without debate. The report was accompanied by a Presidential message asking Congress to wait for diplomatic negotiations before taking action.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST RIGHTS ARE MENACED

Dr. A. H. Lewis Talks in an Emphatic Manner.

CIVIC RIGHTS TOUCHED ON.

MAYOR FISK'S ORDER FOR SUNDAY TRAFFIC IS CRITICISED.

Dr. Lewis Considers the Keeping of a Store Open for Six Days to be a Civic Right, and that Seventh-day Baptists are Entitled to Run Their Establishments on Sunday and the Business Open and Above Board, Despite the Edict Issued by the City Officials—Seventh-Days Did Business as Usual

When the crusade against the "cider joints" was begun two weeks ago, it was supposed that it was aimed at only such Sunday sellers as portioned the juice of the apple among their customers. In such a movement, the people of the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination in this city were only too glad to aid. But when the scope of the crusade was extended to take in all who kept their places of business open on Sunday, the Seventh-Day Baptists look on it as a movement aimed directly against them.

The raids of a week ago Sunday portended more than the mere closing of the "cider joints." A direct action against the Seventh-Day Baptists came Friday when Chief Grant, acting under the instructions of the Mayor, notified them that they must pull down the curtains of their stores and transact such business as they did on Sunday behind closed doors. They respectfully informed the Chief that they would do nothing of the kind. Then they were informed they would place themselves liable to arrest.

So it was that yesterday was watched with the keenest interest by those of the Seventh-day Baptist denomination. The three principal business men of that denomination, W. H. Rogers, the bicycle dealer, on North avenue, James Clawson, who conducts a grocery store at the corner of West Second street and Madison avenue, and O. M. Dunham, dealer in men's furnishings, had all been notified to do business behind drawn curtains and closed doors. They opened up their establishments as usual, however, and the day passed without any happening out of the ordinary. No arrests were made, but the proprietors of the stores expected that they would be arrested today.

Of the victims of last Sunday's raid, those who pleaded guilty at their trial remained closed. Of those who pleaded not guilty, all but one remained open, but kept their curtains down and displayed no goods outside. The one exception was Ferero, who keeps a little candy and tobacco store on West Front street. He closed contrary to the advice of his counsel.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, now editor of the Sabbath Recorder, is one of the leaders of the Seventy-Day Baptist denomination in this settlement of that sect. A Press reporter interviewed him at his office in the Babcock building this morning concerning the action that the Seventh-Day Baptists would take regarding the crusade that is now being made. Dr. Lewis explained that the people of his denomination were thoroughly in favor of the closing of the "cider joints" Sunday. They believed, however, that they had a perfect right to keep open on Sunday if they observed Saturday as the Sabbath and closed their stores on that day.

The State constitution, he stated, says that every citizen is entitled to all his civic rights, and that he shall not be deprived of them for reason of any religious belief. He considered the keeping open of a store six days in the week a civic right. So, he explained, the Seventh-Day Baptists felt that they had a right to keep their business establishments open on Sunday and do business freely and above board instead of behind closed doors as if they were committing a crime.

Dr. Lewis spoke further on the subject of the raids and said that the question of the guilt of those arrested was dependent on two questions touching on religion, one as to whether the alleged offenders of the Sabbath observance ordinance properly, and therefore religiously observed the Sabbath on Saturday, and the other as to whether they conducted their business so as not to interfere with the religious observance of the day by others. Then he spoke of the decisions of courts in other States in which these same questions had been declared unconstitutional as the State constitutions forbid any legislation, State or local, regarding the subject of religion.

PARK CLUB FOUR STILL LEAD IN WHISTIC CIRCLES.

By Their Latest Victory They Acquire the Challenge Trophy—Next Contest Will be Played in Plainfield Monday.

In the contest for fours Friday evening the Jersey City team, Messrs. Day, Hartshorn, Heuman and Hane, won first place.

The amount raised in the school for missions during the year was $116, an increase over last year, in the face of over $600 that the school had also raised for the recent church improvements.

His Eighty-sixth Anniversary.

Last Saturday Isaac P. Brown, of Watchung avenue, a prominent member of the Asbestos Club, celebrated the eighty-sixth anniversary of his birthday. The members of the above-named club entertained Mr. Brown at their rooms on Front street in an appropriate manner. —The Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will hold their first meeting in the new year next Friday afternoon. Interesting exercises are promised for this time.

STATE SOLONS READY FOR WAR WITH SPAIN

Extra Session of the Legislature is Probable.

MAY BE CALLED IN TEN DAYS

STATE MILITARY AUTHORITIES BELIEVE WAR WILL COME.

The Declaration of War is Thought to be Inevitable and the State Government Proposes to be Prepared for It—Legislature Will Devise Ways and Means in Accord With the Demands on the National Guard, Which is Now in Excellent Condition and Could be Mobilized at Short Notice.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 28.—The history of the one hundred and twenty-second session of the Legislature cannot be written until the close of the special or extraordinary session, which, Governor Voorhees admits, may be called within ten days.

That will be the result of war, which the State military authorities now say they believe to be inevitable. They have been convinced of that for some time, and have all preliminary preparations made for the equipments which the $47,000 appropriation made Saturday was to pay for.

In the event of a declaration of war the Legislature will be summoned to convene within twenty-four hours to devise ways and means in accord with any demand made upon the State by the National Government.

The session would probably be brief, lasting no longer than that of 1861, which covered ten days only. Extra appropriations will have to be made for the National Guard and Naval Reserve, and it might be necessary to issue bonds.

The State's Guard is in excellent shape, ready to mobilize at minimum notice, and thoroughly equipped to enter the field at any moment.

The guardsmen will be the last called, for an invasion is not anticipated, and the United States regulars are strong enough to combat any invading force that might run the gauntlet of the coast defenders and make a landing.

There was a conference at the State House Saturday afternoon between General Stryker, General Plume and General Donnelly, concerning the situation. All admit a crisis is at hand and are expecting momentary an order to mobilize the National Guard.

Eugene Cole, Assemblyman for Cape May, just appointed Prosecutor for that county, had a conference with Governor Voorhees Saturday morning, and, as a result of that conference, has determined not to be sworn in as Prosecutor, but to remain an Assemblyman in anticipation of an extra session of the Legislature.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB AFFAIR.

Successful Sale of Sweet Things on Saturday Evening.

A very successful cake and candy sale was held last Saturday afternoon and evening at the Young Woman's Club, corner of Watchung avenue and Fifth street. The rooms were prettily decorated in a tasteful manner which made them appear attractive. During the afternoon and evening there were many callers and everything was disposed of before the hour of closing. Tea and chocolate were also served and a large number availed themselves of the opportunity of indulging.

Those in charge of the sale were Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., Miss Clawson, Miss Oakley, Mrs. Stiles and Miss Stiles, and they were assisted by many others who are interested in the welfare of the club. The proceeds from the sale will be used to further the interests of the club.

Colored Men to Assert Rights.

The colored voters of this city will hold a meeting in the hall in the Elkwood building this evening for the purpose of organizing for independent action to assert their rights and powers in the political body. The meeting will be addressed by Prof. Jesse Layton, of Washington, D. C., formerly of this city, and Prof. Robinson, of Trenton, both of whom are recognized as leaders in the Negro race.

Charles Hand's Enterprise.

Charles H. Hand is excavating for the cellar of a building which he will erect on the corner of Watchung avenue and East Second street. He is undecided just what size it will be as yet, as he is awaiting the acceptance of an offer which he has made another investor. If the prospective deal is consummated a large building will be put up, but if not a one-story structure will be erected.

Maintains the highest position as a food for children. The little ones like it; physicians indorse it.

ARMY READY FOR FIELD

War Department Plans Complete and Prepared for Hostilities.

ORDERS FOR AMBULANCES

Steps Perfected for Moving the Entire Force to the Eastern and Southern Coasts—The Number of Inspections Increased, as in Time of Actual Hostilities.

Washington, March 28.—Measures have been adopted by the War Department which go a long way toward the complete preparation of the army to meet immediate hostilities. General Miles held a conference with Secretary Long in regard to the distribution of troops on the eastern and southern coasts, and the steps taken to move the whole standing army within a short time, or as soon as the situation shall become in the least degree more critical, were thus perfected.

It was decided in general that the infantry and cavalry from Jefferson Barracks, Columbus Barracks, Fort Thomas and Fort Sheridan shall be sent to coast points south of Maryland, and that the troops from the lake region and the northwestern posts shall be utilized in the Department of the East.

In many cases the troops will be assigned to the immediate vicinity of the present forts and coast fortifications on the coast, especially in the South. Many of the troops, however, will be stationed at new points, and the tent equipage of such regiments will be used instead of permanent barracks. To this end the tents and other belongings of all Western cavalry and infantry regiments have been prepared for shipment at a moment's notice.

Several orders were issued and contracts made Saturday which are especially significant of the eDpartment's desire to prepare for actual operatons in the field at an early day. A contract was made for twenty additional ambulances for use in the field. Another contract calls for the early delivery of 100,000 pounds of gun cotten to be used in planting submarine mines in channels, harbors, and at the mouths of large rivers.

Without in any degree relaxing the strictness of the physical and moral requirements in regard to recruits for the army, the Adjutant-General's office is hastening the work of recruiting men for the new Sixth and Seventh Regiments of artillery. When the recruiting for these regiments began, only about twenty-five men per day were secured. Within the last few days, however, the number has been increased to forty per day, and it is on this basis that Adjutant-General Corbin estimates the early completion of the recruiting.

The War Department has ordered that a physical examination be made of all the militia organizations in all the States for the purpose of ascertaining the number of men which would be available at once for the service, but the latest order provides for an accurate statement of the whole force which the President could command.

The Secretary of War has ordered that the system of army inspection employed prior to 1894 be organized at once. Hereafter the inspectors will report only to the commanding generals of the several military dpartments, instead of being under the immediate direction of the Secretary of War, and of the Adjutant-General of the army.

PLANS OF THE FLYING SQUADRON.

Making Giant Efforts to Put It in Working Order.

Washington, March 28.—The flying squadron will not complete its organization until the middle of this week, although its nucleus will be at Hampton Roads when Commodore Schley hoists his pennant on the flagship Brooklyn to-day. At that time the Brooklyn and Massachusetts will be the only ships of the prospective flying squadron there, the Texas being at the Brooklyn Navy Yard to receive her ammunition hoists, while the cruisers Columbia and Minneapolis are expected to be ready to leave League Island Navy Yard in time to reach Hampton Roads about the middle of the week.

Already men and supplies have been forwarded to League Island for the two cruisers of this squadron. Sixty sailors have come on from the old ship Michigan, stationed on the great lakes, and seventeen coal passers from the receiving ship Wabash at Boston. These men are now at League Island and will be distributed between the cruisers Minneapolis and Columbia. By the end of the week the flying squadron will be complete in its organization of ships, men and armament.

The movements of the Spanish torpedo flotilla continues to be watched with the keenest interest by naval officials and close estimates are being made as to their location and the time intervening before their arrival at Porto Rico. The Navy Department calculates that the run from the Canaries to San Juan, Porto Rico, which is expected to be the first stopping point, is 2,800 miles. It is believed they have already covered about 400 miles of this distance. They are moving slowly, being retarded by a collier which accompanies them, and the balance of the trip will take from twelve to fourteen days.

Representative Hilborn of California, one of the senior members of the House Committee on Naval Affairs in talking with the Navy Department officials concerning the movements of the Spanish flotilla presented a new phase of the case and one not in line with the current view of naval officials.

"It is not for us to interfere in any case with the movement of the Spanish torpedo flotilla or other Spanish vessels," said he. "The high seas are an open highway to the ships of the world, and while there is no declaration of war we are not in a position to say that these torpedo boats shall not move as Spain sees fit to direct them. When we are assembling our own ships at Key West and other points it is not the time for us to intercept the movements of Spanish ships. That would be an overt act and not permissible in the absence of a declaration of war."

It is understood that the battleships Massachusetts and Texas were attached to the flying squadron because the armored cruiser Cristobal Colon is acting as the flotilla's convoy, and that they will act with the squadron in any offensive movement.

Six of the fastest tugs and yachts bought in New York are to be assigned to Commodore Schley's command as soon as they are converted into torpedo gunboats at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. They will act as night pickets for the warships. Each will be fitted with a searchlight for that purpose. This precaution was an outgrowth of the uneasiness over the approach of the Spanish flotilla.

Commodore Schley left Washington last night for the rendezvous at Hampton Roads, where he will assume his new post of duty on the flagship Brooklyn. He has selected two of the officers of his staff. They are Lieut. Sears, flag lieutenant, and Lieut. Wells, flag secretary.

SUNDAA WAR COUNCIL.

First Sunday Meeting of the Cabinet in Thirty-three Years.

Washington, March 28.—President McKinley yesterday hurriedly summoned his Cabinet to the White House. This was the first time the Cabinet had been called togther on Sunday for thirty-three years. The call was issued a few minutes before 11 o'clock. The urgency of the meeting was well betokened in the fact that several messengers instead of one were sent to summon the Cabinet officers.

The chief cause of the hurried meeting just before noon was the receipt by the President of the Spanish Government's reply to the American note accompanying the Maine report.

The substance of this reply is that the Spanish Government has made a separate investigation of the Maine disaster, and is convinced that the explosion was an internal one, for which Spain could in no way be held responsible. It also declared that the harbor of Havana was not mined.

The Cabinet spent much time in discussing the matter of the Spanish torpedo boat flotilla, and the probabilities of dispatching Commodore Schley's "flying squadron" to intercept it.

The meeting lasted until after 1 o'clock, and when the members of the Cabinet left none of them would consent to make any statement.

Attorney-General Griggs was asked whether he could tell if any answer had yet been received from Spain, and replied: "We could tell you, but we will not."

Secretary Alger last night said that the meeting of the Cabinet was of no special importance. The subjects discussed were those that would naturally be talked about.

MRS. PARNELL DEAD.

Mother of Charles Stewart Parnell Dies from Burns.

London, March 28.—Mrs. Della Tudor Parnell, daughter of the celebrated American naval officer, Rear Admiral Charles Stewart, and mother of Charles Stewart Parnell, died last evening at Avondale, Rathdrum, County Wicklow, Ireland, as the result of the burns she received Saturday from igniting her clothing while she was sitting before a fire.

Miss Della Tudor Stewart was married to Charles Henry Parnell on May 21, 1835. Her famous son, Charles Stewart Parnell, long the Irish Home Rule leader in the British Parliament, was not born until 1846. After his death she remained for some time under the hallucination that he still lived, a delusion which was shared by her daughter, Miss Anna Parnell, who at the time of the imprisonment of Charles Stewart Parnell, assumed the direction of the Land League.

In April of 1896, while in this country, Mrs. Parnell was the victim of a savage assault, presumably by a tramp, from the effects of which she never entirely recovered. Last May an appeal signed by the Lord Mayor of Dublin and other influential friends of Charles Stewart Parnell, was issued in London, asking subscriptions to a fund to assist her and other needy members of the family by freeing the Parnell estates at Avondale from debt and other obligations. This was partially successful, and her own immediate necessities were relieved, while the remnant of her days was passed in comparative comfort.

To the end she was the devoted champion of th doctrine of complete political independence for Ireland of which her favorite son was the most celebrated exponent.

THE SPANISH ELECTION.

Liberal Party Wins and the Result Means That War Will Be Avoided if Possible.

Madrid, March 28.—The result of the elections to-day is that Premier Sagasta and the Liberal party will remain in office. They were elected by a large majority amid the most intense enthusiasm.

In this city the polls were almost deserted and the elections were conducted in an orderly manner. There were serious disturbances, however, at Bilboa, Barcelona, Biscay, Navarre, Catalonia, Valencia and Durango. At the latter place one man was killed.

The election resulted as it was generally supposed it would, in a rebuke to Weyler and the butcherings of innocents in Cuba.

THE MAINE REPORT

An Abstract of Court's Findings Made to Congress To-day.

THE COURT UNANIMOUS

The Explosion Was Caused by a Mine Under the Ship on the Port Side—Cannot Find Evidence to Fix the Responsibility.

Washington, March 28.—The Associated Press presents herewith a complete abstract of the report of the Court of Inquiry which investigated the wrecking of the battleship Maine. This abstract is made from the report itself, access to which was obtained yesterday despite official secrecy unparalleled in the handling of official papers. The report is made up of eight parts, as follows:

First—The Court finds that at the time of the explosion the battleship Maine was lying in five and one-half to six fathoms of water.

Second—The discipline aboard the ship was excellent; everything stowed according to orders—ammunition, guns, stores, etc. The temperature of the magazines at 8 P. M. was normal, except in the after 10-inch magazine, and that did not explode.

Third—The explosion occurred at 9.40 o'clock on the evening of Feb. 15. There were two explosions, with a very short interval between them. The ship lifted on the first explosion.

Fourth—The court can form no definite opinion of the condition of the wreck from the divers' evidence.

Fifth—Technical details of wreckage from which court deduces that a mine was exploded under the ship on the port side.

Sixth—The explosion was due to no fault of those on board.

Seventh—Opinion of the court stating that the explosion of the mine caused the explosion of two magazines.

Eighth—The court declares that it cannot find evidence to fix responsibility.

The report is unanimous and is signed by all the members of the court. It does not refer to the existence or non-existence of mines in the harbor of Havana, except in the specific finding that a mine was exploded under the ship, and the opinion that the explosion of the two magazines was caused by the explosion of a mine.

The report as a whole is a formal, dispassionate recital of facts, and bears the stamp of that strict officialism which marks naval procedure. It is brief, not exceeding 1,800 words, and among the eight parts goes to the greatest length under the second heading which deals with the discipline and order of the ship. This, the court specifies with extreme minuteness, the least detail of the satisfactory condition of everything on board being given.

The normal temperament of the large forward magazines at 8 o'clock—only an hour and forty minutes before the explosion—disposes of the question of accidental combustion within these magazines. Whilt the court holds that these magazines did not explode from internal causes they nevertheless are of the opinion that the explosion of the mine under the port side of the ship caused the explosion of the two magazines.

This will explai nthe remarkable destruction wrought, the explosion thus being shown to have combined the force of a mine without and two magazines within.

The two explosions which the court finds to have occurred, with a very short interval between them, is an additional detail showing that two forces operated in causing the destruction.

The finding that the ship lifted on the first explosion indicates an external source, and one of tremendous power to be able to lift a battleship of thousands of tons.

The character of the wreckage technically described in the first part of the report, from which the court deduces that a mine was exploded under the ship on the port side sustains the view taken by some experts shortly after the disaster that the force of the explosion was exerted from port to starboard.

The feature of the report of the deepest interest to the navy is the compite exoneration of Capt. Sigsbee and all on board, contained in the second finding, setting forth the perfect order and discipline prevailing on the ship, and more directly stated in the sixth finding, which declares the disaster to be due to no fault of those on board.

The inability of the court to fix responsibility as stated in the eighth part, makes the report so guarded in expression that neither Spain nor the Spanish are mentioned throughout.

DEATH IN THE HOUSE.

Report on the Maine Affair to Go to Committee Without Debate.

Washington March 28.—The death of Representative John Simpkins which occurred at his home in this city No. 1717 K street, Saturday night, from heart disease, may serve to prevent debate on the Maine report in the House to-day.

The understanding among the House leaders last night was that the motion to adjourn the House out of respect to Mr. Simpkins, usual in such cases, will be deferred until the President's message is read. The plan is to move to refer the message to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and immediately adjourn.

Mr. Hitt of Illinois chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, will be recognized to make this motion. The motion is not debatable. It is the wish of the President, as expressed to the leaders of both parties, that this course be followed, and the programme has been acquiesced in by all, irrespective of party.

On Wednesday the President probably will transmit a message asking for an appropriation to relieve the starving in Cuba. The administration is assured of a strong majority for the policy it has so far mapped out, by both Republican and Democratic leaders.

The largest crowd which has attended a session of Congress in years is expected at the Capitol to-day when the official report of the Board of Inquiry on the Maine disaster will be given to the country.

The members of the House await the

THE PROBLEM SOLVED.

THE NEW MEDICAL DISCOVERY TESTED.

Results of the Test in Various Forms of Dyspepsia.

Chronic indigestion or dyspepsia, while a very common trouble, has for some time been looked upon by able physicians as a serious thing, and that no time should be lost in treating it properly at the start, because recent researches have shown that the most serious, fatal and incurable diseases have their origin in simple dyspepsia of indigestion.

Diabetes is simply one form of indigestion, the sugar and starchy food not being assimilated by the digestive organs. In Bright's disease the albumen is not properly assimilated.

While consumption and dyspepsia are twin diseases, and it is beyond question that dyspepsia makes a fertile soil for the seeds of consumption.

But the trouble has been to find a remedy that could be depended upon to cure dyspepsia, as it is notoriously obstinate and difficult to cure.

This has been the question which has puzzled physicians and dyspeptics alike, until the question was solved three years ago by the appearance of a new dyspepsia cure in the medical world known as Staurt's Dyspepsia Tablets, which it was claimed was as a certain, reliable cure for every form of stomach trouble.

Physicians, however, would not accept such statements without first giving the new remedy many tests and careful observing results.

For three years the remedy has been thoroughly tested in every section of the country and with surprising and satisfactory results.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be honestly claimed to be a specific, a radical lasting cure for indigestion in the various forms of acid dyspepsia or sour stomach, gas or wind on stomach, too much bile, undue fullness or pressure after eating and similar symptoms resulting from disordered digestion. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were not placed before the public until this three years' trial left no doubt as to their value and they have recently been placed in the trade and can be found on sale at all druggists at the nominal price of 50 cents per package.

No extravagant claims are made for the remedy. It will not cure rheumatism, pneumonia, typhoid fever nor anything but just what it is claimed to cure and that is every form of stomach trouble.

No dieting is necessary, good wholesome food and plenty of it and you may rest assured that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest it.

Druggists claim for it that it is a pleasure to recommend it to dyspeptics, because it gives such universal satisfaction.

CRISIS NEAR AT HAND

It Now Rests With Spain Whether It Will Be Peace or War.

WHO WILL STRIKE FIRST?

Indication in Washington and Madrid Are That Peace is Receding and That a Conflicts is Inevitable, Though McKinley Still Hopes for Peace.

Washington, March 28.—With each succeeding hour the conviction grows in Washington that there will be war between the United States and Spain. Peace is receding and all eyes turn toward war. The paramount question in the national capital now is, Who will strike the first blow?

Legislators are in conference, and, sweeping steadily forward with no hindrance, the work of preparation for a conflict goes on. In certain quarters, not altogether unofficial, the act of Spain in ordering her torpedo flotilla to Cuba from the Canaries is regarded somewhat in the nature of a defiance, or rather as another incident in the series which has brought about the present critical situation.

Rumor and speculation run riot in Washington. These have kept the public at high tension, and, though great good was hoped for from the breathing spell given by the Senate, apprehensions that peace is more remote than ever are steadily growing. However, the President remains firm in his expressed belief that peace is not improbable.

This, despite advices from Madrid which state that Spain objects to the United States sending relief to the reconcentrados in Cuba; and the Government sees possible harm even in indirect relief work. It is also stated that Spain will make counter claims against the United States.

By a poll made of the Senate and House of Representatives it is shown that the President is now the master of the situation. Whether he will continue to be or not after the message transmitting the Maine report to Congress this afternoon, remains to be seen. Much may depend upon the character of the report and testimony and the understanding which he gives to leaders in both Houses as to what his next step is to be.

Leading members of both parties in both houses are awaiting word from the Executive before expressing their intentions, and Democrats and Republicans will support him if they continue to believe his policy is fixed. The poll also demonstrates that the majority in both houses believe that unless Spain backs down forcible intervention will have to be resorted to.

Senor Sagasta the Spanish Premier shares Mr. McKinley's belief. Speaking unofficially in Madrid he said he believed that a rupture with this country can be prevented. El Liberal, his organ, printed a paragraph stating that alarmist impressions have even entered official centres.

All Europe expects that war between the United States and Spain is certain. It is believed the revelations now officially made by the report of the Court of Inquiry will so combine the other factors of the situation as to make hostilities inevitable. Some regard it as possible that Spain at the last moment will see the hopelessness of maintaining her position and yield without, as a British Admiralty official says, "having the lesson unmercifully hammered into her."

According to advices from Havana, the press of that city accuses the American Court of Inquiry into the Maine disaster of having been influenced by the sensational newspapers in its decision. Despite the critical situation and war talk, Havana is coolly awaiting developments. No sign of hostility has been shown by the volunteers and they apparently believe that arbitration will settle the differences between the United States and Spain.

Fearing an attempt on the part of Spain to destroy the battleship Oregon and the gunboat Mariatta, which have been ordered from the Pacific to reinforce Captain W. T. Sampson's command at Key West, instructions will be sent to their commanding officers directing them to adopt every precaution against attack. These instructions will be sent because information has been received that the torpedo boat Temerario, of the Spanish Navy, has hurriedly left Montevideo, Ureguay. Her destination is unknown, but the authorities seem to believe she might have been orderd to intrcept the Oregon and Marietta should hostilities be soon begun.

It is understood that the President does not yet despair of relieving Cuba and avoiding war. While thus hoping, the relief of Cuba is fully decided upon, and the avoidance of war has at last become a secondary consideration.

There seems to be only two threads upon which a hope of maintaining peace can hang. One is that Spain, when faced with the necessity of taking the first step by declaring war or firing on relief ships and relief forces, will hold her inhuman hands; the other, that the allied financial interests of Europe which hold the enormous debts of Spain, will find means to prevent her from plunging into certain bankruptcy to their own undoing. It is believed that this last is an element which the President, through eminent American financiers, has summoned to assist in compelling peace with Spain while he relieves and restores peace in Cuba.

The crisis in our Spanish relations came with the return of Senator Proctor and the delivery of his calm, conservative, convicting speech. When he ended the administration and his Congressional associates felt that he had spoken to and for the humanity of the world. The feeling is universal here that if Spain elects to invoke war to maintain conditions which shock mankind and outrage and disgrace civilization the United States will wage righteous war in resisting her barbarism.

This week will witness the greatest possible activity at every harbor on the coast, at all points where war material is manufactured or distributed, and in the manning of coast defenses. The undertone throughout army and navy circles resolves itself into the one command, "Forward!" No backward step is possible on our part. The advance is not necessarily to war, but every one admits that the chances of peace are small, and that Spain must decide.

The President's success will be marvellous if he succeeds in restraining Congress after it receives the Maine report and until he makes his next move. This will only be accomplished through a full understanding that he will act speedily. In his personal interviews with the leaders of both parties in each house he has in large degree impressed his own coolness and self-poise. He has given intimations of difficulties which do not receive consideration in debate, and which cannot be discreetly called to public attention while negotiations are pending. He has raised himself in everybody's estimation, and greatly increased confidence in himself. If he finds it necessary to give the word—and he will not shrink for a moment from speaking when he believes that right and duty justify and demand it—he knows that Congress and the country will spring into line. Within a very brief period Spain must halt or our ships will be cleared for action.

SPAIN PLANNED AN ATTACK.

The President Was Told That the Flotilla Was Ordered to strike.

Washington, March 28.—However indifferent the administration may appear to be to the coming of the Spanish torpedo boat flotilla to waters in close proximity to the coast of the United States, there is grave alarm felt among the higher officials of the executive Government, and particularly among the officers on duty at the Navy Department. There is more cause for this alarm than the mere suspicion that the flotilla has a purpose hostile to the American squadrons on the Atlantic coast.

Your correspondent has information of the most trustworthy character, that on the 18th inst., the day after the first section of the flotilla reached the Canaries from Cadiz, President McKinley was warned by a person whose testimony was considered worthy of belief, that he had positive knowledge that the purpose of the flotilla was to strike the squadron now under Capt. Sampson's command, in the hope of crippling the naval force of the United States, so that Spain would be in a better condition for waging war.

It was stated to the President that the blow was to be struck, according to the plan arranged, before war was actually declared, the Spanish Government presumably believing that hostilities could not be avoided.

This warning may seem to be based on a ridiculous assumption, but it was certainly considered serious enough to warrant the issue of directions which caused Admiral Sicard to place picket boats about his vessels and to use sarchlights from sundown until sunrise every night.

The information was also considered worthy enough of credence by the Naval Strategy Board to compel it to recommend to the President and Secretary Long the immediate formation of a "flying squadron" for a counter movement against the flotilla.

In this connection it is significant that the administration has received a cipher cable message from Minister Woodford containing notice that no telegrams relating to the movements of Spanish naval vessels would be received, sent or delivered in that country, and that this embargo related especially to torpedo craft. It could not be ascertained whether the censorship applied to Minister Woodford's dispatches.

One effect of the embargo on news relating to the movements of Spanish ships of war has been to prevent the Navy Department from getting any reliable information as to whether the flotilla consisted of more than the six torpedo craft and a converted merchantman composing the division which left Cadiz on March 13 for the Canaries, where, according to report, they were to be joined by seven other torpedo vessels.

The whereabouts of this second division is a mystery to the naval officials, although they have exerted every means in their power to get positive information in regard to its movements and its composition. The Department has been given to understand that the armored cruiser Cristobal Colon is acting as a convoy of the second division.

OFFICIAL NOTE TO SPAIN.

Madrid Looks for Peace With Gen. Woodford's Aid.

London, March 28.—The Madrid correspondent of the Standard says:

"I am able to state that the following is the real course of the negotiations: During the past week, on Wednesday, United States Minister Woodford had an official interview with the Ministers of Foreign Affairs and the Colonies, Senors Gullon and Moret, at the private residence of the former. It lasted two hours. Gen. Woodford left with them an official note explaining fully the views and intentions of the American Government.

"In this document no comminatory intimation was made nor any date fixed; but it was clearly and firmly stated that the United States Government could not longer withhold from Congress the correspondence and Consular reports, which not only put in full light the condition of the distressed rural population of Cuba, the inadequate relief, and the persistence of disaffection, but also showed that the new colonial policy and other efforts of Spain had not produced the results that would justify holding out the prospect of early pacification.

"Consequently, the American note lays stress upon the fact that contingencies are now fast approaching for the action which was foreshadowed in the Presidential messages and diplomatic correspondence so frequently and clearly during the last three years.

"The American note and the language of Gen. Woodford in his conferences with Senor Gullon leave no doubt that it is the intention of the Washington Government to act very soon, beginning with the communication of the above documents and the Maine report to Congress and sending relief officially to the distressed Cubans.

Will Consider it an Act of Piracy.

Madrid, March 28.—The statement is reiterated that Spain will consider it an act of piracy if the United States prevent the Spanish torpedo flotilla now at sea from reaching Porto Rico.

PEOPLE'S BANK AFFAIRS.

Receiver for the Philadelphia Institution Will Probably Be Appointed.

Philadelphia, March 28.—A receiver for the People's Bank will probably be appointed to-day by State Banking Commissioner Gilkeson who now has charge of the bank. Whether the receivership will be tmporary or final dpends on the result of the examination now in progress. Nothing of that examination is known, but a vague hint that the discrepancy in the bank's money reaches the amount of $1,200,000 of which $750,000 is said to be loans to the Guarantors' Company.

A letter left by Cashier Hopkins to his family before he committed suicide throws some light on the causes of the bank crash. This letter reads:

"My Dear, Devoted, Loving Wife and Daughters: For months I have been on the verge of insanity from trouble at the bank. After my first sleep of exhaustion I have fought the balance of the night through praying to God to get me out of my trouble, but it was of no avail.

"I, some two years ago, let the Guarantors-Loper Company have some securities of the bank, and could not get them back, and then from that I had to loan them money to keep them afloat, and my hand was in the lion's mouth and I could not get it out. The only thing that has kept me alive was the hope that the tide would turn with them and I could get the securities back, but now I see it can never be, and I cannot bear this pressure on my brain any longer.

"I say to you this, and swear it before Almighty God, never, from Dec. 20, 1869, until this moment, have I ever spent a dollar on my family, my house, or myself that was not earned by me, and mine to spend. I have to leave you to the mercy of a loving God. Lovingly, HUSBAND AND PAPA.

"March 24, 1898."

The date Dec. 20, 1869, was the date of Hopkins' marriage. The State Bank examiner in charge of the People's Bank and the officers of the institution stubbornly resist all efforts to get information about the bank's affairs and the mysterious transactions that are given as the cause of its suspension. Richard F. Loper of the Guarantors Company says the obligation of his concern to the bank will be paid dollar for dollar, and that the business of the Guarantors Company will be readjusted and the concern again put on its feet. Mr. Loper does not mention the amount of his or his company's obligation to the People's Bank. He says the company has on deposit to secure policy holders $260,000 in Pennsylvania, $57,000 in Ohio and $30,000 in Virginia.

FORTY-EIGHT MEN PERISH.

Frozen to Death on Ice Floes—Fifty or Sixty Others Must Have Limbs Amputated.

Halifax, N. S., March 28.—Details of the calamity which overwhelmed half of the crew of the sealing steamer Greenland in the ice fields were received here yesterday from St. John's, N. F., which port was reached by the Greenland yesterday afternoon. Twenty-five corpses were piled upon her deck and fifty-five men were moaning with terrible suffering in the hold, having frostbitten limbs and bodies.

St. Johns, N. F., March 28.—The steamer Greenland, returning from the seal fishery, put into Baie de Verd Saturday night, and reported a terrible disaster. On Wednesday last, when among the ice floes, while her crew were traveling about the floes in search of seals, a terrible storm arose, accompanied by a blinding snow, which drifted rapidly, and a severe frost. The members of the crew who were on the ice could not regain the vessel and were exposed to the terrible weather throughout the night and all of the next day.

Forty-eight men perished and between fifty and sixty were so badly frost bitten that the amputation of one or more of their limbs will have to be undergone by all of them.

The Greenland succeeded in recovering the bodies of twenty-five of the victims, but the remaining twenty-three were buried beneath th snowdrifts. All of the frost bitten men aboard the steamer are suffering terribly, having been without proper medical attendance. It is feared that other steamers have suffered in a similar manner.

The city is in a terrible state of excitement. Th disaster is the worst recorded in the history of the sealing industry. Most of the victims were married men.

Fanny Davenport May Die.

Chicago, March 28.—The condition of Fanny Davenport last night is such that her physicians think her chances are evenly balanced between life and death. Her relatives were informed by wire last night that her condition was precarious.

Report That Spain Will Yield.

Paris, March 28.—Private advices from Madrid are printed here to the effect that the Spanish Minister at Washington has been instructed to yield gradually to the United States.

In an interview ex-President Cleveland said he thought the course of the administration was exactly right and calculated to preserve the national honor.

A trustworthy report in Paris says the Court of Appeal will set aside M. Zola's conviction and grant him a new trial.

GIRLS AGAINST BOYS.

The athletic girls of Plainfield have demonstrated that the healthy exercise of basket ball can be played with due modesty and propriety among themselves, even though it attains considerable roughness and sometimes engenders a spirit of animosity not in keeping with good nature with the contests indulged in by the sterner sex. But the vigorous young women of Elizabeth go their Plainfield sisters, to use a sporting term, one better in the playing of the game. The fair contestants have met a team of young men and have conquered the older followers of the game. A veracious chronicler of the game says:

For a time the playing was spirited, the girls more than holding their ground with their sturdier adversaries. While many clever plays were made by the boys, the game was finally won by their opponents scoring a goal amid much applause. As an example of physical development Elizabeth's young women are proud of themselves. Prouder still are their parents, who unanimously declare athletics for girls about the proper thing.

Now there is a hint, as well as a precedent to urge them to follow it to the end, for the Plainfield young women of gymnastic abilities, to challenge a team of young men for a friendly game. From the performances the girls have already shown in passing, dodging and goal-throwing, as well as in all other details of the exercise, there is every reason to believe that they can make a creditable showing and add great glory to their achievements in the athletic world. Let the girls show their courage by issuing a challenge.

PUPILS' DEFECTIVE EYESIGHT.

The Orange school officials have been conducting the same kind of a medical examination of pupils that has been underway in Plainfield for the last few months, and with very much the same results. Dr. Thomas F. Phelan, the chief health inspector of the Board of Education, reports that twenty per cent. of the school children in Orange have defective eyesight. According to the doctor the condition is caused or enhanced by the improper manner in which the school rooms are lighted. The news report which tells of the examinations conducted in Orange does not state whether the examiners notify the parents of their children's defects, as has been done in all Plainfield cases, with the additional advice that they consult a physician to remedy the ills, but it would seem that such action would naturally be commended in good judgment.

HONORING TRADING STAMPS.

Hundreds of New Jersey housewives have been stirred to indignation since Friday over the action of the trading stamp companies in not honoring their coupons with the premiums offered, and none more so than the Plainfield women. The counsel for the New Jersey Retail Merchants' Association, which was instrumental in passing the anti-trading stamp bill, gives the opinion that the holders of the books of stamps can compel the merchants who gave the stamps to redeem them in accordance with their promise. He further says the trading stamp companies clearly avoid any responsibility to any one to redeem the stamps in any way, and that it is not unlikely that the merchants giving out the stamps will be proceeded against to oblige them to redeem the books.

KIND WORDS FOR THE PRESS.

The Plainfield Press has, by taking thought, not merely added to its stature, but broadened its phylacteries by eight columns. It is bright and enterprising withal, and up-to-date every time.—Metuchen Recorder.

PASSING COMMENT.

The pulpit at the Crescent Avenue church yesterday morning and evening was occupied by Rev. Dr. D. J. MacMillan, of New York, the late secretary of the Board of Home Missions. He is a fearless speaker, who is reported in the "Church at Home and Abroad" as once having preached out west with two loaded revolvers on his pulpit. His sermons yesterday were listened to with great interest.

* * * * *

Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector of the Holy Cross church, occupied the pulpit for Rev. Dr. Glazebrook, of Elizabeth, last evening. Dr. Glazebrook is an officer of one of the Jersey regiments and has stated his intention of going to war if his regiment is sent, and going, not as a chaplain, but as an officer. He fought through the Civil War with Stonewall Jackson and was by his side when he fell mortally wounded.

DON'T BURY STREET MONEY.

An Advocate of Good Streets Wants to See Park Avenue Asphalted.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Common Council has voted, practically, $20,000 for street purposes. Will it be unwise enough to bury it in the ground, or will it begin on Park avenue at Front street and lay down an asphalt to North avenue, and then as much more as possible on Front street, between the postoffice and Y. M. C. A. building, and have something to show for it for ten years to come?

Our people ought to be growing sick of bad streets, but they are not, or they would make a big racket over it. A year ago—or is it a little more?—the street committee attempted to macadamize Park avenue south of Front street. Every dollar spent there was wasted. Every pound of stone and dirt put there became mud and has long ago been scraped off. Will the farce go on? It probably will.

I want to see The Press lead in fighting every day for an asphalt pavement somewhere, if only for an object lesson. And then I want it to protest against all the other tomfoolery in the attempted repairs of streets.

By the way, where is the women's movement? Is that dead? The papers fly around in the gutters, merchants sweep out their stores into the streets, the scavengers drop ashes, bricks and other trash in the roadway just as they always have. Nobody cares—apparently! X. Y. Z.

Mr. Hegeman's Improvement.

The many friends of B. A. Hegeman, Sr., of Sycamore avenue, will be delighted to know that he has so far recovered from his recent severe illness as to be able to resume his place at the dining table yesterday and partake of dinner.

Miss Truston, of New York, is stopping at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. W. Haviland, of Rockview avenue.

ONLY FIVE DAYS MORE

In Which to be Cured by the Famous Boy Phenomenon.

No New Cases Will be Received After April 2d, Although He Will Remain Two Weeks More to Cure Those Now Under Treatment.

The time is growing near when no new cases will be taken for treatment by the Boy Phenomenon. As previously announced, no new cases will be taken for treatment after April 2. Therefore, all who desire to avail themselves of his services must call on or before that time to secure their time of appointment for treatment, as his time is being rapidly filled. Those holding yellow slips or envelopes, who have not already secured an appointment must also present the same at once, as their cases will not be taken for treatment after April 2d. This is made necessary from the fact that the ensuing two weeks will be required in which to cure those who are already under treatment, and also those who obtain appointments next week.

Theories which have stood for centuries have been drilled into us a part of our education and accepted by the general public as facts. When one of these is exploded is it any wonder that the people are slow to accept the truth until proof positive obliges them to do so? That tumors are a growth of flesh has been demonstrated often and that they could not be removed except by the knife has been asserted since medicine and surgery have been practiced, and many are the women who have surrendered their lives by an operation for this disease, and the physician consoled himself with the thought that he had done all that lay in his power. That was true with the light he had, but the Boy Phenomenon has proved time and time again that these tumors can be removed without danger, pain or inconvenience to the patient. A dozen times or more in the past seven weeks he published cures of many chronic cases with name and address for reference. He now adds another to the list.

Mrs. A. Wooden, of 424 Orchard place, this city, has had an unsightly tumor on her forearm, near the wrist, which for years had caused her great annoyance. It was quite large and still growing. At her second treatment yesterday the tumor and sack were both entirely removed in less than 10 minutes. She left the office and walked to her home a well woman.

The following letter of gratitude was received by the Boy Phenomenon yesterday, which explains itself: "I have lived in Dunellen 33 years, I am in the real estate and lumber business. Have had a very severe chronic rheumatic affection of the limbs which left me in partially paralyzed condition, so that it was with great difficulty I could walk. The treatment you have given me has made a new man out of me and I now feel as if I could walk all the way home to Dunellen. Words cannot express the gratitude and great joy I feel at my sudden recovery. Gratefully yours, W. S. STEVENS.

MINNIE HAUCK'S DEBUT.

The Prima Donna Recalls Her First Venture on the Stage.

Minnie Hauck, the famous prima-donna, has written the following interesting account of her first appearance on the stage. She is now living a retired life in Germany, for her days of vocal triumph are over, and she looks back with special pride to the first faltering steps in her long and successful career. She writes:

"I was just about six years old when I made my first appearance on the stage. This was in Kansas City, where I was then living with my mother in one of the peculiar hotels of that time. To-day Kansas City is a town of 200,000 inhabitants. In those days it was a village, with many of the characteristics of a backwoods town. In the hotel at which we were stopping, all the theatrical companies were wont to come and it was an occasion of intense pleasure for me to sit at the long dining table and listen to the conversation of the actor folk of that time.

"So when I was about six years old there came to Kansas City a company of actors who had arranged to give a performance of a popular play called 'The Golden Farmer.' In this play there was a part for a child of six. It was rather long and full of sentiment. It so happened that while we were sitting at the table the director turned to my mother and told her that the play would probably not be produced that night as the little girl cast for the child's part had been taken ill. I can't tell what prompted me to speak but I begged the director to let me act as a substitute. He told me it was impossible as it had taken weeks to train the other child and he felt certain that I could not learn the words in the few hours left before the curtain went up. I begged so piteously that he finally consented to let me make a trial of it.

"For two hours I went through the part in the hotel parlor and when the curtain finally went up on the play and the cue came for me to go on, all nervousness left me and I acted the part with the feeling of an adept.

"I was called before the curtain four times and made a tremendous hit. The director begged my mother to let me travel with the company, but she refused, and that night I remember when I went to bed I put my arms around her neck and whispered 'I will go on the stage, mother, and become a great actress.' Since then I have appeared many times before the public in all the great capitals of the world, but I can never forget the happiness that followed upon the heels of that first triumph."

Jogging His Memory.

One day a little girl accompanied her mother on a shopping expedition. At one of the shops they were about to visit the proprietor was in the habit of presenting the child with a doll. As they approached the shop the little one appeared to be very uneasy.

"Mamma," said she, "suppose Mr. Brown forgets my doll."

"Oh, he won't forget," said the lady, reassuringly.

"But if he does," persisted the child.

"Well, then," said mamma, "we must jog his memory."

They entered the shop, and the lady was soon deeply engrossed in her bargain-hunting business. After this was completed to her satisfaction she turned to go, whereupon the little one clambered on to a chair and tapped the proprietor rather smartly on the head with her tiny parasol. "Whatever are you doing, you naughty girl?" exclaimed the mother.

"I'm jogging his 'remember'," said the child.

Don't Wear Night Dresses.

A New Yorker who visited Canada some time ago made a trip through one of the North-Western Territories and spent a time as the guest of a rancher.

"I fixed him up as well as I could," the rancher relates, "but he complained that he did not like sleeping with his clothes on. So after the first night I stretched a cowskin across the shack, and told him he might undress if he liked. He took off most of his garments and put on a long white night-dress. In the morning my foreman came in while the gentleman was still sleeping. Observing the white night-dress, he said, in a whisper:

"'Rather sudden—eh?'

"'What?' I asked.

"'The death of the old man.'

"'He's not dead—he's asleep,' I explained.

"'Then what's he wearin' them b'iled clothes for?' was the reply. 'Never saw a chap laid out in b'iled clothes afore, 'cept he were dead.'"

The Kind of Wife to Have.

A man who had been indulging too heavily since the New Year was induced to sign the pledge.

"You must let me have it," said the wife. "I will keep it for you." So the pledge was handed over to the wife's custody.

The next day the man was drinking again as freely as before.

"How is this?" asked a friend. "You signed the pledge yesterday, and now you are drinking again."

"It is all right," replied the pledge-signer in unsteady tones. "I don't have to keep that pledge. My wife says she will keep it for me. That's the kind of wife to have, old fellow. Let's have a drink!"

Bigson—"I once possessed a splendid dog, who could always distinguish between a vagabond and a respectable person."

Jigson—"Well, what's become of him?"

Bigson—"Oh, I was obliged to give him away. He bit me!"

AS TO THE FOOT.

Some Things About It that Are Said to Indicate Character.

It is surprising the little interest we take in other people's feet. Our own command the whole of our attention; and very worrying they are sometimes.

Have you ever noticed the shape of your feet? It may astonish you to know that one's feet are as much an index to one's character as one's face, or one's lines and wrinkles therein. This is the opinion of a foot surgeon whom P. W. has interviewed on the subject.

"Palmistry, physiognomy, and the like, are beside the mark compared with the value of the study of the feet in the formation of a man's character," said he. "There are three classes of the human foot—Aryan, Scandinavian, and the Anglo-Saxon. The first two are pure; the third is the blend of the former. There is also a nondescript type.

"The Celtic or Aryan foot was the foot of the old Phoenicians, and is the highest type of the human foot. It has many characteristics which stand out from all other feet.

"You may know it by the big toe being shorter than the next one to it, the big toe joint being large and long, the arch being short and high-pitched, and the heel-bone being irregular in form. The man with the Celtic foot will perform what he says; he will be strong, healthy, moral. It is the foot of the soldier, of the conqueror, and the trustworthy man.

"In the Scandinavian foot the big toe stands far away from all the others. The arch is flatter and longer than the Aryan; the heel is very symmetrical in relation to the general outline; the toes are longer; the tread is narrower. It is the more elegant of the two, but the Celtic is the stronger development. The man with such a foot as this will be no less sincere than the Aryan-footed man, but he will be slower in coming to a decision, and will perform his duty or a promise usually with less grace. For swimming it excels the Celtic; but the latter is all for long distance walking, mountain climbing, rapid and quick movement.

"The Anglo-Saxon may be termed the general all-round foot. We pass into degeneration from this, the foot that fills our prisons, hospitals, workhouses, and supplies us with the footpad.

"Even the prospects of marriage may be gleaned from comparison of the feet.

"The Anglo-Saxon foot is that of the business men. The big toe and the one next to it are brought on a line. The arch is not so accurate as the Aryan, but an improvement on the Scandinavian. The displacement across the tread is greater than the Scandinavian, but not equal to the Aryan."

How the Sultan's Wives Bathe.

The secret of the Sultan's harem is one which has been kept inviolate for a long time. The arcana, or hidden she has revealed the process which goes on within the bathroom, which she says is the only recreation in which the wives of the Sultan are able to indulge.

The first room is the place in which the ladies take off their garments, and it is presided over by a woman who is a sort of overseer and chaperon, as well as a caretaker, for every one of the ladies, as she takes them off, hands her the jewels which she has been wearing. Her greeting to all and each as they enter is the Turkish equivalent of "I hope you will come back pleased."

All along the side of the walls are low couches, while in the middle of the room is a clock, and near it an open stove which is called a "mangal." This stove not only keeps the apartment warmed to the proper temperature, but it also serves the second office of perfuming the room.

The bath itself is of white marble, and contains perfumed water in which the women plunge and play like the children at any of our own seaside places. After the splashing about period they go through a course of treatment with ordinary soap, and then comes a course of massage whose refreshing and revivifying powers are known to all.

After the bath, a cup of coffee is served from a huge bronze pot, which is kept on the top of the mangal in the disrobing room. In this room, too, there are cradles consisting of a pillow suspended by means of a rope at each end. On these pillows, tied by means of silken scarves, are the children of the bathers, and they sleep or crow away the time which is enjoyed by their mothers in the only recreation which is permitted to them, and here the women play with their offspring in exactly the same way as do the mothers in a less exalted, but probably much happier, station in our own land.

A Singular Find.

A very singular find is recorded in a London magazine. Some ivory cuttera, while at work upon an elephant's tusk, discovered the head of an assegai or African spear embedded in it. This tusk was being cut up for knife handles. It is surmised that the spear was thrown at a young elephant, and that the head broke off and lodged in the hollow part of one of its tusks. Then, as the tusk grew, the spearhead was pushed further and further towards the tip, and at length the ivory grew round the steel blade itself.

Doing Good.

She who does good to another, does also good to herself; not only in the consequence, but in the very act of doing it; for the consciousness of well-doing is an ample reward.

Sixty thousand elephants are annually slaughtered in Africa for the sake of their ivory.

Cannstatt. Das Viktoriatheater gegenüber dem Bahnhofe wird abgebrochen und auf dem Platze ein neues Postgebäude errichtet.—Der Bau einer elektrischen Bahn von der König Karls-Brücke zum Bahnhof ist nunmehr beschlossene Sache.

Heilbronn. Neulich Nachts wurden in einer Reihe von größeren Geschäften bedeutende Einbruchsdiebstähle verübt. In einem Bijouteriewaarenladen wurden zum Beispiel Schmucksachen im Werthe von 5000 Mark geraubt. Allem Anschein nach hat man es mit einer organisirten Diebesgesellschaft zu thun.

Nördlingen. In einem Walde bei Edersheim wurde der abgängige Schultheiß Heckmann von Omenheim, Bruder des verhafteten Schultheißen von Neresheim, erhängt und schon stark in Verwesung übergegangen aufgefunden.

Ulm. An einem Neubau in der König Wilhelmstraße stürzte ein Maurer vom Gerüste. Er riß dabei einen Theil der darauf lagernden Bohlen, Bretter u. s. w. mit sich, mit denen er auf drei mit Kanalbauten beschäftigte Arbeiter fiel. Alle vier Personen wurden schwer verletzt.

Weingarten. Die Pariser Depesche von der Flaschenbotschaft des „verunglückten Passagiers der „Elbe'," Bernhard Ramsperger vom Hause C. Gomer dahier, beruht auf Schwindel. Der Untergang der „Elbe" erfolgte im Januar 1895. Ramsperger erhielt aber erst gegen Ende 1896 Stellung bei Gomer. Außerdem besitzt die Expedition eines Ramsperger Blattes einen Brief eben desselben Ramsperger dd. New York, 10. Juli 1897, worin er die Absicht ausspricht, nach Johannesburg (Südafrika) zu reisen und das Blatt sich wöchentlich senden zu lassen. Ramsperger wird seit 28. April 1897 steckbrieflich verfolgt.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Seit Kurzem werden beim hiesigen Telegraphenamte Fahrräder zur Telegramm-Beförderung verwandt. Dieselben sind gelb angestrichen, so daß ein Diebstahl nicht leicht möglich ist.—Der zweite Haupttreffer der Metzer Dombau-Lotterie mit 20,000 Mark fiel in die Kollekte von Karl Götz dahier. Glücklicher Gewinner ist ein Bäuerlein im Schwarzwald.

Heidelberg. Ein Grenadier des hiesigen Bataillons zog kürzlich auf dem Exerzierplatze beim Kommando „Einzelmarsch!" sein Seitengewehr und brachte sich in selbstmörderischer Absicht eine zum Glück nicht gefährliche Wunde bei. Der Verletzte scheint in einer augenblicklichen geistigen Störung gehandelt zu haben.

Mannheim. An die Aufhebung des Rheinbrückengeldes ist nach einer Erklärung des Direktors der Pfälzischen Eisenbahnen, des Herrn v. Lavale, vor 1909 nicht zu denken. Das Brückengeld ertrage jährlich den beiderseitigen Bahnen 75,000 Mark, wovon 30,000 Mark für die Unterhaltung abgehen. Eine Amortisation sei noch nicht eingetreten.

Pforzheim. Unsere Stadt beabsichtigt ein Anlehen von 3,000,000 Mark aufzunehmen, mit dem die Ausgaben für ein neues Volksschulgebäude, für Wasserversorgung, Kanalisation, Elektrizitätswerk u. s. w. bestritten werden sollen.

Elsaß-Lothringen.

Straßburg. Unter dem Namen „Elsässisches Theater" hat sich hier eine Vereinigung gebildet, die den Zweck verfolgt, die Erzeugnisse der elsässischen dramatischen Dialektliteratur zur Aufführung zu bringen. Die Vereinigung setzt sich aus Mitgliedern aller Straßburger Theatervereine zusammen. Die Aufführungen sollen gegen mäßiges Eintrittsgeld im Theatersaal des neuen Unionsbaues stattfinden. Als regelmäßiger Spieltag ist der Sonntag in Aussicht genommen.

Hagenau. Ein Vizewachtmeister des hier garnisonirenden Dragoner-Regiments wurde durch kriegsgerichtliches Urtheil zu 20 Tagen Gefängniß verurtheilt, weil er einem Dragoner beim Fußdienst mit der Faust in's Gesicht gestoßen hatte. Der Wachtmeister der Schwadron, der den mißhandelten Dragoner veranlassen wollte, die Meldung zurückzunehmen, erhielt einen Tag Arrest.

NEW YORK TERMINALS—Foot of Cortlandt Desbrosses and West 23d streets.

Notice to the Public in General.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Think of the terrible odor that comes from a Chinese Laundry, and yet one half of the people don't know what causes it. Here it is in a Nut Shell. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And stil what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

STRICKEN HAVANA.

THE LABORER GIVES WEEKLY DOLE TO THE BEGGARS.

Funerals at the Colon—The Jewellers Are All Pawnbrokers and None Too Scrupulous—No One Learns to Speak the English Language.

Almost every jewelry store in Havana is a pawn shop. The traffic is done openly, and there are no side doors to dart in and out, and the loan is asked and made in the most matter-of-fact way. These jewelers, when doing a pawnbroking business, like to deal with Americans, or for that matter, any foreigners. What they lend on the personal effects they expect to multiply at least five times, realizing, as is frequently the case, that the chances of the visitor ever returning to Havana or being able to redeem his pledge through a resident friend are very remote. In fact, so cock sure are some of the jewelers that the property left in trust will never again be claimed by its rightful owner, that there are instances on record where the very same goods have been exposed for sale in the shop window the day following their arrival. What they do when an owner suddenly reappears on the scene to claim the property that has been unlawfully sold can be imagined. Since this war broke out many wealthy Cuban families have been compelled to sell their jewels, and in this way the pseudo pawnshops have been enriched.

The custom of burying the dead is perhaps one of the most striking features of the city. Last Sunday, while out to the Cemeterio de Colon, where the Maine victims are interred, a visitor counted 112 coffins enter the main gate inside three hours' time. Thirty of these were carried there in dead wagons of the Alfonso XIII. and San Ambrosio hospitals, and among them were ten cases of smallpox, the average deaths from the last-named disease during the last few weeks being 303. The records kept by the United States sanitary inspectors stationed here show that the average death rate is 61-2 per cent., or equal to that of the whole State of New York. Havana has a population of a quarter of a million. This statement is merely made to show what a busy place the Cemeterio de Colon really is.

There are two degrees of funerals, usually, the very poor or the most gorgeous. Spaniard or Cuban must be in very straitened circumstances indeed when he has to dispense with the services of a hearse, and many did last Sunday. The cemetery is on a hill, a really fine site, and, so far as its elaborate and expensive ornaments are concerned, approaches the magnificence of either Greenwood or Woodlawn. The hill is steep, and was quite dusty the day mentioned, and the temperature was about 78 in the shade. Altogether about sixty bodies were carried up the hill to the big gates without the customary formalities of a hearse or even a carriage.

The majority of the coffins were white, and contained the bodies of children, and in most cases these coffins were slung with an ordinary clothesline with four dangling ends, which were held by the relatives, who walked far apart that the coffin at the other end of the taut rope might not bang against the ground more than was necessary. Many of the mourners were in their shirt sleeves and hatless, having walked from the city, several miles distant, in that rig; but all smoked long cigars, for this is the city where even the women smoke cigars as long as a man's middle finger in the street. The beggars beg every day in the week along the streets of Havana, but Saturday is the legal holiday. That is to say while the police make no attempt whatever to interfere with the mendicants on other days, they encourage the practice on Saturday by contributing their own mite. It is the most common thing in the world to find a business man absolutely refuse to give alms during the first six days of the week, but on the last day nearly every solicitor of charity who may visit his store receives something or other. It is a strange custom, and one that reflects great credit on those people of the island who are able to give and who do. The laboring man, who works twice as hard as his fellow creature up north, goes to and comes from his work every day during the week with the exception of Saturday, without being disturbed by or paying any attention to the beggars. But on this one day an observer would lack the sentiment of a Newfoundland pup were he to fail to appreciate the delicate touch of goodheartedness that is displayed in the workingman, with his small store surrounded by half a dozen or even a greater number of ragged children, to each of whom he gives at least a couple of centavos.

Just as impressive is the performance of the carriage driver who brings his horse to a standstill, jumps down from his box and runs across the pavement to the curbstone to shove a few pennies into some unfortunate palm. Even the driver of a hearse, gorgeously equipped, has been seen to stop in the middle of a funeral procession and twirl a copper at a beggar's feet. Children are forbidden by their parents to talk English except where there be some financial prospect in sight, and they obey the mandate to the very letter. German is frequently heard on the street, in the theatres and about the hotels, and French, which is thought by many to be a twin tongue to Spanish, but which isn't, is commonly gossiped everywhere. The same may be said of Italian. But an English-speaking person might talk himself deaf, dumb and blind and receive the threadbare reply of "no comprendo" in return for his trouble.

The laborers in Havana really do more work in one day than is done in New York in two. It is a wonderful fact considering the locality and slowness of the remainder of the population who, because of the climate, believe in taking their time in everything. The laborers, however, begin work at sunrise, work until 9 o'clock, when coffee and fruit are served. They continue until 11 o'clock, when they breakfast. The meal consumes an hour, and upon returning again the men work until sunset, about thirten or fourteen hours in all. The laborers have a club here called the Centro Dependiente, which has a membership of 15,000. The men pay monthly dues of $1.50 and support a hospital for the exclusive use of their members. The best mechanics get only $2.50 a day, and are taxed for everything, living or dead. The tax sometimes amounts to 50 centavos a day. The merchants of the city never dream of doing busines after the offices or stores close. They go to their clubs or cafes, but seldom talk business. The hackmen are about the best paid. All own their own carriages, and as there are no side doors or back exits for imposters to run away they never lose a fare. The customary fare is 20 cents for two persons for any drive within the city limits and ten cents extra for every additional call. Weather signals are unknown in Havana. It frequently rains when the sky is perfectly clear and the sun brightly shining, but the latter dries up the streets in a few minutes once the rain ceases. Spaniards and Cubans when they met friends do not shake hands. Instead, they embrace each other and clap each other on the back.

THE PALMETTO WAS SAVED.

The Honorable Action of an Ohio Soldier at the Capture of Columbia, S. C.

Judge Thomas J. Mackey, formerly of South Carolina, gives an incident of Sherman's march to the sea which is not recorded in the war histories. "South Carolina was the first State in the Union to send a regiment to the front to participate in the war with Mexico," said the Judge to a coterie of friends at the Metropolitan Hotel. "The people of a grateful State caused to be erected in front of the Capitol in Columbia a monument to the memory of the brave boys of the 1st South Carolina Regiment who lost their lives in that conflict.

"This monument is made of pounded brass, and represents a palmetto tree. When Sherman's army entered Columbia and his soldiers were destroying everything that came in their way, several companies made a dash for the shaft. With the butts of their muskets they began the work of demolition. They had not proceeded far when a man on horseback rushed up to them and commanded them to desist.

"'Not another stroke!' he cried.

"Several of the soldiers paid no attention.

"'The next man who dares to assault that shaft I will kill!' he thundered.

"The men saw tears in the eyes of the one who thus addressed them; they also saw that he had weighed his words carefully, and meant every one of them.

"'Soldiers,' said he, 'the boys who sleep beneath that palmetto loved their country as much as you or I. They fought as valiantly.'

"And the palmetto still stands in the old town of Columbia. The man who caused it to be preserved was Colonel Paine, of the 124th Ohio Regiment, and the people of South Carolina owe him a debt of gratitude they can never repay."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

GRUDGE AGAINST A PORTRAIT.

Cyclone Comes Along and Scatters It All Over Town.

A Georgia farmer so pleased a patent medicine firm with a certificate he had given as to the merits of the particular nostrum that they offered to have his picture painted with the certificate on the town hall. The farmer was tickled with the idea, and regularly sat to the artist until the latter had transferred his rugged lineaments to the weather boarding of the most prominent building in the town. The picture was full length.

Shortly afterward a cyclone strolled by and scattered the town hall to the four corners of the country. People in different localities picked up sections of the farmer's portrait which had been blown their way and one man, knowing how the farmer deplored the disaster, wrote him as follows: "I'm sorry the cyclone blowed yer pictur' so far, but I've got some good news fer you: Bill Jinkins found yer left leg, Mart Wilkins is got a hunk o' yer back, Dan Jones found yer right arm, an' I understan' that Sister Molly Brown is got t'other arm, likewise yer right leg. All the pieces I seen fit tergether good. What I wants ter know now is, how much will you give fer yer head?"

THE POET AND HIS PIPE.

Tennyson Grew Captious When Deprived of His Tobacco.

Some of his friends taunted Tennyson that he could never give up tobacco. "Anybody can do that," he said, "if he chooses to do it." When his friends still continued to doubt and tease him, "Well," he said, "I shall give up smoking from to-night." The very same evening I was told that he threw his pipes and tobacco out of the window of his bedroom.

The next day he was most charming, though somewhat self-righteous. The second day he became very moody and captious, the third day no one knew what to do with him. But after a disturbed night I was told that he got out of bed in the morning, went quietly into the garden, picked up one of his broken pipes, stuffed it with the remains of the tobacco scattered about, and then, having had a few puffs, came to breakfast, all right again. Nothing was said any more about giving up tobacco.

EXPECTED SPLIT IN Y. M. C. A. RANKS DID NOT OCCUR.

Paterson and Passaic Were Not Crowded Out as Plainfield Was Anxious For—Schedule of Runs for the Summer.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Orange, March 28.—The expected split in the ranks of the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League of Northern New Jersey did not occur. The annual meeting of the league, held in this city Thursday evening, was unexpectedly peaceful. The Plainfield representatives went to the meeting with the avowed intention of trying to leave Paterson and Passaic out in the reorganization of the league. The objections were overcome by the formation of divisions, and the league is now firmly established for another year with a larger membership than ever.

The objection to Paterson and Passaic was that they were too far away from Plainfield, Rahway and New Brunswick to be reached in an evening, without riding all night. The object of the league is to hold a series of runs to the different cities in the league, to which all the associations are invited. There were some thirty delegates present, representing eleven different associations.

G. W. Nichols, of Rahway, was made chairman of the committee on runs, and Thomas A. Cuming, of Plainfield, secretary. The principal business was the arranging of the runs. The committee held a meeting at once and after considerable discussion Mr. Cuming suggested a scheme that was finally adopted.

The associations in the league are naturally divided into three groups, those in the south being Rahway, Plainfield, New Brunswick and Somerville. The latter has just joined the league, while Elizabeth has withdrawn owing to the disbandment of the Y. M. C. A. in that city. The central cities are Summit, Madison, Orange and Newark, and the northern group, Paterson, Passaic and Montclair. It was suggested that while the central cities and Plainfield might entertain all the clubs, the cities in the northern and southern groups might entertain only their group and the central group. Two runs might be held in one night, one in the south and one in the north. The arrangement did away with the objectionable features and still allowed the central cities to entertain all. It was decided that each city should entertain one general run or two divisional runs.

The following schedule was then arranged, to be adopted soon after by the league:

Thursday, May 5.—General run to Orange.

Thursday, May 19.—Divisional run to Passaic and Rahway.

Thursday, June 2.—General run to Summit.

Thursday, June 16.—Divisional run to Paterson and New Brunswick.

Thursday, June 30.—General run to Plainfield.

Thursday, July 14.—Divisional run to Montclair and Somerville.

Thursday, July 28.—General run to Newark.

Thursday, August 11.—General run to Madison.

Thursday, August 25.—Divisional run to Passaic and Rahway.

Thursday, September 8.—Divisional run to Paterson and New Brunswick.

Thursday, September 22.—General run to Orange.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Frank E. Edwards, of LaGrande avenue, has a new Fowler wheel.

Dr. Kempton Browning, of East Fifth street, has purchased a Tribune wheel.

Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, of West Seventh street, has received her new Hartford wheel.

Meredith Dryden, of West Seventh street, has purchased a Cleveland road racing wheel of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, as his mount for the coming summer.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Raymond A. McGee, of this city, is still among the candidates for the Yale 'varsity crew. McGee was rowing No. 4 on the crew but lost his position owing to conditions in his recitations. He is now trying for his old place and is considered a strong candidate but the time he missed may finally lose him his position.

BASKET BALL!

The Business Men's team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. has closed for the season. The year has been an eventful one for the team in that it has appeared in many more match games than ever before. While the defeats outnumbered the victories, it was because the team lined up against some of the best teams of the metropolitan district. The team made a decided advancement in the method of play. Captain Doane worked hard toward the success of the team, but he was handicapped by the fact that some of the team were frequently unable to play and a change had to be made in the composition of the team at the last moment. Nevertheless the team has made a good record during the season and has played an excellent game.

AROUND THE BASES.

The young men of the Monroe Avenue church have organized a baseball team, and will arrange a series of games for the coming season.

A New Employment.

An employment which a few original women have been able to make lucrative is that of furnishing notes for papers, addresses, lectures and the like. These women read everything in the way of periodicals, classifying and condensing important topics and prepare notes amply supplemented by clippings, that amount to a synopsis of the current news on the subject. This often becomes a sort of information bureau for the busy writers and talkers of the day. Club speakers, in particular, avail themselves of it.—New York Journal.

To Admit Her Mistake.

BRISTLES FROM ABROAD.

The American Hog Not Capable of Supplying the Supply Needed Here.

Almost all the bristles used in this country in the manufacturing of brushes are imported, and notwithstanding the increased production of pork in this country the supply of American bristles is now even smaller than it formerly was. Hogs are fattened and killed young in this country, and with the constant and widespread improvement of the breeds here the hogs have run less to bristles. Some extensive packers collect bristles, but the American supply is probably less than 1 per cent of the consumption. The longest American bristles are about four and a half inches in length.

Imported bristles come from various parts of Russia, but most largely from Poland and North Germany. Some finer soft bristles come from France. The bulk of the supply comes from cold countries, where the hogs are well protected by thick coats, and many of the bristles are those of wild hogs. The hogs shed their coats as many other animals do, and there are men who gather the bristles of wild hogs, knowing their haunts and where the bristles are to be found. Other bristles are collected in the usual manner when the hogs are killed. The bristles are subjected to various processes of curing and preparation before they become commercial bristles and ready for the market.

Imported bristles range from three and a half to seven and a half inches in length. Various vegetable fibres are now used extensively in the manufacture of cheaper brushes, but for many uses bristles are indispensable and their importation continues steadily.—New York Sun.

STATUS OF WOMAN IN FRANCE.

In France the Wife is Often the Real Head of Shopkeeping Establishments.

For fifty years woman in this country has owned her own property, so that now there is no American, probably, who ever thinks of a woman as a human being who parts with all her possessions at her marriage. In England a married woman's property act was passed in 1882. The Danish woman has had the right to collect and to dispose of the product of her toil since 1880. The Swedish woman since 1874, and the Norwegian since 1888, have had the same property rights. Even the woman who is the subject of the Czar is the mistress of her own. But in France the woman of the humbler class who is married works for the man, keeps her money only if he will, and must give it to him if there is the best of reasons why she should be permitted to withhold it—as, for example, if he be an idle drunkard, spending for his pleasure, the earnings of the wife and mother that are needed for the household. Among the shopkeeping bourgeoisie the woman works also alongside of the husband, is often the real head of the establishment, especially in the little business whose prosperity depends upon good taste, patience, tact and unfailing courtesy. And for the toil which knows little rest the possible maker of the family's prosperity receives what is granted by the head of the house, whose temper and awkward-mindedness may possibly prevent the wife's achievement of a still greater prosperity, involving a larger dot, and therefore a more shining marriage for the daughter.

BABY PROPHET IS A WONDER.

Chicago Produces a Three Year Old Child Prodigy.

Chicago has a prophet only three years old. Her name is Winifred Cline, daughter of Samuel Cline, a wholesale chemist.

The child has demonstrated her ability to foretell all kinds of accidents and important events varying from one day to several months in advance.

She does the phenomenal prophecying in a perfectly natural manner. She never goes into a trance; never claims to see visions, either asleep or awake; never gets "spells" of any kind. She eats, sleeps and plays around the house like any ordinary child.

For instance, she foretold the election of President McKinley several months in advance, when she was only two years old. This might strike an outsider at this time as being then an easy prophecy, even for a child. But circumstances show it to have been otherwise. During the Presidential campaign Winifred's grandfather, John McNally, was a guest of the little girl's father. Both Mr. McNally and Mr Cline were ardent supporters of Bryan. Every evening they talked about the campaign, expressing their utmost confidence that Bryan would be elected. Winifred had never heard anybody say anything to the contrary, so that when one evening before election Mr. Cline came home and announced that he had put up $100 on Bryan's election, and was going to win it, the whole family was astounded by this sudden and grave assertion from Baby Winifred:

"Mr. Bryan will not be elected, papa. You will lose your bet. Mr. McKinley will be the next President of the United States."

Another extraordinary thing about little Winifred, and something that has caused her parents much anxiety, is the fact that she has never used "baby talk." Her choice and range of words is as serious and extended as a woman of mature years.

Among other things she can always tell what the weather will be the following day. She can always tell at what hour a letter will arrive and often from whom it will come. She not only foretells the approaching visits of friends, but can even tell how the visiting friends are going to feel and what will be done while they are calling at her home. Her parents say there has not been a single instance where her prophecies have not come to pass.

In addition to this prophetic power little Winifred has a marvellous memory, never forgetting the smallest detail of a conversation. A list of a dozen, or even two dozen figures can be shown her for a few moments, and she can call off each figure correctly.—New York World.

REV. A. E. MAIN ON RIGHT AND REASON.

A Discussion of the Sabbath Observance Question.

AN APPEAL FOR JUSTICE.

MAYOR FISK'S ORDER IS NOT JUSTIFIED BY FAIRNESS.

"Sunday Keeping" are Empty Words, Rev. Mr. Main Says, Unless One is Speaking of the Day as a Religious Institution and to Compel People by Law to Observe Sunday as Sabbath is to Try to Support Religion by Force—Therefore is Against Both the Spirit of the Constitution and Christianity

Rev. A. E. Main, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church, sends the following communication to The Daily Press concerning Sunday observance:

"Sunday keeping" are empty words, unless one is speaking of Sunday as a religious institution, and therefore, to undertake to compel people, by law, to observe Sunday or any day, is to try to support religion by force. To do this is to violate one's natural and constitutional rights; disregard the warning of history and the spirit of Christianity; confer the weakness of religion itself, and bring it into an unholy and damaging alliance.

To secure one's right to religiously regard Sunday, if one wishes thus to use the day, is just and rational; but to ask to be protected by police from having one's spiritual thoughts disturbed and feelings wounded at the mere sight of those who are not willing to so observe the day, is to make an unmanly request.

Certain of our citizens have been ordered by the Mayor, through the chief of police, to carry on their business Sunday behind curtain-closed windows. This is a meaningless order, if it be not in the interests of other people's religious convictions; and that makes it unreasonable and unjust. For sinning a man is accountable to his Maker; crime is conduct that the community has the right to punish. To disregard the Sunday may be a sin before God, and does involve questions of ethics and religion; but it cannot be made in itself a crime against society.

Are these men disreputable in character, and is their business dishonorable? No one believe this. Do they represent a body of citizens dangerous to society? Let the records of illiteracy, pauperism and crime furnish a reply. Do they belong to a class of unpatriotic citizens? Let the history of our country from the days of Samuel Ward, of the Continental Congress, to our own present time give the answer. Are they and their co-religionists lacking in public spirit and in benevolence towards enterprises of common, humane and Christian interest? Let our Public School, Muhlenberg Hospital, the Young Men's Christian Association, our Public Library, the Christian Endeavor Union, works of charity and kindred movements, bear witness. Are "sect" and "creed" higher words among them than "righteousness," public and private? Let the known spirit and labors of their religious leaders tell.

What, then, is the crime of these men? It is the crime of claiming the right to equal opportunity and privilege with other good citizens in matters of conscience and religion, and in social, business and political affairs.

Have not the ministers and churches of Plainfield, confessors of the religion of the Golden Rule and the two great commandments, some word on this behalf? Have even Baptist brethren so far forgotten their own history, in struggles and suffering for civil and religious freedom, as to be willing, now in the day of their proud strength, to join in this invasion of the rights of their fellow-men and fellow believers?

We do not ask for these men either favor or pity; but simple justice in the name of highest law. We ask for a pure and exalted public sentiment—a public intelligence and conscience—that will demand an interpretation of municipal ordinances in harmony with truth and justice, and the natural and constitutional rights of man, or that these ordinances be changed into accord with principles of right and reason. Arthur E. Main, pastor, Plainfield Seventh-Day Baptist church.

Baptized at St. Mary's.

Last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at St. Mary's R. C. church the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. William Feiring, of East Front street, was baptized by Rev. Father Smyth. Miss Margaret Rafferty and Frank Blatz stood up with the parents. The name given to the young son is Francis Clifford Feiring.

FROM A VIOLIN CAME SOUL-STIRRING MUSIC.

PATRIOTIC MEDLEY WAS PLAYED.

When Prof. Conde Sounded the Notes of "Star Spangled Banner" There was Great Applause.

Plainfielders have read with considerable interest of the outbursts of enthusiasm evidenced at several of the New York theatres when patriotic airs were played, and last evening a similar demonstration was witnessed in this city. It was at the Y. M. C. A. Star Course entertainment, and P. Ludwig Conde, the popular violinist, occasioned it.

One of his selections was a medley of his own arrangement, comprising a number of patriotic airs. As each selection was given it could plainly be seen that the audience was being enthused. The climax was reached, however, when Mr. Conde rendered the "Star Spangled Banner." The burst of enthusiasm was soul-stirring. Several times during the rendition of the selection the audience burst into applause and it was scarcely possible for the music to be heard. Mr. Conde never played better and his selections throughout were features of the evening. On one occasion he was accompanied by G. Z. Petrie on the violin.

The other features of the programme were Miss Edith Norton, whose talent as an elocutionist is well known. Her work last evening was superb, as was also the Scotch ballad singing by Miss Blackwell. Her selections were the choicest of the Scotch airs and they were greatly appreciated by all. Bert Harold was the accompanist of the evening and his work was first-class in every respect.

RUSH OF WORK AT POND'S

A BIG GOVERNMENT CONTRACT JUST RECEIVED.

An Emergency Order for Eight Disappearing Gun Carriages Has Been Received—Will Work Night and Day.

A contract has just been closed with the Government by the Pond Tool Works for eight disappearing gun carriages to be constructed at the earliest possible moment. It is what is called an emergency order, and the contract represents $100,000 for the work. The contract was secured by Mr. Stebbins and Mr. MacMurray for the Works against considerable competition. The fact, however, that the Works have patterns for the carriages, accounts in a great measure for the success in securing the contract.

The Works will now be run night and day to complete the carriages. This week the old contract for carriages will be completed. Tomorrow the last carriage will be shipped to the Watervliet Arsenal. During the past month the Pond Tool Works has received work amounting to $180,000, and the prospects are that better times are in sight at this factory.

Government inspectors will frequently call at the Works and look after the work of construction and see that the utmost speed in the work is being performed.

MRS. SCHERMERHORN REMEMBERED.

The Late Charles H. Winfield Bequeaths Her $1,000.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Jersey City, March 29.—The will of the late Prosecutor of Pleas, Charles H. Winfield, of Hudson County, was filed in the Surrogate's office, Jersey City, yesterday. The value of the estate is not given, but friends of Mrs. Winfield say it is close to $500,000.

In case the widow dies before Mr. Winfield's son he is to have the entire estate. Should he die first and leave no issue, provision is made for a redistribution of the estate after Mrs. Winfield's death. When this occurs the executors, the will directs, shall pay to the children of Aaron Winfield, brother of the testator, $1,000, and to the children of each of his four sisters, $1,000 each. Another brother, Daniel Winfield, is to receive $2,000, and Sarah P. Schermerhorn, wife of Charles H. Schermerhorn, of Plainfield, is to be paid $1,000.

COLORED VOTERS WANT TO IMPRESS G. O. P.

They Will Assert Their Rights For Proper Recognition.

TALKED TO BY JESSE LAWSON

HE TELLS HOW THEIR BRETHREN ARE REWARDED IN WASHINGTON.

The Former Plainfielder Praises Congressman Fowler and Senator Sewell for the Interest They Have Manifested in the Colored People on Various Occasions—White Leaders, He Said, Would Recognize the Colored Man When He Showed Himself Worthy of Their Just Recognition.

The colored Republicans of this city have come to the opinion that there is truth in the saying that in union there is strength. Last night they held a council of war in the G. O. P. headquarters on East Front street and talked of asserting their rights and presenting a united front to the machine leaders with the hope of securing proper recognition. They also planned for recognition from the State Republican leaders.

The meeting was held in the Republican headquarters, as has already been stated. The interested ones were rather late in gathering, so it was nearly ten o'clock before the meeting was in full blast. There was a good attendance of the colored voters, and almost all of the leaders of the race, whether from the machine or of independent politics, turned out to see what was to be done.

Edward M. Maynard was made chairman and Richard Norwood secretary of the meeting. Jesse Lawson, a colored man born in Plainfield and now employed at the Treasury department at Washington, had been invited to be present and address the meeting. He at once urged the potency of united action and said the party leaders of the State were ready to recognize the colored man when he presents a united front. He spoke in the highest terms of the Congressional delegates from New Jersey and paid special tribute to Congressman Fowler. He maintained that General Sewell, the recognized leader of the Republican party in the State, had always regarded the interests of the colored people in every movement. In the appointment of Judson W. Lyons as registrar of the Treasury, he contended that President McKinley had recognized the younger element among the colored voters. The colored men of Georgia had received the greatest recognition, he explained, because they presented a solid front. There is a disposition among the white Republicans of New Jersey, he said, to recognize the black man when he shows himself worthy of recognition and has the necessary votes to back him up.

There was a strong sentiment among those present at the meeting for a united action by the colored voters of Plainfield. It was the general sentiment that the little differences among the colored men should be laid down and all should unite in one club to steadily press their claims for recognition until the Plainfield machine saw the wisdom of granting their wishes and giving them the wished-for recognition. Among those who urged this plan were William J. Douglass, William A. Kline, Edward M. Maynard, Rev. James W. Mitchell, William Mayhew, Richard Norwood, Spencer Conway, William Connett, James Connett and William K. Manning, all colored men of high standing in the community.

While the real object of the meeting had been to talk over the question of unity, the ostensable object was to elect delegates to the Republican Legislative Convention, to be held by the colored men of the State at Trenton, March 31st. The following delegates were then elected: Edward M. Maynard, William J. Douglass, James Scott, William D. Johnson, Spencer Conway and James Connett. It was midnight before the last of the interested ones departed.

Numerous Applicants for One Vacancy on Police Force.

There is now one vacancy in the police force of this city and there are six men who are all anxious to fill it. A meeting of the Police Board was held last week when the candidates appeared before the members of the Board. They were all unknown to the members of the Board. They will be given the usual examination for fitness, and the selection will be made in the same manner as in the civil service.

WITH OR WITHOUT RUM.

A NEW ISSUE IN A FIGHT TO SECURE A TROLLEY.

A Roadhouse Proprietor Wants the Tracks Laid by His Door, but Mayor Drake is Hustling for Lincoln Interests.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Lincoln, Marce 29.—The question of what route the new extension of the Brunswick Traction Company between Dunellen and Bound Brook is to run over is the paramount consideration in Lincoln just at present. As told in The Daily Press last week, there is considerable strife between the Lincolnites, headed by Mayor Drake, and a man by the name of Mannion, who keeps a roadhouse on the old stage road. It seems that Mannion has considerable political influence, and he is doing his best to have the trolley route laid out so that it will pass his roadhouse, and thus improve his business. If this is done, Lincoln will be shut out of a trolley road—at least for the present.

But Mayor Drake is taking time by the forelock and is using various influences to bring the trolley tracks through Lincoln. The doughty Mayor says that the issue is simply one of "trolley with or without rum." He has interested several clergymen in Bound Brook and Dunellen, and it is said that the reverend gentlemen will use their efforts to have the trolley road put through Lincoln and thus give the road-house proprietor the go-by.

The matter is to be decided at New Market April 8th, when a hearing is to be given the people.

Mayor Drake sums up the situation thuswise: "It is a straight issue between the trolley going where you can get your rum or go through a town that is governed by people who are opposed to licensing the curse. The fight is on, and every influence will be used by each party to capture the line. In different sections the trolley has many troubles, but this is the first time that the moral issue has appeared."

PLAINFIELDERS READY FOR NAVAL SERVICE.

DR. SIMPSON CALLED FOR DUTY.

He Will be One of the Officers to Man the Monitor Montauk for Coast Defense.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Jersey City March 29.—Commander Washington Irving, of the Battalion of the East, of New Jersey, is now selecting a detail of 95 men and five officers, who have been ordered for duty to take the monitor Montauk from the League Island Navy Yard to Portland, Me., where she will remain to defend the city.

The men are waiting for orders.

It has been decided that Commander Washington Irving shall be at the head of the picked crew.

The other officers detailed for this trip are Lieut. Edward McClure Peters, who will be navigator of the Montauk, and B. Franklin Hart, Jr., who will have charge of the engineer's corps on the monitor.

Paymaster Arthur H. Colby, Surgeon Maxwell S. Simpson and Apothecary Frank Fulton, of Plainfield and Division Commandant Irving Blount and George H. Mather will also be with the picked crew.

The Montauk is not an ocean greyhound and the trip will take about four days.

At Portland, the monitor will be turned over to the Maine authorities and used for coast defenses, principally to protect Portland harbor.

UNFAILING SIGN OF SPRING.

Steam Roller at Work Patching Up LaGrande Avenue.

An unfailing sign of spring is at hand—the steam-roller. The roller made its appearance on LaGrande avenue yesterday and began the work of patching up that thoroughfore with the crushed stone that had been spread about the road. The stone was well rolled in between Richmond street and Franklin place. Today the work will be continued to Watchung avenue. Then the roller will be set at work macadamizing the short stretch of Watchung avenue from Front street to the bridge. Then the entire length of that street will be patched and rolled.

Methodist Officers.

The annual election of trustees of the First M. E. church was held in Vincent chapel last evening. The polls were open from eight o'clock to nine. P. M. French and G. M. Rittenhouse were re-elected trustees and John Corey was elected trustee in the place of George R. Cornwell, who has left Plainfield.

—The shorthand class will meet at the Y. M. C. A. this evening, having been postponed from last evening owing to the star course entertainment.

LOVE LIT THE DARK WAY TO HYMEN'S ALTAR

A Romantic Episode of a Love Lorn Couple.

SURPRISED THEIR FRIENDS.

FARMER LAD AND LASSIE DID NOT INDULGE IN FORMALITIES.

Edward Harring Won the Love of Miss Wiechnaer, Took Her Out for an Ostensible Pleasure Drive, Although it Rained, and When They Returned to Greet the Young Woman's Parents the Latter Had Then Changed Her Name—They are Happy in Young Mr. Harring's Farm House.

A little romance was enacted up in the north western corner of Somerset county, last week, that supplied food for gossip among the country folk of that region for some time to come. Edward Harring, a young farmer, living on the outskirts of Somerville, was the hero of the romantic episode. Mrs. Harring, formerly Miss Anna Louise Wiechnaer, daughter of a well-to-do farmer of Adamsville, was the one who braved the fury of the elements to be joined in wedlock with the man of her choice.

Now it has been well known among the good people of that part of Somerset county that Edward Harring was keeping company with Anna Wiechnaer. The young women's parents made no objection as he was a young man of good repute and perfectly able to care for a wife as she should be.

While the course of true love was apparently smooth, the young people were not satisfied. Both were bashful about setting the date of the wedding for they dreaded the excitement that would proceed the day of marriage. Then, too, they longed for a touch of romance to enliven the love-making. So it was that Harring drove his prancing bay horse down to Adamsville last Thursday night in the rain.

It was no uncommon thing for the two to start off together, even on a rainy night, for young Harring frequently escorted her to dances and entertainments in the vicinity. So her parents thought nothing of it. When once they had left the lights of Adamsville behind them, Harring turned his horse toward the range of mountains at their side that loomed up in the gloom. The rain fell heavily and beat against them but the sturdy horse made his way through the darkness of the chimney road gap, climbed the dangerous hill out of the valley and bore them safely until the lights of Warrenville appeared in the distance.

The young people had once heard Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville, who is pastor of the Coontown Congregational church, preach in the little schoolhouse at Adamsville, and they had taken a fancy to him. They decided that he was the one they wanted to tie the fateful knot, and then the drive to his home offered all sorts of romantic adventures.

When Pastor Bowers learned the errand of the young people and found that there was no parental objection to hinder, he received them with open arms. There was no bridesmaid or best man to do honor to the occasion, but the kindly Mrs. Bowers acted as witness at the ceremony, which was performed in the pastor's cosy study.

Then the young people turned their faithful bay homewards and went out in the cold and storm again. There was some anxiety at the Wiechnaer homestead at the long absence of the daughter. The young couple returned in time to prevent a long continuance of it, however, and startled all with the announcement of their marriage. The parents were greatly surprised, but they saw the uselessness of objecting and bestowed the parental blessing. The young couple are now residing at the groom's home near Somerville.

Elizabeth Democrats Have a Harmonious Convention.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 29—The Democratic City Convention was held last night in the Turn Hall. Former Senator Frederick C. Marsh was unanimously nominated for Mayor, and Patrick J. PRICE OF STONE WALKS AND CURBING RAISED.

STONE CUTTERS IN A COMBINE.

Competition Has Reached the Point Where There is Little Profit for Contractors.

An informal meeting of the stone cutters of Plainfield was held last evening in the office of John McIntyre, North avenue. There were present John Lannon, Michael Powers, A. Kane and Harvey Whitemore. It was practically decided at the meeting to raise the price of laying stone walks and curbing. Most any price is now charged, but the usual rate is from 48 to 50 cents per foot.

It is the intention of the dealers to raise the price a few cents but not enough to bring outside dealers into the city. Next Thursday evening a regular meeting will be held and the scale of prices will be determined upon. In the meantime all contracts made will be carried out at the old prices. J. T. Vail was not present at the meeting, but sent word that he would agree to the change.

REAR END COLLISION.

MISUNDERSTOOD SIGNALS AT BOUND BROOK CAUSED A WRECK.

One Eastbound Freight Train Crashed Into One Standing Still and Several Cars Wrecked and Strewn About.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, March 29.—A freight wreck occurred near this place on the tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, at 6:25 o'clock this morning. No one was seriously injured.

An eastbound freight train was lying on the main track just west of the station while the engine took water. Another eastbound freight came along the main track. Either the flagman was not far enough back or else the engineer did not see the signal, for the locomotive crashed into the rear of the waiting train. The caboose and six box cars were derailed and heaped over both tracks. The cars were considerably demolished. The wrecking train arrived an hour after the accident and the tracks were opened again for travel at 11 o'clock.

The locomotive that crashed into the other train was partically unhurt as it was not moving very rapidly. The crew escaped all injury.

MUSICAL SURPRISERS.

A Delightful Social Visit Received Unexpected by Joe Hawkins.

The birthday surprise tendered to Joseph M. Hawkins, of LaGrande avenue, last evening, was complete and the guests to the number of about twenty-five enjoyed themselves immensely. At first, Mr. Hawkins was unable to account for the assemblage of people but he soon grasped the situation and joined heartily in making the affair successful. During the evening, Councilman Will N. Runyon sang a number of favorite selections. Frank O. Bristol was another favorite, and gave several recitations and impersonations. Arthur and Clinton Mosher, of Brooklyn, cousins of Mr. Hawkins, delighted the audience with selections on the violin and piano. The music throughout the evening was a rare treat for all. At the close of the entertainment a delightful supper was served. Mr. Hawkins received the hearty congratulations of his friends for many happy returns of the event celebrated.

THEY KNEW HOW TO ENTERTAIN.

Royal Arcanumites Had a Fine Time Among Themselves.

The members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, met last evening and enjoyed a programme of music and recitations prepared by the entertainment committee. The recitations were given by Orator S. C. Baker, while F. S. Green entertained the members with some popular selections on the bones. Fred Smith; the popular banjo player, also entertained the audience with several selections. He was accompanied on the piano by Arthur Freeman. The last part of the programme consisted of excellent speeches by the members, who knew how to tell good stories. This Council is noted for giving its members a good time, and next Monday evening the programme will be very elaborate. This will be the last entertainment given until next fall, and all the members are asked to be preseut.

Plans to Lay Trolley Tracks.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, March 29.—The New Brunswick Traction Company, acting in connection with the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, is arranging to secure bids for the construction of a line from Bound Brook to New Brunswick, on the south side of the Raritan river, through Franklin township, Somerset county. Contracts will soon be made for the construction of the Somerset County line, from Bound Brook to New Brunswick.

COMMUTER JURY IN CARBONE'S RETRIAL.

Eight New York Business Men Chosen to Serve.

TESTIMONY WAS REPEATED.

ONLY FOUR PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS ON THE JURY.

It Took Almost an Hour to Select the Jury—Two Jurors Were Declined on Account of Being Clerks in Mayor Fisk's Banking House—Former Councilman Frost Peremptorily Challenged—Same Line of Defense as Made Last Friday — Same Witnesses Were Also Called to Testify as Before.

The city made its strongest effort this morning to convict one of the alleged violators of the Sabbath observance ordinance. It was at the re trial of Jose Carbone, who keeps a little store at 123 North avenue, where he sells tobacco, candy, fruit and the like. As the readers of The Press will remember, Carbone was tried before City Judge DeMeza and a jury of twelve men last Friday morning and after being out eight hours the jury failed to agree and was discharged. The time set for the re-trying of the case was this morning.

The trial was held in the Council Chambers. A large crowd assembled and soon occupied all of the room on the audience-benches, while the members of the legal profession and the reporters filled the vacant space inside the railing. As before, Corporation Counsel Marsh appeared for the city, and Councilman Walter L. Hetfield for the prisoner.

The examination and selection of the jury was conducted in a much more elaborate fashion than ever before in a City Court trial. It lasted for nearly an hour and was the occasion for frequent tiffs between the lawyers, who were not particularly complimentary to each other in their remarks. From the personnel of the jury it was evident that Roundsman Flynn had kept his word and been very careful as to whom he selected for the jury.

Marion S. Ackerman, of Crescent avenue, a well-known New York business man, was the first called. He was questioned very closely by Councilman Hetfield as to whether he had read the account in the local papers of the first trial. He had not. He was asked if he had formed any opinion as to the innocence or guilt of Carbone, and then if he had any convictions against those who observed the Sabbath on Saturday. His answers suited the lawyer for the defence and he took his seat.

William T. Kaufman, of West Seventh street, was the next juror called. He said he was in the employ of Harvey Fisk's Sons, of which Mayor C. J. Fisk is a member. Mr. Hetfield wanted him excused on those grounds. Mr. Marsh declared that such a thing would be an insult to the man and the Judge sustained him. Mr. Kaufman was afterwards challanged preemtorially by Mr. Hetfield and retired.

Joseph A. Robinson, of East Fifth street, has not read the account of the first trial and was not objected to. George Griffin, a local business man, had not read account but had formed an opinion in regard to similar cases. He had no ideas in this, however. He did not believe that church attendance was necessary to Sabbath observance. He was received. Alfred B. Beers, of Watchung avenue, recording secretary of the Y. M. C. A., had not read the local papers and was received.

Fred W. Walz, of LaGrande avenue, was objected to by Mr. Hetfield because he was employed in the banking house of Harvey Fisk's Sons, of which Mayor Fisk is a member. The Judge would not sustain the objection and Mr. Hetfield afterwards excused Mr. Walz preemptorially.

Henry G. Runkle, of West Seventh street, usually read the local papers but he had not read the account of the first trial. He was accepted without dispute. Robert Rushmore, of West Eighth street, took one local paper, but had not read the account. He was a commuter. William A. Clintor, of West Eighth street, was another commuter. He had glanced over the headings in a local paper but had not read the account of the trial. Curtis M. Thorpe, a local business man, was received without objection. George H. Burgess answered all questions satisfactorily.

Former Councilman George H. Frost was challenged preemptorially as soon as his name was called. George L. Colgate, of the Bard Cycle Company, was received with a few

THE SPANISH REPORT

Full Synopsis of the Findings of Spanish Naval Commission.

CALLS IT AN ACCIDENT

Insists That Because No Fish Were Slain and There Was No Waterspout a Mine Could Not Have Caused the Explosion.

Washington, March 29.—A full synopsis of the report of the Spanish Naval Commission, which investigated the destruction of the battleship Maine is here given. It is taken from a copy of the original report which is now on its way here from Havana, the synopsis being cabled in the meantime and yesterday placed in the hands of this Government. The conclusions reached are directly opposite to those in the report of the Court of Inquiry submitted to Congress yesterday. The synopsis is:

"The report contains declarations made by ocular witness and experts. From these statements it clearly deduces and proves the absence of all those attendant circumstances which are invariably present on the occasion of the explosion of a torpedo.

"The evidence of witnesses comparatively close to the Maine at the moment is to the effect that only one explosion occurred; that no column of water was thrown in the air; that no shock to the side of the nearest vessel was felt; that on land no vibration was noticed; and that no dead fish were found.

"The evidence of the senior pilot of the harbor states that there is an abundance of fish in the harbor, and this is corroborated by other witnesses. The assistant engineer of works states that after explosions made during the execution of works in the harbor he has always found dead fish.

"The divers were unable to examine the bottom of the Maine, which was buried in the mud, but a careful examination of the sides of the vessel, the rents and breaks in which all point outward, shows without a doubt that that explosion was from the inside.

"A minute examination of the bottom of the harbor around the vessel shows absolutely no sign of the action of a torpedo, and the Fiscal (Judge Advocate) of the commission can find no precedent for the explosion of the storage magazine of a vessel by a torpedo.

"The report makes clear that owing to the special nature of the proceedings following and the absolute respect shown for the extra-territorial rights of the Maine, the commission has been prevented from making such an examination of the inside of the vessel as would determine even the hypothesis of the internal origin of the accident. This is to be attributed to the regrettable refusal to permit of the necessary co-operation of the Spanish commission, both with the commander and crew of the Maine and the different American officers commissioned to investigate the causes of the accident, and, later on, with those employed in salvage work.

"The report finishes by stating that an examination of the inside and outside of the Maine, as soon as such examination may be possible, as also of the bottom where the vessel rests, will prove that, supposing the remains (of the wreck) be not totally or partially altered in the process of extraction, the explosion was undoubtedly due to some interior cause."

Famous Orchestra Leader Dead.

New York, March 29.—Anton Siedel, the famous orchestra leader, died suddenly last night at the house of F. Bernstein, his business manager. It is thought death was caused by ptomaine poisoning, due to fish which he ate for luncheon. He was 48 years of age, and leaves a wife, but no children.

Seidl came to New York in 1885, after the death of Dr. Leopold Damrosch, the father of Walter Damrosch, and at that time one of the few exponents of German opera in this country. Seidl succeeded him. The first opera that Anton Seidl directed in New York was "Lohengrin." He also directed for the first time in this country "Tristan and Isolde," "Seigfried," "Gotterdammerung" and "Rheingold." Seidl was a member of many societies, prominent among them the Lotus Club and the Liederkranz.

Cleveland Indorses Action of Government.

Princeton, N. J., March 29.—Ex-President Cleveland, after reading the report of the Maine Inquiry Board, the message of the President, and other developments in the Cuban matter in the evening papers last night, expressed himself as believing that the Government was taking the right course. When asked if he thought the Cubans would agree to the proposition of the United States he replied simply: "Yes." Mr. Cleveland would not say whether or not he considered the day's events the beginning of the end either toward peace or war.

SENATOR MONEY ON CUBA.

Independence Alone, He Says, Will End the Island's Misery.

Washington, March 29.—Senator Money of Mississippi at the conclusion of the reading of the Maine report in the Senate yesterday spoke on the Cuban question. He said that he was committed to the proposition "to feed the starving and to clothe the naked, and to nurse the sick of that afflicted island."

As to the policy of extermination which was ascribed to Captain-General Weyler, he (Mr. Money) declared that Weyler's was not the brain that conceived it, but only the hand that executed it. He had been a mere instrument in the hands of another, and that other was Canovas. There was not another instance in history, he declared, where a great Government had deliberately planned the starvation and death of innocent, loyal and unoffending subjects, with nothing against them except that they possessed the land which the Spaniards coveted. No measure of relief had been given to these poor people except through the generosity of private citizens of the United States.

It would require appropriations to be made by Congress to give sufficient supplies; and he believed that the President would suggest it.

"But are we," said Mr. Money, "to apply the ointment to the wound when the knife is needed? Are we to continue to relieve the hungry and sick without first removing the cause, which operates to produce the effects? That would not be wisdom. It is due to us that we say to the power that inflicts this misery, 'You must stop, or the strong arm of the American Government, with all the power of 74,000,000 people, will be used to cause a cessation of these dreadful calamities.'"

In the further course of his remarks Mr. Money declared that independence, and independence alone, was the goal of the struggles of the Cuban patriots, and that with nothing else would they be satisfied or would lay down their arms.

SPAIN OWES US REPARATION.

Leading British Journals Warn the Madrid Government to Go Slow.

London, March 29.—The St. James' Gazette, commenting on the report of the United States Naval Court of Inquiry into the loss of the battleship Maine, says:

"There can be no doubt Spain owes reparation to the American Government, to say nothing of the most humbled apologies and the most extreme considerations for the feelings of the nation which has lost a fine cruiser, lying in peace in a presumably friendly harbor. The outlook is as threatening as it could be; but Spain is in the wrong, and it is for Spain to walk warily."

The Westminster Gazette remarks: "The resources of diplomacy ought not yet to be exhausted. We trust President McKinley will maintain his unexceptionable attitude, and not allow himself to be jingoed into war."

The Globe things the report "gives Spain ground for maintaining that it shows bias," adding:

"The evidence that a mine caused the explosion is meagre, unconvincing and not borne out by previous experiences of the effects caused by mines exploding."

In conclusion, the Globe says: "Whichever way we look at the matter, it is hard to agree with the verdict of the Court of Inquiry."

The McCoy-Bonner Fight Off.

New Orleans La. March 29.—The McCoy-Bonner fight did not take place last night. Bonner was arrested and McCoy found it convenient to place himself out of harm's way. As soon as Attorney-General Cunningham learned that an effort would be made to pull off the fight in face of the court's injunction he made a request for troops to Governor Foster, and the Sixth Battalion Louisiana State National Guards, was placed at his disposal. When this move was learned by the club managers a large placard was placed on the club building declaring the fight off.

Murders a Whole Family.

Paris, March 29.—A terrible tragedy is reported from Bernay in the Department of the Eure. A robber named Cailliard murdered a family of six persons there Sunday evening. From a window of the house inhabited by the family he shot and killed with a gun the husband, the wife and two of their children who were playing at a table. Cailliard the nentered the house and cut the throat of a little girl who was in another room. Finally he blew out the brains of a paralytic bed-ridden woman, 71 years old. The murderer was arrested and confessed these and several other crimes. ffi

Charged with Cheating the Bank.

Philadelphia, March 29.—Richard F. Loper, vice-president and general manager of the Guarantors' Finance Company was placed under arrest yesterday afternoon, charged with conspiracy to cheat and defraud the People's Bank. When the bank closed its doors on March 25, it was indebted to the Guarantors' Finance Company to the extent of about $600,000, having given securities which were actually worthless. Cashier John S. Hopkins of the People's Bank committed suicide when he learned that application had been made for a receiver for the Guarantors' Company.

Spain Buys a Steel Yacht.

London, March 29.—A London broker who had an option on H. L. B. McCalmont's steel yacht Giralda, says that she was sold yesterday to Spain for about $300,000. She is now at Barcelona. Last week she was offered to the United$ States Government, but was declined. She was built under the supervision of the British Admiralty and fitted for eight guns. She now carries two Maxims and two Hotchkiss guns and can cross the ocean at a speed of twenty-two knots.

Fanny Davenport Better.

Chicago, March 29.—The condition of Fanny Davenport took a decided change for the better yesterday. The talented actress is still in a very precarious condition. She is kept almost constantly under the influence of opiates, and experiences no pain.

SPAIN BACKING DOWN

Agrees to the President's Plans for Humanitarian Intervention.

ULTIMATE PEACE FOR CUBA

Home Rule Propositions Which the Spanish Government Is Preparing, and Which This Government Is Asked to Favor—Situation Less Critical.

Washington, March 29.—Congress has followed the President's advice, received the report of the Maine Court of Inquiry in silence and referred it to committees, and will abide the President's time for acting upon it.

Simultaneous with this Congressional action comes the word from Sagasta that Spain is willing to accept the President's offer of "humanitarian intervention," and aid the United States in feeding the starving in Cuba, and at the same time asks the President to use his good offices with the Cubans to accept Spain's new attempts at absolute home rule which the Madrid government is now formulating, and hopes to be able to present soon.

The President will no doubt consent to do this, but it is too early to discuss these details or to speculate as to the outcome. The President cannot now, nor is he going to, make promises as to what the Cubans will do.

One thing is certain, he is going ahead, as he always has, to carry out his policy, and that policy is ultimate peace for Cuba.

The Maine explosion has now become an incident. Its settlement will be left to diplomacy, and, as the President said in his message, his confidence in the Queen Regent's high sense of honor, leads him to believe that it will prompt her to make due reparation. The President now intends to begin his work of humanitarian intervention. He will ask Congress for money and support to carry this out. The message which came from Spain, and which was laid before the special Cabinet meeting, told of Spain's consent to this wholesale relief, and, supported by this, Congress cannot refuse to come to the President's aid.

The President's assurance to Spain of his good offices to help carry out the scheme of home rule has been given in good faith, and he has every hope that the United States at least will do all in its power to bring this about. It is claimed by the administration leaders in Congress that that body will stand by the President. There will be objections, bitter and determined, when the plan is outlined, but this same authority holds that the President has assurances from a majority in the Senate including Republicans, Democrats and Populists, who will stand by him. Speaker Reed, it is asserted, promises the House.

The prevailing feeling is that the President will be allowed to try his policy, with the hope that he may bring it to a successful issue. However, the word "autonomy" has an ugly sound in the ears of many in Congress. Those who claimed they would never consent to a quiet submission of the Maine incident to diplomacy are now protesting that nothing will suit them but independence for Cuba. It is the plan of them to bring about a test vote when the relief appropriation is brought up, and they propose to attach an amendment for the independence of Cuba to the relief bill.

If this can be done the issue will be made and the test taken in a day or two. These Senators also claim that the insurgents will never accept our good offices to secure home rule, and on this they also have their hope of defeating this plan and carrying out the demand for independence.

A prominent Senator, in explaining the change in the situation, said:

"The elections in Spain Sunday had a great deal to do with Sagasta's course. He has secured a victory and now knows that he has the Cortes behind him, and is in a position to make concessions without fear of a revolt at home. The President is determined to relieve the suffering in Cuba, knowing that by doing this and restoring Cuba to its normal state one of the great arguments now being used for the United States to intervene with force will be out of the way. Spain has consented to aid in this humanitarian work, and in return asks the United States to use its good offices with the insurgents to secure absolute peace in the island. The United States cannot refuse to do this, although it does not obligate itself to force the insurgents to submit. When the matter is laid before Congress that body cannot seriously object to securing peace and a virtual independence for the Cubans."

The President will not send his relief message to Congress to-day, and it is supposed he will wait a couple of days before he submits it. It is expected to-morrow.

Yesterday afternoon, when the news of the plan of settlement of the Cuban question got fully known to the members of the House there was plain evidence of dissatisfaction among the members.

Republicans and Democrats alike expressed themselves as opposed to autonomy or home rule, and they threatened to refuse to vote for the relief appropriation if the President persisted in the present policy.

There was no mistaking the feeling, and it grew stronger during the afternoon. Whether it will last until to-morrow cannot be said. Speaker Reed even realizes it and is trying to stop it.

Berlin, March 29.—Lieut. Commander Niblack, the United States Naval Attache, has returned here from Kiel. It is understood that he nas conditionally purchased for the United States Government a protected cruiser which is being built in the Germania Yards for a South American Government, and that he is considering the purchase of a vessel under construction in the Voss Yards at Hamburg.

THE POLICY OF PEACE!

The President Will Permit Himself to Believe That Spain's Sense of Justice Will Dictate a Proper Course.

FULL TEXT OF THE REPORT.

The Maine Board of Inquiry Absolves Capt. Sigsbee and His Crew from All Blame in Connection with the Destruction of the Battle Ship, and Finds that a Mine Was Exploded Outside by Some Agency Unknown—The Report is Barren of Conclusions and Does not Mention Spain or the Spanish.

Washington, March 29.—The President yesterday sent the following message to Congress:

To the Congress of the United States:

For some time prior to the visit of the Maine to Havana Harbor our Consular representatives pointed out the advantages to flow from the visit of national ships to the Cuban waters, in accustoming the people to the presence of our flag as the symbol of good will and of our ships in the fulfillment of the mission of protection to American interests even though no immediate need therefore might exist.

Accordingly on January 24 last, after conference with the Spanish Minister, in which the renewal of visits of our war vessels to Spanish waters was discussed and accepted, the peninsula authorities at Madrid and Havana were advised of the purpose of this Government to resume friendly naval visits at Cuban ports, and that in that view the Maine would forthwith call at the port of Havana.

This announcement was received by the Spanish Government with appreciation of the friendly character of the visit of the Maine and with notification of intention to return the courtesy by sending Spanish ships to the principal ports of the United States.

Meanwhile the Maine entered the port of Havana on January 25, her arrival being marked with no special incident besides the exchange of customary salutes and ceremonial visits.

The Maine continued in the harbor of Havana during the three weeks following her arrival. No appreciable excitement attended her stay; on the contrary, a feeling of relief and confidence followed the resumption of the long interrupted friendly intercourse.

So noticeable was this immediate effect of her visit that the Consul-General strongly urged that the presence of our ships in Cuban waters should be kept up by retaining the Maine at Havana, or in the event of her recall, by sending another vessel there to take her place.

At 9.40 on the evening of February 15 the Maine was destroyed by an explosion, by which the entire forward part of the ship was utterly wrecked.

In this catastrophe two officers and 264 of her crew perished, those who were not killed outright by her explosion being penned between decks by the tangle of wreckage and drowned by the immediate sinking of the hull.

Prompt assistance was rendered by the neighboring vessels anchored in the harbor, aid being especially given by the boats of the Spanish cruiser Alphonso XII. and the Ward line steamer City of Washington, which lay not far distant. The wounded were generously cared for by the authorities of Havana, the hospitals being freely opened to them, while the earliest recovered bodies of the dead were interred by the municipality in a public cemetery in the city.

Tributes of grief and sympathy were offered from all official quarters of the island.

The appalling calamity fell upon the people of our country with crushing force, and for a brief time an intense excitement prevailed which in a community less just and self-controlled than ours might have led to hasty acts of blind resentment. This spirit, however, soon gave way to the calmer process of reason and to the resolve to investigate the facts and await material proof before forming a judgment as to the cause, the responsibility and the facts warranted, the remedy due.

This course necessarily recommended itself from the outset to the Executive, for only in the light of a dispassionately ascertained certainty could it determine the nature and measure of its full duty in the matter.

The usual procedure was followed, as in all cases of casualty to a disaster to national vessels of any maritime State. A naval Court of Inquiry was at once organized, composed of officers well qualified by rank and practical experience to discharge the onerous duty imposed upon them.

Aided by a strong force of wreckers and divers, the Court proceeded to make a thorough investigation on the spot, employing every available means for the impartial and exact determination of the causes of the explosion. Its operations have been conducted with the utmost deliberation and judgment, and while independently pursued no source of information was neglected, and the fullest opportunity was allowed for a simultaneous investigation by the Spanish authorities.

The finding of the Court of Inquiry was reached after twenty-three days of continuous labor, on March 21, and, having been approved on the 22d by the Commander-in-Chief of the United States naval force of the North Atlantic station, was transmitted to the Executive.

It is herewith laid before the Congress, together with the voluminous testimony taken before the court.

Its purport is, in brief, as follows:

When the Maine arrived at Havana she was conducted by the regular Government pilot to buoy No. 4, to which she was moored in from five to six fathoms of water.

The state of discipline on board and the condition of her magazines, boilers, coal bunkers and storage compartments are passed in review with the conclusion that excellent order prevailed and that no indication of any cause for an internal explosion existed in any quarter.

At 8 o'clock on the evening of February 15 everything had been reported secure and all was quiet.

At 9.40 o'clock the vessel was suddenly destroyed.

There were two distinct explosions with a brief interval between them. The first lifted the forward part of the ship very perceptibly; the second, which was more open, prolonged and of greater volume, is attributed by the Court to partial explosion of two or more of the forward magazines.

The evidence of the divers establishes that the after part of the ship was practically intact and sank in that condition a very few minutes after the explosion. The forward part was completely demolished.

Upon the evidence of a concurrent external cause, the finding of the Court is as follows:

At frame 17 the outer shell of the ship, from a point eleven and one-half feet from the middle line of the ship and six feet above the keel when in its normal position has been forced up so as to be now about four feet above the surface of the water; therefore about four feet above where it would be had the ship sunk uninjured.

The outside bottom plating is bent into a reversed V-shape, the after wing of which, about 15 feet broad and 32 feet in length (frame 17 to frame 25) is doubled back upon itself against the continuation of the same placing extending forward.

At frame 18 the vertical keel is broken in two and the flat keel bent into an angle similar to the angle formed by the outside bottom plates. This break is now about six feet below the surface of the water and about thirty feet above its normal position.

In the opinion of the Court this effect could have been produced only by the explosion of a mine situated under the bottom of the ship at about frame 18 and somewhat on the port side of the ship.

The conclusions of the Court are:

That the loss of the Maine was not in any respect due to fault or negligence on the part of any of the officers or members of her crew;

That the ship was destroyed by the explosion of a submarine mine, which caused the partial explosion of two or more of her forward magazines; and,

That no evidence has been obtainable fixing the responsibility for the destruction of the Maine upon any person or persons.

I have directed that the finding of the Court of Inquiry and the views of this Government thereon be communicated to the Government of Her Majesty, the Queen Regent, and I do not permit myself to doubt that the sense of justice of the Spanish nation will dictate a course of action suggested by honor and the friendly relations of the two governments.

It will be the duty of the Executive to advise the Congress of the result, and in the meantime deliberate consideration is invoked.

(Signed) WILLIAM M'KINLEY.
Executive Mansion, March 28, 1898.

The Naval Board's Report.

Key West, Fla., March 21.—U. S. S. Iowa, 1st Rate.—After full and mature consideration of all the testimony before it, the Court finds as follows:

1. That the United States battle ship Maine arrived in the harbor of Havana, Cuba, on the 25th day of January, 1898, and was taken to buoy No. 4, in from five and a half to six fathoms of water, by the regular government pilot.

The United States Consul-General at Havana had notified the authorities at that place the previous evening of the intended arrival of the Maine.

2. The state of discipline on board the Maine was excellent, and all orders and regulations in regard to the care and safety of the ship were strictly carried out.

All ammunition was stowed in accordance with prescribed instructions, and proper care was taken whenever ammunition was handled.

Nothing was stowed in any one of the magazines or shell rooms which was not permitted to be stowed there.

The magazines and shell rooms were always locked after having been opened, and after the destruction of the Maine the keys were found in their proper place in the Captain's cabin, everything having been reported secure that evening at 8 P. M.

The temperature of the magazines and shell rooms were taken daily and reported. The only magazine which had an undue amount of heat was the after ten-inch magazine, and that did not explode at the time the Maine was destroyed.

The torpedo war heads were all stowed in the after part of the ship, under the ward room, and neither caused nor participated in the destruction of the Maine.

The dry gun cotton primers and detonators were stowed in the cabin aft, and removed from the scene of the explosion. Waste was carefully looked after on the Maine to obviate danger. Special orders in regard to this had been given by the commanding officer. Varnishes, dryers, alcohol and other combustibles of this nature were stowed on or above the main deck, and could not have had anything to do with the destruction of the Maine.

The medical stores were stored aft under the ward room and remote from the scene of the explosion.

No dangerous stores of any kind were stored below in any of the other storerooms.

The coal bunkers were inspected daily. Of those bunkers adjacent to the forward magazines and shell rooms, four were empty; namely "B 3, B 4, B 5, B 6."

"A 15" had been in use that day and "A 16" was full of New River coal. This coal had been carefully inspected before receiving it on board. The bunker in which it was stowed was accessible on three sides at all times, and the fourth side at thi stime on account of bunkers "34" and "B 6" being empty. This bunker, "A 15," had been inspected that day by the engineer officer on duty.

The fire alarms in the bunkers were in working order, and there had never been a case of spontaneous combustion of coal on board the Maine.

The two after boilers of the ship were in use at the time of the disaster, but for auxiliary purposes only, with a comparatively low pressure of steam and being tended by a reliable watch. These boilers could not have caused the explosion of the ship. The four forward boilers have since been found by the divers and are in a fair condition.

On the night of the destruction of the Maine everything had been reported secure for the night at 8 P. M. by reliable persons through the proper authorities to the commanding officer. At the time the Maine was destroyed the ship was quiet, and therefore least liable to accident caused by movements from those on board.

3. The destruction of the Maine occurred at 9.40 P. M. on February 15, 1898, in the harbor of Havana, Cuba, she being at the time moored to the same buoy to which she had been taken upon her arrival. There were two explosions of a distinctly different character, with a very short but distinct interval between them, and the forward part of the ship was lifted to a marked degree at the time of the first explosion. The first explosion was more in the nature of a report like that of a gun, while the second explosion was more open, prolonged and of greater volume. This second explosion was, in the opinion of the Court, caused by the partial explosion of two or more of the forward magazines of the Maine.

The evidence bearing upon this being principally obtained from divers did not enable the Court to form a definite conclusion as to the condition of the wreck, although it was established that the after part of the ship was practically intact and sank in that condition a very few minutes after the destruction of the forward part.

The following facts in regard to the forward part of the ship are, however, established by the testimony.

That portion of the port side of the protective deck which extends from about frame 30 to about frame 41 was blown up aft and over to port. The main deck from about frame 30 to about frame 41 was blown up aft and slightly over to starboard, folding the forward part of the middle superstructure over and on top of the after part.

This was in the opinion of the Court, caused by the partial explosion of the forward magazines of the Maine.

5. At frame 17 the outer shell of the ship, from a point eleven and a half feet from the middle line of the ship and six feet above the keel, when in its normal position, has been forced up so as to be now about four feet above the surface of the water; therefore, about thirty-four feet above where it would be had the ship sunk uninjured. The outside bottom plating is bent into a reversed V-shape, the after wing of which, about fifteen feet broad and thirty feet in length (from frame 17 to frame 25), is doubled back upon itself against the continuation of the same plating extending forward.

At frame 18 the vertical keel is broken in two, and the flat keel bent into an angle similar to the angle formed by the outside bottom plating. This break is now about six feet below the surface of the water and about thirty feet above its normal position.

In the opinion of the court this effect could have been produced only by the explosion of a mine situated under the bottom of the ship at about frame 18 and somewhat on the port side of the ship.

6. The court finds that the loss of the Maine, on the occasion named, was not in any respect due to fault of negligence on the part of any of the officers or members of the crew of said vessel.

7. In the opinion of the Court the Maine was destroyed by the explosion of a submarine mine, which caused the partial explosion of two or more of her forward magazines.

8. The Court has been unable to obtain evidence fixing the responsibility for the destruction of the Maine upon any person or persons.

France May Ask to Mediate.

Washington, March 29.—After the call of the Spanish Minister at the State Department yesterday, the French Ambassador, M. Cambon, had a conference with Judge Day. This renewed the talk of European mediation, which is assuming tangible form. The speech of Minister Hanotaux in the Paris Chamber in last Saturday is looked upon as a foreshadowing at least sympathy if not direct steps toward mediation by France and other continental Powers.

There is good reason to believ Spain is ready and anxious for this move and has been encouraging it at the European capitals. It would not be an offensive intrusion, but more of a friendly offer to mediate the differences which have recently threatened to terminate in was between the United States and Spain.

It is understtod, however, that up to the present time M. Cambon has not received any definite instructions to take the initial step in such mediation.

Gladstone's End is Near.

London, March 29.—The Westminster Gazette, referring to the health of Mr. Gladstone, says:

"It is no news, we fear to say, that Mr. Gladstone's illness must necessarily be fatal in a comparatively short time. Mr. Gladstone is fully informed as to his own condition. He asked the doctors to tell him the truth, and he was thankful when informed that he had no chance of recovery. His state of mind is one of complete happiness. His life goes on quietly and evenly. Music is his chief solace. It soothes the pain."

Croatians Willing to Fight.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 29.—Ten thousand Croatians, living in Alleghany County, through their representatives, have proffered their services to President McKinley as volunteers should war be declared between Spain and the United States. These men are iron handlers and coal and coke workers, and could be put into the field at short notice. The majority of them have seen service in the Austrian and Russian armies, and their desire to come to their adopted country's aid is bona fide.

THE CURFEW BELL AGAIN.

Remembering the fruitless agitation of the good women of the Town Improvement Association for a curfew bell in this city, and the apparent popular sentiment displayed against it in the thought that the notion was too prudish and behind the times for Plainfield, the recommendation of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction of New York, submitted to the Legislature yesterday, proves interesting. In that report the superintendent strongly urges the enactment of a law that will bring about the curfew bell. The report says:

The curfew ordinance in many cities is attracting attention. Over three hundred cities and towns in the West have adopted the ordinance, which requires all children under fifteen years of age, unless accompanied by parents or guardians, or absent with leave, to be at home at 9 o'clock in the evening in the summer and at 8 o'clock in winter. The result has been a decrease of from 50 to 75 per cent. in the number of arrests of children. There has been a reduction of from 50 to 100 per cent. in commitments of youths to reform schools. The curfew is opposed by those who consider it an infringement upon personal liberty, but it may well be asked whether society and the State should not have the power to protect themselves against vicious tendencies in street education. Statistics tell that last year there were 179,000 arrests of children under sixteen years of age

As is usual in all important events in the happenings of the world, which come within the scope of a newspaper to tell about, The Daily Press was the only paper in Plainfield to furnish the latest and most authentic news concerning the presentation of the Board of Inquiry's report and the message of President McKinley to Congress yesterday afternoon. The Washington dispatch was concise and correct, and right in line with the practice of The Daily Press of always beating its contemporary on all lines of news.

WHAT WAR COSTS.

War is not such a fine thing as some of those who want it believe. "A war would make things hum," is the headline in a recent journal.

Would it? Let us see. During the civil war vast fortunes were made by those who staid at home and traded while the soldier boys went out and fought. Trade was lively; never so brisk, those who had things to sell to the government declared. It was all very fine, truly. The peddlers of shoddy and hard tack danced while the war lasted and when it was over they retired and let the people of the United States pay the piper. They have been paying him ever since. The government had left on its hands a huge lot of old iron that went to the junkshops, and thousands of horses, wagons and mules that were worth not a hundredth part of what they had cost.

At the beginning of the year 1861 the debt of the United States was less than $60,000,000. Aug. 1, 1865, it was $2,756,431,571. We have been paying that debt ever since, we the people of the United States. The lowest point it reached was in 1891, when it was $1,546,961,455. Then it began to ascend again until at the close of 1897 it had climbed to $1,808,777,643. Yet it has been 33 years since the war closed and we have been paying taxes to scale that debt down all this time. In interest we have paid it over and again. This interest, with the awful load of pensions that have to be paid because of the war, keeps the United States government so poor that in this land of plenty and prosperity it is frequently hard put to it to meet its expenses. We have made in this count no mention of the loss to the genuinely productive industries, those which add to the world's wealth, of the labor of each of the 4,000,000 of men on both sides who were fighting in that four years' war.

Do we want any more of that particular kind of "humming" in this country? No, we don't, not if we can help it honorably.

So far from being a benefit commercially in any sense war is the greatest of destroyers of real wealth, greater than all other agencies put together. For that reason millionaires and rich men turn cowards at the mention of a contest which will undoubtedly bring down the price of their vested interests. But rich cowards are as far wrong as the jingoes who want war because they have nothing to lose. If war cannot be escaped without dishonor, let us have it, and we will fight it to the victorious end like patriots who would give a hundred lives each for their country if they had them.

While congress was appropriating money for big battleships to be completed in four or five years it should in the place of at least two of them have ordered small fleets of torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers. It has been known to all the world for the past half dozen years that torpedo fighting was the kind to which modern navies were tending. The coming of Spain's flotilla to the vicinity of our shores finds us without a single torpedo boat destroyer in our navy or anything that can be turned into one. In this respect Spain has a decided advantage in the beginning of hostilities.

In ordinary times the opposing political parties of this country appear ready to fly at each other's throats and eat each other. It is their way of amusing themselves. At the first signal of danger to the country, however, every difference vanishes and Republican, Democrat and Populist alike unite to uphold the hands of the president of this Union—may it live forever! The unanimity with which congress without regard to party supports President McKinley is the real sign of how Americans love their country.

The two new battleships Kearsarge and Kentucky, launched at Newport News, are among the most powerful naval vessels in the world. The great steel hull of one of these ships weighs 5,000 tons. They are sister battleships, built exactly alike. They would not be available in time for the war with Spain, however, if there were to be one soon. Modern wars do not last long, except the horrible slow murder system which Spain carries on in Cuba.

The old Pennsylvania railway station in Washington where Garfield was shot has witnessed many a thrilling scene, but few more dramatic than that presented on the arrival of Lieutenant Marix and his party when they brought the report of the Maine court of inquiry to the capital and took it in a carriage through the streets with their hands upon their loaded revolvers.

If the McKinley diplomacy shall be equal to the achievement of indirectly forcing Spain, apparently of her own accord, to let Cuba go, that, too, without war or without greatly hurting Spanish pride, it will have accomplished a splendid victory of statesmanship.

It was right that President McKinley should lay the full report of the Maine inquiry before congress and ask their help in this crisis. The president can depend on the common sense as well as the loyalty of both congress and the American people.

A flotilla is a fleet of small boats.

Schemers should not be blabbers.

PASSING COMMENT.

Ernest R. Ackerman, of West Seventh street, has returned after a sojourn at Palm Beach, Fla. While stopping there Mr. Ackerman tried his hand at shark fishing and captured one of the heaviest of that species of the finny tribe that has been taken at Palm Beach. Mr. Ackerman fished off the end of a long pier which reached out into the ocean several hundred feet. After he had hooked his sea's monster, it took fifteen men to hold the line. After a half hour's fighting, the shark was finally beached. It measured eight feet in length and weighed about five hundred pounds. Mr. Ackerman brought home the head and jaws of the fish which are so large that he can place his own head and shoulders inside the month.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

If the production of "Lost Paradise," as given by the Waite Comedy Company at Stillman Music Hall last night, had been presented at the regular house prices there would have been very little chance for fault-finding, even by the hypercritical. In point of acting and costuming it was superior to many of the so-called first-class companies, while the scenic equipment was as fine as anything ever presented on a local stage. The story is too well-known to require retelling here. It is a play dealing with the vexed question of capital and labor, and is interesting to both classes, without being offensive to either. The great strike in the second act raised the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm, and was awarded a rousing curtain call. The orchestra music was, as usual, a pleasing feature. Taking specialties were introduced by William H. Chace and Henrietta St. Felix, and "Little Jessamine," a clever child, who sings and dances with an abandon that is refreshing. Matinees will be given daily at 2 p. m. The bill for tonight, "The Burglar," with "Little Jessamine" in the role of "Editha," and "The Charity Ball" Wednesday evening.

Henry Miller is perhaps the most popular woman's actor that the American stage now holds. He has always been a great idol of the fair sex and whether he plays an impetuous young lover or a romantic hero he asserts a sway over the fair sex by drawing them in throngs to the theatre in which is playing. Just now he has a role at the Garden Theatre, New York, (where he is playing under Charles Frohman's management), which compels him to make up as an English gentleman of perhaps 50 years of age. The quinquegenarian is the hero of the play "The Master" in which Mr. Miller has made perhaps the greatest hit of his career. He is a whole-souled hot-tempered man, who insists on being the master in his own house and on being obeyed by everybody and who through this stubborn self-willedness drives away the servants, and then his children and finally alienates his wife, being left along in the goutiness and grumpiness. It is a delightful story of pretty much the sort of thing which happens in every household where there is a master whose temper gets the better of his judgment and whose affectionate qualities though strong yield before stubborn and bigoted narrowness of purpose.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The Plainfield Press mourns the fact that that city now has between 200 to 300 empty houses. The Plainfield Press makes the astounding report that Plainfield now has between 200 and 300 empty houses. Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Something in a Name.

The past reputation guarantees the future. It takes years of excellence in any manufacture to win a name, and it is won through public confidence in the article manufactured. The Fischer piano, as an instrument of the highest grade, has founded its reputation and record upon its acknowledged merits. Its name is a guarantee of perfection in tone, action, staying-in-tune power, workmanship and durability. A statement made, without foundation in fact, will mislead. Facts prove all that can be said about the Fischer piano. It is the result of practical, skilled workmanship, and the best materials. These have made its name, and its name is its guarantee in the future as it has been in the past. The Fischer pianos have merited and received the endorsement of artists, musicians and musical people everywhere. Since many over 103,000 Fischer pianos have been the output of their manufactories, it will readily be seen that there is something in a name.

ONLY FIVE DAYS MORE

In Which to be Cured by the Famous Boy Phenomenon.

No New Cases Will be Received After April 2d, Although He Will Remain Two Weeks More to Cure Those Now Under Treatment.

The time is growing near when no new cases will be taken for treatment by the Boy Phenomenon. As previously announced, no new cases will be taken for treatment after April 2. Therefore, all who desire to avail themselves of his services must call on or before that time to secure their time of appointment for treatment, as his time is being rapidly filled. Those holding yellow slips or envelopes, who have not already secured an appointment must also present the same at once, as their cases will not be taken for treatment after April 2d. This is made necessary from the fact that the ensuing two weeks will be required in which to cure those who are already under treatment, and also those who obtain appointments next week.

Theories which have stood for centuries have been drilled into us a part of our education and accepted by the general public as facts. When one of these is exploded is it any wonder that the people are slow to accept the truth until proof positive obliges them to do so? That tumors are a growth of flesh has been demonstrated often and that they could not be removed except by the knife has been asserted since medicine and surgery have been practiced, and many are the women who have surrendered their lives by an operation for this disease, and the physician consoled himself with the thought that he had done all that lay in his power. That was true with the light he had, but the Boy Phenomenon has proved time and time again that these tumors can be removed without danger, pain or inconvenience to the patient. A dozen times or more in the past seven weeks he published cures of many chronic cases with name and address for reference. He now adds another to the list.

Mrs. A. Wooden, of 424 Orchard place, this city, has had an unsightly tumor on her forearm, near the wrist, which for years had caused her great annoyance. It was quite large and still growing. At her second treatment yesterday the tumor and sack were both entirely removed in less than 10 minutes. She left the office and walked to her home a well woman.

The following letter of gratitude was received by the Boy Phenomenon yesterday, which explains itself: "I have lived in Dunellen 33 years, I am in the real estate and lumber business. Have had a very severe chronic rheumatic affection of the limbs which left me in partially paralyzed condition, so that it was with great difficulty I could walk. The treatment you have given me has made a new man out of me and I now feel as if I could walk all the way home to Dunellen. Words cannot express the gratitude and great joy I feel at my sudden recovery. Gratefully yours,

W. S. STEVENS.

A NUN LOST; A WIFE GAINED.

Pretty Romance of a Young Novitiate in a Sombre Ottawa Convent.

Mlle. Baudoin, who afterwards was known as Sister Bonsecours, was only sixteen years old when she professed herself a postulant of the Order of the Gray Nuns. She was the daughter of a narrow-minded, bigoted tradesman, who like many of his class among the French Canadians imagined that to have a son or daughter in religious orders was to have a sort of patent of nobility.

So Mlle. Baudoin started in on her probation—a probation of five years, the vows being made only from year to year. At first things went admirably. Everybody loved the girl-they couldn't help it. She herself seemed happy. The pent-up sunshine in her nature had to find some outlet, and it bubbled out in music. The fame of Sister Bonsecour's skill and genius in music soon crept out beyond the convent walls. People in Ottawa and from a distance began to send their daughters to her for instruction. She became more popular than ever with her superiors; she grew to be a source of substantial money revenue to the convent. A brilliant musician, an accomplished artist, possessing a neat little wit of her own, Sister Baudoin became something the rage among the pious matrons of Ottawa, and quite the idol of the pupils the matrons sent her.

But in the meantime something was happening to Sister Bonsecours. It dated from the day when a handsome young physician called at the convent with his sister to see a friend. It was observed by the lynx-eyed sisters that the physician had occasion for a number of days after his visit to go by the convent very frequently, and furthermore in connection with this fact a coincidence was observed. This was that whenever the physician was passing Sister Bonsecours was always playing the piano with a verve and dash which was remarkable even in her brilliant musician as she was.

Of course the Gray Nuns were scandalized at this.

Then came entreaties, threats, appeals to the bishop. But it was all in vain until the aid of Sister Bonsecours's father, Baudoin, was called in. Baudoin in substance pronounced sentence of parental excommunication upon his daughter unless she renounced her profane purposes.

Poor Sister Bonsecours had braved all the artillery of the Church; had endured all the humiliation and disgusting penances that were heaped upon her without once shrinking in her resolution. But under the paternal wrath all her fine spirit gave way. She continued in the convent, dragging out an unhappy, wearisome life until liberty at last came with the death of her father. Then she shed the gray gown forever and fluttered away like a bird out of a cage.

In Montreal she began giving music lessons, until by the strangest of strange chances that handsome physician reappeared upon the scene. And—well, they were married, and have been living happy ever afterwards.—New York World.

HAWAIIAN WOMAN 122 YEARS OLD.

Still Has Most of Her Faculties—Can Talk of Happenings 100 Years Ago.

The oldest inhabitant of Hawaii and probably the oldest human being in the world who has retained most of her faculties, is a native woman residing in Honolulu the story of whose life became known through the efforts of Alatau T. Atkinson, editor of the Hawaiian Star and general superintendent of the census just completed. Her name is Kepoolele Apau, and her age from the most authentic reckoning, 124 years. This ancient specimen of humanity can chat intelligently about events that occurred more than a century ago, can see a coin in a prospective donor's hand clear across the room, and can patch clothing as deftly as any of her great-great-grandchildren. She is getting purblind, but her general health is good and her appetite fair. She volunteered the information that she remembered the digging of the well in Kau, and that she was a child at the time, similar to a child running about the house, a child of between 6 and 7 years. This event occurred in 1781, and is described in Fornander's History. This would make her 122 years old, according to exact calculation.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Why George Was Not First.

Scene—American schoolroom. Teacher—Who was the first man?

Little Boy (at rear of class)—George Washington, ma'am.

"Why do you think George Washington was the first man?"

"Because he was first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen?"

Another boy raises his hand.

"Well, Johnny, who do you think was the first man?"

"Don't know what his name was but I know George Washington wasn't the first."

"What makes you so positive?"

"Well, my history says he married a widow, so there must have been a man ahead of him."—Exchange.

A Darky-Proof Hen Coop.

A man in Cartersville purchased the gallows on which a man was hanged and built a hennery of the lumber. He has never had a chicken stolen from it, and it is said that the colored brother won't go within a block of it if he can possibly avoid doing so.—Atlantic Constitution.

The woman who gets along the best in society never remembers unpleasant things about those she meets.

TOO GOOD AN IMITATION.

Story of a Stuffed Santa Claus and the Fate That Befel Him.

Miss Elizabeth Allerton and her sister Augusta had for years lived all alone in a big house not a thousand miles from Boston, says the Boston Transcript. It had been their pleasure on each successive Christmas to gather a company of children in the great, handsome parlors and join with them in having a gay time. But finally they planned to depart a bit from their usual custom of planting the Christmas tree in a cambric-covered tub, and here they were, on Christmas Eve, surrounded by a lot of old garments that they had found among the trunks and boxes "up garret," making a figure to represent Santa Claus that should stand in the jog by the fireplace and clasp the well-filled tree in his strong right arm.

Miss Elizabeth was skilled in the use of paints, and upon the surface of an apoplectic-looking bunch covered with light flannel she was busily engaged in tracing sundry dabs and streaks to represent human features. Augusta, meantime, was brushing up the copper-colored vest thickly bestrewn with green roses that was to appear from beneath the dressing gown, covering the deficiencies in the shape of broomsticks and shawls that compose the form. A gray-squirrel muff that had not seen the light of day for many a year had been shaped into a hat, and was the crowning point, in every sense, of his home-made Kriss Kringle.

"Dear me!" said Miss Elizabeth when the sticks had been adjusted and the curled hair pulled over the dressing-gown collar, "he looks amazingly like a real man. I do hope the children will not be frightened when they see him."

"I was thinking of that myself," said Miss Augusta. "I wish you had not made his eyes so staring and his cheeks so red. Let's set him down and put some flour on his face."

The sisters started for their room above. Miss Augusta pulled the door so closely after her that she shut half of her sleeve in. Her sister noted that she locked the door and put the key in her pocket. They both sat down in their room and said nothing for a few minutes, when the scurrying of a mouse between the walls made them each give a little nervous scream. Miss Elizabeth started up. "Augusta," she said, "I can't sleep a wink to-night with that man in the house. I'm just going down and take him to pieces." "I was just going to suggest that very thing myself," said the younger one, echoing, as she generally did, her elder sister. They tip-toed down once more, keeping very close to each other, and, creeping behind the rosy-cheeked effigy they reduced him once more to a heap of old clothes, which they thrust into the closet, putting the head into a bandbox on the top shelf. Then they retired to peaceful slumbers.

A MOTHER'S GRATITUDE.

Her Thanks as Expressive as a Horse Could Make Them.

Some time ago, as Mr. Niedlinger was approaching the place at which he was spending the summer with his family, he heard cries of distress. At the corner of a barn he found a colt wedged between the siding and a post which supported the ends of the wires of a barbed wire fence, says a writer in Our Dumb Animals.

The barbs of the wires of the fence were hurting the colt cruelly. But the cries which Mr. Niedlinger heard were not from the colt. They came from the colt's mother, a beautiful brood mare, who stood by with extended neck and wide eyes and quivering body, expressing her pain, her solicitude, and crying out for the help which she could not give herself.

Mr. N. hurriedly removed the staples which secured the wires to the post, the wires dropped and the colt went free. The mother, with every demonstration of joy at the release of her offspring rushed up to it, licked it, put her chin over it, and fondled it with low sounds. Pleased that he had given the mother so much pleasure as well as that he had saved the colt, Mr. Niedlinger started along the path to the house, but he had not gone far when he was aware of hoof-falls behind him. He looked over his shoulder. There was the mother. He reached out his hand. She licked it with low whinnies of thankfulness. She followed him clear to the house, and still stood on the lawn thanking him for what he had done in the interest of one whose mother she was, and whom she loved with all a mother's love.

A Disobedient Patient.

Irate Patron—You advertised to cure consumption, don't you?

Dr. Quack—Yes, sir. I never fail when my instructions are followed.

Irate Patron—My son took your medicine for a year and died an hour after the last dose.

Dr. Quack.—My directions were not followed. I told him to take it two years.—New York Weekly.

A Fellow Feeling.

Disappointed Suitor (savagely)—What's that, you little imp? You say you just overheard your sister tell me she would be a sister to me, and that you are glad of it?

Small Brother (meekly)—Yeth, thir—mithery loveth company, thir.—Judge.

A Creditable Average.

"Yes, we're quite proud of our little town. It's a nice moral place an' averages up better than most of 'em. Why, we've got one church to every sixteen saloons—it's a fact."

"Indeed? How many churches have you?"

"Just one."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Happy Lives

Are Lives of Happy Living, and Thus 'Tis Well That You Should Know How This Can be.

In Plainfield there is many a happy home. Perhaps you know of some, or better still, it may be that you rest your head at night in one yourself Then again, there is many an unhappy fellow in your midst. 'Tis not surprising that this should be the case, when one thinks of the burdens some backs are forced to bear. If yours is not the back that bears the burden, still we think you would be glad to lend a helping hand to lighten another Let us show you how it can be done, and at the same time tell a story of Plainfield life that will prove this aid can easily be given.

Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, of No. 75 Grandview avenue, says: "I suffered from kidney complaint for the last 6 years. I doctored and used various kinds of medicines with little or no result. I had almost a constant, sharp darting pain accross my back, and if I over-exerted myself or took cold I suffered severely. I always felt it most when the weather was damp. There was also a kidney weakness which was very distressing and inconvenient. While in this condition I saw Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended and I was induced to try them. My son brought me home a box from L. W. Randolph's drug store. I started to take them at once, following directions closely. They helped the pain in my back and relieved my other difficulty. I give all the credit for this relief to Doan's Kidney Pills for they are beyond a doubt a grand medicine for kidney trouble. I have recommended them to a number of my friends and will continue to do so."

BEGINNING OF TIME.

IT IS GREENWICH WHICH TELLS US WHAT O'CLOCK IT IS Marvelous Instruments Employed by the Scientists in Charge of the Great Observatory—The Point Whose Longitude is Zero.

Doubtless every student of geography has had his curiosity aroused regarding Greenwich Observatory, whence longitude is reckoned and where the world sets its timepieces; and has been desirous of learning more about the dwelling place of "Longitude Naught" and the chronometer that regulates the clocks of the world. The purpose of this article is to gratify such curiosity; and to describe, briefly, some of the wonders of the great observatory.

The most important room of the whole observatory is the transit room. Four broad stone pillars occupy the greater part of the space of this room. Two of these pillars are tall, as well as broad and massive. They stand east and west of the center of the room and carry between them the Transit circle. Here is the home of "Longitude Naught"; for the optical axis of the great telescope of the transit circle marks the exact spot crossed by the prime meridian of the world. Two other telescopes are in the room, one to the north and one to the south of the transit circle, mounted on the two remaining pillars and both on the line of the optical axis of the transit circle.

THE GREENWICH TRANSIT CIRCLE.

There are two somewhat different senses in which the meridian of Greenwich is the standard meridian of nearly the entire world. It constitutes the fundamental line whence distances east and west are measured; and it gives the time to the world.

It will be interesting to note how time is found.

The great telescope, already described as occupying the center of the transit room, is very solidly mounted. Its pivots are supported by the pair of great stone pillars, whose foundations go deep down under the surface of the hill; and it turns but in one plane, that of "Longitude Naught." On the west side of the telescope, and rigidly connected with it, is a large wheel, with a number of wooden handles fastened to it, like the steering-wheel of a large steamer. This wheel carries the setting circle, which is engraved on a band of silver let into the face and back of the wheel near its circumference. Eleven microscopes penetrate through the pier, and are directed at the circle on the back of the wheel. These are the instruments used in finding time.

Time is usually determined by the watching of passing stars. The stars are used for this purpose, because they are many and the sun is but one. If clouds hide the sun at noon, the only time when it can be observed to determine time, a day is lost; but if one star is covered by a cloud there are still many others than can be observed. Star transits can be taken at various times throughout the day and night, while the sun can be used only once a day.

About two minutes before the appointed time the operator takes his place at the eye-piece of the telescope As he looks in he sees a number of vertical lines across his field of view These are spider-threads placed in the focus of the eye-piece. Presently a bright point of silver light comes moving quickly, steadily onward. The watcher's hand now seeks the side of the telescope till his finger finds a little button, over which it rests ready to strike. On comes the star "without haste, without rest" till it reaches one of the gleaming threads. Tap! The finger falls sharply on the button. In three or four seconds later the star has reached another thread. Tap! Again the button is struck; and so on until the ten threads have been passed and the transit is over.

Now what have the finger taps done? Each tap completed, for an instant, an electric circuit and recorded a mark on the "chronometer." This is a large metal cylinder covered with paper, and turned by a carefully regulated clock once in every two minutes A similar mark is made once in every two seconds by a current sent by means of the standard siderial clock of the Observatory. If, then, one of the clock dots and one of the observer's dots come exactly side by side, it is known at what precise second the star was on one of the wires, as the spider threads are called. If the observer's dot comes between two clock dots it is easy, by measuring its distance from them with a dividing scale, to tell the instant the star was on the wire to the tenth part of a second. Since the transit was taken over ten wires and the distance of each wire from the center of the field of view is known practically ten separate observations have been made, and the average of these gives the time of transit.

At the Observatory there is a great clock, called the siderial clock, which registers twenty-four hours in the precise time that the earth rotates once on its axis, or the time when a given star would again appear on a fixed meridian. Hence, since the exact time is known when the star ought to be on the meridian, this clock can be readily checked by the observations of star transits.

THE CHRONOGRAPH.

The error of the clock is determined twice a day, shortly before ten o'clock in the morning and shortly before one o'clock in the afternoon. These two times are chosen because, at ten and one o'clock signals are sent to all the great provincial centers. Also at one o'clock the time ball at Greenwich and at Deal are dropped, so that the captains of ships within sight of the dropping-mast may set their chronometers.

Thus is time found and regulated at the great Observatory.

The rating of chronometers for the Royal Navy is one of the most important duties of the Observatory. Here they are carefully tested until their time keeping qualities are as perfect as human skill can make them.

There is little of the picturesque or sensational in the regular routine work of the Observatory. The daily observation of the sun and of many stars—called clock stars, the determination of the error of the standard clock and its correction twice a day, the sending out of time signals, the care, winding and rating of hundreds of chronometers and the determination, from time to time, of the exact longitude of foreign and colonial cities make a ceaseless round of work. Yet there is a charm in it all to those who delight in the handling of delicate and exact instruments which renders its dreary routine fascinating.

A Cautious Man.

"It's a good thing to be cautious when among strangers," said the precise-looking man to a tall, angular old fellow, to whom he was talking on the deck of an Atlantic liner.

"Yes," was the response, "you can't always tell who you're talking to when you don't know, and strangers thrown together, as we are, are very likely to make mistakes if they don't look out."

"That's what I think about it," said the precise one. "There are several people around that I'd like to know who they are, but I feel a delicacy in asking."

"Who, for instance?" asked the tall party, letting his eyes wander about the deck.

"Well, there's a lady standing there by that door, talking to a young fellow who looks as if he might be her son."

"That far door?" inquired the tall party, stretching his neck around.

"Yes."

"She looks as if she might bite a nail in two?"

"Yes."

"Got a jaw on her like a vice!"

"Yes."

"Keeps it going all the time, as if there wasn't any such thing as an eight-hour law?"

"Yes."

"Got a bonnet on that looks as if it might be a sign for a vegetable gardener?"

"Yes."

"Got a complexion like a slab of tan bark?"

"Yes."

"Got clothes on that look as if they'd been made out of last year's circus posters?"

"Exactly—she's the one! Who is she?"

The tall party got up to have a better look before committing himself.

"She's a jay from Westminster, ain't she?" he said, with a laugh, as he sat down again.

"Yes. Who is she?"

"Oh, she's my wife. Let me take you over and introduce you."

But the cautious man declined, and managed to lose himself in the crowd as quickly as possible.

Sublime and the Ridiculous.

A sentimental gentleman, out for an hour's sail, was rhapsodising in the following terms:—"When we contemplate the heavens, under the brilliant light of day, or again in the fading shades of the evening, when the stars begin to appear one by one with increasing splendour, are not our souls impregnated with a sense of sublimity, of rapture, of mystic awe? Oh, my friend"—turning to the man at the helm—"oh, my friend, what do you think?"—"Think?—why, I thinks it's wery loikely.".

Thousands of Egyptians live in old tombs, eating, sleeping, wooing, loving, laughing, dancing, singing, doing all their deeds of daily life and household work among the mummies and sarcophagi.

GEN. FITZHUGH LEE.

OUR ERRING BROTHER WHO PROVES HIMSELF THE MAN OF THE HOUR.

Educated at West Point He Left the Army When Virginia Seceded, and Joined the Confederacy—Gen. Lee has Been an Invaluable Government Officer

Thackeray says somewhere that whenever you find a man whose friends all call him by his first name that man is very apt to be a good fellow. If this were ever signally illustrated by any one, it has been in the case of Fitzhugh Lee. Every man who knows him is his friend, and all call him "Fitz."

Sidney Smith Lee, the father of Fitzhugh, was the fleet captain of Commodore Perry's squadron when it opened Japan to the world and western civilization. When the war began Capt. Lee, of the United States Navy, resigned about the same time his brother, Robert E., his junior in age by two years, quitted the United States Army. It was a terrible blow to Capt. Smith Lee, as it was to his brother, to leave the service of the United States, in which he had passed forty years of his life and won honor and rank. But there was no other course, from his point of view. Capt. Smith Lee's first son was in the United States Navy when the war began. He was afterward a lieutenant on the famous confederate cruiser Shenandoah, Capt. Waddell, the finest and swiftest fighting ship the confederacy ever owned.

GEN. FITZHUGH LEE.

But "Fitz," the second of the famous sons of Capt. Smith Lee, would go into the army. He had inherited the cavalry spirit of his grandsire, and when he was fourteen could ride like a Comanche. So, in 1852, the lad, then seventeen, was sent to our military school on the Hudson, which his grandfather, "Light Horse Harry," had helped Washington to found. You cannot always tell what a man's future will be from his standing at school. Robert E. Lee was second in the class of 1829 at West Point, a class whose members in after years were among the most brilliant men of their time in our military service. "Fitz" Lee graduated third, "if you begin counting the class from the bottom," as he always says. The truth was—and still is—Lee was a man of action rather than a student.

It was to the Second United States Cavalry that Lieut. Fitzhugh Lee went, after his graduating leave in 1856. His active service commenced at once. The Indians were much excited at the crossing by emigrants of their lands and hunting grounds. With his usual energy Lieut. Lee distinguished himself in every fight with the Comanches in which he took part. He had some close calls.

In one Indian fight a warrior, dashing up close to him, shot Lee with an arrow. It would have killed him had not the point turned on a rib. As it was it penetrated several inches, and Lee had to ride about and command his men with the feather end of the arrow sticking out of his breast. It began to be painful, and lying down on his side, Lee called a friend and said: "Jack, pull this devilish thing out." The friend gave a tug. The arrow did not move. "Put your foot against my side and try it again." The other did so. The pain must have been horrible, for Lee's face turned very white. Finally, out came the shaft of the missile, leaving the steel head four or five inches deep in the young lieutenant's breast. It was a severe wound, for the heavy steel head could not be reached by the surgeon. But the wound healed over, and the steel happened to be new and clean, and therefore did not induce blood-poisoning. For some years it troubled Lieut. Lee, but was finally absorbed and passed into the blood.

Ther were five of the Lees of Virginia wearing the United States uniform when South Carolina fired on Sumter. They all waited and watched the trend and course of events. The Lees would follow Virginia alone, and they waited for her word. When it came, first Sidney Smith, then Robert, G. W. Custis, Sidney Smith, Jr., of the navy, finally and last Fitzhugh, all quitted the service of the country whose foundations their fathers and grandfathers had helped to lay. Of the awful pain and regret all felt (especially the seniors) at the dissolution of the Union as they deemed it, there is ample evidence extant. But go they must. Virginia had at last spoken. She was their cherishing mother. Her word must be obeyed, and it was.

As a soldier, Fitzhugh Lee was among the very first of that gallant lot of young general officers who helped to make "Stuart's Cavalry" the famous corps it became, under its brilliant young Virginia chieftain and head. As a leader Fitzhugh Lee was, perhaps, the most popular officer in the corps after Stuart himself. Stuart is in evidence in oft-repeated words, showing his appreciation of his young lieutenant. It is, indeed, high praise when Stuart commends an officer as he does Fitzhugh Lee.

COMMUTER JURY.

questions. John M. Whiton, of Central avenue, was accepted after being questioned regarding his opinions in the case.

George J. Tobin, the local plumber, was the last man to be called for the jury. He was the only one of them all who had read the account of the first trial. He answered Mr. Hetfield's questions satisfactorily. Then Mr. Marsh asked for the first time during the trial if he was prejudiced against the Sabbath observance ordinance as it stood at present. He replied no, and took his seat.

Corporation Counsel Marsh opened the case as usual, and then followed substantially the same testimony that was given in the first trial. Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson were placed on the stand and told how they purchased the goods on Sunday, March 20th, from Carbone. The articles purchased were two cigars, chewing tobacco and chewing gum.

Mr. Hetfield did not deny that his client sold the articles mentioned on the day named. His plea as before was that as Carbone observed Saturday as his Sabbath by closing his store he had a right to keep open Sunday. To prove the good character of Carbone, he placed on the witness stand, Dan Roberts, Mrs. Jennie Bush, Eugene O'Reilly, Mrs. Henry Drake, Edward Reahume and W. H. Rogers. Their evidence was similar to that of the first trial. Irving L. Brady was put on the stand by Mr. Marsh in rebuttal.

The attorneys summed up and the the jury was charged at 1:15 o'clock. At 3:05 the jury brought in a verdict of guilty.

BIG MERGER OF TROLLEYS.

All of North Jersey's Lines Now in One Corporation.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, N. J., March 29.—One more step was taken yesterday afternoon toward merging all the trolley railways of the northern end of the State under one big corporation, and furthering the project of building the line between Philadelphia and New York. By a unanimous vote the stockholders of the Consolidated Traction Company, at their annual meeting, decided to lease the road to the North Jersey Street Railway Company. It is understood the North Jersey Company has given the stockholders of the Consolidated Company a guarantee of 2 per cent. for the first year, with a slight increase yearly for eight years, when the dividend reaches 4 per cent.

As soon as the preliminaries have been settled, the lessees will take hold and the new company will control all the lines in the northern part of the State.

The attention of the public is called to Reynold's petroleum hair tonic which is sold exclusively by Armstrong, the druggist, corner Park and North avenues. This tonic is used by thousands and in every case the result is thoroughly satisfactory.

TROLLEY GRIDIRON FOR JERSEY.

Philadelphia and New Brunswick Traction Said to be Consolidated.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, March 28.—The New York and Philadelphia Company, it is said, has been practically merged with the Brunswick Traction Company, a branch of the big North Jersey combination interested in securing rights of way through Burlington and Southern Jersey in pursuance of the plans for a trans-State trolley line from New York to Philadelphia.

The Brunswick Traction Company is understood to be back of the applications for rights of way in the county of Burlington, and Thursday the company will have a delegation of officers and citizens of Burlington, Bordentown and other towns to inspect the city and suburban lines in New Brunswick and Middlesex county.

This indicates that trolley syndicates are striving to secure franchises for lines that will ultimately be merged into one big system covering the State from end to end and gridironing every section with spurs that will give a thorough local service in all directions.

Raymond Carpenter, of Manning avenue, has taken up his residence in New York.

CARBONE WILL APPEAL TO HIGHEST COURT.

Right of Sunday Selling Will Be Bitterly Fought For.

OFFENDER WAS FINED $25.

THE HEAVIEST PENALTY THE CITY JUDGE COULD IMPOSE.

Councilman Hetfield, Carbone's Lawyer, Will Certiorari the Conviction to the Supreme Court, Where Strong Argument Will be Made to Have the Verdict Set Aside—The Carbone Case Will Settle The Whole Contention—Seventh-Day Baptists Not Affected—They Will Maintain Their Rights.

For the time being, at least, the city won in regard to its interpretation of the Sabbath observance ordinance. Yesterday the first of the alleged offenders was tried for the second time and found guilty by a jury composed of eight commuters and four local business men. Of course the case will be carried to the Supreme Court of the State.

A detailed account of the trial of Jose Carbone appeared in yesterday's Daily Press. It was the re-trial of the case for the first jury disagreed and the case had to be tried again before a new one. The composition of the new jury, which was empaneled, was the subject of considerable comment. It was conceded that with such a jury, if the city did not win its case, victory for it would be impossible.

The second jury was charged at 1:15 o'clock and was locked up under the charge of Patrolman McCue. Once the jury sent for City Judge DeMeza and asked instructions on some technical point. An hour and forty minutes after it had retired to consider the case, the jury announced through its foreman, Marion S. Ackerman, that it had agreed on a verdict.

At 3:05 o'clock the jury marched into the Council Chambers, where the trial was held and announced that a verdict was ready to be given. The prisoner, his counsel, the Corporation Counsel and the reporters gathered in the court room to hear the verdict. It was guilty.

Then the jury was dismissed and went homewards for their dinners. A consultation was held between the City Judge and the Corporation Counsel regarding the punishment to be inflicted. According to the ordinance the extent of the fine that can be imposed is $25.

At 3:30 o'clock a small crowd again assembled in the Council Chambers to hear the verdict. Judge DeMeza made a short speech to the prisoner, who stood unmoved before him. He then sentenced Carbone to pay a fine of $25.

Carbone took the sentence very stoicly and resumed his seat without a word. His lawyer, Councilman Hetfield, immediately rose and asked that the city allow his client to enter into bond to give him opportunity to apply for a writ of certorari to carry the case into the Supreme Court. Mr. Marsh objected as he said there was no statute that provided for anything of that kind. He announced his willingness to accept Mr. Hetfield's personal guarantee to pay the fine or produce the prisoner by next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock if the writ had not been secured by that time. Such an agreement suited all and the prisoner was released in the custody of Mr. Hetfield.

The Carbone case is of special importance, as it has been agreed by the city and the alleged offenders to allow the one case to settle the whole matter. It will be carried to the highest court and there reviewed. If the verdict of the city court is sustained then the five storekeepers who are represented in the matter by Mr. Hetfield will make no further attempt to fight the city.

This does not apply to such of the members of the congregation of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, who were notified to transact business on Sunday behind drawn curtains and closed doors, and threatened with arrest if they did not comply. The Seventh-Day Baptists have decided to keep their establishments open as usual, and will make a determined fight if any attempt is made by the city to prevent them from doing so.

An Out-of-Town Wedding.

An out-of-town wedding announced for Easter week is that of Miss Ada D. Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jennings S. Cox, to Robert C. Fisher, of New Rochelle. AN EASTERN KLONDIKE

GOLDEN WEALTH FOUND ON A PLAINFIELDER'S POSSESSIONS.

While Workmen Were Excavating a Cellar on Morris Abrams' Property in New Brunswick They Found Old Coins.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, March 30.—Morris Abrams, the Plainfield shoe merchant, who runs a branch store in this city, seems to have struck a veritable Klondike while having a cellar excavated on Peace street for the purpose of enlarging his store. The building was formerly occupied by a photographer. Joseph Raymond, one of the workmen, was the first one to unearth this eastern Klondike. His eyes opened with wonder when he turned up an old coin about the size of a dollar.

It was a Spanish piece, and bore date 1749. Other workmen also found silver pieces. In all twenty-five gold coins, of varying sizes, from about the size of a silver quarter to the size of a silver half, and 110 silver coins, all of the same size as the first were found.

The coins were divided among the workmen. They were all well preserved, and bear dates ranging from 1748 to 1777. How they got where they were found is a mystery.

The building is one of the oldest in New Brunswick. Shortly after the Revolutionary War a bank was located there known as the Merchant's Bank, and the coins may have been the property of that institution, but as they are all Spanish, this theory is hardly more likely than the generally accepted one that the coins are part of Capt. Kidd's treasure, buried in what is now the site of New Brunswick, when the pirate sailed up the Raritan to get out of the way of some pursuing ship.

DONE IN HIS NAME.

Practical Charity Given by the King's Daughters.

During the past three years Mrs. Martin Gaghen, of Lee place, has been afflicted with mercury poisoning of the hands and she was unable to use her hands at all. In fact she was helpless in that respect. Through the kindness of the King's Daughters and Dr. Carman, she was taken to the hospital for treatment. At that place she was confined for nine weeks. A few days ago she was discharged almost cured, being able to open her hands and use them. Mrs. Gaghen is very grateful to those who were so kind to her. She was not charged one penny for the treatment and it was given gratuitously.

White's Opening.

The spring opening of fine millinery at White's is one of the important events of the store, and is looked forward to by all lovers of beautiful hats. The display this season is far superior to former openings in many ways. A description of the hats to be seen is impossible, but all visitors to the department yesterday and today were well pleased with the style and taste that has been displayed by Miss Daly in the trimming of the hats and the arrangement of the department, as every hat shown is her own design and style, as she buys no stock or ready-trimmed hats. The opening will continue tomorrow and Friday.

Work at the Hospital.

The monthly meeting of the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital was held Monday night. Routine business was transacted. The report of Dr. J. B. Probasco, medical director for the month, showed that 18 patients had been admitted, 14 discharged cured, 3 discharged, improved. The total number treated was 34. There were 34 dispensary patients and 73 visits made to that department.

The lawn in front of J. F. Parker's house on Grove street presents a very pretty appearance for this time of the year, being dotted with innumerable crocuses and hyacinths of all colors. Fixed the Counsel Fees.

In the Orphans court of Union county, this morning, the court fixed the counsel fees in the Rachael Clark will case, in which the will was sustained. Governor Voorhees represented the legitees, John H. VanWinckle, of this city, the executors and James O. Clark, of Westfield, the caveators.

MAKING CHRISTIANS MAKES COMPETITORS.

THE IDEA WAS NOT POPULAR

THE UNCHRISTIAN SENTIMENT HEARD IN ESSEX COUNTY.

Miss Hamilton, a Noted Mission Worker, Told Plainfielders About the Incident at a Conference of Union County Christian Endeavorers Last Night—She Told How to Do Excellent Mission Work—Mrs. Alice S. Runyon Offered Ideas as to Work—Suggestions to Interest Endeavorers.

The members of the missionary committee of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union held a conference last evening in the ladies' parlor of Trinity Reformed church. Owing to the stormy weather the attendance was small, but the conference was helpful and many valuable suggestions were advanced along the lines of mission work.

Miss Hamilton, of Newark, who is a noted mission worker in the Essex County Union, led the discussion and she not only asked many questions concerning the work in Union county, but told of the excellent methods used in her Union. Miss Hamilton said that in selecting a committee she thought it best to choose one trained worker, one-half trained worker and three inexperienced workers. In doing this the best work could be secured. She thought the missionary committee ought to meet at least once a month and take up the subject of one single foreign country.

One idea advanced by a person not wholly in accord with foreign missions was that if China should be Christianied the people in that country might manufacture and sell such goods as are made in this country below our market rates. This was considered to be a detriment. Various suggestions were offered to incite an interest among Christian Endeavorers in mission work.

Mrs. Alice S. Runyon, of this city, interested those present by giving a brief talk on mission work. She offered several valuable suggestions as to how Endeavorers could be interested in missions. The conference was a very informal one and all talked freely on the subject of missions. Not all of the Plainfield societies were represented at the meeting, although there were several representatives from other parts of Union county.

Governor Signs the Law to Establish a Village for Epileptics.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 30—Governor Voorhees has affixed his signature to Senate bill No. 80, which provides for a village of epileptics, to which no person under five years of age shall be eligible to admission. The bill provides that the Governor shall appoint six trustees without salary who shall select a site from State lands and shall provide a building. Thus far the Governor has not decided upon the persons whom he will have as trustees. The appointments will probably be made this week. It is probable that the site for the new village will be a large farm in Somerset county, ownership of which the State recently acquired through the foreclosure of a mortgage.

Chancellor McGill Renders an Opinion That Cross-State Line Had No Right to Lay Their Tracks Near Somerville.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, N. J., March 30.—Chancellor McGill yesterday filed a written report upon the suit of the township of Bridgewater against the New York and Philadelphia Trolley Company. In 1894 the township, which is in Somerset county, granted a franchise to the company with the provision that the line should be completed between Bound Brook and Somerville within one year. The work was not completed and little, if any, work was done. The company asked for an extension, but it was refused, the township demanding better terms. In the fall of 1897 the company brought a gang of workmen from Baltimore and began to lay the tracks. There was a battle between the workmen and the authorities. The workmen won. It being a Sunday, no legal action could be taken. The company said its sudden activity was to shut out its rival, the Brunswick Traction Company. The township had previously obtained an injunction and the case was pending in the Chancery Court.

The Chancellor holds that the seizure of the road was illegal. The restraint imposed by the original injunction was standing and still stands, and the case shall proceed as though no action had been taken by the company.

NASH WILL NOT BE PLACATED BY G. O. P.

He Declined an Honor From the Republican Machine.

REGULARS WERE UNHAPPY.

SEVERAL OF THE FAITHFUL WERE DISPLEASED WITH THE OFFER.

Though the Judge Was Prominently Identified With the Citizens' Movement, Which Defeated the Regular Republicans, He was Appointed an Alternate Delegate to Represent the Machine at Treaton, but He Immediately Declined—Leaders Criticised for Their Attempt to Harmonize the Second Ward Manager.

A real lively blaze of indignation started up among the machine politicians of the G. O. P. in the Second ward last week, when the announcement was made that the city executive committee of the Republicans had attempted to reconciliate the erstwhile leader of the ward, who looked after the interests of the Citizens' ticket in the last campaign. The attempt at reconciliation came in the appointment of Judge Vincent W. Nash as alternate to represent the Second Ward at the convention of Republican League Clubs at Trenton tomorrow.

It will be remembered that the appointment of the delegates and alternates to the convention was left in the hands of the chairman of the city executive committee, Former Assemblyman W. R. Codington. When his appointments were announced, W. H. Drayton was named as delegate from the Second ward with V. W. Nash as alternate.

Now Judge Nash's status in the political arena at the present time is well-known to a majority of the citizens of Plainfield. He is not in favor of the present administration and did his best at the last municipal election to turn down the regular Republican ticket and elect the Citizens' candidates. His efforts were so far successful in that ward that Councilman Frost was defeated in his run for re-election and John VanHerwerdon elected to the Council. Judge Nash also assisted in the direction of the campaign throughout the city. He stood at one time as the Republican leader in his ward and was a hard worker for the G. O. P. At present he is known to the Republicans as a "kicker."

The announcement of his appointment was received with incredulity. While there was nothing particularly important in the position of alternate, yet there was a chance that he might represent the second ward before the Republicans of the State. The other positions were distributed among the workers in the different wards and the fact that Judge Nash, a distinct opponent of the present administration, should be similarly honored, was looked on as decidedly pointed.

A howl came from the workers in the Second ward at once. While the appointment was made by the chairman, it was known that there was some influence behind that wished the appointment to be made. The workers wanted to know who had brought the influence to bear. There were plenty who had done much for the party in that ward, they said, that deserved recognition.

Judging from Judge Nash's position, it appeared very evident that the appointment was made to conciliate him and draw him back into the fold of the Republican party. It had not the slightest effect on the erstwhile leader of the Second ward. He declined the honor without delay and informed J. B. Coward, secretary of the city committee, that he would be unable to accept the appointment. No reason was stated.

A Press reporter called on Judge Nash at his office this morning, but the Judge had nothing to say in regard to the matter. He had declined, that was all. He was free to say, however, that he was not in accord with the present administration of city affairs.

A Teacher Called Away.

Miss Maud Acock, of Craig place, one of the teachers at the North Plainfield Public School, was called to her home at Trenton this morning by the sudden death of her brother-in-law. He went through an operation and it was thought he would live. He died very suddenly last night.

Changed its Time of Meeting.

The Plainfield Board of Health held a meeting last evening. Only routine business was transacted. The Board adjourned to meet again next Tuesday evening. The regular meeting of the board has been changed from the last Tuesday to the first Tuesday in the month.

ROAD SEEMS TOO NARROW

ONLY OBJECTION TO CHANGE OF ROUTE IN FANWOOD.

The Matter of Permitting the Change Left in the Hands of Township Committee—New Plan of Getting to Newark.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, March 30.—A meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee was held last evening in the town hall for the purpose of giving the people a public hearing concerning the proposed changes in the trolley route as offered by the Elizabeth and Westfield Traction Company. Mr Gaddis, representing the company, offered the franchise to the Committee, and after Chairman Nichols read the proposed changes the meeting was thrown open for discussion.

About the only objection offered by the property-owners along the proposed route, was that Westfield avenue is too narrow for a double track railway, the road being only fifty feet wide. The township map, Mr. Gaddis said, called for sixty-six feet, but that owners in setting their fences had gradually encroached upon the roadway, consequently narrowing it. He said that if the franchise was granted the company would do all necessary grading in widening the road. This seemed to be the only point raised. A motion was then made that the matter be left in the hands of the Township Committee, they to do as they think best for the best interests of the township.

The committee decided to hold a meeting later to discuss the question. A representative of The Daily Press asked Mr. Gaddis if the Bergen plan would in any way interfere with the plans of the Elizabeth and Westfield Company. He replied that if the franchise was granted the road would run to Scotch Plains and if possible go to Newark by a route that is several miles shorter than the one offered by the Bergen plan.

Owing to the stormy night there were not many people present to discuss the situation. W. R. Codington, counsel for the township, was present to look after the legal side of the question.

MAYOR IMPOSED FINES.

Mr. Wilson Dealt Severely With Three Borough Offenders.

Herbert Willett and a Mrs. Bearsford, the latter of Grandview avenue, were arrested by Marshal Wise at 1 o'clock this morning on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. At the home of the woman the two managed to walk to the porch of the house, where they fell off on one side. Marshal Wise was nearby and arrested them. They were placed in the lock-up with difficulty. The woman's screams could be heard for several blocks. This morning they were arraigned before Mayor Wilson who, after hearing the evidence, imposed a fine of $10 on each.

About the same time Clara Conover, of Paradise alley, was arrested on Somerset street by Marshal Schenck. She was under the influence of liquor. She was in company with a young man of the borough, but the latter escaped in the darkness when he saw the officer. The girl, who is about 16 years of age, was taken in custody and placed in the lockup. When she appeared before the Mayor a choice between $5 or thirty days was given. Up to noon the fine had not been paid, although a young man promised to call and put up the necessary amount.

SETTLED THE CLAIM.

A Dispute That was Threatened With Arrests.

On the 29th day of January, Constable VanHorn made a levy on goods belonging to Mrs Rosa Blimm, corner of Pearl street and Watchung avenue, at the instigation of Pope & Runyon for Norton & Fletcher, New York grocers, who held a claim against the party. Some of the goods were moved out of the county at the time, and yesterday some more goods were moved. Constable VanHorn protested, and the above law firm threatened to make arrests if the goods were not brought back. Mrs. Blimm produced a document from her lawyer, H. C. Runyon, giving her permission to move the goods. Yesterday Pope & Runyon issued warrants for arrest and were about to serve them when Mr. Blimm called and settled the claim.

Important Church Meeting.

A very important meeting is to be held in the First Church of Christ tomorrow evening. A meeting of vital interest effecting the future welfare of the church is to be considered. Every officer of the church and every member should be present.

—Rev. W. Montgomery Downey, rector of the Church of the Redeemer, will preach at Grace church Thursday evening.

$65,000 WORTH OF DELINQUENT TAXES.

Martin Act Commissioners File Their Report.

SOME WHO ARE AFFECTED.

THE FINDINGS FILL TWO GREAT BIG BOOKS.

County Judge Will Soon Set a Day for Hearing for All Those Who Think Their Taxes Are Unjust—The Estate of the Martines in Debt to the City Over $12,000—There Are Many Prominent People Who Are on the Delinquent List—Some of the Names and the Amounts Fixed.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 30.—After several months' work the commissioners appointed by the Supreme Court to act under the provisions of the Martin Act in the collection of delinquent taxes in Plainfield, have completed their work, and their findings were filed in the county clerk's office yesterday by Wm. J. Hubbard, secretary of the board. The report comprises two large volumes, 3x4 feet, and are filled with a world of figures. The first part of each volume deals with figures and the last pages are made up of fine maps, showing the locations of the various properties affected. Volume No. 1 contains the properties affected in the First and Second wards, and Volume No. 2 properties in the Third and Fourth wards.

Over 400 properties are affected, owned by 200 different people. While it is not stated what the amount of the original delinquencies are, it understood that with interest they would foot up to a good deal over $100,000. The total amount which the Board decided should be collected is between $65 000 and $66,000.

The report is now virtually in the hands of the County Judge and in a few days he will set a time for hearing before deciding on either approval or rejection of the findings. The time for the hearing will be advertised for ten days in the Plainfield papers. If the Judge approves the report it will be sent to the Collector in Plainfield and the work of collecting the delinquencies under the Martin Act will immediately be commenced.

It would be utterly impossible to give a detailed review of the report in the Daily Press, owing to its voluminous character, but a few of the most prominent cases can be referred to as showing the general character of the work.

The largest delinquent in the report is the estates of Daniel and Anna M. Martine and the properties of James E. Martine, the total sum of which is $12,109.79.

In the First ward the following are some of the largest sums: Estate of Martha Suydam, $508.75; estate of C. Boice, $1,197; estate of Franklin Willey, $2,503.71; estate of Elias Cole, $4,646.08. Other prominent delinquents are the Scotch Plains Baptist church, Y. M. C. A., George W. DeMeza, W. L. Hetfield, W. A. Coddington, Rev. J. P. Taylor, J. T. Vail, A. D. Thompson, First National Bank, Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, C. H. Hand, J. B. Coward, Aaron M. Powell and Warren Marsh.

In the Second ward some of the prominent delinquents are are Charles Hyde, Emma Jones, Dr. J. T. Fritts, George F. White, William Palmer Smith and C. P. Ralli.

The Third ward shows W. J. Leonard for various properties $9,147.65, Mrs. E. M. Leonard, $609 98, and T. O. Doane, Craig A. Marsh, W. R. Coddington and Mrs. E. P. Williams.

In the Fourth ward the heaviest delinquents are F. H. Loundsbury for about $500 and Charles McCarty for $561.03. Others are James E. Martine, V. W. Nash and J. B. Coward.

It must be remembered that in many instances the owners of properties upon which taxes are found delinquent are not morally responsible for the debts, as when they bought them they were supposed to be clear of encumberances, but since which time it has been unearthed that the taxes accummulated under former holders and were not properly recorded so that the present purchasers knew of their existence.

In an interview with one of the commissioners the following information was gained: "The tax books of the city back of 1881 are all right, and in every case where the property owners produce receipts they have found it so marked paid on the city tax books. Those cases have been marked off. We found that some taxes were not followed up as closely as they should have been, but in some cases

WAR TALK IN SENATE

Three Resolutions for Independence and One for War.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEES

Senator Mason Makes a Speech and Says If Senators Had Been Killed War Would Have Been Declared—War Resolutions by Senators Rawlins and Foraker.

Washington, March 30.—Three resolutions declaring the independence of Cuba and one making a declaration of war against Spain were introduced in the Senate yesterday. The Senate silently listened to the reading of the resolutions and without any expression of opinion each and all were referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The Senate was proceeding along with the routine work when Senator Allen in the regular order introduced the first of the quartet of resolutions. It was a long one and declared the independence of Cuba, coupling this declaration with the proposed appropriation for relief to be sent to the Cubans.

The Senate listened attentively to the reading of the paper and the Vice-President ordered it referred to the Foreign Relations Committee, which was done without comment.

The War Declaration.

Senator Rawlins of Utah followed with his resolution declaring war. This resolution went also to the committee without a word.

Senator Foraker of Ohio then presented a resolution recognizing the independence of Cuba and favoring armed intervention. Mr. Foraker asked that the resolution go to the Foreign Relations Committee. He said that his resolution had been long delayed. He had intended, he said, to present it at the opening of the session last December, but he had withheld it at that time, because of the tenor of the President's message. That message, he said, gave promise that within a reasonable time definite and decisive action would be taken by the administration so soon as autonomy should be given a fair trial. A reasonable time seems now to have elapsed.

The people of the country realize that all necessary time has been given to Spain to bring peace to the stricken island. Autonomy, Mr. Foraker declared, had absolutely failed, but just as its failure was realized the country was confronted by the De Lome incident. Scarcely had the excitement created by this subsided when what has been styled the Maine incident threw the country into a hurricane of excitement. Since that time, said the Senator, "we have been awaiting patiently and under restraint for the report of the Board of Inquiry. That report is now before the Committee on Foreign Relations. Whatever may be done as to the Maine incident, action must come on the general Cuban question." In conclusion Mr. Foraker said:

"We have been waiting weeks. Now, the report has come and has been submitted to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and I think that it is time that this resolution should go with it and be acted upon by the committee with the evidence and report. I do not intend to make a speech now, but give notice that I shall address Congress on the resolution at the proper time."

Then Senator Frye arose and said that he did not intend to offer a resolution at this time, but as the others had gone to the committee he would present his and let it go with the rest. He therefore sent to the clerk a resolution for the independence of Cuba, similar to the one introduced for Senator Foraker.

Senator Mason's Speech.

Mr. Mason of Illinois followed the introduction of the resolutions with a war speech. He described the disaster to the Maine. He said that if ninety of the victims had been Senators or sons of Senators we would not have been forty days declaring war. Yet the lives of all American citizens were sacred alike under our law and equally entitled to consideration. Mr. Mason said the catastrophe should be replied to vigorously. He could not speak for others, but for himself, he was for war. This declaration brought out a vigorous outburst of applause from the galleries.

Mr. Mason declared there could be no peace so long as a European nation owns and butchers its slaves on this hemisphere. He said it was not necessary for the Maine Court to fix the responsibility. The law did that. If it was a torpedo or a mine it was a Spanish torpedo or a Spanish mine. Hence, Spain must answer. He would oppose any proposition looking to indemnity, as he would oppose making a diplomatic incident of the catastrophe. He would oppose any kind of autonomy, or any plan to assist Spain, but his demand was that the Spanish flag should be driven from the Western Hemisphere. Neither did he believe Cuba should be required to pay an indemnity to Spain. "We are told," he said, "we must wait on the Spanish elections, but if Spanish elections are as rotten as Spanish diplomacy, we had better not wait."

"Let us awake," said Mr. Mason, "to glorious war, as did our fathers—a war that shall insure the honor and respect of our flag all over the world."

Mr. Mason said he believed it was due the country to know the general expression and intention of the members of the Senate. While he would not apologize for discussing the Cuban question at this time, he did not intend by so doing any disrespect to the administration or the Committee on Foreign Relations, when he said that he was tired of the dilatory tactics that had been employed for three years to prevent any assistance from the United States to the starving Cubans. He continued:

"More than two years ago the plan of the Spanish Government to starve the women and children and non-combatants was begun. Every intelligent man, woman and child was informed of it through the ordinary channels of information, the newspapers, and by the statements of disinterested witnesses, day after day, week after week, month after month, and year after year, and it received practically no attention from this Government, until some of the members of this body visited the scene of death and distress, and brought back to us their words of honor that no picture had been drawn by the press that fully stated the horrors of the situation."

"Then the gentlemen and newspapers who had pretended, at least, to discredit those statements in this body began to talk about it as though it was a new discovery, when within ninety miles of our shores for two years they had continued to murder women and children. When nearly a year ago I called attention to the situation, as given at that time, and since corroborated by four of our colleagues, and I had the pleasure of being insulted over the wire by stock brokers and scalpers in the markets. For two years the process of imprisonment of the reconcentrados and their starvation has proceeded; yet any one who dared to call attention to the fact has had to withstand the assaults of those controlling the press, who denied in their editorial columns the news they printed in their news columns. Thousands had been starved, millions of dollars of our legitimate commerce had been swept from the high seas and the man who worships the eagle on the dollar and does not see the one on his flag says, be silent, think of the horrors of war and the dangers to business.

"When the order of concentration came they cooped at least 800 American citizens with the reconcentrados, and refused to allow them to go out and earn a legitimate and honest living. It amounted to imprisonment, we claimed so at the time, yet many professed not to believe it until the honorable Senator from Vermont described the dead line and the gun of the Spanish soldier that kept the reconcentrados together. Any other self-respecting nation in the world would have ordered their release and better treatment, or they would have opened the gates of hell on Morro Castle. This Government, however, upon the suggestion of the President, took $50,000 of the people's money out of the treasury of the United States and begged permission of Spain, the poor privilege of feeding our citizens American bred on Spanish soil.

"I am not complaining; I am not criticising. There is no other such record in all the history of the world; I only repeat this humiliating statement to call attention to the fact that every effort that has been made by the President has been construed by Spain to be an act of cowardice and absolute and conclusive evidence that we are afraid of that mighty power; and every part has made Spain more cruel to her own people, and more insulting to us.

Some tell us we are not prepared for war. When shall we be better prepared? Will it be when the Spanish torpedo flotilla has crossed the water and rests complacently on her base of supplies within five or six hours' distance of our fleet? We know now officially what we have believed for forty days. Shall we make it until she can destroy more of our ships and men? God forbid that such a crime should be charged to us!"

Mr. Mason then turned his attention to the destruction of the Maine. He said:

"The battleship Maine, our gallant ship, went down and two hundred and sixty-eight of our gallant citizen sailors with her. At the time every citizen of the United States familiar with the Spanish character felt confident it was Spanish treachery. Our ship was there by right of custom, of tendered hospitality and also by treaty contract she had an absolute right in be there. The day closed and she rode the harbor a messenger of peace. No message had been sent by our Executive inconsistent with the national honor of Spain. Our only offer was to try and restore peace, alike honorable to all. Our treasury had been opened to feed our people. Definite plans were not even suggested by the President, fearing to injure our relations with Spain.

"Spain could not conquer her own insurgents. Had we been a grasping nation we could any time within two years have made aggressive and forcible annexation, taking advantage of the crimes of Spain and the misfortune of Cuba."

The Senate adjourned at the conclusion of rM. Mason's speech.

Hon. Marriott Brosius Ill.

New York, March 30.—Hon. Marriott Brosius member of Congress from Lancaster County, Pa., is seriously ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Herbert B. Cohn, of Mount Vernon, N. Y. Mr. Brosius is one of the hardest worked men in the House, and for some time his friends have noticed that his health was impaired. On Thursday last Mr. Brosius decided to visit his daughter for a few days, hoping that a change of scene would be beneficial. The trip, however, proved too much for him, and on reaching Mount Vernon he was prostrated by a severe chill and pains in the chest. Mr. Brosius' condition is somewhat improved to-day, and hopes are entertained for his speedy recovery. Mr. Brosius has just been renominated without opposition for his sixth term in Congress, making his consecutive service in Congress longer than that of Thaddeus Stevens or James Buchanan, who represented the same district during their public careers.

In golf, condition means a lot. I eat H-O and recommend it.

BLANCO FEARS TROUBLE.

Says It May Be Precipitated by Americans Who Want War.

Washington, March 30.—The State Department gives no official confirmation of reports that official advices from Havana state that riots, headed by the Weyler element, are apprehended.

It appears, however, that Captain-General Blanco has sent a communication to Washington in which he says he believes that a demonstration may be precipitated at any moment by an element made up of certain Americans of strong anti-Spanish tendency in Havana. General Blanco states that he does not fear any disturbances and riots coming from the Cuban people. The suggestion that the Weyler element is threatening riots is emphatically repudiated by the Captain-General. General Blanco expresses complete confidence in his ability to preserve quiet among the native population.

He is convinced, he says, that a riotous demonstration at Havana amounting to an overt act, designed to precipitate war between the United States and Spain, is being systematically fomented by a certain class of American citizens.

Blanco clearly and unequivocally declares that the presence of American correspondents in Cuba make the situation, in his view, more critical.

Denied in Washington.

Washington, March 30.—Assistant Secretary Day says that there is no basis for the reports that riots and disturbances were threatened in Havana. The State Department posted the following statement:

"A telegram from General Lee shows there is no occasion for the alarming reports as to the situation in Havana."

The report of riots in Havana led to the belief that a movement was on foot to have American ships sent to the Cuban capital as a measure of protection to American interests. It is not likely, however, that this will be done for the present. Owing to the disquieting reports about trouble at Havana Judge Day prepared the statement quoted above.

This was the only reference Judge Day would make to many different stories as to agitation at Havana, the danger to American citizens there and the alleged threats against General Lee's life. The Assistant Secretary conveyed the strong impression that these reports of disturbances were not correct, although he confined his official utterance to the brief statement above given. From an authoritative source also it was learned that it was not probable that American naval vessels would be sent to Havana for the present.

GERMAN BARK MISSING.

Fears for the Safety of Her Crew of Twenty-one Men.

Philadelphia, March 30.—The German bark Marie Seidenburg, from Dublin Jan. 31, in ballast for this port, is missing, and fears are entertained that she has foundered with her crew of twenty-one men. Seventeen days ago the missing bark was sighted off Scotland Lightship, outside of New York harbor, and orders were put on board of her by a pilot boat addressed to Capt. Menkens, her master, instructing him to proceed to Philadelphia, where she had just been chartered to load crude oil for Marseilles.

Since that time she has not been seen or heard from. The mysterious disappearance of this ship is one of the strangest events in shipping annals. She had only one hundred miles to cover, when last sighted, to reach the Delaware Capes, and she should have reported there the next day. Tugs are cruising for her, and her agents are watching day and night for news of the missing ship.

Michael Will Not Be a Jockey.

New York, March 30.—It is definitely settled that Jimmie Michael, the Welsh rarebit, will discard horses and once more take to his first love, the bicycle, this season. This was determined at a meeting yesterday afternoon, when Michael was engaged for a series of six races during the months of July and August. There were present at the meeting David G. Shafer, Michael's manager; Michael, J. C. Kennedy and William A. Brady, representatives of the American Cycle Racing Association. In the period mentioned Michael will take part in races conducted by the American Cycle Racing Association, but he is at liberty to ride exhibitions.

Soldiers for Tortugas.

Washington, March 30.—By direction of General Miles, commanding the army, orders have been issued for the transfer of the Twenty-fifth Regiment of Infantry to the Dry Tortugas. The fact that this regiment is made up of colored troops is regarded as significant in showing the purpose of the War Department to concentrate colored troops in the vicinity of Cuba, inasmuch as it is recognized that the negro is better able to withstand the Cuban climate than the white man. There are three other colored regiments in the army. Their aggregate strength is 2,188.

Three Men Buried in Ruins.

Pittsburg, March 30.—A new kiln which was being erected for the Pennsylvania Car Wheel Works, on Preble avenue, Allegheny, collapsed yesterday. Three men were buried under the mass of iron and brick and so badly hurt that they will not recover. When the accident occurred the men were working inside the kiln. Some part of the framework is supposed to have given way, precipitating the heavy pieces of iron and other material upon the workmen. The mass covering them was so heavy that considerably difficulty was experienced in removing them.

Consul-General Wozen Missing.

New York March 30.—Karl Wozen, 50 years of age, who has been Consul-General to the United States for the last seven years, from Sweden and Norway, has been missing from his office since last Wednesday. The consulate is at present in charge of Vice-Consul Rayn, who said that he had notified the Swedish and Norway Governments of the absence of the Consul. Mr. Rayn thought Mr. Wozen's mind unbalanced, as he had seen him act strangely for the past six months.

The American people shall have no need of the CHINAMAN in the future if every American Laundryman will supply the proper kind of work. Try us and be convinced that we are up-to-date, and that you would rather have AMERICANS by all odds to serve you. Could you for instance turn out first-class laundry in a room 12x20 where there is three or four living. Think of your laundry in a place of this kind, where they do cooking, smoke their opium and also sleep in same apartment. And still what is more horrible is that all your clothes are sprinkled from the mouth. Think twice before you speak and have an American citizen to do your laundry by all odds.

THE PROBLEM SOLVED.

THE NEW MEDICAL DISCOVERY TESTED.

Results of the Test in Various Forms of Dyspepsia.

Chronic indigestion or dyspepsia, while a very common trouble, has for some time been looked upon by able physicians as a serious thing, and that no time should be lost in treating it properly at the start, because recent researches have shown that the most serious, fatal and incurable diseases have their origin in simple dyspepsia of indigestion.

Diabetes is simply one form of indigestion, the sugar and starchy food not being assimilated by the digestive organs. In Bright's disease the albumen is not properly assimilated.

While consumption and dyspepsia are twin diseases, and it is beyond question that dyspepsia makes a fertile soil for the seeds of consumption.

But the trouble has been to find a remedy that could be depended upon to cure dyspepsia, as it is notoriously obstinate and difficult to cure.

This has been the question which has puzzled physicians and dyspeptics alike, until the question was solved three years ago by the appearance of a new dysyepsia cure in the medical world known as Staurt's Dyspepsia Tablets, which it was claimed was as a certain, reliable cure for every form of stomach trouble.

Physicians, however, would not accept such statements without first giving the new remedy many tests and careful observing results.

For three years the remedy has been thoroughly tested in every section of the country and with surprising and satisfactory results.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be honestly claimed to be a specific, a radical lasting cure for indigestion in the various forms of acid dyspepsia or sour stomach, gas or wind on stomach, too much bile, undue fullness or pressure after eating and similar symptoms resulting from disordered digestion. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were not placed before the public until this three years' trial left no doubt as to their value and they have recently been placed in the trade and can be found on sale at all druggists at the nominal price of 50 cents per package.

No extravagant claims are made for the remedy. It will not cure rheumatism, pneumonia, typhoid fever nor anything but just what it is claimed to cure and that is every form of stomach trouble.

No dieting is necessary, good wholesome food and plenty of it and you may rest assured that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest it.

Druggists claim for it that it is a pleasure to recommend it to dyspeptics, because it gives such universal satisfaction.

THE PRESIDENT IS FIRM

Alger Says McKinley Must Take One Step at a Time.

AWAITING SPAIN'S REPLY

Secretary of War Says It May Be Said That There Need Be No Fear That the President Will Not Take the Next Step—Has Not Lost a Moment In Presenting Not Only the Maine Incident, but the Whole Situation to Spain—Country Can Well Afford to Wait Result of Negotiation.

Washington, March 30.—With the close of the Cabinet meeting yesterday Secretary Alger gave out the following statement:

"So far from their being any difference of opinion among the members of the Cabinet they are all in hearty accord with the President, and have been without a single exception. When he read to them his message on the Maine there was not a dissenting voice nor a suggestion of change.

"It commanded the approval of every member. How could the President have said more? He gave Congress the report at once and stated that he had forwarded it to Spain and is awaiting her reply.

"He must take one step at a time. It may be said further that there need be no fear that he will not take the next. He has not lost a moment in presenting not only the Maine incident, but the whole situation to Spain. The country can well afford to await the result of the negotiations which will be promptly made known, whatever the result."

THE NEGOTIATIONS PROCEEDING.

All That Is Necessary Is That Congress Have Patience.

Washington, March 30.—The President is waiting developments in the negotiations between this country and Spain. That negotiations are rapidly going on and that correspondence by cable is passing between Washington and Madrid is acknowledged, but the Cabinet and the officials positively refuse to talk about the nature of this correspondence, claiming that to do so would defeat the ends in view.

What a Cabinet Officer Says.

The situation so far as the administration is concerned is able explained by a Cabinet officer, who says:

"The President is not yielding. When the record is made up and Congress and the public find out what has been going on, they will see that the President has conducted himself in all this matter as an American and a wise, judicious man. It will show him to be on top, and will completely rout those men who are now trying to force an issue and will show how hastily and unwisely they are acting.

"The tone of some of the papers, so far as the news columns go, greatly surprise me, for there is nothing in the situation to warrant the conclusions that the President is yielding in his policy of peace for the island or compromising the country in any way. My lips are sealed as to the negotiations, but I can say that everything seems now favorable to an honorable settlement of the whole matter. One should judge that if Spain is offering an armistice, she is only preparing the way for something further. If it was told what the President was saying to Spain before Spain answered, or what Spain was saying to the United States before the President could formulate his reply, there would be an end to all negotiations at once, and the solution of the whole question which is now in sight would be lost forever.

Vigorous and Determined.

"There need be no fear that the President is liable to take the wrong course for he is as vigorous and determined in his policy as he has been from the beginning. Now is the time for patience and waiting, not for disturbance or ill-timed action by Congress. The recognition of independence of the Cubans now can be of little avail to those people. It can accomplish nothing. The President knows that, and therefore is not advising any such action. There are no differences in the Cabinet. They are all of one accord with the President, supporting him heartily in all his course, and one and all are certain that when the end comes the people of the United States will find that the President has been right all the way through, and has not for a single instant forgotten his duty to the country and its honor."

The President has told a number of Senators that he would not send his message to Congress until he had positive information from Spain as to her course, and was able to lay the whole matter intelligently before the legislative body.

All he asked in return was that Congress would be conservative and patient, and that in due time he was sure, when able to report, that they would support him in all he had done.

Last Hope for Peace.

After the Cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon a Cabinet officer said: "The President has made the last presentation to Spain for peace. It remains for that country to determine whether she will accept peace or war. The Cabinet waited for several hours hoping for some word from Spain. The President and Cabinet are determined, however, to make every effort for peace.

"If Congress will not wait until the means is employed to secure peace and declares war, the responsibility rests upon that body. If it waits, the President will carry out his policy and in the end Congress will approve of it."

HOUSE MAY REBEL.

Movement on Foot to Bring the Proposition for Intervention in Cuba to a Vote.

Washington, March 30.—A very determined movement is on foot among the members of the House, in which prominent men of both parties are cooperating, to bring a proposition for intervention in Cuba to a vote, if necessary, by arbitrarily overruling the Chair. The situation is being thoroughly canvassed, particularly on the Republican side, as the Democratic leaders have given assurances of their co-operation as soon as the Republicans who are engineering the scheme are ready.

Mr. Hull, chairman of the Military Committee, is at the head of the movement on the Republican side, and it is asserted with great positiveness that it has decided strength. It was the intention of these members to attach a resolution for the relief of the Cubans, which it was expected the President would ask for in a message yesterday, and it is claimed that it was the fear of this which induced the President to change his plans and withhold the message. If the message is not sent in the programme is to present a resolution, and if it is ruled out of order to overturn the ruling of the Chair.

A very prominent member, who is using all his energies to promote the foregoing programme, says that there will be no delay beyond Thursday.

The members of Congress are certainly not in favor of any further delay in regard to Cuba. The sentiment is strongly against any further trial of autonomy or an armistice for even a month. It was the fear that the President would submit such a proposition which caused the revolt among the members.

But assurances are made that the President's policy does not embrace either of these. He wants immediate peace in Cuba, and his negotiations are all to this end, and he feels confident that Spain is going much further in concessions than is generally supposed. But she must be given time. The President realizes, however, that Congress is in an ugly mood, and that it will not stand much delay; therefore, at the Cabinet meeting yesterday it was decided to prepare the message for Congress, so that it can be submitted to-day.

War Resolution in the House.

Washington, March 30.—Representative Marsh of Illinois, chairman of the House Committee on Militia, yesterday introduced a joint resolution declaring war between the Government of Spain and its dependencies and the United States and her Territories. It is as follows:

"That war be, and the same is, hereby declared to exist between the Government of Spain and her dependencies and the United States and her territories, and that the President of the United States is hereby authorized to use the whole land and naval force of the United States, including the militia and the naval militia thereof, to carry the same into effect."

Situation Has Not Changed.

Washington, March 30.—Secretary of State Sherman when asked last night as to the status of the present crisis, said:

"I see no marked change in the condition of affairs. The President is earnestly laboring to preserve peace. No one, I think, wants war if it can be avoided. The President is anxious to accomplish a common end through peaceful measures if he can. In his efforts in this direction he deserves, and I have no doubt will receive, the aid of every patriotic person in the land."

Losing Faith in President's Policy.

Washington, March 30.—The feeling in Washington last night was that Congress was losing faith in the President's policy for the pacification of Cuba by means of diplomacy, and was slipping away from his control. The administration is said to be cognizant of the attitude of Congress and apprehensive that it may take some action which will cause a rupture between the United States and Spain before the pending negotiations are concluded.

It is declared that all the propositions looking to a peaceful settlement have come from the United States, and that Spain has failed to reply.

Minister Woodford held a conference in Madrid yesterday afternoon with Premier Sagasta and other members of the Spanish Cabinet upon the result of which it was said would depend the reply of Spain to the Minister's note demanding an immediate cessation of hostilities in Cuba. As far as can be learned, the outcome of the conference was unknown to the administration at a late hour last night.

AMBASSADOR WHITE DENIES IT.

Canard Quoted Him as Giving Emperor William's Opinion.

Berlin, Germany, March 30.—The United States Ambassador, Mr. Andrew D. White, denies the statements attributed to him by the Sunday Special, of London. This paper quoted its Berlin correspondent as saying he had learned from Mr. White that Emperor William had expressed the belief that the Maine was not destroyed from the outside, and that in order to study the cause of the disaster, Emperor William had commanded a naval committee, presided over by Admiral von Knorr, to study a series of exhaustive reports which His Majesty had caused to be cabled from Havana, and that the committee had concluded that the explosion was due to the overheating of the coal bkuners of the battleship, and not the explosion of a torpedo or submarine mine. Mr. White, according to this correspondent, said he was of the same view as the committee, and this the Ambassador also denies.

People's Bank Affairs.

Philadelphia, March 30.—President McManes, of the People's Bank, has issued a sworn statement, in which he agrees to personally make good all losses of the bank's proceeds. He says an examination reveals that the bank is insolvent, due to unauthorized and unlawful transactions between the dead cashier, John S. Hopkins, and Richard F. Loper. The amount of these transactions will reach about $700,000. It is understood that the capital stock of the bank, which is $150,000, will be paid in by the stockholders. In addition President McManes consents to the appointment of Thomas W. Barlow as temporary receiver for the bank.

Wreckers Near Reading.

Reading, Pa., March 30.—For the fifth time in four weeks, an attempt was made yesterday to wreck a passenger train on the Reading & Columbia Railroad at a point about eight miles above Reading, by wedging large steel plates between the rails at a siding. In each case the obstructions were discovered by men walking along the tracks before the arrival of the train intended for destruction.

REPUBLICANS REVOLT

Hold a Caucus, at Which a Policy of Delay Was Denounced.

SPAIN MUST EVACUATE

The Recognition of Cuba is Not Enough—Fear That Even if the Independence of the Island is Delayed the War Will Continue.

Washington, March 30.—A meeting was held last night in the room of the House Committee on Agriculture at the Capitol which was attended by forty-six Republican representatives in Congress. Hopkins of Illinois was elected chairman and Joy of Missouri secretary of the meeting.

It was agreed by those present that they would not permit any settlement of the Cuban question which did not involve absolute independence for Cuba.

The faction thus organized expects to attract a membership of at least 100 Republicans by to-day. They will invoke the assistance of the Democrats in the policy adopted at last night's meeting. While not expressed in words, the purpose of the organization is to wrest control of the Cuban question in the House from hands that might oppose this policy.

Representative Hopkins, as chairman, briefly stated the objects of the meeting. He indicated his disappointment that the President's message carried no line of definite responsive policy towards Spain, and said he did not believe further delay should be brooked. He thought, however, that the administration might have another day or two within which to act, and, failing to do so, that Congress should take the matter into its own hands independently and at once. He favored action looking to Cuban independence, but made no specific suggestions as to the method of its accomplishment.

Speeches were made by Representatives Tawney of Missouri, Belknap and Marsh of Illinois, Pierce of Missouri, Hicks of Pennsylvania, Brumm of Pennsylvania, Mann of Illinois, Joy of Missouri, Kirkpatrick of Pennsylvania, Arnold of Pennsylvania, and Lawrence of Massachusetts.

Their speeches were largely on the same lines. It was pointed out that while it was fit that the Executive should be given, as he had been, a reasonable time within which to advise, it was exclusively the function of Congress to declare war, commence hostilities, or take action of that character. The remarks made carried the view that a mere recognition of belligerency was not to be considered, for it would not of itself bring a cessation of hostilities, and that intervention or independence only would be considered. Some more conservatively put it, "to intervene, and if necessary support such action by the prompt dispatch of our land and naval forces to Cuba."

After some vigorous speeches denunciatory of Spain it was decided to defer action until 5 o'clock this afternoon. The present programme is to present to Speaker Reed evidence that a large majority favors the step, and the Cuban sympathizers believe that once convinced of the numbers enlisted in its support he will yield to them.

The following were among those who participated in the conference: Messrs. Hopkins, Mann, Warner, White, Reeves, Belknap, Marsh and Lorimer of Illinois; Tawney, of Minnesota; Spaulding, William Alden Smith, Samuel W. Smith, Mesick, Sheldon, Corliss and Hamilton, of Michigan; Mercer, of Nebraska; White, of North Carolina; Mudd, of Maryland; Sulloway, of New Hampshire; Knox and Lawrence, of Massachusetts; Johnson, of North Dakota; Brownlow, of Tennessee; Colson, of Kentucky; Brown, of Ohio; Ellis, of Oregon; Joy and Pierce, of Missouri; and Brumm, Hicks, Kirkpatrick and Arnold of Pennsylvania.

BANK CASHIER ARRESTED.

Philadelphia Bank Officer Charged with Making False Reports.

Philadelphia, March 30.—Following the collapse of the Guarantors' Finance Company and the suspension of the People's Bank, there came last night another bank sensation in the arrest on a warrant issued by United States District Attorney Beck of Cashier William W. Steele of the Chestnut Street National Bank, of which institution the late William M. Singerly was President. The bank closed its doors in the latter part of December, and Bank Examiner Hardt immediately took charge.

He began an investigation, the result of which was the warrant for the cashier's arrest. Steele is charged with making false reports and statements to the Controller of the Currency. The affidavit alleges on March 9, 1897, he reported $3,899.77 overdrafts, whereas the amount was $42,528.18; again on May 11, $18,004.19, when it should have been $90,714.67. July 23 overdrafts reported amounted to $4,442.11, and Oct. 5, $3,552.34, when the former really was $98,252.19 and the latter over $100,000.

Spain's Ministers Consider Their Reply.

Madrid, March 30.—Intense interest centred here all day yesterday on the note sent by President McKinley to Sagasta. It is confidently asserted that the note which Minister Woodford has presented is practically a repetition of the one presented in September, which, in the interests of humanity, asked Spain for an immediate cessation of hostilities in Cuba.

Spain's reply was debated in the conference held at the Presidency yesterday afternoon, at which Senor Sagasta the Premier; Senor Gullon, the Foreign Minister; Senor Moret, the Minister for the Colonies, and General Woodford were present.

"Both Governments are absolutely agreed as to the desirability of a settlement," said a diplomat to your correspondent, "but the tension is so great between the two that it would only take a little further strain to split the hawser."

Miss Davenport is Better.

Chicago, March 30.—Fanny Davenport is said by her physicians still to be in a precarious condition, although the chances of her recovery are better to-day.

ELIZABETH'S CITY ELECTION.

Elizabeth—always a hot bed of politics—promises a Mayoralty campaign this spring of decided activity, but with an elimination of the disgraceful issues that entered into the election two years ago, when the present Mayor Rankin was accused of pretty nearly all the crimes on the calendar. Two years ago ex-Senator Marsh was the Democratic candidate against Mayor Rankin, but the latter won by a small majority. Mr. Rankin entered into the campaign for the express purpose of receiving a vindication at the polls, and he received it. Thus satisfied he will not be a candidate again this year. But Mr. Marsh will; in fact, is. His chances of election are much improved this spring. Though the Republican opponent has not yet been selected, it will probably be Dr. Mack. Mr. Marsh, however, has not a united party at his back. John T. Dunn is opposed to his election, and has made charges against his record in the Senate.

FIGHTING FOR TRADING STAMPS.

The men vitally interested in the profits accruing from the trading stamp business are not going to give up to the Legislative edict without taking advantage of every effort that will possibly prevent the suppression of the traffic. Tomorrow they will appeal to Governor Voorhees, at a hearing arranged for that purpose, to veto the bill. Prominent lawyers will bring their best argumentive talent to influence the Governor to nullify the measure passed by the Legislature. If the Governor lends only a deaf ear to their appeals, then the matter will be carried to the highest courts of the State in the endeavor to have the law declared unconstitutional. And meanwhile the thifty housewives will watch the contest with great interest and hopes of the same brand that fill the trading stamp promoters.

CITY OF THE FUTURE.

One of those rare souls who yet believe it possible to abolish poverty and make the human race healthy, handsome, comfortable and well behaved has a practicable plan for relieving the overcrowding of cities, equalizing the value of property therein and at the same time obtaining municipal revenues so ample that a low rate of taxation will be all that is needed.

Suppose, says the planner of the city of the future, that Chicago should purchase as a municipal investment a 10,000 acre tract of cheap land lying within 20 miles of its center. Such lands there are at a very moderate price in the vicinity of all the large cities. Then let the municipal authorities divide the tract into city blocks and lots, putting streets through with sewers, gas, water and electric lights and convenient and pretty parks at frequent intervals.

The next step would be for the city to connect this new suburb by rapid transit with the heart of the old town, whether by steam or electric road, in the way that was most effective. Let then the city lease to a householder for a small sum, say $15 to $25 a year, one of the newly laid out town lots. The householder could erect upon the ground such building as he pleased, and all the rent it would cost him would be the moderate sum paid to the city in perpetuo for use of the land. Or if the householder were too poor to build his own home, as is usually the case with the city dweller, landlords could easily lease the ground from the city and erect single houses or flat buildings thereon and rent them to tenants precisely as such buildings are now rented. There would be a difference, however. The rent to the tenant would be cheaper because the city owned the ground.

Another admirable point in the scheme is that transportation on the city's rapid transit line should be free. This would do away with the vast expense of ticket sellers, gates and collectors and facilitate getting upon and off trains rapidly. The sum charged for the rent of building sites could easily be made to cover the expenses of the rapid transit road.

The result would be that a new and finer Chicago would quickly be built adjoining the old one. Everybody would want to live in it. The enormously inflated values of properties in the thickly populated part of the city would decline rapidly. The aims of reformers like Henry George would be peaceably and quietly attained without doing wrong to anybody.

THE MONITOR TERROR.

The Terror, one of the six modern monitors in the navy, is a double turreted affair armed with four mammoth 10-inch guns and eight small guns. She cost $3,178,046, is about 260 feet long and steams 12 knots an hour.

The performances in New York bay of the submarine torpedo boat invented by Mr. Holland have been so remarkable as to attract general attention. The vessel is lowered or raised in the water by means of metal ballast and compressed air. It is designed to move along under water till it comes beneath a ship. Then a torpedo is launched, and so soon as the small under sea craft is from 60 to 100 feet away the torpedo is exploded and the ship is blown into fragments as the Maine was in Havana harbor. The boat at the surface of the water looks like a raft. A flat surface and low turret are all that are visible. By manipulation the bow of the boat begins to sink in water, then the middle, then the stern, until the raft entirely disappears from sight. A release of compressed air under the water enables the crew to breathe comfortably, and they are supplied with electric lights. The inventor of the Holland submarine torpedo boat will exhibit it to the governments of Europe as a commercial enterprise.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The prompt response of New Jersey's Naval Reserves to the call of the National Government is a fair indication of the spirit that animates Jerseymen at this crisis. Without making much noise they are ready to do their share in any emergency that may arise.—New York Tribune.

Mayor Fisk, of Plainfield, gives to every creed its day of rest—to every sect its Sunday—by permitting the local stores to do business decorously on everybody else's Sunday. If this act doesn't please the most discriminating individual he has the privilledge of moving out of the "Eldorado of the East."—New York Press.

PASSING COMMENT.

Last Saturday an article was published in The Daily Press signed "Boroughite." The article stated that if some amateur should take a photograph of the street west of Mayor Wilson's house he would probably secure one of the prizes offered by the League of American Wheelmen for bad roads. William N. Panborn, of the borough, states that the above-named street is not a public highway, having never been accepted by the North Plainfield Township Committee. It is simply private property.

Gov. Voorhees and other members of the board of pardons visited the State Prison Monday last and they questioned a number of the prisoners who had applied for pardons, paroles or investigations of sentence, so as to be able to act in reference to the many cases before the board.

Among the number question was a man who had been in the United States service, and who appeared to be bright, active and very anxious to get out.

Gov. Voorhees talked to this man and was quite impressed with his statement of his case, and finally suggested to him that the navy was in need of men to man one of its war vessels, and asked him if he would enlist in case he were pardoned.

"Aboard what vessel," asked the prisoner.

"The monitor Montauk," said the Governor. "They wish to take her from the League Island navy yard to Portland, Me. Would you like to go?"

"No sir," exclaimed the prisoner. "I know what the Montauk is. I'd rather stay in State Prison."

Not many moons ago a prominent Plainfielder, who is known in this community as a very good church man, wandered along West Thirty-fourth street in New York and guided his footsteps into Koster & Bial's Music Hall. Not the least of this visitation of a ubiquitious turn was that he was accompanied by his bright five-year-old son. The father bought two of the best orchestra seats, and was soon ensconsed in the luxuriously upholstered chair, his promising youth beside him. In due time the curtain arose and the pater-familias was deeply engaged in watching the coy pirouting of a dancing soubrette. The young son divided his interest between the stage and waiters who were serving frothy beer and cocktails to the sporting portion of the audience. After watching the bibulous frequenters of the music hall for several minutes, the young son's countenance lighted up and turning to his papa, he tugged at his coat sleeve vigorously—the lad found it necessary to do this because his sire was deeply-engaged in watching the short-skirted performer—and said in a piping voice heard all over that part of the house:

"Papa, papa, wouldn't it be nice if we had these kind of seats and things in our church?"

The father turned all the colors of the rainbow and said in a soothing voice, "Hush, hush, my son."

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

One of the brightest and best child actresses that has appeared in this city in some time, announced on the programme as "Little Jessamine," appeared in the role of "Editha," in the play of "The Burglar" at Music Hall last night. Her work was a revelation as compared with the parrot-like efforts of the average child actress. She reads her lines with a clearness, intelligence and understanding that would put many older professionals to shame. The play itself was evolved from the child story by Mrs. Burnett, entitled "Editha's Burglar." It is a pretty story, filled with heart interest, and there are few dry eyes in the audience during the burglar scene of the third act. Mr. Power as "Bill Lewis," was clever and carried much of the sympathy of the audience. Mr. Chace was pleasing in a light comedy role, while the remainder of the company rendered their parts in a careful and painstaking manner. Manager Woods lays much stress on the performance of the "Charity Ball," which is scheduled for this evening. The play is the best of the modern society dramas and the efforts of Mr. Waite to present this class of plays at popular prices is worthy of encouragement. It is claimed for this production that there is nothing cheap about it but the price, and comparisons are invited to former productions made in this city of the same play at the regular prices. "Men and Women," another of the Belasco and DeMille society plays, is the bill for the matinee tomorrow.

—A consecration service was held last evening at Warren chapel under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society.

BUT FOUR DAYS REMAIN

IN WHICH TO BE CURED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES BY THE FAMOUS BOY PHENOMENON

Whose Remarkable Record of Phenomenal Cures Has Never Been Equalled by Medical Science.

The large crowds which have besieged the office of the Boy Phenomenon, at the Revere House, the past 2 weeks, has again made it necessary for him to prolong his stay, and while he will remain here 2 weeks longer, no more new cases will be taken after Monday, April 4 as the following weeks will be entirely devoted to treating those who go under treatment between now and Monday night.

The great crowds of our very best citizens who have been compelled to give up their prejudices after witnessing some of his cures, have taken treatment, been cured and are now giving him their names to use in testimonials, shows the positive demand that is made on his time in Plainfield. If ever a great and good gift of nature was called to the fullest exercise, then surely he has performed enough cures among those who had been called incurable to fully justify those citizens for their efforts in inducing him to come here.

A new way to heal the sick without drugging the patient with medicine is what the invalid public is anxiously looking for, and it has been left to comparatively a young man to prove there is a much better way.

The Boy Phenomenon is the youngest living Magnetist who publicly demonstrates the great power that Vital Magnetism has over disease, when properly developed and scientifically applied.

Magnetism is one of nature's wonderful forces, governed by natural laws. There is nothing miraculous or supernatural about it, although people unacquainted with its power, after witnessing some of his wonderful cures, declare it must be so, but he himself claims no such power.

Nature simply bestowed a superabundance of the vital magnetic fluid in his veins, by the aid of which he has been enabled to effect the most startling cures in an incredibly short space of time in nearly every large city in this country.

Being compelled to remain in Plainfield some weeks longer, and having discharged so many as permanently cured, he therefore is enabled to reduce the price of treatment to within the reach of all. Those who have previously called are especially invited to return and take advantage of the reduced prices before April 4.

ARE BORN, NOT MADE.

TRAINER JOHN SPLAN SAYS THIS OF ALL GREAT HORSES.

Rarus a Case in View—Noted Reinsman on the First Trotter to Beat 2:14—Goldsmith Maid the Only One to Beat Him More Than One Race.

Rarus, the first trotter to beat 2:14, was the grandest animal I ever saw and was proof positive to me that great horses are born and not made. His owner was a plain Long Island farmer, who had probably never been inside a racetrack or ridden a three-minute gait in his life. His sire and dam were both owned and worked on the farm, where Rarus was foaled. Neither of them had any pretension to speed in any way above an ordinary road horse—neither one of them ever produced anything of note excepting Rarus, although both of them were mated in after years with animals of superior trotting, breeding, and action; yet the produce of such mating was never above the ordinary.

With this evidence before us, we can easily believe that Rarus owed his greatness to nothing but his creator. In formation he was not what was considered in his day a typical American trotting horse. He was sixteen hands high with a very light body for a horse of his size—the best of legs, a beautiful tail and carried it well; his head was plain but denoted great character and will power. In disposition he was a horse of great courage and bravery—a good deal of temper, but absolutely controllable at all times. He was a horse with a robust constitution, was a great feeder, and what the English horsemen call "a good doer;" that is, he could take a great deal of work in training—a very important matter in a racehorse.

In July, 1876, his owner, Mr. R. B. Conklin, placed him in my hands to train and drive him in his races for our mutual benefit—a contract which turned out very satisfactory to us both, as I won with him in stakes and purses over $100,000 and sold him at the end of his turf career for $36,000—the highest price ever paid for a trotting gelding.

His turf career while in my hands might be called a succession of victories. In the four years that I had him we trotted him all over the country, over all kinds of tracks, and made two trips to California. He started against all the best horses, and in all those busy years was never beaten but by four different horses. Goldsmith Maid, who was champion and had been for some time, with a record of 2:14, was the only horse that ever beat him more than one race. The first three races he trotted against her she beat him, but from that time on he was always able to beat her and her best record.

In his ownership he was one of the most fortunate horses I ever saw. Although his breeder, Mr. R. B. Conklin, was not a sportingman in any sense of the word and had no practical knowledge in regard to a trotter, he had what might be called a great deal of old-fashioned "horse sense." He realized the fact that Rarus was a great horse and gave him what he considered the best opportunity to develop and show his greatness. He treated his horse and trainer with the greatest consideration and had the satisfaction of bringing his plans to a successful issue financially and otherwise. Mr. Conklin sold him to Mr. Robert Bonner, who is probably the best-known man in the world in connection with the American trotter, and to him more than any other man is due the credit of having placed the trotter in the front rank of all the horse families in the country—John Splan, in Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Ill-Humor and Peevishness.

There is hope in every man who can yet believe in purity; but he whose vice is so confirmed that he does not credit the existence of virtue, is irreclaimable.

No disease of the mind can more fatally disable it from benevolence, the chief duty of social beings, than ill-humour and peevishness; for though it breaks not in paroxysms of outrage, nor bursts into clamour, turbulence and bloodshed, it wears out happiness by slow corrosion, and small injuries incessantly repeated. It may be considered as the canker of life, that destroys its vigour, and checks its improvement, that creeps on with hourly depredations, and taints and vitiates what it cannot consume.

Where He Made the Profit.

Mr. Isaacs—I sells you dot coat at a grad sacrifice.

Customer—But you say that of all your goods. How do you make a living?

Mr. Isaacs—Mein frent, I makes a small profit on de paper and string.—New York Weekly.

GLADSTONE'S GRANDCHILD.

The Little Miss Who Has an Aversion to Shoes and Stockings.

Miss Dorothy Drew is the youngest member of the Gladstone family. This young lady while yet a baby gave evidence of a spirit of detrmination worthy of her famous origin. Long before she could frame words to express her convictions Miss Drew in an emphatic way proclaimed war against such conventional embarrassments to freedom as shoes and stockings.

DOROTHY DREW.

The "Grand Old Man," her maternal grandfather, took sides with the baby, and Miss Dorothy Drew, now a little miss of four or five, has, all unaware of her right to fame, become a confirmed Kneippist.

Her Majesty the Queen, having heard many interesting and amusing stories concerning Miss Dorothy Drew, bade the young lady to bestow the honor of a visit from her small but distinctive personage upon her sovereign. Subjects of Her Majesty are not given to excuses.m

When Miss Dorothy Drew was made aware of the tremendous honor bestowed upon her she informed her family that she would accept Her Majesty's invitation provided she might go barefooted.

It required the united efforts of the entire Gladstone contingent, including the doting grandpapa, to induce Miss Drew to wear shoes to the Court of St. James.

The picture reproduced is taken from the celebrated oil portrait by Burne-Jones. Little Miss Drew is shown arrayed as she would have gone to court if permitted.

Makes a Bullet Out of a Nickel.

A Union Pacific engineer has a fashion of making unique pocket pieces for his friends. He runs a passenger engine West, and when oiling, previous to a run, he drops a nickel five-cent piece into the brass oilcup on the crosshead of the piston rod. His run is 300 miles. When he reaches his destination he unscrews the top of the oilcup and takes the nickel out. It has been metamorphosed into a curious little button with an evenly turned rim, within which, on the inside, is the countersunk head of liberty, divested of her stars, and on the other side the V and the wreath. The edge of the crown is as perfect as if it had been pounded on an anvil by an expert silversmith.

Sometimes a nickel is left in the cup during the round trip, or 600 miles. When taken out it is a nickel bullet, a perfect polished sphere. Who discovered this unique method of turning the edges of a nickel is not known, but many engineers know of it. Chicago Tribune.

The Advantage of a Change.

"Last Winter I courted a girl who couldn't get enough of oysters. In the Summer time she wanted ice cream. In the Fall I changed girls."

"And was it an advantageous change?"

"Yes. The present possessor of my heart doesn't care for oysters in any form. Her fad is lectures. That girl wants to attend a lecture every blessed night."

"Rather expensive, eh?"

"Not at all. Our town doesn't average a lecture a month."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

What He Was There For.

"Where do you get your papers, my little man?"

"Oh, I buy 'em of Johnny Green."

"And who is Johnny Green?"

"He's a newsboy—he buys 'em in the Times alley."

"What do you pay him for them?"

"Ficents."

"What do you sell them for?"

"Ficents."

"You don't make anything at that?"

"Nope."

"Then what do you sell them for?"

"Oh, just to get to holler."—Denver Times.

Two Successful Brothers.

"Ever hear of John Billingsboy? Great student at college. Worked hard. Graduated at the head of his class. Finest Latin scholar the institution ever turned out. Well, he's professor in the college now, and getting along splendidly. Has $1,800 a year."

"Never heard of him before. What of him?"

"Nothing, only he is a brother of that famous little horse jockey, Billingsboy, who weighs 98 pounds and makes $100 a day."—Chicago Tribune.

Two Ounces of Blood Daily

Are added to your veins by taking one of Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids with each meal three times daily. This is the only natural iron medicine known. It is the natural iron extracted from fresh bullocks' blood.

We do no miracles; all we do is to cure people and give them two ounces of new blood daily when they take Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids. By enriching the blood they restore its natural iron or Hæmoglobin to it; it cures all the chronic blood diseases, among which may be mentioned anæmia, or paleness; chlorosis, or green sickness; palpitation, rickets, scrofula, consumption or tuberculosis, indigestion, amennorhœa, pains in the head or back, and all monthly irregularities. Physicians will tell you that this is the only medicine in the world that can do this, and if they are up-to-date they prescribe them in all such cases.

HIRED TO DO HIS WORRYING.

Man from Missouri Made a Bargain, for It Cost Only $6.

He looked tired and worn out. His eyes were red and swollen from weeping, and his sunken cheeks plainly told of ceaseless care and worry. A man not more than 40 years of age, he looked every bit of 60. He had been arrested last week and arraigned before Justice Martin charged with disorderly conduct.

"I don't know what to make of him, your Honor," said the officer who made the arrest. "He is hanging about the banks in the central part of the city and seems to fear some impending doom. He refused to give his name, and as a last resort I thought I would bring him before you."

"Your Honor, sir," meekly spoke the prisoner. "I am worried, just as the officer says. The frequency of bank troubles and loan associatin best-ups, coupled with the stringency of the money market, have well-nigh driven me crazy. I have done everything possible to overcome my trepidation and nervousness, but my recent losses have too strong a hold upon me. Several days I met a man who seemed to appreciate my condition. He informed me that he would ease my mind and cause me to recover my buoyant spirits. Eagerly I grasped his outstretched hand. He directed me to a place on South Clark street where I was told I would meet a person known as Professor Ongwee who was the sole owner and proprietor of a worry office."

"A What?"

"A 'worry' office, sir. I met the professor, your Honor, and on looking over his price list learned that he would worry for me for $2 a day in ordinary cases or $6 a day in serious or extraordinary cases. In desperate ones he would sweat blood for $25. I paid him $6. For the time being I felt comparatively at ease. I left his office as happy and chipper as a soul-lilting bird. Not a care on my mind, and I really felt sorry for the poor professor who was doing all my worrying so cheaply. But it lasted but a short time, and I soon fell back into the old trough of despair, and perhaps have acted a bit strange of late. I don't blame the officer, sir, but if I could get back to my people perhaps I could forget."

THE MAN WHO WORRIED.

On his promise to leave the city the prisoner, who was afterward learned to be addicted to opium, was allowed to go to his home, which was said to be in Warrensburg, Mo.—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE FATHER'S SHOT.

How England's Postmaster General, Henry Fawcet, Lost His Eyes.

The fur seal is a land animal of perverted tastes, who, living at sea, has had his paws changed into flippers very like the long black kid gloves of a woman. His heart, liver and kidneys are exactly the same as those of a sheep, and just as good to eat, but his flesh, although just like fat mutton to look at, is rank and distasteful from his habit of eating fish. The whole package is put up in a parcel of thick white fat to keep the body warm, while from the skin grows a heavy crop of beautiful grown fur, protected with large flat oil-bearing hairs, making a glossy surface which slides through the water without friction. Perfectly fearless, overflowing with fun, a perfect little athlete, marvelously strong, the fur seal is the most delightful of all wild creatures. But although they live at sea the seals, being heavily clothed in fat, skin, fur and hair, find the temperate latitudes much too warm for comfort during the summer months. Since they cannot shed their garments like ourselves, they migrate to a sub-arctic climate, gathering in immense multitudes where there are fisheries to support them. Their ration is fifty pounds of cod every day, which for a creature the size of a sheep is considerable.

When the little pups appear their mothers go a-fishing to feed them, and likewise teach them to swim. The pups howl with fright when first thrown into the water. Now, outside the seal city, with its regular streets and harness, assemble the young bachelors not yet grown enough for love or war. Here man steps in, driving the poor bachelors away inland to be clubbed for their precious fur.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Discipline.

"Do you have strict discipline in your office?"

"Yes; nobody dares to laugh unless the boss does."—Chicago Record.

Little Clarence—"Pa, is there really honor among thieves?" Mr. Callipers—"No, my son; thieves are just as bad as other people."—Puck.

WORK ON A WARSHIP

CONSTANT SUCCESSION OF DRILLS AND EXERCISES FOR THE MEN.

The Rapid-Fire Gun Practice—The "Ram Drill" and Its Uses—Ordered Below in a Hurry—Working the Big Guns Keeps Them Constantly Engaged.

Whether at sea or in port, there is no lack of daily work for the crews of the big warships. For the sake of discipline and training, as well as for the physical exercise, the men are kept jumping from one drill to another at a lively rate. A morning spent on board the monitor Puritan, lying at the Cob Dock, in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, is exceedingly interesting. No sooner does the active, hardy-looking Jack Tars finish one exercise than they are promptly summoned, by the clear notes of the bugle, to another of an entirely different character.

To an outsider the most striking and effective of them all is the drill with the rapid-firing guns, which include three and six pounders. At a bugle signal the men take their places, four or five to each gun. The first move is the sighting and taking aim. One man screws the gun into the desired position by rapidly revolving a wheel which turns it, and the others meanwhile are getting out the ammunition and opening the breech. At the order, Drill cartridges—load!" a dummy cartridge of the same size as the real one is slipped into the open breech. This is then closed and locked by means of a crank. The firing, which is accomplished by the pulling of a string or the pressing of a button, is not practised, of course, in the ordinary drill.

The aiming and loading are repeated frequently, and the men who have been attached to the ship for some time work with the utmost swiftness and precision. The drill cartridges are kept in cases near the guns, so as to be handy, but in an actual engagement all ammunition has to be passed up from below through the ammunition-hoists. These are tubes extending from the hold, where the ammunition is stored, up to the gundeck. The gunners' mates and their assistants below feed the cartridges into the hoists, and they are carried up by means of an endless belt, which is kept constantly in motion.

Several times the gun practice is interrupted by a sudden signal ordering all the men below. This has to be done occasionally in an engagement, when the enemy's fire is too heavy, to prevent unnecessary loss of life. The men disappear below and reappear on deck again in marvelously quick time.

In connection with the firing of these guns the "ram drill" is practised. At a signal every man drops where he stands into a posture in which his body is extended at nearly full length, but does not touch the deck, being supported upon the tips of the fingers and the tips of the toes. It is put into practical use when the ship is about to ram or be rammed by another vessel. If the men did not put themselves into a position of this sort, which lessens the shock as much as possible, they would be thrown down, and would be far more likely to be injured.

Another point of value in the ram drill lies in the fact that it is one more thing done according to orders and with a purpose. As such it strengthens the general morale. A promiscuous tumbling, on the other hand, such as would ensue if the men tried to stand during the collision, would certainly not have this effect. The ram drill is practised on only a few ships of the navy.

In an engagement the decks are cleared of everything which is not absolutely necessary as fighting material. Such articles, which include chests and all superfluous woodwork, even the lifeboats in the davits, are all indicated by the word "Overboard" painted upon them. They are cut away ruthlessly and thrown over the side at the beginning of the action.

From the deck nothing can be seen of the actual working of the four great twelve-inch guns. The machinery by which they are operated is all within the two revolving turrets from which each pair projects. The two guns are fixed parallel to each other, and as the turret turns they point successively in all directions. They act independently of each other in only one respect—it is possible to raise or depress the aim of one without moving its mate. From the outside the drill with them appears a slow process, for the guns cannot be moved rapidly.

Among the other exercises of the morning is a few minutes' rifle drill and the "settingup" drill—a series of calisthenic movements designed to improve the men's bearing and keep them agile. There are, in all, eighteen different exercises prescribed in the regulations. They consist of the best recognized movements for developing all the muscles of body and limbs and for strengthening the breathing apparatus.—New York Tribune.

A Beautiful Idea of the Indians.

Among the superstitutions of the Seneca Indians was one most beautiful one: When a young maiden died they imprisoned a young bird until it first began to try its powers of song, and then, loading it with caresses and messages, they loosed its bonds over her grave, in the belief that it would not fold its wing nor close its eye until it had flown to the spirit-land and delivered its precious burden of affection to the loved and lost one.—St. Nicholas.

POPULAR AT THE TARGETS.

Sporting Life Tells all About Tom Keller and Dutchy Smith.

The Sporting Life has issued a spring number in which several pages are devoted to short sketches of the principal men in the world of trap-shooters. Among them are the two well-known sportsmen of this city, Tom Kellar and Charles Smith. The sketches are as follows:

"Is there a sportsman in the whole land who does not know Tom Keller, of Plainfield, N. J., or at least has not heard about him? He has visited the gun trade and shot in tournaments in almost every city of prominence in the United States and for years has been a shining light in trap-shooting circles. For several years he was connected with the United States Cartridge Company, and acted as advance agent when that concern sent a party of trap-shooters around the country. In some places the natives thought the whole show had arrived when Tom Keller struck the town. He is always ready with a good story, a bit of news, or a joke on some brother sportsman. A shoot without his presence is like a dance without the music. As a trap shot he is one of the erratic kind—often making a fine score and again hardly able to get into last money. He was one of a team of three to win the State championship on targets at the New Jersey State shoot last October, and during that meeting made a very good showing. He is Eastern representative of the Peters Cartridge Company and the King Powder Company, of Cincinnati. He has a host of friends, and among riflemen as well as scatter gun cranks he is a great favorite. It is due in a great measure to his popularity that the goods which he represents have been so well introduced among many rifle and gun clubs of the east. In business circles he is considered a great hustler, never allowing an opportunity to pass which will gain a foothold for his goods. He is secretary of the New Jersey State Sportsmen's Association, and stands high in the Masonic Order.

"Trap shooters always enjoy the company of good-natured "Dutchy" Smith, of Plainfield. He is a whole-souled fellow with an abundance of wit and good humor, which entertains shooters when not at the score, and makes an otherwise dull tournament one of joy and delight. When he appears in his role of "injured innocense" all applaud in a vociferous manner. Mr. Smith is a very clever shot and enjoys trap shooting as a sport. He was one of the three men that won the team target championship of New Jersey last fall. He won the Tristate expert championship a few years ago by defeating J. L. Brewer. Sometimes he attends a tournament wearing a huge leather medal, which bears the inscription: "Champion Sour Krout Eater of the World." This he exhibits with great pride. As a German comedian he is a success, and his letters to friends are often read within a week after being received.

"Here is a sample of Dutchy's letters on trap shooting: 'I tink drap Shutin is von ov de grates Sport vot effer gum toun de pike, i luf du shute at piggins an prake glay pigens. Yu puts in von Toller in de Pot an ven yu proke 9 out den, de skore onley has ate ted Pirds, zo yue gets pack dirty zevu sens—butt phat is it, eny vay butt Sphort—Eye dink de pest piggen shott is Zeth Clovur, alsoe Shon Rotaker of philamapelfia—he gilled den Strate vonce—Shack barker ov detroits is also gute Shoter, zoe es dom Keler an pawl Wize phat lif in detroits, i is won ov de pest Awl roun schots in Nu jerzy mine zelf.'

AROUND THE BASES.

The candidates for the team of the Plainfield High School will continue their practice through vacation. Manager Edwards has called practice Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of this week.

The preparation of the Crescent Oval as a baseball field will start as soon as the weather permits. All the field is to be ploughed up and then leveled. The diamond will be smooth clay while the outfield will be of turf.

Interest in baseball at Somerville, this spring, is not as great as it might be. Since the failure of the Somersets of that city to do anything, the game has lost favor with the people and it seems probable that Somerville will not be represented by any strong team this season.

It seems probable that after all the little misunderstanding between the managements of the Plainfield High School and Leal's School team will be settled satisfactorily to all and a game played between the two teams. The arangements have not been denfinitely made for the game, but it will only be a question of a few days.

It does not seem likely that the Cresents will arrange games with any of the neighboring teams. Most of the teams of the vicinity are far outclassed by the Crescents as they will play this season and the rest would not be satisfied to play here and not receive a return game. It is the intention of Manager Mumford to play every Saturday afternoon at home.

Arthur W. Lederer shows his ability as a baseball player to be the only one of the younger men who has been able to hold his position on the Crescent team since its advent into the best semi professional ranks. Lederer will play in the field this year. He is quick and alert and may be counted on as a sure catch. At second base, last year, he played a steady game that was to be commended. Vroom, the new second baseman, is a better batter than Lederer, but it remains to be seen whether he can cover his ground to any better advantage.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The Union, Somerset and Middlesex Counties Game Association has arranged with C. W. Johnson, of Cranford, for a supply of the ring-neck pheasants which are to be liberated on the association's leased lands.

There is an excellent prospect that the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. will have a track and field team this year to represent it in the various athletic contests about this part of the State. It will probably number eight men. No selections have yet been made, but Physical Director Heywood considers that he has some very valuable material in hand that can successfully compete in a number of the standard events.

THE NAVAL RESERVES.

Instructions Received by Those Detailed for Duty.

Great interest is taken in Plainfield in the movements of the Naval Reserves. The following instructions were given those detailed for duty on the monitor Montauk:

"You will hold youself in readiness for twenty-four hours. When called you will report here with two suits of clothing, extra underwear and shoes, leggins, cap, pea coat and any articles of toilet you may require. Your seaman's bag will be furnished here. If there is any man who feels that he cannot report when called he had better say so now. When you are summoned get here as quickly as you can. Get your clothes ready at once and bring them here to the ship and place them in your lockers."

Trenton, March 30.—Commander Irving this afternoon personally filed with Adjutant-General Stryker the names of the officers and men of the detail selected to take the Montauk to Portland. Commander Irving said the detail was fully prepared for orders to proceed to the ship and that the journey will begin within four hours after the Navy Department has transmitted the command. He said that the only embarrasing part of the work of getting the detail completed was caused by the anxiety of nearly every member of the battalian to go. The voyage will probably begin, the Commander said, before the close of this week. The course will be through Hell Gate, up the Sound and along the New England coast.

The adjutant-General has informed Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt that the detail of the Batalion of the East is ready for the service required

—A meeting of the Borough Council will be held Friday evening.

CRISIS AT HAND.

Radical Action Is Expected Today.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Washington, March 30—Today's developments in Congress and the actions of the Executive branch of the Government in the next twenty four hours may determine whether the Cuban question will be settled by war or by diplomacy.

The President is confronted by the necessity of immediately adopting a definite policy or losing control of the situation and turning it over to Congress.

Mr. McKinley is still absolutely confident that if Congress and the people will have patience for a little while longer he can arrange a settlement with Spain on a basis of peace with honor.

He thinks, moreover, that such a settlement is at hand. Minister Woodford has so informed him, and a despatch from him is awaited with great anxiety. The President hoped to receive it last night, but it did not come. It is looked for any moment.

Secretary John Addison Porter announced at the White House this morning that the President would not send a message to Congress today.

Mischevious Boys.

A gang of boys entered the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday afternoon and played havoc with everything in sight. They turned the water on the boiler, started the electric motor, which is used to pump air for the organ. Everything movable was turned upside down, and thus it was found by the sexton. The matter was reported to the police. The boys are known and will be arrested in a day or two.

Illustrated Lecture.

The illustrated lecture given in Monroe Avenue church last evening by Prof. Smith, of New York, was enjoyed by an audience that was thoroughly appreciative. The views described an expedition to Bristish Columbia, and were very fine.

PURSES ARE TOUCHED, DELINQUENTS AROUSED

Findings of Martin Act Commissioners to Be Fought.

TORRENT OF CRITICISM NOW.

REPORT IS PREPARED ELABORATELY AND WITH GREAT DETAIL.

Back Taxes Foot Up From $1 to Over $12,000, Which Are Held Against Many Prominent Citizens—Third and Fourth Wards Have Less Delinquents Than the Others—How the Report is Made Up—Commissioners Admit That in Some Cases Hardships Accompany the Findings.

There was considerable food for deliberation in the report that the Martin Act Commissioners filed at the County Clerk's office Tuesday afternoon. The report has long been looked forward to with much interest as it had a direct influence on the pocket books of a large number of the property owners of the city. Altogether, it was somewhat of a surprise even though the interested ones had some idea that the report would be rather startling in its announcements.

It was no easy task to wade through the voluminous evidence that affected the many cases that came before the Commissioners. It was an occasion for the display of nice judgment and knowledge of property values on the part of the Commissioners. Of course the Commissioners brought a torrent of criticisms on the results of their labors as soon as they were announced. That was to be expected. Even the Commissioners admit, as was stated in an interview published in yesterday's Daily Press, that in some cases the present adjustment of the back taxes work hardships.

The two volumes of the report make very interesting reading to those who are well acquainted with the properties and property owners about the city. The back taxes are for all variety of sums from $1 up to several thousand. The names of many prominent and well-known citizens appear on the list, a few of whom were mentioned yesterday.

The results of the Commissioners in each case are entered on tabular sheets, prepared for the purpose. First was given the street on which it was located, then the number of the lot or lots, then the name of the owner and finally the amount of the taxes due as decided by the Commissioners. Another column was devoted to the assessments, if any, as adjusted by the Commissioners. The total of taxes and assessments was entered in the last column.

While the number of properties affected in the Third and Fourth wards was about the same as in the First and Second, the amount of back taxes due was decidedly less. The First and Second wards make up what the Commissioners have classified as the East section. Besides the back taxes, the Commissioners have also passed on the assessments as decided on by the Watchung avenue commissioners. It was in this way that the Y. M. C. A. was affected to the amount of $50.

The section of property in the vicinity of Sandford avenue was all affected by the report and taxes were credited to the city from all the properties there. Some of the heaviest of the amounts are laid on properties in the First ward.

By far the greatest sufferer under the decision of the Commissioners is James E. Martine and the estate of which he is the principal legatee. His back taxes amount to nearly one-fifth of the entire amount. His property is almost all in the Second ward.

It is the general opinion of all who have followed the trouble since the enforcement of the Martin Act that the report will meet with strenuous opposition on the part of most of the property owners affected. They made a strong fight when the Commissioners were first appointed, but many of them hoped that the Commissioners would reduce all but the most flagrant cases to almost nothing.

Craig A. Marsh was asked by a Press reporter this morning whether he owed the city any back taxes. Mr. Marsh replied that every bill for taxes ever assessed against him in Plainfield, or anywhere else, was promptly paid when it fell due. He had purchased, he said, several pieces of property in the last few years upon which former owners seemed to have left some taxes unpaid. When the court shall have confirmed the action of the Martin Act Commissioners, these taxes will become liens on the property and will be paid. They

BLOCKS THE TROLLEY

CHANCERY OPINION CREATED SURPRISE IN SOMERVILLE.

Inasmuch as the Opposing Companies are Now United the Chancellor Will be Asked to Dissolve the Injunction.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, March 31.—The opinion filed by Chancellor McGill at Trenton continuing the injuction secured under the name of the inhabitants of Bridgewater Township restraining the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company from constructing its trolley line between this place and Bound Brook has created surprise in Somerville. The injunction was first obtained at the instigation of the New Brunswick Traction Company.

The injunction which tied up the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company between Somerville and Bound Brook was granted by Chancellor McGill, in November, 1897. Since that time the company and its rival, the Brunswick Traction Company, have joined hands and the five inhabitants of Bridgewater Township have withdrawn their prayer for an injunction.

The Bridgewater Township Committee, also complainants in the application for an injunction, have since granted the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company a new and amended franchise over the Bridgewater turnpike and have received payment for the first year.

Alvah A. Clark, counsel for the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, said last night that these facts would be immediately laid before the Chancellor, and in view of the changed situation he was assured that the Chancellor would at once dissolve the injunction and the road would be in operation in a week.

WITHDREW THE APPLICATION.

Legal Requirements Not Fulfilled on Trolley Ordinance in Cranford.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Cranford, March 31.—The Cranford Township Committee at its meeting last night appointed former Prosecutor Frederick C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, township attorney to succeed Frank Bergen whose term has expired.

Mr. Gaddis of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company asked and received permission to withdraw the pending application for a franchise as the company had ascertained that the ordinance if passed might be invalid, on account of the failure of the town committee to consider the ordinance at every meeting since the application was filed, as required by law. A new application covering the same route was presented by Mr. Gaddis aud a public hearing was directed to be held April 18th.

The telephone ordinance was laid on the table until the next meeting.

RUNNING NIGHT AND DAY.

Pond Tool Works Pushing Their Government Contracts.

There is no cessation in the roar and grind of the machinery at the Pond Machine Tool Works this week. Everything is now running twenty-four hours out of the twenty-four in order to complete the gun carriages that are now being constructed for the United States Government. The day gang is working fourteen hours for the present, while a night gang has been put on to work ten hours. As the long hours mean more pay, there is general satisfaction among all the workmen. The work is going on very rapidly.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office from North Plainfield: Sigler VanFleet et ux to Wm. J. DeMeza, North Plainfield, $1; Alma C. Randolph and husband to Emily H. Cory, North Plainfield, $1.

Important Church Meeting.

A very important meeting is to be held in the First Church of Christ tomorrow evening. A meeting of vital interest effecting the future welfare of the church is to be considered. Every officer of the church and every member should be present.

Where the Breezes Blow.

The members of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church are considering the plan of holding a meeting this spring on the piazza of the Mountain Park Inn.

Posting Collector's Books.

The work of posting Collector Spencer's books up to the first of the borough year is about complete, and a report may be made at the meeting of the Council tomorrow evening.

Week of Prayer.

Next week will be observed as the week of prayer at the Congregational church. Meetings will be held Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

CAN THE CITY ORDAIN WHEN TIME IS SACRED

Delicate Sabbath Observance Point Raised By Dr. Lewis.

A RELIGIOUS ORDINANCE.

ACTS PROHIBITED ARE COMMENDABLE ON ALL DAYS EXCEPT SUNDAY.

Dr. Lewis Says the Present Ordinance Creates Crime and Inflicts Punishment on the Basis of a Legally Sacred Period of Time—The Carbone Jury Believes That He Who Sabbatizes "For Revenue Only" is Guilty of a Crime—Twelve Men Determine that Carbone's Act Didn't Have Pure Motive.

In the present discussion of the Sabbath observance question the following from the pen of Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., is very opportune:

Since the city of Plainfield has announced its determination to stop all Sunday selling, it will be well to get a correct idea of the situation. Carbone's case is the first under the ordinance, and as it is to go to the Supreme Court for review, much may be involved. The ordinance under consideration is eminently religious. It makes two, or more, distinct religious tests. It forbids nothing which is criminal, in itself. The acts prohibited are necessary and commendable on all days except Sunday. According to the ordinance, when the clock strikes 12 and Sunday comes into legal existence, time is sacred and selling is criminal. Thus, certain particular twenty-four hours in each week are sancitified by the city of Plainfield, and "secular" business becomes a crime. When the clock strikes 12, twenty-four hours later, time is no longer sacred, and men may resume seculiar affairs without fear of punishment. The ordinance creates crime and inflicts punishment on the basis of a legally sacred period of time.

Next, it creates an arbitrary standard of righteousness by declaring that the man who chooses to regard another twenty-four hours in each week as sacred time, for reasons other than the ordinance, shall not be a criminal. It goes farther still, as interpreted by the city and by a jury of our best citizens. This interpretation declares that he who Sabbatizes at a time not designated by the city must do so from pure religious motives, and not "for revenue only." Carbone is now condemned because he is not religious enough to be a legal Sabbath keeper. But since the ordinance has not been fully tested no accurate standard of religiousness has been laid down by the city, and that duty is forced upon the jury. It is a delicate duty. It is in evidence that Carbone has outwardly Sabbatized according to law. But twelve men have determined that he has not added to this outward observance, sufficient pureness of motive to be entitled to exemption under the religious provisions of the ordinance. If it was criminal for Carbone to sell gum on Sunday because he had not observed the previous day religiously, what of the men who purchased gum in the ordinary "seculiar" manner without having Sabbatized in any form on the previous day? A. H. Lewis.

FAITHFUL BAPTIST DEAD.

Miss Nancy Connett Passes Away After a Long Illness.

The death of Miss Nancy Connett, who resided at the corner of Second and New streets for a number of years, occurred yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock after an illness of six months with angina pectoris, complicated with broncho-pneumania. Miss Connett was born at Short Hills and has lived in this vicinity all her life, where she was well known and respected. She was a member of the First Baptist church and was a faithful attendant. Two sisters and three brothers survive her. The sisters are Mrs. I. D. Ten-Eyck and Mrs. Lewis C. Putnam, while the brothers are I. A. Connett, of Watchung avenue, Frazee Connett and Henry Connett, of Illinois. The funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at the house.

Miss Stella Brooks was tendered a very enjoyable surprise party at her home on Duer street, last evening, by a number of her friends. The evening was spent in playing games. Refreshments were served.

EXTRA!

DEAD BODY OF BABY FOUND IN CEDAR BROOK

The Discovery Made at 3 o'Clock This Afternoon and Policemen Investigating.

The dead body of a young baby was found this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the shallow water of Cedar brook, just above Richmond street.

Roundsman Flynn was notified of the find and immediately went to the scene.

The child appears to be about three days old.

Chief Grant and the Roundsman are now engaged in the effort to secure some clew as to how the child came there.

It is supposed that it was of illegitimate birth and the mother, or those who wanted to shield her, left it in the shallow water.

The baby was probably dead when left there.

County Physician Westcott will be notified of the finding of the body and will come to this city and hold an inquest over the remains.

The remains will be sent to Casey's morgue.

The body was covered with but little clothing, and of the cheapest sort.

ADMITTED SALE OF CIDER

FORTUNIO MARGENTINO UNEXPECTEDLY PLEADED GUILTY.

Appeared Before Judge DeMeza This Morning and Changed His Plea—Severely Lectured and Then Fined $20

An unexpected denouement of the police raid of Fortunio Margentino's fruit store at 128 Park avenue as an alleged "cider joint" was made evident this morning. It was generally supposed that Margentino would make a determined fight. Several times the case has been adjourned. At last it was set down for trial tomorrow morning. This morning Margentino and his lawyer, Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, requested an audience before the City Judge. As a result the case against Margentino came to a speedy end.

Then Margentino made a solemn pledge to the court that, hereafter, he would never sell a glass of cider on a Sunday. He also promised to be a good boy. The Judge delivered a lecture of several minutes duration in which he warned the prisoner that any offence in the future would have serious results for Margentino. The sentence was suspended on the prisoner.

THE SITUATION.

How Matters in the National Crisis Are Now Standing.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Washington, March 31.—In a few words, here is the situation at noon today.

1. Spain must decide whether she will grant McKinley's demand for evacuation and independence by Friday morning.

II. If she shall accept, the President will be able to preserve peace and the Maine affair will be settled by diplomacy. The one disturbing feature to her yet is the fact that Cuba will insist on the evacuation of the Island before she grants an armistice.

III. If Spain says no to the ultimatum of the United States, Congress will promptly pass a resolution for armed intervention.

IV. Last night it was known that President McKinley was not sanguine that Spain would accept.

V. This morning it was announced hat Spain would allow the reconcentrados to go to the homes, and agree to feed them until the first crop was raised.

At Washington the war party was inclined to think that this meant an effort to gain time, but the peace party considers it an indication that Spain will yield to the demands of the United States.

Lost a $125 Watch.

Herbert Moore, of Grove street, lost a gold watch worth $125 while riding a bicycle between this city and Westfield yesterday afternoon.

BIG MAN OF THE NAVY BORN IN PLAINFIELD

The Honorable Record of Lieutenant Commander McLean.

SERVED HAWAIIAN PEOPLE.

ALSO ENLISTED IN CHINESE NAVY AND WAS IN BATTLE OF YAHI.

Disappointed in Securing an Appointment as a Cadet at Annapolis He Enlisted and Worked His Way to His Present Position by Sheer Force of Character and Ability—He is Now in Charge of the Portsmouth and is Instructing the Jersey Naval Reserve in a Thorough and Satisfactory Manner

Just at this time when so much attention is being called to the New Jersey Naval Reserves it will be of interest to Plainfielders to know that she is not only furnishing a small part of this important adjunct to the regular navy, but one of the most important officers—Robert H. McLean, who was a few days ago commissioned lieutenant commander of the Reserves.

It is not generally known that Lieutenant McLean was born in Plainfield. Such is the fact, however, and the event occurred about forty-seven years ago. At an early age he moved with his folks to Brooklyn, where he pursued his studies in the public schools. He graduated and received the appointment as alternate at the Naval Academy, Annapolis. He was disappointed, however, for the appointment was filled by a companion. This did not discourage him and he returned to Brooklyn with the determination to try again.

With this purpose in view he enlisted in the regular navy as an apprentice, and very singularly he served his first year on the Portsmouth, the vessel that is now in the service for New Jersey. He did good work, and at the close of the year, by competitive examination, he secured the coveted prize, and won an appointment as cadet midshipman. He was graduated at Annapolis first in his class and that record was maintained through the two years he served in the navy. He received the commission of ensign, master and lieutenant, and he served in all parts of the world. When on shore duty he was in the Ordnance Department, and as before he served with honor and distinction.

As promotion is slow in the navy, he was lured away by the Hawaian officials, and as colonel of infantry he commanded their forces. During the incarcenation of "Queen Lil" she was directly under his charge.

After he left the Hawaian Army he enlisted in the Chinese Navy and took part in the battle of Yahi. Here he also served with great honor.

The New Jersey Reserves are certainly to be congratulated in having such an officer so thoroughly educated in his profession, as a companion, instructor and a leader. No doubt he will be the means of bringing the boys up to the highest posible standard. Lieut. McLean being a native of New Jersey he would, of course, prefer to sail with her sons and be counted as one of them. Since he joined the New Jersey boys he has been living on board of the Portsmouth and has been looking after some important detail work. The movements of this body will, no doubt, be watched with considerable interest by Plainfielders who have more than a common interest in the crew.

U. S. GRANT CLUB DELEGATES.

Combined Sociability With the Political Business.

The U. S. Grant Republican Club of the borough met last evening in Spencer's Hall on Somerset street for the purpose of selecting delegates to go to Trenton today to attend the convention of the State Republican League. It was a little late when the meeting was called to order by Robert M. Fountain, chairman, but in the meantime those present enjoyed several vocal solos by John Goodwin, banjo selections by Willard Force and clog dancing by "Hank" Southard. This programme was rendered while the crowd was gathering. Mr. Fountain called the meeting to order and W. C. Force was selected as secretary. The following delegates were chosen: Capt. W. C. Smith, R. M. Fountain, Andrew Lutkins, Thomas Doud and H. N. Spencer.

$10,000 DAMAGE SUIT.

PLAINFIELD CYCLIST ASK TO PAY PAY FOR CHILD'S INJURIES.

William Pittis Struck Christian Hansen's Three-Year-Old Boy and Injured Him So He Had to be Sent to a Hospital

An adventure awheel that William Pittis, of Central avenue, passed through one day last August, has now led to a suit for $10,000 that has been brought against that young man. The suit is brought by Christian Hansen, now of Scotch Plains, whose three-year-old son was injured by a collision with Pittis' wheel.

Young Pittis is an enthusiastic wheelman. He traveled all through the adjacent country on his silent steed, visiting the neighboring towns. One Thursday he traversed the narrow sidepath that leads to Samptown. Now at that time Hansen and his family occupied a house that is included in that little settlement. This same day that Pittis traveled that way on his wheel, Hansen, his wife and little boy were walking along the narrow path. Pittis came up behind them.

According to the story of the Hansens, Pittis did not warn them of his approach by either ringing his bell or speaking. Instead, they claim, he attempted to pass them. At any rate Pittis did start to pass them and struck the little lad with his front wheel, knocking him under the bicycle. Pittis claims that the boy walked directly into the path of the approaching wheel. The lad was thrown down and broke his leg, or in the vernacular of the physicians, he sustained a fracture of the femur.

The lad was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital where he remained for six weeks for treatment. Then he was taken home. His parents now claim that he has not had the full use of his leg since the accident. Hence the suit.

The couple consulted their lawyer, Harry C. Runyon, of this city. Pope & Runyon, of this city, have now brought suit in the Supreme Court of the State for $10,000 damages as attorneys of record. Murphy & Blatz will represent the defendent in the suit.

SMALL BOY AND A REVOLVER.

Miss Pyne Warned the Lad to be Careful and She Was Shot.

Isaac Randolph, a boy of tender years, will be very careful in the future how he handles a revolver, for he had an experience yesterday afternoon that taught him a lesson.

Randolph lives at 540 West Fourth street with a Mrs. Mason. At the same place a Miss Mary Pyne resides. The latter was standing in the yard, while young Randolph was not far off playing with a revolver. Miss Pyne warned the boy to be careful for the weapon might go off and cause trouble. She had scarcely spoken the above words when the revolver was discharged. The weapon was aimed at Miss Pyne and the bullet struck her in the hip on the left side. The piece of lead entered the flesh and thus far has not been found.

Miss Pyne was taken to the hospital where she is now under treatment. Her condition is not thought to be serious.

WEDDED BY THE SEA.

Miss Ida Johnson Becomes Mrs. George W. Monfort at Avon-by-the-Sea.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Avon-by-the-Sea, March 31st.—Very quietly, today, occurred the marriage of Miss Ida Johnson and George W. Monfort, both of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed at the home of Rev. Mr. Armstrong, pastor of the Baptist church, of this place, who was formerly the pastor of the bride at South Plainfield. After the marriage the happy couple left for a short wedding trip.

On their return they will reside at Plainfield, where Mr. Monfort conducts a successful business in photography. The bride is the daughter of Peter Johnson, of South Plainfield. Both are well-known in Plainfield and they have the best wishes of all for a successful and happy married life.

A Public Discussion.

A meeting of the Board of Management of the Board of Trade was held last evening in the Board rooms. It was decided to open up the next regular meeting of the Board, which is to be held April 20th, to the public for a discussion of the present building ordinance of this city and the present fire limits here. It was also decided to throw open the rooms to the public on some day to be selected later to discuss the report of the Martin Act Commissioners and take action on it.

WORDS TO HELP CUBA CUT OFF BY BISHOP.

But They Will Take Form in Resolutions Regularly.

MINISTER FELT FOR CUBA.

BISHOP WANTED TO AVOID ACTION ON MOMENTARY IMPULSE.

A Formal Motion to Appoint the Committee to Draft the Resolutions was Made—Officers of the Conference, Which is Being Held in Calvary Church, One of the Oldest in the Country—Appointments Announced Next Tuesday—Plainfielders were Present—Dr. John F Dodd Re-elected Secretary.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

East Orange, March 31.—Speeches and resolutions on the Cuban question were headed off at the evening session of the Newark M. E. Conference, which began its annual meeting in Calvary church, East Orange, yesterday, by the suggestion of Bishop Goodsell, President of the conference. He said that to avoid taking any action on momentary impulse all resolutions on the subject should be referred to a committee of nine members. This committee will be appointed today.

Rev. Dr. Dunn took the floor and moved the appointment of a committee of nine to prepare resolutions on "the strained relations of the United States and Spain, a condition brought about by the murder of women and children, starvation and neglect"—. Mr. Dunn was cut short by the Bishop, who remarked that the formal motion to appoint the committee was all that was necessary at this time.

Dr. John F. Dodd was re elected secretary and Rev. Charles W. McCormick was made assistant secretary. Rev. John A. Gutteridge was elected statistical secretary and named as his assistants Rev. E. N. Cra to, Rev. S. K. Doolittle, Rev. W. C. Timbrell and Rev. S. B. D. Prickett. Rev. A. M. Palmer was re-elected treasurer, and Revs. J. A. Cole and J. W. Ryder were chosen assistants.

Members of the conference who have died during the year were reported as follows: Rev. John Atkinson, Rev. Charles S. Colt, Rev. Dr. Michael J. Cramer, Rev. John Crawford, Rev. Joseph H. Knowles, Rev. William J. Kaetley, Rev. John I. Morrow, Rev. John A. Monroe, Rev. Solomon Parsons and Rev. Isaac N. VanSant.

The conference will continue in session until Tuesday, when the appointments will be announced by the Bishop. The present conference is the first ever held in the Oranges. Calvary church, where the session is in progress, is one of the largest and most influential Methodist churches in the country.

Those from Plainfield who are attending the conference include Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, Rev. H. J. Johnston, Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, Rev. George Angleman, Rev. Dr. Carroll and James McGee. Many laymen are also in attendance.

REPUBLICANS AT TRENTON.

League Clubs to be Addressed by Prominent Members of the Party.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 31.—The convention of the Republican League clubs will convene in this city this morning. Plainfield is represented here by a delegation of six, composed of Former Assemblyman W. R. Codington, J. B. Coward, W. H. Drayton, Ernest R. Ackerman, Former Councilman William A. Westphal and Judge William Newcorn. This evening a dinner will be given to Attorney-General John W. Griggs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Councilman F. H. Andrews and Assemblyman Roger F. Murray will be present from Plainfield.

A Fine Display for Easter.

The finest display of medium and high grade shoes that Doane & Edsall have ever shown can now be seen in their show window. The latest spring styles have been received, and marked at very low figures. The manufacturers have maintained the high grade of quality and workmenship in all their lines including the very lowest in price. Take a look into their window and you will see something really nice.

Art Store to Open.

J. H. Leggett has rented the store in the Y. M. C. A. building, now occupied by Flower's art store, to William G. Klein, of East Orange. Mr. Klein will open the Plainfield Art Store there Saturday. He will have a large variety of mouldings for pictures and will make a specialty of re-gilding frames and mirrors.

CUBA IN THE HOUSE

Speaker Reed Sustained by a Vote of 179 to 139.

SENATE DEFERS ACTION

Democratic Leader Bailey Introduced in the House a Resolution for the Recognition of Cuban Independence—It Was Presented as a Matter of Privilege.

Washington, March 31.—Never since the Cuban situation became critical did President McKinley more completely show his power and the control he has over the situation than yesterday.

It was feared that the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations at its meeting yesterday morning would agree to report favorably one or another of the resolutions introduced Tuesday, calling for armed intervention in Cuba. These fears were not realized.

Several of the members of the committee saw the President yesterday They assured the other members of the committee that the Cuban situation would come to a head in a very few days and that the President would keep Congress informed of the progress of events. The utmost limit of time placed for settlement was stated to be one week.

The committee thereupon unanimously acceded to President McKinley's wishes and decided not to precipitate matters at this dangerous time. The matter was thereupon referred to a sub-committee.

An even more significant victory was won by the President and Speaker Reed in the House.

Encouraged by the conference held Tuesday night by the radical Republican Congressmen, Mr. Bailey, the Democratic leader, attempted to present, as a matter of privilege, a resolution recognizing the independence of Cuba. Mr. Boutelle raised a point of order, which was sustained by the Speaker. Mr. Bailey thereupon appealed from the decision of the chair.

If this appeal had been decided by the House against Mr. Reed it would have broken the absolute control of the situation heretofore held by the Speaker. It was an extremely dangerous and critical point.

The outcome, however, showed that Mr. Reed, despite all predictions to the contrary, was able to maintain his position. Mr. Hitt and other Republicans who had been active in Tuesday night's conference spoke in favor of sustaining the speaker, and thus was done by a vote of 179 to 139.

Thus was the legislative crisis averted and thus the President was given time to carry out his plans.

The Cuban resolution introduced by Mr. Bailey reads as follows: "Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives, that the heroic struggle of the Cuban people against the force of arms and the horrors of famine has shown them worthy to be free; and,

"Second. The United States hereby recognizes the republic of Cuba as a free and independent State."

COMMITTEE FAILS TO AGREE.

Cuban Resolutions Referred to Sub-Committee—Members Say Settlement Is Near at Hand.

Washington, March 31.—The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations failed yesterday to reach an egreement on any of the Cuban resolutions before it, but referred the whole matter to a sub-committee and then adjourned.

The members of the Foreign Relations Committee who saw the President assured the other members that the Cuban situation will come to a head in a very few days and that Congress would be informed.

The utmost limit placed upon the time when the matter will be settled one way or another was stated as one week, while others thought that it might be within forty-eight hours.

The committee considered that it would be unwise in view of the negotiations now in progress to precipitate maters at this time. It was said that Congress need not take action to hurry the administration in view of what had been learned by members. The Senate passed a resolution on motion of Chairman Davis of the Foreign Relations Committee allowing them to sit during the sessions of the Senate.

The only distinctive feature of the meeting was the general disposition manifested to wait for a reasonable time upon the President, and the sentiment in this direction was quite unanimous upon the part of the members.

While the present disposition of the committee is to oblige the President it was made evident that a large majority of the committee favor vigorous action as soon as it is made evident that the diplomatic resources have been exhausted.

What form this action will take was not discussed at the meeting of the committee, no preference being shown for any of the four resolutions before the committee.

The committee resumed its session at 2 o'clock and in a few minutes afterward Commander Bradford, Chief of the Bureau of Equipment, Navy Department, reached the committee room. His coming was evidently not unexpected for he was admitted immediately. The supposition is that he was called in for the purpose of informing the committee of the exact condition of the navy.

On emerging from the committee room the Senators were reticent and grave. Each shook his head and declined to say what conclusion had been reached.

A prominent Republican Senator made this statement as to the situation:

"The Senate is going to give the administration another day in which to bring about a peaceful conclusion. The President wants the responsibility for war to rest with Spain, and, acting upon his wishes, the Senate committee will hold off a few hours longer, under the pretext that the resolutions must go through the ordinary channels."

Keep in mind that Scott's Emulsion contains the hypophosphites.

These alone make it of great value for all affections of the nervous system.

It also contains glycerine, a most valuable, soothing and healing agent. Then there is the cod-liver oil, acknowledged by all physicians as the best remedy for poor blood and loss in weight.

These three great remedial agents blended into a creamy Emulsion, make a remarkable tissue builder.

WAR PREPARATIONS.

First Movement of Infantry to the Coast—Call for Naval Recruits for a Year.

Washington, March 31.—While negotiations go on looking to a peaceful solution of the Cuban problem, if that be possible, the War and Navy Departments keep up their extraordinary activity in preparation for war. The most important moves are not publicly announced; but such things as the transfer of troops, the purchase of new vessels and the strengthening of coast defenses gives an idea of how this country is preparing itself against an emergency.

Orders have been issued for the first movement of infantry to the coast. The Twenty-fifth, now scattered at forts in Montana will go to the Dry Tortugas and Key West, Old Fort Jefferson, at the Tortugas, being manned by six out of the eight companies in the regiment. The Twenty-fifth is a negro regiment.

It was chosen because its men were thought to be able better than white men to endure the hot climate of a semi-tropical post. The Navy Department's wish that the fortifications at the Tortugas be strengthened will be carried out, and a large coaling station will be established there.

Troops at Fort Reno, Oklahoma, are getting ready for transfer to the East. They have forwarded their Gatling and Hotchkiss guns and all the available field pieces at the fort.

It is reported from Louisville that the owners of steamboats plying on the Ohio River have been notified by the War Department that they may be required to carry supplies in the event of war. The Department several weeks ago gathered information as to the number and capacity of river boats.

The work of increasing the efficiency of various coast defense fortifications by giving them connection with one another by telegraph and telephone is to be hurried. Plans have been made for connecting forts in Massachusetts, on the Potomac and along the Gulf coast. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, with several officers of the Ordnance Bureau, is in Cleveland to inspect the big single piece coast defense gun which is making under the direction of Dr. Gatling.

A thing which naval officers regard as evidence that a crisis is at hand is an order issued to navy yards to enlist men for one year. A clause in the order reads: Men enlisting for one year can be discharged at their own request before the expiration of that period, providing an emergency does not arise in the meantime."

The naval vessels which are undergoing repairs are being hurried to completion. The old single turret monitors at the League Island Navy Yard are almost ready to be manned by detachments of naval militia. They will help defend the coast. The cruisers Minneapolis and Columbia are practically ready to join the flying squadron at Hampton Roads.

It is said that the Government has succeeded in buying from a private firm in France a fully equipped torpedo boat destroyer, which will sail very soon from Havre.

The Navy Department is taking steps to increase its force of officers. The cadets who are just about to complete the usual two years' cruise following graduation will not get any shore leave. They will be examined at the Naval Academy, and if they meet the requirements will at once be sent to sea again as acting ensigns on any ships where vacancies can be found for them.

The United States Arsenal at Springfield, Mass., is working day and night, just as it did in war times, turning out rifles. A third shift of men is to be taken on soon, and the shops will then be able to turn out 360 rifles a day.

Bumper Wheat Crop.

Chicago, March 31.—Special dispatches from the surplus-producing States of the winter wheat territory indicate that a bumper crop is coming. In a general way, the dispatches confirm the condition of increased acreage as a natural result of the relatively high prices realized for wheat as compared with corn or oats. A majority of the reports tell of splendid outlook and the complaints of the growing crop are few.

Queen Regent Seeks Help.

London, March 31.—The Vienna correspondent of the Standard says: "The Queen Regent of Spain, I learn, wrote personally last week to Emperor Francis Joseph and other sovereigns, including Emperor Nicholas, requesting not precisely intervention, but the exercise of such influence at Washington as might conduce to a peaceful settlement without injury to Spain's dignity and vital interests."

Want Swallow as a Candidate.

Harrisburg Pa. March 31.—The Rev. Dr. S. C. Swallow, the Prohibitionist, was yesterday afternoon tendered a nomination for Governor by a committee of citizens from Philadelphia, headed by Herbert Welch. He said: "If the people shall request my candidacy in sufficiently large numbers as to indicate the sentiment generally I shall interpret the vox populi as the vox dei."

DEPEW'S NEW PLACE.

Big Changes in the Management of the Vanderbilt Lines.

New York, March 31.—President Chauncey M. Depew authorizes the following statement:

"To carry out the policy of greater unity of administration in the Vanderbilt system of railroads, the following adjustment of the management will be made after the annual election of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, which occurs on the 20th of April. Chauncey M. Depew will retire from the presidency of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, and become chairman of the Boards of Directors of the

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

New York Central & Hudson River, the Lake Shore, the New York, Chicago & St. Louis, and the Michigan Central Railroad.

"S. R. Calloway will succeed Mr. Depew as president of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad. Mr. Ledyard will remain president of the Michigan Central.

"Cornelius Vanderbilt will retire from the chairmanship of the New York Central and of the Michigan Central, and William K. Vanderbilt from the chairmanship of the Lake Shore and of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis companies. They will remain in the directories and continue their interest in the property with which their name has been so long identified, and in which they have such large investments."

This official announcement marks another step in W. K. Vanderbilt's plan to amalgamate what are known as the Vanderbilt railroads into one great transcontinental system.

The management of the railroad company made an explanatory statement. It is asserted that the Vanderbilt railroads had been handicapped in competition with through lines like the Pennsylvania, the Erie, and the Baltimore and Ohio. The Vanderbilt lines had no other union than a controlling ownership in the stock by the same persons. Officially they had no connection with each other, except that Cornelius Vanderbilt, being the chairman of the Board of Directors of the New York Central and the Michigan Central, and William K. Vanderbilt of the Lake Shore and Nickel Plate boards, the harmonious and cordial relations of the two brothers made a bond of union.

The same traffic relations will be maintained by each road. The only difference is that the lines are placed on an equality in the Traffic Association and in the competition for through business.

HARRISON MAY ENTER THE CABINET

Said to Be Booked for Secretary of State.

Washington, March 31.—There is talk in Washington to-day that President McKinley has offered the Secretaryship of State to ex-President Harrison.

For the last month rumors of Secretary Sherman's prospective retirement from the Cabinet have been rife, but have been denied. The belief is growing now, however, that the time is not far distant when Mr. Sherman will step out of the Cabinet. Mr. Sherman has been of practically no value to the President in the pending crisis. Assistant Secretary Day being his mainstay, and Mr. Sherman has figured as Secretary of State simply in a nominal capacity.

Secretary Sherman refuses to discuss the subject of his reported retirement from the Cabinet. Representative Henry U. Johnson of Indiana, a close friend of ex-President Harrison, said last night that he had heard the appointment of Mr. Harrison discussed, but could not confirm the report.

Senator Davis of Minnesota, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, was offered the portfolio several days ago, and refused it. Ex-Senator Edmunds of Vermont has also been mentioned as a probable appointee.

Ballington Booth for Peace.

Hudson, N. Y., March 31.—Commander Ballington Booth, of the Volunteers of America, when interviewed last night on the Cuban question said: "I am in favor of arbitration between the best and ablest minds from a civil, commercial and ecclesiastical standpoint. I am unquestionably strong and unswerving for the termination of the barbarous treatment and the miserable fiasco of rule which has so long existed in Cuba."

Spanish People Rely Upon Europe.

London, March 31.—The Madrid correspondent of the Times, commenting on the "cheerfulness of the Spanish public," suggests that this is due to the hope that Europe will be willing to confront America on Spain's behalf, the public being "apparently incapable of discriminting between material alliances and courteous, but platonic phrases."

Yale's First Victory.

New Haven, Conn., March 31.—Yale opened the baseball season yesterday afternoon in a game with Holy Cross and managed to win in six innings by a score of 6 to 4. It was poor weather for fast baseball playing and only a small crowd turned out to see the game.

WAR OR PEACE MONDAY

Spain Must Yield to Our Demands or Take the Consequences.

THE OUTLOOK IS FOR WAR

Given Forty-eight Hours to Answer the President She Is Fighting for Her Flag, but the Last Cable from Sagasta, However, Shows a Weakening—A Cabinet Officer Says That Spain First Proposed to Make Cuba Tributary, Like Bulgaria, but This Has Been Now Cast Aside.

Washington, March 31.—It will be known Monday whether there will be peace or war between the United States and Spain. The outlook is for war.

The President has made certain propositions to the Madrid Government, the precise nature of which has not been disclosed, contemplating the freedom and independence of Cuba. These propositions are receiving consideration in Madrid, and some sort of answer to them is to be given Minister Woodford which he will cable to this country to-night.

This communication will be read in the Cabinet meeting to-morrow. If it is not satisfactory an ultimatum will be sent to Spain, giving her forty-eight hours to come to our terms.

The belief in Washington is that Spain will reject the ultimatum, and it is expected that Congress on Monday will declare war and that war will begin forthwith.

The decision that the Cuban question shall come to a head at once was brought about by an agreement between members of Congress and the President.

What a Cabinet Officer Says.

A Cabinet officer says: "It is now a question of terms. Spain is fighting desperately for her flag. She cannot give up all at once. The Spanish Minister proposed the tribute solution, that of making Cuba a territory country for a period of years before independence was granted. He cited Bulgaria as an example. This has been cast aside.

"The President stands firm on his proposition of independence as outlined. Sagasta's last cable shows a weakening in his opposition to this."

The President told a delegation of Senators yesterday afternoon that he had given Spain forty-eight hours to answer his last and final proposition, and that Sagasta has promised a reply by this afternoon.

Gen. Woodford now has definite instructions as to this Government's demands. They have probably been communicated to the Foreign Relations Committee, but it has not yet been demonstrated whether Congress will withhold any action during the present week.

If, however, they are convinced that the President's confidence in his ability to arrange a diplomatic settlement upon a basis of Cuban independence without war is well founded, the leaders who are standing by the administration will prevent radical action for the present.

Spain has to reply to the proposition of the United States for a settlement of the Cuban question on the basis of an armistice, feeding of the reconcentrados, permanent peace and ultimate independence.

Spain asked the direct question of the United States whether the independence of Cuba was a condition precedent to the American proposition, and the answer of this Government was "Yes."

The State Department does not credit the statement that Spain is sparring for time enough to get her torpedo flotilla in the harbor of Porto Rico. The squadron is due at Porto Rico about April 7.

PRESIDENT'S PROPOSAL TO SPAIN.

An Answer Expected from Premier Sagasta by To-Day.

Washington, March 31.—In order that the President might complete his negotiations with Spain, he did not send his message to Congress yesterday, as was contemplated. It is stated by an authority which cannot be questioned that the President's policy means the ultimate independence of Cuba, and, while it embraces an armistice, this armistice is to be of very short duration, only time enough for Spain to withdraw her troops from the interior to Havana and for the Cubans to collect the $200,000,000 they are to pay Spain for evacuating the island.

This armistice is to be used by the United States to immediately relieve the sufferings on the island, to assist in sending back the reconcentrados to their homes, furnishing them with agricultural implements and seed to till the ground, and to be ended with the departure of Spanish troops from Cuba and the recognition of the independence of the island by Spain.

An Answer To-Day.

While the Spanish Government has not given its positive acceptance of this proposition of the President, enough has been received from Gen. Woodford to assure the administration that such an answer may be received to-day. The President, it is announced unofficially at the White House, does not expect an answer from Madrid until to-day, and for this reason he did not submit his message to Congress yesterday.

It is stated that the delay in Spain's positive answer of acceptance of the President's ultimatum is caused by a desire of Sagasta to find out if the United States will guarantee the principal and interest of the $200,000,000.

The administration has notified Spain that this is not contemplated, simply because Congress would not listen to such a proposition. It is understood the Cubans are to guarantee the amount from the revenues of the island, and that the money can be raised by financiers in England, France and in the United States. But these details are only tentatively discussed.

Palma Willing.

Senor Palma, the representative of the Cuban Republic, was asked if the Cuban insurgents would accept the proposition outlined above. Senor Palma showed a disposition to demur at the payment of the enormous indemnity of $200,000,000, but it is stated that when he learned that President McKinley would insist on this condition he finally consented.

It is said that President McKinley instructed Minister Woodford to place this proposition before the Spanish Government about ten days ago. Senor Sagasta frankly stated that he could not discuss any proposition involving the freedom of Cuba pending the elections. The elections were held last Sunday and Senor Sagasta won by an overwhelming majority. He is now in a position to treat with President McKinley.

The solution of the situation is outlined, involving Cuban independence and the payment of a generous indemnity to Spain by the new republic, is entirely satisfactory to the friends of Cuba, and if President McKinley can promise Spain's acceptance of the proposition the money needed to feed the starving Cubans will be granted without a dissenting vote.

Both Determined.

Both the President and Congress are firm. Both are decided that the situation demands immediate settlement and the independence of Cuba. Congress wants to arrive at it one way—by war. The President is striving to come to the same conclusion with peace.

Congress, however, has come to a better understanding of the President's position, and to-day, acting with this additional knowledge, is not so extreme as yesterday. It is determined, however, that Spain shall no longer delay, but that an answer one way or the other must be given.

The President's plan, as outlined in my dispatches, if accepted at once by Spain, will immediately settle the question but if Spain insists upon a long armistice and no guarantee of a recognition of the independence of Cuba, then there seems to be no other alternative but hostilities.

If the President can give assurances to Congress that Spain has accepted his last proposition, then Congress will put aside its angered feeling and cordially support him in all his policy.

In discussing the situation, after a visit to the White House, Senator Aldrich said:

"The President has made up his mind that this country cannot accept an armistice in Cuba without some positive assurance from Spain that it also means the independence of the island. He is also determined that there shall be no further delay. The country will not stand this much longer, and, in my opinion, some definite settlement one way or the other, will be reached in a very short time."

Minister Polo Denies It.

Washington, March 31.—The Spanish Minister denies the statement that a solution had been reached comprising the payment by the republic of Cuba of $200,000,000, and the embarkation of the Spanish troops for home.

FINAL CONFERENCE TO-DAY.

Spanish Cabinet Council to Consider the American Proposals.

Madrid, March 31.—A Cabinet Council was held yesterday afternoon to consider the American proposals. Another will be held to-day at noon, presided over by the Queen Regent, and at 4 o'clock to-day there will be a final conference between United States Minister Woodford, Senor Sagasta, the Premier; Senor Gullon, the Foreign Minister; and Senor Moret, the Minister for the Colonies.

The proposition to which Spain will answer covers two points only, and its publication will be a revelation to some of those abroad who have been denouncing America's aggressive attitude. It is as follows: Spain to proclaim immediately an armistice in Cuba to last until October, during which interval the United States will use its good offices with the insurgents to make this temporary peace permanent, and, second, Spain to do her best toward relieving suffering and starvation on the island, with America to be allowed to assist in this work.

While the situation here is outwardly of the calmest description, the actual position of affairs is regarded as critical by both the United States Legation and the Spanish Government.

The United States Minister, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, is working energetically and will continue to work energetically for Spain's peace until the first gun is fired. It is known the Spanish Government admits the desirability of complying with the demands of the United States, and it is only in the disinclination of the Ministers to put this willingness into concrete form that the danger lies. If a conference was to be held with British, German, or French diplomats the matter would be settled without question.

Republicans for Action.

Washington, March 31.—The Republicans of the House who are aggressively in favor of prompt and energetic action in the Cuban matter, and who met Tuesday night in conference, held another meeting after the House adjourned last night. At Tuesday night's meeting 46 members were present. Last night they were reinforced by 60, making a total of 115. This constitutes considerably more than a majority of the Republican membership of the House, and the members present last night said that it by no means represented the full strength of those who will be satisfied with nothing short of the complete independence of Cuba.

Many of the radicals favor armed intervention, and a few, like Representative Marsh of Illinois, believe the blowing up of the Maine is a casus belli. The speeches at last night's meeting, while vigorous and yielding nothing, were in favor of giving the President an opportunity to mature his policy and of completing the negotiations in which he is now engaged.

Final Action in a Day or Two.

Washington, March 31.—Secretary Long said last night that there was nothing new on the situation, but it is only a question of a few days when some final action will be made. "The public should be patient," said Secretary Long. "Things of such magnitude cannot be accomplished in a day or two."

Americans in Havana in Danger.

Key West, Fla., March 31.—There were ninety-four passengers from Havana by the Mascotte last night, and among them about fifty Americans, who say that Americans are not safe in Havana now.

SPANISH SHIPS COMING

Two Armored Cruisers and a Torpedo Boat Destroyer Start.

PROBABLY FOR HAVANA

Infanta Maria Theresa, Cristobal Colon and Destructor Depart from Carthagena, Exciting Much Interest in the Navy Department—A Powerful Fleet.

Washington, March 31.—The Navy Department has official information that the most formidable offensive Spanish squadron that has yet left Spain sailed from Cartagena yesterday.

It includes the heavily armored cruiser Cristobal Colon and Infante Maria Teresa, and the powerful torpedo boat destroyer Destructor. The destination has not been learned as yet. The news excited great interest at the Navy Department.

The information of the sailing of the Spanish fleet was contained in a dispatch to the State Department from United States Minister Woodford at Madrid. Cartagena is a Spanish naval station on the Mediterranean Sea, and, according to the Minister's dispatch, the ships were headed "westward." This, it is said, is undoubtedly the most formidable aray of vessels that has departed from Spain in this direction during the present crisis, and the presumption generally held by the Navy Department officials is that they are headed ultimately for Havana, and will be first heard of at the Canaries.

The fleet is composed of two armored cvruisers of the second class, under the convoy of a formidable torpedo boat destroyer. The Infanta Maria Teresa is a sister ship to the Viscaya, which visited New York preliminary to her trip to Havana, where she now is. The former is built of steel, is 384 feet over all, of 65.2 beam, and has a displacement of 6,890 tons, with a mean draught of 21.6. Her speed is put down as slightly over twenty knots an hour. The Cristobal Colon is 328 feet long and 59.8 feet beam. She is 6,840 tons displacement and has a speed of twenty knots.

The convoy of the vessels, the Destructor, is a formidable ship of her class and capable of excellent service.

Sailing of the Torpedo Flotilla.

London, March 31.—Mail advices from Las Palmas, Canary Islands, under date of March 23, confirm the Washington advices of the sailing of the Spanish torpedo flotilla. The letters received here say that on that day three Spanish torpedo boats, three torpedo boat destroyers and their escort, the transport Ciudad de Cadiz, received telegraphic orders to proceed to Cuba.

TIME TO STOP SPAIN'S FLEET.

If Her Reply Is Unsatisfactory Our Ships Can Intercept Her Torpedo Boats.

Washington, March 31.—It having been announced that Spain's reply to the President's proposition would not be forthcoming before Monday, the impression begins to prevail in many quarters that Spain is again merely sparring for time, hoping to postpone the issue until her torpedo fleet should reach Cuban waters.

Inquiry at the Navy Department brought the information that the officers there have figured out the course of the Spanish torpedo boats and have decided that the flotilla will reach Porto Rico about April 7. Assuming that Spain's reply to McKinley is received on Monday next, this will still leave the better part of a week for the interception of the flotilla by the American fleet in case of hostilities.

Mobilising Spanish Ships.

Madrid, March 31.—El Pais says that orders have been issued to mobilize all the Spanish warships, and that a second torpedo squadron is being prepared for sea at Cadiz. The Balearic Islands, according to El Pais, are being fortified and military engineers are starting for the Canary Islands.

A dispatch from Barcelona says that the armed steam yacht Giralda, purchased by the Spanish Government from Harry McCalmont, the English racehorse owner, after the vessel had been rejected by the United States, is now being fitted up as a dispatch boat.

Italy, it is said by El Pais, has decided to sell the armored cruiser Giuseppe Garibaldi, of 6,840 tons and well armored, sister ship of Varese, to Spain. Two regiments, still according to El Pais, are going to the Canary Islands to strengthen the Spanish garrison there.

House War Resolutions.

Washington, March 31.—Representative Adamson, of Georgia, has introduced a resolution recognizing the republic of Cuba and authorizing the President to accredit to it a Minister of this Government.

Representative Mahany, of New York, introduced a joint resolution recognizing the Cuban republic as a free and independent state, and welcoming her "to the sisterhood of republics in the Western World."

Representative Tool, of Michigan, introduced a resolution declaring a state of war exists between the United States and Spain.

Gold Ship on the Rocks.

Tacoma, Wash., March 31.—The steamer Cleveland arrived at Tacoma yesterday direct from Skaguay. She passed the steamer George W. Elder, from Portland for Skaguay and Dyea, with a large number of passengers, on the rocks in the Tongas Narrows, last Saturday night. The bow was clear out of the water, and the stern deep, but not submerged. The Roalie was standing by the Elder, and assistance was refused from the Cleveland. It was not known how seriously the ship was damaged. The Elder belongs to the Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

Gen. Lee Has Not Resigned.

Washington, March 31.—Secretary Long is authority for the statement that there is no truth in the report published yesterday that Consul-General Lee is dissatisfied with the President's Cuban policy and has cabled his resignation to the State Department, at the same time requesting that he be relieved at once.

UNDER THE MARTIN ACT.

Probably never before has there been filed in Union county a more important and interesting document for Plainfield than the report of the Commissioners appointed to adjust the delinquent taxes now existing in this city, which it is proposed to collect under the stringent measures of the law known as the Martin Act. Readers of The Daily Press were the only ones who were able to obtain a fair report of the finding of the Commissioners, and from the brief summary printed yesterday it could be judged somewhat of the general character of the work of the men who have adjusted the delinquences.

A large number of the properties affected by the provisions of the law could not be considered or adjusted in a general way, because they were there to be considered on situations distinctly different from the others, and upon these varying reasons persons responsible as present holders of the properties urged their claims in a vigorous manner.

Recognizing the interests of the city, irrespective of the hardships or moral injustices that were encountered in the work, the Commissioners were compelled to discriminate and decide in a manner that was often perplexing and always disagreeable to them, knowing as private citizens those things which as public officials they were duty bound not to permit to influence their final action. But by such liberties of judgment and decision as the law allowed them they scaled down the total amount of the delinquencies to a sum probably considerable over $50,000.

There is still one appeal left for those who think themselves aggrieved by the findings, and that is at the hearing before the County Judge before he decides on the approval or rejection of the report. It is presumed that the report will be approved, which will be followed by its being put in the hands of the City Collector to enforce as the Martin Act prescribes.

FOR PEACE.

Representative Loudenslager, of the First district, voices Senator Sewell's sentiments in declaring against armed intervention or any other sort of war measure. He's for peace.

THE BREATH OF LIFE.

We are glad to see in the magazine Mind so intelligible a dissertation on the subject of right breathing as is furnished by Dr. Charles Brodie Patterson. It is certain, as Dr. Patterson says, that "inability to take strong, deep breath serves to bring about an unbalancing of the physical organism." If persons inclined to consumption would begin so soon as the lung trouble manifests and practice long, slow, deep breathing, in many cases a cure would be effected. The lungs are not the only portion of the body affected by the breath either. Deep drafts of oxygen not only purify the air in the lungs, but go all through the body, consuming waste matter in the blood and making the action of every part stronger, truer and healthier. Most persons only draw into their bodies half or quarter the oxygen they are entitled to and actually need.

Dr. Patterson takes likewise a deeper view of the subject than this physical one. He tell us that dominant mental qualities affect the breath habitually. "Desire expresses itself in our method of breathing. Strong, true, uplifting desire causes us to breathe strong and deep, while a weak, vacillating and false desire results in superficial breathing. This can be proved by any one through carefully noting the effect of varying desires on the breath."

How do you breathe?

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Friends of the good roads movement should note that influence is being brought to bear upon Gov. Voorhees to induce him to veto the additional $50,000 appropriated by the Legislature for the State road fund.—Newark News.

Too many ex-Assemblymen turn lobbyists. In giving expression to this truth the Journal has no individual in view, and no censorous remark to direct against any man. Nevertheless it is the truth that altogether too many men who have hitherto been honored by the voters and elected to the Legislature to protect the interests of the people, are yearly to be found among those who follow the profession of lobbying for the corporations and against the people. This is most obnoxious because these former Assemblymen acquire their experience through the confidences reposed in them by the people, and if the people find that by electing men to the Assembly they are simply opening a school for graduating lobbyists, they will become exceedingly particular in selecting members of the Legislature.—Elizabeth Journal.

PASSING COMMENT.

The "City Hall," as the club car "Evona" has been facetiously called, is out again after a short visit to the shops of the Jersey Central Railroad. The car has been repainted and renovated. It presented a bright and fresh appearance this morning that seemed in accord with the day, if not the political situation.

* * * * *

The fate of the bills which were lost in the State Senate this year has recalled to the old-timers the methods by which in former sessions bills were held up. There is an old superstition that "Bob" Adrain in the sessions of 1891, '92 and '93 had a private graveyard in which bills that did not suit him were buried out of sight. Maurice A. Rogers, who succeeded Mr. Adrain, as president of the Senate had a little mauoleum of his own, where bills were disposed of. The succeeding presidents, Edward C. Stokes, Louis A. Thompson and Robert Williams, each had his own peculiar methods of holding bills that it was not deemed advisable to let go, but it remained for the president pro tem of the session just closed to invent the simplest method of all. Those who know by experience assert that when President Skirm got hold of a bill that he thought had gone far enough he placed it on his desk and held it down with his elbow. So the saying became popular, when a bill was stranded in the Senate, "It's under the deacon's elbow." And it is stated by ambitious legislators who have tried that "Deacon" Skirm's elbow was fully as effective in the detention of a bill as was ever the famous graveyard of "Bob" Adrain.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

Waite's Comedy Company is certainly setting a pace for future repertoire companies to follow. Their productions are simply superb, and the boast that "there is nothing cheap but the price" is well founded. "The Charity Ball," as presented last night, was one of the finest dramatic offerings of the season. The greatest source of surprise being that such an attraction can afford to play at the ridiculously low prices. The burden of the story of the play is carried by Mr. Power, Mr. Barbour, Miss Crego and Miss Georgia Lester Woods, the latter making her first appearance in the cast last night, and sustaining the role of "Phyllis Lee" in a faultless manner. It will be surprising, indeed, if the theatre is not packed to the doors for the rest of the week to witness these clever productions. "The Wife," a companion play of the "Charity Ball," is announced for tonight. It is an intense story of political and social life at Washington, D. C. "A Social Highwayman," Richard Mansfield's great play, is the bill for Friday evening, its first production in this city.

GOD'S GIFT TO MAN.

SO LIBERALLY BESTOWED UPON THE BOY PHENOMENON HAS PROVED A WONDERFUL BLESSING TO MANY PLAINFIELD PEOPLE.

A Most Generous Offer to the Afflicted to be Treated at Prices Within the Reach of all For a Few Days Only.

As day succeeds day there is no abatement in the crowds of afflicted people that flock to the parlors of the Boy Phenomenon at the Revere House. Since his advent in this city he has demonstrated beyond all cavil—all question—that he stands crowned king of the entire medical world. He has graphically portrayed the power of magnetism in healing disease.

No other endowment is so great as the gift to conquer and dispel diseases without medicine, by simply laying on of hands. This gift the Boy possesses in a degree never before known since the apostolic days. It does seem there are no infirmities so terrible and no case too hopeless to be beyond the reach of his marvelous power. People wonder what manner of man he is, and marvel at the strange power he possesses.

The many remarkable cures he has performed in this city alone has never been equaled by any other mode of treatment. His method of treatment is so very novel and unique, and his manner of arriving at the ailment of each patient surpasses anything of the kind ever witnessed here before.

Words fail to do justice to the many touching and pathetic scenes which daily and hourly transpire in his private parlors at the Revere House, as the blind, lame, sick and crippled emerge from the treating room to join their anxious friends in the parlors, their step more firm and elastic, and their faces beaming with smiles and satisfaction, as they realize for the first time in years that finally there is hope of their sure and permanent restoration to a life of health and happiness, and that greatest of all blessings—health—to be accomplished without the use of medicines.

There has never been a medical practitioner in this part of the country who has caused the excitement and comment that have been occasioned since the advent of this young man in Plainfield some seven weeks ago, and it is no wonder that such has been the case, for the cures performed, not only upon the public stage, before thousands of our best citizens, but at the Revere House in private, have never been equaled by any other mode of treatment. While many of the grateful patients look upon their recovery as miracles, it is not so claimed by him, and is easily accounted for on strictly scientific principles, as he daily generates eight times more magnetism than the average man, and the wonderful cures accomplished are all produced by the transfusion of this magnetic force from the Boy Phenomenon to the patient.

While he has again been forced to prolong his visit, this extension will positively be the last, and no new cases will be accepted for treatment after Monday, April 4.

Having discharged so large a number of patients as permanently cured, he is therefore enabled to take a limited number of new cases at greatly reduced prices. Those who have previously called and been examined are especially invited to return and take advantage of these reduced prices which are within the means of all.

DRESSY GOWNS TO HAVE TRAINS.

Skirts Close Fitting Around the Hips Are Decidedly Fashionable.

(By special arrangement with the N. Y. Sun)

All the prophecies in regard to the close fitting skirt with flaring fulness at the bottom have materialized very effectually in the new importations. The flare is accomplished in various ways, one of which is to set a circular portion in at the sides, like a circular flounce, except that it begins on either side of a narrow front breadth and ends on each side of the back breadths. It is quite a little wider in back than in front, where it is not more than twelve inches. This is decidedly a new model and one which no doubt will be very popular, as the tendency of fashion is toward less fullness.

In all dressy gowns the skirt is cut with a slight train, and the silk foundation skirt is finished separate from the outer skirt, with the knife plaiting set in the edge.

There seems to be no doubt about the continued popularity of tiny frills of ribbon and ruches of all sorts and kinds. Bands of ribbon covered with lace insertion are also very much employed. Narrow double frills of chiffon gathered so that they have a puffed effect are used as a skirt trimming set in on the lower edge of a narrow bias band of satin. One or two bands, minus the chiffon, are added above, and the whole is very effective on sheer nun's veiling.

The diversity in every department of dress certainly furnishes a rich field for choice, and literally everything that can be applied to sartorial effects is to be worn providing the sleeves are small and the skirt scant around the hips. The secret of successful dressing, then, is in the choice, which should be determined by the style that best suits the figure.

Black and white effects and black and white gowns are to be very much worn. Black and white checked silks are made up into Spring costumes with black velvet ribbon edging the flounces. One of the prettiest silks for a dressy Summer costume is white taffeta, patterned rather gingerly with black polka dots about as large as a small pea. Shirt waists of black and white brocaded silk and also of black and white striped taffeta are also very fashionable.

WONDERFUL MEMORIES.

A Man Who Could Repeat an Act of Parliament.

Sealiger, the philologist of the sixteenth century, who edited several of the classics, was so certain of his memory that he undertook to repeat long passages from Latin works with a dagger at his breast, which was to be used against him in the event of his memory failing; while Seneca, the tutor of Nero, could repeat 2,000 words exactly as he heard them. Pope could turn at once to any passage which had struck him when reading, and Leyden, the Scottish poet, who died in the early part of the century, was also remarkable for his memory. When congratulated on one occasion upon his aptitude for remembering things, Leyden replied that he often found his memory a source of inconvenience. Surprise was expressed at this, whereupon the poet replied that he often wished to recall a particular passage, but could not do so until he had repeated the whole poem from the beginning to where the passage occurred which he wished to recall.

Leyden is also credited with having been able to repeat an act of parliament or a lengthy legal document after having heard it once. The newspapers of January, 1820, contain frequent allusions to the case of a man named Thomson, who drew plans of a dozen London parishes, including every church, chapel yard, court, monument, lamp post and innumerable trees and pumps, without reference to a single book, and without asking a single question; and an English clergyman mentions a man of weak intellect who lived about the same time, who could remember the names and ages of every man, woman and child who had been buried in the parish during thirty-five years, together with the dates of burial and the names of the mourners present at the funeral. That great memories are not the product of civilization is proved by an instance recorded by Dr. Moffatt, the great African missionary. Dr. Moffatt once preached a sermon to a group of negroes, and was shortly afterward attracted by the gesticulations of a young savage addressing a number of blacks. On going up to the group, he was amazed to hear the savage reproducing his own sermon word for word. —London Standard.

New Demi-Bang Just Coming In.

There is at present a perfect civil war waging between hairdresser and milliner as to the correct coiffure for the summer months. "Your hat must tip down," says the milliner. "You must wear a pompadour," says the hairdresser.

Now everybody who has ever worn a pompadour knows the impossibility of combining it with a down-tilted hat. It is simply out of the question. A choice must be made between the two. Pompadours are so very becoming, they will be given up reluctantly. Yet in a city of bicyclists, who would tolerate a hot wad of padding around the head during the warm weather? The wearing of the hat far back or far forward will probably depend upon the weather.

THE NEW BANG.

Bangs are the next proposition. They are already being worn in Paris. And as the American woman accepts the Parisian unquestioningly as a model of modes, she will, as usual, follow the fad. It is merely a matter of time before the fashion will establish itself among us.

Really the new arrangement of the hair is a pretty and flattering one. The bang is not a hideous fringe, nor is all the front hair cut and frizzled in a woolley mass at the top of the head. Only a few irregular locks are shortened, and left to twist in loose natural curls at the sides, just above the temples. An evenly cut bang, such as was formerly the hideous vogue, is not at all the idea. There is no bunching of hair and the forehead will not be concealed, nor will the hair line about the face, which we have all learned to admire, be disfigured.

Weak-Hearted Mail Boy.

"Congressman Sulloway, of New Hampshire, tells a good one when he gets warmed on the civil service question," said one of the statesmen who came to help the Michigan Club to celebrate Washington's birthday. "Somewhere in the South a bright colored boy appeared before the commission to be examined for the position of letter carrier.

"'How far is it from the earth to the moon?' was the first question asked by those who were to determine the young man's fitness for the place he sought.

"'How fah am it from de earf to de moon?' echoed the applicant. 'My gracious, boss, of you's gwine to put me on dat route I don't want de job.'"

A pessimist would be afraid to get to heaven for fear his crown wouldn't fit. —Chicago News.

Round-Eyed Fish.

The jeriopphthalmus, a fish of China, Japan, India, the Malay archipelago and Eastern Africa, is probably the oddest of creatures with its eyes out of place. The poor fish gets its name from its eyes; all the terrible cognomen means after all is round-eyed. These organs are very round and prominent, and possess, for a fish, the rare property of looking around on all sides; they are situated at the top of the animal's head. This fish is peculiar also in that it hops out of water to pursue its prey, jerking along on its pectoral fins and breathing the oxygen from quantities of water which it has stored up in its immense gill cavities.

Stripes for Letter Carriers.

Chicago's postmaster has introduced an innovation that will be popular. The letter carriers of that city will hereafter wear service stripes, one for each five years of duty. The stripe is a narrow black broadcloth band, one-half inch in width, to be worn on both sleeves above the cuff. Each stripe is outlined by heavy white silk stitching, and the whole forms an attractive and striking badge of honor, as it reposes on the cadet gray background. One carrier in that city will be distinguished with six stripes, indicating thirty years' continuous service. The idea is borrowed from the army and navy, and is worthy of imitation.

President Kruger Not Dead.

London, March 31.—A rumor was in circulation in Stock Exchange circles yesterday that President Kruger, of the Transvaal Republic, had been assassinated. Very little credit was given to the report and it finally turned out to be what was generally believed—an irresponsible stock-jobbing canard.

Happy Lives

Are Lives of Happy Living, and Thus 'Tis Well That You Should Know How This Can be.

In Plainfield there is many a happy home. Perhaps you know of some, or better still, it may be that you rest your head at night in one yourself Then again, there is many an unhappy fellow in your midst 'Tis not surprising that this should be the case, when one thinks of the burdens some backs are forced to bear. If yours is not the back that bears the burden, still we think you would be glad to lend a helping hand to lighten another Let us show you how it can be done and at the same time tell a story of Plainfield life that will prove this aid can easily be given.

Mrs Valentine Utzinger, of No. 75 Grandview avenue, says: "I suffered from kidney complaint for the last 6 years. I doctored and used various kinds of medicines with little or no result. I had almost a constant, sharp darting pain accross my back, and if I over-exerted myself or took cold I suffered severely. I always felt it most when the weather was damp There was also a kidney weakness which was very distressing and inconvenient. While in this condition I saw Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended and I was induced to try them. My son brought me home a box from L. W. Randolph's drug store. I started to take them at once, following directions closely. They helped the pain in my back and relieved my other difficulty. I give all the credit for this relief to Doan's Kidney Pills for they are beyond a doubt a grand medicine for kidney trouble. I have recommended them to a number of my friends and will continue to do so."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.

Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

All the Paint World knows that this big "H" stands for Harrison Brand and means that the goods are exactly as represented. It is due to this that Harrison is today the standard for paints of all kinds, a fact that will be explained to the purchaser when he applies Harrison Paints. A setting hen may be fooled with a china egg—but no amount of incubation will hatch it out. Just the same with paint. The unsuspecting purchaser may be duped by a bright label and an unscrupulous dealer—but no amount of manipulation can make imitations take the place of Harrison Paints. Look for the big "H."

FIDELITY OF A PRIEST.

His Journey to a Dying Man In an Adirondack Lumber Camp.

"I was wonderfully impressed with the fidelity of Catholic priests in answering sick calls a short time ago," said a gentleman who dropped into the club as a visitor. "It was on one of the northern roads last autumn, and at a certain station a Catholic priest came into the coach and finally into the seat with me. After a few minutes he asked me if I would allow him to sit next the window for a short distance. 'The fact is,' said the father, 'I want to throw off a note at a mill we will soon pass.' Of course I accommodated him, and when we approached the mill he leaned out and tossed a note bound about a bit of a stick upon the steps of one of the little cabins in which resided mill employees. He smiled when he saw a little girl run to pick it up.

"'You see,' said the father, 'there is a sick man there, and he has sent for me to come. It is eight miles from where I live, and there is no road except the railroad through the woods and around the ponds and lakes. It is only three miles from the junction on beyond us here. I tried to get permission to have the train stop, but it is late, and the summer travel is heavy, and they wouldn't stop there. If I go to the junction, though, I can get a man to bring me back on a hand car.'

"So the father went along to the junction, and as I had to change cars there and had a few minutes to wait I saw the outcome of the trip. The track foreman and his men had gone away on a work train and would not be back till night. The junction is in a deserted place. The depot and one house is all there is to it. The depot is manned by a force of one, who is master of baggage, express messenger, ticket seller and key manipulator. So the priest could not find a railroad man to help him. But he evidently had the permission of some one in authority to use a hand car, and the man of all work at the depot helped him to get the car on the track. The reverend gentleman mounted the platform, pulled off his coat, loosened his collar and bent to his work. He had been called to administer the last sacrament of his church to a man supposed to be dying away out there in an Adirondack lumber camp, and he had sent word that he was coming.

"I watched him till he had pumped the heavy old hand car away up around the bend in the road, and when my train backed up the branch and I went forward about my duties it was with a higher idea of the priesthood than I ever possessed before." — Pittsburg Catholic.

CAPUCHIN HEADQUARTERS.

College and Monastery of the Order to Be Erected at Franklin, Ind.

Four Capuchin priests came to the United States from England four months ago to hunt a suitable location for establishing a college and headquarters for their order. They arrived in Franklin, Ind., and have settled upon that place as the site for their institution. A large tract of land will be purchased, upon which a monastery and commodious college buildings will be erected and furnished as soon as possible.

The four priests, Father Mariannus Filge, Father Lawrence Blanderfield, Father Sebastian Brennan and Father John McFinigin, have leased the commodious residence of ex-State Geologist Gorby and have christened it St. Anthony's mission. For the present it will be headquarters for the order, and from there missions will be sent out over the country.

The Capuchins are a branch of the Franciscan order. They are a highly educated class of men, even in old age seemingly tireless students. Like the Franciscans, they wear the brown robe of their order, cords and sandals. Unlike the Franciscan cowl, which is sufficient only to cover the head, they wear a cowl that reaches to the hem of their robe. Another marked characteristic that makes the Capuchin priest noticeable wherever he goes is the long beard he wears, a habit known only to one other order of the priesthood—the Benedictine.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Items of Catholic Interest.

The late Archbishop Cleary of Kingston, Canada, was the first person to receive a degree from the Catholic university of Ireland.

Count de Mun, who championed the Dreyfus case in the French assembly, is one of the most prominent Catholics in France.

It is stated that more than 500 Catholic church societies, representing 50,000, have petitioned congress not to pass the immigration restriction bill.

The total number of Roman Catholics in India is reported to be 1,865,245. The number of native Catholic priests is 655, and there are 745 European priests.

A great deal of discussion is still indulged in by the religious papers of Great Britain in regard to the establishment of a Roman Catholic university in Ireland.

Pope Leo gave 20,000 francs in alms to the poor of Rome at Christmas time, and during the past year gave dowers to 115 poor maidens.

It is stated that Count Campello, formerly canon of St. Peter's, Rome, who withdrew from the Roman Catholic church some years ago, is prosecuting evangelical work in Italy under the supervision of the English bishop of Salisbury.

HIS SILVER JUBILEE.

THE ELEVATION OF ARCHBISHOP CORRIGAN TO THE EPISCOPATE.

Its Twenty-fifth Anniversary to Be a Grand Celebration—Will Occur May 4, and Preparations Are Already Under Way—Will Last For Five Days.

Catholic clergy and laity of the New York archdiocese will on Wednesday, May 4, celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the elevation of his grace the Most Rev. Michael Augustin Corrigan to the episcopate. The jubilee will extend over the following Sunday, and will close with a pontifical high mass in St. Patrick's cathedral. Preparations are already under way to make this celebration one of the notable events of a generation.

Committees of priests and laymen will be appointed to work out the details. Naturally, Bishop Farley will be the head of the clerical committee, and it is probable that Colonel John McAnerney of the Seventh National bank, will be chairman of the lay committee. The prime movers in the celebration are Judge Joseph F. Daly, Stephen Farley, John D. Crimmins and the Rev. M. A. Taylor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament. An executive committee will be got together to begin the work.

Notable features of the celebration will be a high mass in St. Patrick's cathedral, presentation of addresses and sermons and a banquet. The most distinguished men in the country will be invited to honor one of the most scholarly of American ecclesiastics. It is whispered, by the way, that one of the gifts may be a red hat from the pope to the archbishop of the greatest diocese in America. The archbishop's well wishers believe this would be a graceful compliment on the part of his holiness.

New York's archdiocese includes besides this city the counties of Westchester, Putnam, Dutchess, Ulster, Sullivan, Orange, Rockland and Richmond and the Bahama islands, and from these parts of the archdiocese there will be a large influx of clergy and laity to the city during the period of the celebration. The Catholic population of the archdiocese is between 800,000 and 900,000, and as Archbishop Corrigan is personally known to other thousands throughout the country it will be readily seen that this event will be of exceptional interest and almost national importance.

The esteem in which New York's metropolitan is held was shown in 1888, when he celebrated his silver jubilee as a priest. On that occasion bishops and priests came from all over the country to greet Mgr. Corrigan. The gentlemen who will have this episcopal jubilee in charge will make it a far more memorable event than the silver jubilee of his priesthood. They consider that the great work he has been doing for years deserves extraordinary recognition. The hospitals and seminaries he has founded will always be a monument to his memory, and they want the jubilee of 1898 also to go down in history.

When in 1878 Bishop Bayley of New Jersey was promoted to the see of Baltimore, Dr. Corrigan, who was then a priest in Newark, was elected bishop of Newark. That was on Feb. 14, and on May 4, the feast of St. Joseph, he was consecrated in his own cathedral by the late Cardinal McCloskey, then archbishop of New York, 17 bishops being present. Bishop Corrigan was the youngest member of the American hierarchy. He exhibited, however, the maturity and experience of age. By hard and successful work he arrived at such prominence that when the advanced age of Cardinal McCloskey made the appointment of a coadjutor necessary Bishop Corrigan was selected for that onerous office. On Oct. 1, 1880, he was promoted to the see of Petra and made coadjutor of New York, with the right of succession.

The fourth provincial council and fourth synod of New York were mainly directed by Bishop Corrigan. He prepared a useful manual for such assemblies. He was summoned to Rome as one of the archbishops whom the holy see wished to consult in regard to the work of the plenary council, and when that body met in November, 1884, he represented the archdiocese of New York.

On the death of Cardinal McCloskey in October, 1885, Archbishop Corrigan became the third metropolitan of the province of New York.

The American college at Rome will in some way, it is expected, participate in the coming jubilee. His grace is held in loving remembrance there, for he was the first seminarian chosen and the first to enter the American college, which was founded by Pope Pius IX. He was ordained priest in the Latern Basilica in September, 1863.—New York Herald.

How to Accept Praise.

Some of us have yet to learn to accept praise and honest appreciation with grace and generosity. How often we behold the most liberal giver and doer prove a niggard receiver.

We freeze up with a cold wave of mock humility or forthwith explode in all manner of absurd protestations, rebukes or solemn declarations of opposition.

Yet to each of us it is truly a sweet morsel, a very foretaste of divine rapture.

Then why not be honest and thank God that we are so favored and be glad we are accounted worthy to receive a word of praise, a smile of approval, a message of appreciation?—Catholic Universe.

Pope Leo's Pets.

Leo XIII has a collection of birds of which he is very fond, especially of his gaudy colored parrots, and a collection of animals—pelicans, ostriches and fawns. These receive his frequent attention.—London Telegraph.

WHAT IS TRIPLE EXTRACT?

The Process by Which the Odor of Fowers is Obtained.

Flowers that are to be used in the manufacture of perfumes are always gathered at nightfall or quite early in the morning when the dew is upon them. Before they are gathered, however, receptacles are prepared for them in the shape of large frames, over which are stretched cotton cloths well saturated with olive oil or almond oil. The cut flowers are brought in, and are thickly spread on a frame; then another frame is fitted over it, and that in turn is well spread with flowers; then a third frame is fitted over the second spread of flowers, and thus the work goes on until a huge pile of flowers is prepared.

This flower heap is left for two days, at the end of which time the flowers are removed from the frames and replaced by fresh ones. The frames are filled and emptied every two days until two weeks have passed. Then the cloths are detached from the frames and placed under great pressure, and all the oil is pressed out of them. The oil thus obtained is heavily charged with the fragrance of the flowers, and it is mixed with double its weight of pure rectified spirits and put in a vessel called a "digester," which is simply a porcelain or block-tin kettle that fits in another kettle. When in use the outer vessel is filled with boiling water.

In this vessel the mixture of oil and spirits "digests" for three or four days; then, after having cooled, the spirit is decanted into another vessel holding the same quantity of fragrant oil, and the digesting process is repeated. After being thus digested three times the spirit is found to have taken up enough of the perfume, and it is then decanted from the oil for the third and last time through a tube, one end of which is filled with cotton wool to serve as a filter. The fluid thus prepared is called "triple extract."—Philadelphia Times.

Miss Mary Proctor.

Miss Proctor is a young woman, but when it is remembered that she is the daughter of the late Prof. Richard A. Proctor, and during the later years of his life was her distinguished father's colleague and assistant in his work, no one will be surprised at the role that she has assumed or that she is eminently successful as a lecturer on a subject that only very few men approach. Miss Proctor has obtained place and recognition among the astronomers of the world. She is a member of the British Astronomical Society, the Association for the Advancement of Science, the National Science Association, and of other scientific organizations which are slow to admit women, young women especially, to membership.

Among the subjects treated by Miss Proctor are "Other Worlds Than Ours," "Our Place Among Infinities," and "The Nebular Hypothesis." Miss Proctor is said to possess the rare talent of putting old facts into a new and fascinating garb and making difficult facts clear to the ordinary intellect.

His Ear a Clock.

George Henderson, a colored man, of Zanesville, O., was noted for a remarkable peculiarity.

He was endowed with a phenomenal power of being able to tell the time of day correctly by simply placing a finger in his ear. At such times he claimed that a light flashed through his brain, revealing to him the positions at which the hands of a correct watch were then pointing.

His powers were well known to residents of the city, and he was never unwilling to oblige any one with the time of day.—Cor. Chicago Times-Herald.

Mrs. Brimby—No, marriage is not what single persons think it is. I used to think that Brimby and I were made for one another; but we are sadly mismated."

Mrs. Ferson—Why, you surprise me!

Mrs. Brimby—Alas! it is too true. He tells me I talk in my sleep, and I'm sure that he often sleeps in my talk.

SPORTS

AROUND THE BASES.

The management of the Plainfield High School nine has made arrangements with Manager Mumford of the Plainfield Crescents so that the High School team will play all its games on the Crescent Oval.

The baseball team of Leal's school is now practicing for the coming season. Aubrey Crowe has been chosen manager and William J. Roome, Jr., captain. The personel of the team has not yet been arrranged. Games will be scheduled with some of the neighboring school teams for the Saturday mornings this spring.

Beach's Official Baseball Guide for 1898 has been placed on the market. As in years past The Guide is one of the best of its kind and contains matters of great interest to all who are interested in the National game. Besides many other interesting features, it gives the complete official averages in all the principal leagues and the rules for 1898 with the changes noted.

The series of games between the teams from the Plainfield High School has been called off owing to a misunderstanding regarding the use of the grounds on Washington avenue for practice. The High School team started to practice there, but there was some trouble between the management, and the High School boys are now plaoing on the old Crescent grounds on LaGrande avenue.

The selection of the team that is to represent the Plainfield High School in the league this year will soon be chosen. Manager Edwards and Capt. Lederer will be assisted in their choice by Mr. Meredith, who is acting coach of the team. Edwards and Lederer are certain of being selected for the battery positions. Snodgrass is the leading candidate for first base. Fisher will probably go at short. The other positions are still undecided.

Pingry's school, of Elizabeth, will not be represented in the league of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association, this year, by any baseball team. Pingry is poorly off for good baseball players. Last year, the team was badly defeated by the Plainfield High School boys and it nearly broke the hearts of the Elizabeth contingent who think that defeat by Plainfield is particularly unpleasant. This year no attempt will be made to get up a team.

BASKET BALL

The basket ball season will close in this city on the evening of Monday, April 4th, when the Plainfield team will play its last game of the season against the crack team from the St. Thomas Athletic Club, of New York. The game will be played in the Plainfield gymnasium.

This season has been a very successful one for the basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. They have won many victories from some of the best teams in this part of Jersey, and have put up good games against teams of superior strength. Financially the team has been very successful. The management has been able to defray all the expenses of the team, pay all the back debts and still have a balance remaining of over $30. George Fuller has been managing the team this year and is deserving of much credit.

GOLF.

The golf grounds on Plainfield avenue will be in first-class condition by next Saturday. These grounds will be used by the members of the club until the new grounds are completed. Thomas Bendelow, golf professor, from A. G. Spaulding's place in New York, is in Plainfield at present laythe grounds out. It is hoped that the new grounds will be ready for use by next month.

COULDN'T AGREE.

City Officials Had a Fruitless Conference About New Fire Department Quarters.

There was a joint committee meeting of the police and fire and building committees last evening in the Mayor's office. Mayor Fisk was also present. The object of the meeting was to discuss the question of securing new quarters for a station house and a new fire department house. The committees spent considerable time together, but were unable to agree as to what is the best thing to do. Everyone present had an idea as to what should be done, but the ideas were so widely different that the meeting adjourned without accomplishing anything. Another meeting will be held soon.
